NONSUBSIDIZING AGRICULTURAL EXPORTERS MEET

Thailand's Sitthi Speaks

BK230757 Bangkok BANGKOK WORLD in English 23 Jul 86 pp 1, 32

[Text] Phatthaya -- Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila this morning opened a meeting of 14 agricultural countries with an appeal for developed nations to drop subsidies and protective policies exacerbating the present global crisis.

In an inaugural speech opening the three-day meeting of non-subsidising countries, Air-Chief Marshal [ACM] Sitthi pointed to problems of over-supply, subsidies and protection and called on all agricultural producing countries to join in building a "global political will" to fight the crisis.

Despite continuing problems, ACM Sitthi said he held hope that world agricultural trade will regain its health so that "market mechanism and comparative advantages are given full play."

"To this end, I sincerely appeal to the big countries to do away with their costly subsidy and protectionist policies," he stressed, in a call understood to be addressed to the United States, the European Community and Japan.

ACM Sitthi said the present situation of "oversupply and stagnant demand" partly stemmed from a decline in agricultural prices due to slower world economic expansion and financial constraints among importing countries.

But, he went on, "the major cause of the consistent oversupply has always been the application of production and export subsidies and market protection by a few high-cost, inefficent but usually rich and influential producers."

By substituting "government directives" for market mechanism, these producers have "created a strong resistance to change and adaptation to the extent that the over-supply situation now seems a permanent feature of world agricutlture trade," he said.

"No country can be faulted for trying to help its people," he continued.

"But certain countries have carried out policies and measures to protect and pamper a small number of their farmers at a heavy cost to an innumerable number of farmers in the rest of the world who can ill afford these burdens." He pointed out that Thailand was heavily dependent on agriculture, which contributes 20 per cent to the Gross Domestic Product and approximately accounts for 45 per cent of total national exports.

He deplored the way that the conduct of world agricutural trade had "been permitted for so long to remain outside the framework of international trade rules and discipline."

However, he said he was heartened by the fact that agriculture was given priority for the first time at the recent summit of the seven industrialized countries.

The meeting of nonsubsidising producing countries, continuing through Friday, is attended by senior officials from Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Fiji, Hungary, Indonesia, Malaysia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Uruguay and Thailand.

U.S., EC Criticized

BK240113 Bangkok THE NATION in English 24 Jul 86 pp 17, 18

[By Peter Mytri Ungphakon and David Nasson]

[Text] Phatthaya -- Non-subsidizing countries were facing a "wall of desperation in their fight against the subsidization policies of the United States and the European Community in regard to agricultural products, the head of the Australian trade delegation, Peter Field, said here yesterday.

In the most aggressive of the opening statements made before the conference went behind closed doors, Mr Field said "a crisis in the truest sense of the word is upon us."

He accused the European Community and the United States of being high cost producers who were not only denying the rest of the world a reasonable share of their markets but taking a disproportionate share of world trade.

"The agricultural trade problem is now an indictment of the international order and reflects a breakdown of international cooperation," he said.

Movement on the part of Europe in its Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) and from the U.S. with its farm and export programmes was fundamental if things were going to improve, he said.

He said the countries assembled at the Phatthaya conference had a two-fold task ahead of them -- first to bring about an alleviation of the present trade problems and second, to work for the long-term reform of world agricultural policy.

Mr Field said the value of this meeting, and the coming follow up meeting at ministerial level in Cairns, Australia, should not be underestimated.

"Australia has come to recognize that, by ourselves, we do not have the influence to bring about the much-needed changes in policy of the major countries.

"Perhaps by working together we can have more success. Australia is ready to try this course."

Mr Field said heavy subsidization from the major developed countries affected a wide range of products (in Australia's case this is primarily wheat, beef, sugar and dairy products) causing serious economic, social and political consequences. And with the net result of affecting the ability of the non-subsidizing countries to import goods and service their overseas debt.

He said the EC and United States had to be aware that such effects were not to the advantage of their own economies.

And he said the Phatthaya meeting had to be firm in its resolve to make agricultural trade problems a major focus at the GATT talks in Uruguay in September.

Argentina

The president of Argentina's National Grain Board, Mr Jorge Cort, took a futuristic view saying the new round of GATT negotiations in Uruguay would be the key forum for the non-subsidizing countries to take the fight against what he described as "the disloyal commercial practices of protectionism and subsidies."

Speaking in Spanish which was later translated to English, Mr Cort said such practices had become widespread over recent years affecting the "rhythm of the international economic and financial growth equilibirum."

U.S., EEC CRITICIZED

He said that while the GATT talks should address the wider issue of protectionism in the primary goods area a special emphasis should be given to agricultural produce.

"Firm obligations on the matter of progressive dismantling of the existing protection and subsidies given by the leading developed nations should abided to," he said.

Like Mr Field, Mr Cort made reference to the special problems of countries with high external debt.

But he refrained from specifically naming the European Community and the United States as the countries responsible for the current problems.

PHILIPPINES

Filipino delegation leader, Mr Nilo Bautista, told the conference that 49 per cent, or 9.7 million people, in his country were employed in agriculture making it vital to economic growth and development.

But he said the Philippines was subjected to various forms of protectionist measures like tariffs, variable levies, quantitative restrictions, selective internal taxes, and import fees.

He also mentioned prohibitions for health and sanitary reasons, a remark specifically directed at prevailing Japanese attitudes to some Filipino goods. The Philippines is known to take offence at such restrictions and ASEAN generally believes them to be ruse to prevent further imports.

Mr Bautista said the problems of protectionism and subsidies in world trade had been excluded from the broad sweep of trade liberalization and insulated from the normal disciplines of market forces.

He also looked ahead to the GATT talks to take positive action.

But Mr Bautista's opening remarks were among the most reticent of the 12 countries represented also failing to specifically name the nations responsible for the problems faced by non-subsidizing countries.

URUGUAY

Uruguay's vice minister for agriculture, Mr Contador Ricardo Lombardo, introduced a pragmatic view when he said time constraints would limit what the Phatthaya conference could achieve.

He said a selective approach should be adopted concentrating on four main areas. These were:

-- A joint position on agriculture for the GATT meeting. He said agriculture should be given the top priority at GATT and the function of Phatthaya was to resolve the differences that remained on some issues between those countries represented here. "This is the place to tackle them," he said.

-- Tactics to ensure agriculture was not treated in isolation at GATT. Mr. Lombardo said this had occurred in the past and had contributed to limited gains. He said there was no reason why the problems of agriculture could not be addressed throughout.

-- Strategies to be adopted in dealing with the major trading partners at GATT. Advantage should be taken in Phatthaya to exchange views on how the best results can be attained.

-- Procedures to follow GATT. Mr Lombardo said all members knew that all the problems with agriculture will not be solved at GATT and a strategy to maintain the momentum after GATT should be addressed in the interests of long-term success.

Mr Lombardo said agreements reached at Phatthaya would be able to find a place in the deliberations of the Preparatory Committee in the GATT and influence the Draft Ministerial Statement to be considered by the ministers represented when the talks begin in Uruguay.

Mr Lombardo said his country had been active in promoting discussions among Southern Hemisphere temperate zone agricultural producers and saw the Phatthaya meeting as an opportunity to enlarge its efforts to strengthen the position of those countries dependent on agriculture for development.

And in one of the boldest remarks of the opening session he said Uruguay could see little point in participating at GATT unless the problems with world agriculture were given comprehensive attention.

"This has been our position from the outset and will remain unchanged in the future," he said.

NEW ZEALAND

New Zealand's spokesman, Mr David Gamble, followed the theme of most of the countries when he targetted the price and income support policies of the major industrialized countries for the problems faced by his country's farmers.

But he was particularly cirtical of the EC's Common Agricultural Policy saying studies had revealed that it was inefficient because 75 per cent of budgetary support was going to operators of the top 25 percent of farms.

"These are the most efficient farmers who need least support," he said.

"In New Zealand's case we are most affected in markets for dairy goods and meat. Restrictions on access and unfair competion from subsidized exports, as well as the very existence of massive surplus stocks of these commodities in the EC and to some extent the U.S. are translated directly into sharply reduced returns for our farmers."

He cited the NZ Dairy Board payout to farmers in the current season as NZ 2.25 pounds compared to NZ 4.00 pounds per kg of butterfat last year.

"That 44 per cent cut will have a devastating effect on our agricultural sector," he said.

Mr Gamble said GATT would be a valuable opportunity for the countries represented here to achieve liberalization of the current restrictions.

He said previous GATT meetings had offered similar opportunities but had not been taken. But he was heartened by recent high level discussions at the OECD Ministerial Meeting, the Tokyo summit and the Seoul meeting of world trade ministers, all of which had spent time on the agricultural crisis.

Talks Boycott Possible

[By Dave Nason]

[Text] Phatthaya -- Thailand could join a multi-nation boycott of future international trade talks if the major developed countries refuse to agree that agriculture should be a top priority in any new round of discussions.

The blunt message, delivered at the end of a three-day meeting between senior officials of 12 non-subsidizing agricultural exporting countries at Phatthaya, was an ultimatum to the United States, European Community and Japan that the developing nations would not sit idle while restrictive trade practices created huge agricultural surpluses and lowered commodity prices.

In particular the 12 nations want subsidies paid to US farmers under the Farm Act and the EC farmers under the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) dismantled so that free market forces can determine prices for agricultural commodities.

The threat comes at a time when world trade ministers are preparing for a meeting at Punta del Este in Uruguay to establish the framework for a new round of talks under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

A 10-page statement released at the end of the talks by the Thai Foreign Ministry's director of economic affairs, Danai Dulalampha, said any new round of talks should "urgently address the restrictions of significantly reducing agricultural price supports and providing better discipline on agricultural trade within GATT.

"There is a need for a strong commitment to this effect in the ministerial declaration at Punta del Este which is expected to launch a new round of multi-trade negotiations. If this is not achieved, participating countries would seriously question the value of participating in the round."

At a press conference at the conclusion of the meeting yesterday Danai said the policies of the industrialized countries had severely affected prices for a wide range of agricultural commodities, notably wheat, rice, beef, sugar and dairy products.

Thailand is particularly affected by rice. Subsidies paid to US rice farmers under the Farm Act are expected to reduce exports of Thai long grain rice in 1986 by 300,000 to 400,000 tonnes and lower returns to the Thai rice industry.

Danai stressed that the 12 nations -- Thailand, Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Canada, Hungary, Chile, New Zealand, Uruguay, Malaysia, Philippines and Indonesia -- were committed to working together as a group to make the major developed nations see reason.

But at the same time, Danai was careful to point out that the 12 nations had not been involved in an exercise aimed at targetting particular countries as being responsible for the problems of world agriculture. "What we have been talking about here are policies, not individual countries. We are not here to plot against anybody," he said.

It was a shrewd statement because while there are no doubts the 12 nations share a common view on the disastrous effects of the US Farm Act, the CAP and Japanese import restrictions, there remains a divergence of opinion on how the nations might best approach the task of reform at Punta del Este and other world forums.

This matter of tactics will be the key area of discussion at a follow-up meeting at ministerial level at Cairns, Australia, next month.

Delegates were reluctant to answer questions about the differences between them on tactics. The Brazilian delegate, Valdemar Leao, admitted there was a sphere of conflict but said these were "nuances and not of any substance."

He said the important thing was that the 12 nations realized after the meeting that they did not stand alone as individual countries in the fight against unfair agricultural trade practices.

The Australian delegate supported him saying "public enemy No. 1" was not the EC or the US or Japan but, "the prevention of free market signals being allowed to influence production and prices."

While the boycott threat was the most dramatic result of the conference, it did represent a moderation of views given by some countries when they delivered their opening remarks on Wednesday.

Some countries had said quite categorically that any failure to include agriculture as a top priority would mean they definitely would not be attending future trade talks. The wording of the final statement, while strong, is still something of a retreat from that hard-line position.

Significant by its absence was reference to so-called "encouraging signs" that the United States was sympathetic to the problems being experienced by the 12 nations. Several nations referred to this in their opening statements.

Countries like Brazil and Chile said privately during the three days of talks that they were skeptical about the sincerity of the US and refused to join an Asutralian-led push to focus hostility on the EC in an attempt to win US support for agricultural reform.

Such tactics may involve a return concession to the US in the form of agreement to raise trade in investment, services and intellectual property rights at a new round of trade talks.

The Brazilians believe this would distract attention in the GATT from the pressing problems in agriculture.

But despite such problems, the 12 nations did reach a high level of consensus and most observers believe the meeting was a success.

Phatthaya Meeting Ends

[By Peter Maitri Ungphakon and David Nason]

[Text] Phatthaya -- The twelve non-subsidizing agricultural producing countries concluded their meeting here yesterday having avoided arguments about how the forthcoming GATT ministerial meeting should be approached.

But in so doing, they have stopped short of developing a common strategy for the meeting scheduled to be held in Punta del Este, Uruguay, in September. The delegations have concentrated on forming a consensus on the need to liberalize agriculture. They agree that this should be pursued within the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and that other international forums should also be used.

There were suggestions from some delegates that there might have been minor differences about which other forums should be used or when, but by concentrating on the principles of agricultural liberalization, the twelve reached agreement so smoothly that the afternoon session on Thursday, the second day, was cancelled. Delegates were treated instead to a trip of Ko Lan and a view of the local coral reef.

The main achievement of the meeting, then, is the show of solidarity. The deputy head of the Thai delegation, Kroekkrai Chiraphaet, who is deputy director general of the Business Economics Department, went so far as to speculate that the Americans, Japanese and Europeans would now be compelled to reconsider their domestic farm policies.

But while most delegates say the meeting has been valuable, there are still clear differences of approach. One, spearheaded by Australia and Chile, is that the trade conflict between the United States and the European Community should be exploited. Delegates from these two countries say that the economic might of the United States should be used as leverage to pressurize the Europeans into gradually dismantling its import barriers and export subsidies.

Even so, the Chilean delegate, Alejandro Jara, who is a senior Foreign Ministry official handling multilateral economic affairs, said some of the optimism shown in public statements given on the first day about US and EEC willingness to discuss agriculture might be unfounded. He was particularly sceptical about the French approach now that a new government has been elected and a new agriculture minister has been appointed.

The other approach is one adopted by Brazil. Valdemar Carineiro Leao, the Director of the External Relations Ministry's commodities division, said it would be a mistake to treat the United States ... as anything approaching an ally on agricultural liberalization.

The Brazilians are part of a group that some diplomats have called "the extremists." The other leading member is India, but also included are Argentia, Cuba, Egypt, Nicaragua, Peru, Tanzania and Yugoslavia. This group has drawn up a draft declaration for the Punta del Este ministerial meeting that strictly excludes services, investment and intellectual property rights from the proposed new round. They also want trade barriers on textiles and apparel to be dismantled.

There have been suggestions that the Brazilian draft would lead to the major industrial nations refusing to participate in the new round, effectively killing it. The Brazilian delegate here, however, said he was confident that GATT members would agree to participate in the talks.

There is a second prominent draft being discussed for the GATT ministerial meeting. This one has been submitted by Colombia and Switzerland, but incorporates ideas proposed by Australia, Chile, Hungary, Thailand and Uruguay. This draft defines "trade" more broadly and its sponsors are prepared to discuss services, investment and intellectual property rights.

The Chilean delegate here cryptically summed up the two proposals by saying there is only one draft declaration for the Punta del Este meeting. The other document -- by which he meant the Brazilian one -- is a document for "no negotiation," he said.

None of this, apparently, has been raised in the conference room here, with the exception of some mild comments on the extent to which the United States should be treated as an ally.

The Thais have refrained from commenting on this difference of approach, although Thailand's approach is clearly in favour of the Colombia/Switzerland draft. Thai officials say it is possible to interpet the two drafts as being essentially the same, since the broader Columbia/Switzerland draft is full of square brackets -- GATT code for passages that could be dropped. And square brackets are to be found around all references in this draft to services, intellectual property, investment, textiles and clothing, the reduction and elimination of subsidies, and high technology. It is clearly designed as a draft that can keep everyone happy.

The Chilean prediction is that the new round will get underway and that the discussions on services will be smooth. Jara said it may take twenty years for discussions on the broad principles to turn into practical applications of the liberalization of services. Thailand's stand is that the liberalization of services is inevitable. Nitsai Wetchachiwa, ambassador and permanent representative in Geneva, admitted that Thai companies, particularly banks, will soon want this to happen as they branch out into overseas operations.

In contrast to the smooth treatment of agriculture here in Phatthaya, this will be a far greater problem in Uruguay. The Chilean delegate suggested that the new round could get underway with different groups involved in talks on the two main areas. In typical GATT fashion, this presumably could mean the same set of countries but working under different legal concepts, since GATT distinguishes between "CONTRACTING PARTIES" in capital letters which refers to the agreement's signatories as a body, and "contracting parties" which simply refers to the signatories as individual countries.

Meanwhile, the twelve countries meeting here are at least agreed that agriculture has to be given priority.

The twelve agree on the need to include monitoring and arbitration mechanisms within GATT's handling of agriculture. But they also agree that liberalization will take a long time, and that they will have to take action outside GATT as well.

Thai officials such as Kroekkrai, and Karun Kittisathaphon, director of the Trade Policy Division, stress that this group of countries will remain an informal group, however, simply keeping in touch to coordinate their approach in various arenas such as the Geneva meetings of the Preparatory Committee which is working on the draft declarations for Punta del Este.

The ministerial meeting in Cairns, Queensland, next month, where the twelve will be joined by Fiji and Colombia, will be a further indication of how they will approach the new round.

NAKASONE ON TEXTBOOK ISSUE, GORBACHEV VISIT

[Text] Tokyo, July 29 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said Tuesday that it is regrettable if Education Minister Masayuki Fujio's recent remarks on a controversial high school history textbook have caused misunderstanding among foreign countries and made those countries displeased. In an interview for a TV program videotaped Tuesday, Nakasone also said that Fujio's remarks did not refer to any specific countries and that he will instruct the Foreign Ministry to make efforts to dispel such misunderstanding among the countries concerned. These were the prime minister's first remarks on the subject since Fujio's remarks sparked criticism from both China and South Korea last weekend through this week.

Fujio told a news conferene here Friday that those who complain of the descriptions of Japan's wartime action in Asia contained in the history textbook should look back themselves to see if they didn't commit similar acts in world history.

In reference to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's speech Monday in Vladivostok, in which Gorbachev expressed a positive attitude toward a top-level exchange of visits between Japan and the Soviet Union, Nakasone said he would welcome a visit to Japan by the Soviet leader. Nakasone said that if Gorbachev visits Japan, it will mark a breakthrough for Soviet diplomacy on Asia, the Pacific and Japan. He added that such a visit would mean the Soviet Union has calculated that the nation will be able to make great diplomatic steps through it.

Nakasone also hinted anew his wish to extend his premiership beyond the end of October when his term expires as president of the ruling Liberal-Democractic Party and hence as prime minister. He said "it is my duty to hand over my work to my successor after making safe and carefree roads to the 21st century." On economic matters, Nakasone admitted that economic growth has slowed down and said that he would like to stimulate domestic demand through a fairly large supplementary budget.

MINISTRY BEGINS PLANS FOR GORBACHEV VISIT

OW291043 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 1000 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Text] A top-ranking Foreign Ministry official, commenting on Soviet General Secretary Gorbachev's indication yesterday of his desire to visit Japan, disclosed that Japan wants to begin concrete talks soon with the Soviet side to bring about General Secretary Gorbachev's visit to Japan.

Regarding the proposed exchange of mutual visits by Japanese and Soviet leaders, the Foreign Ministry official said that the Japanese side takes the position that General Secretary Gorbachev's visit to Japan should be made first. The Foreign Ministry, he said, wants to begin talks with the Soviet side soon after conducting consultations with Prime Minister Nakasone and Foreign Minister Kuranari. To help bring about an early Japan visit by General Secretary Gorbachev, he said, the Foreign Ministry intends to begin concrete talks soon with the Soviet side through diplomatic channels. He added that the talks will cover adjustments of the itinerary for the visit and other details.

The Foreign Ministry official said that a meeting between Foreign Minister Kuranari, who is scheduled to attend the upcoming UN General Assembly session in New York this autumn, and Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze will be an important key to realizing General Secretary Gorbachev's visit to Japan.

BALDRIGE URGES INDUSTRY TO COOPERATE ON TRADE

[Text] Tokyo, July 29 KYODO -- U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige Tuesday urged Japanese business circles and the bureaucracy to follow Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's leadership to expand Japan's imports. "A failure of Japanese political will to stay the course -- or a private sector betrayal of the intent of the nation's leaders -- will affect critical swing votes in Washington," Baldrige said.

His remarks came at a breakfast meeting sponsored by the American Chamber of Commerce in Japan. Baldrige will leave for the United States later Tuesday after a four-day unofficial visit.

Baldrige blamed the Japanese bureaucracy and industry for preventing the Japanese government from implementing what it has promised in rectifying the Japan-U.S. trade imbalance, which came to nearly 50 billion dollars in Japan's favor in 1985. He said the U.S. trade deficit with Japan will be substantially reduced "if the Japanese bureaucracy, people and industry follow the prime minister's lead to develop a national consensus to import more." Baldrige reiterated his calls for Japan's efforts in resolving bilateral economic issues involving the question of foreign participation in work on the projected new Kansai International Airport, semiconductors and transportation equipment. Baldrige said he is optimistic that the Japanese government will help enable foreign companies to participate in phases 2 and 3 of the 5 billion dollar project to build an airport off Osaka, western Japan.

Phase 1 is to create an offshore island for the airport, while phases 2 and 3 involve the construction of runways and other airport facilities and the supply of airport equipment such as radar.

Baldrige said the decision on contractors for phase 1 appeared to have been already made and thus the U.S. was pressing hard for foreign participation in the upcoming bidding for the latter two phases. Regarding the various bilateral issues, Baldrige urged the "new Nakasone cabinet to make strategic decisions about legislation and policies." Otherwise, he warned that Japan would find itself moving again toward increasing isolation.

Transport Minister Meets Baldrige

[Text] Tokyo, July 28 KYODO -- U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said Monday he understands that time considerations make it difficult for U.S. firms to bid for contracts on the basic construction of the planned new Kansai airport, Japanese officials said. But Baldrige also asked for Japanese efforts to give U.S. firms a fair chance in bidding for later stages of construction work, they added.

In a meeting with transport minister Ryutaro Hashimoto, Baldrige said he understands it is hard for U.S. firms to take part in bidding for construction of an artificial island, shore protection works and a connecting bridge to the airport, which is scheduled for completion in early 1993, the officials said.

But Baldrige told Hashimoto that the U.S. wants Japan to hold a seminar to explain the system of competitive bidding among designated participants which will apply to contracts for constructions of airport terminals and runways, and to supply airport equipment, they said.

The project, planned by the semi-governmental Kansai International Airport Co., is to build Japan's first 24-hour airport on a 510-hectare manmade island, some 5 kilometers off Izumi Sano, southern Osaka.

Hashimoto replied that Japan will hold a seminar in about a month's time in Tokyo to prevent U.S. misunderstanding of the designated participant system, which Japan usually applies to public works projects. Most other countries allow open international tender for major public construction works. Hashimoto said Japan has told U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter that there will be no discrimination in competitive bidding and Japan will buy necessary equipment abroad if foreign firms can assure low price and good after-sales service.

Baldrige said last year alone Japanese firms won 1.8 billion dollars worth of construction works in the U.S. firms received virtually no construction orders in Japan, the officials said. Baldrige indicated the U.S. needs Japan to make some concession on participation of U.S. firms in construction of the new Kansai airport to calm down protectionist moves in the U.S. Congress, the officials said.

NEW HEADQUARTERS WILL DEAL WITH TRADE FRICTION

CW281325 Tokyo KYODO in English 1231 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] Tokyo, July 28 KYODO -- The government will set up a headquarters led by Prime Minister Yaskuhiro Nakasone himself to implement a set of long- and medium-term measures for dissolving trade friction stemming from Japan's massive trade surpluses, government sources said Monday.

The headquarters will be organized by strengthening and expanding the existing council designed to study means of implementing measures proposed by the advisory group on economic structural adjustment for international harmony in a report to the prime minister on April 7.

The group, led by Haruo Maekawa, former governor of the Bank of Japan, called for, among other things, the restructuring of the export-oriented Japanese economy into one mainly dependent on domestic demand.

Prime Minister Nakasone broached the idea of forming a headquarters for implementing the measures at his first press conference following the July 6 general election in which his Liberal-Democratic party (LDP) won a landslide victory.

The sources said the headquarters will be established after obtaining the consent of government and LDP leaders at their meeting on August 4.

The Prime Minister will call the members of the Maekawa group on Friday to discuss means of implementing the recommended measures, the sources said.

33D ANNIVERSARY OF KOREAN WAR 'VICTORY' MARKED

[NODONG SINMUN 27 July editorial: "Let Us Prevent Permanent Division of the Nation and the Danger of War and Blaze the Path to Peace and Reunification"]

[Text] Today we mark the significant 33d anniversary of the great fatherland liberation war victory. We are doing so under circumstances during which new revolutionary upsurges are being effected on all fronts of socialist construction, the South Korean people's anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle is surging ahead, and international solidarity with our people's revolutionary cause is being further strengthened.

The past Korean war, which was forced upon our people by the U.S. imperialist aggressors, was a grave fight to determine survival or ruin for our people. At the same time, it was a fierce anti-U.S. and anti-imperialist struggle to mow down the united forces of the international reactionaries headed by the U.S. imperialists, to defend the freedom and independence of the fatherland, and to safeguard peace and stability in the world.

Under the outstanding and tested leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song -- the legendary anti-Japanese hero, an iron-willed and ever victorious genius, and a great military strategist -- our people and the men and officers of the People's Army not only overcame the difficult tribulations caused by war, but caused the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys to suffer an ignominious defeat and won a historic victory in the fatherland liberation war by rising as one in the sacred struggle to defend the fatherland and the revolutionary gains, and by fighting heroically during that struggle.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Our people's victory during the Korean war was a victory of a revolutionary people against imperialist reactionary forces and a victory of a revolutionary army against imperialist aggressive forces.

Our people's victory in the fatherland liberation war was a bright victory for the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's military ideology of self-defense, his wise leadership, and his unique military art. It was also the proud consequence of the invincible might of our people and the People's Army, who were firmly united around the party and leader with a single ideology and will.

By achieving a great victory in the fatherland liberation war, our people and the People's Army have honorably defended their glorious fatherland, the DPRK, safeguarded peace in Asia and the world, and shattered the myth of the U.S. imperialists being the strongest force in the world, opening a downward path for the U.S. imperialists.

Our people's victory during the fatherland liberation war has demonstrated that no force on earth can bring to their knees a people who have risen for national dignity, independence, sovereignty, and the freedom of their country by holding their fate in their own hands under the wise leadership of an outstanding leader. This has also energetically encouraged the anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle of the oppressed people of the world and the development of the world revolutionary movement.

The victory won by our people in the fatherland liberation war dealt a great blow to the U.S. imperialists' policy of war and aggression and unfolded the bright prospect for peace and peaceful reunification in Korea.

Since the war, our party and the government of the republic have put forward many fair and practical policies and proposals to transform the conflict into a lasting peace and to reunify the divided fatherland. These proposals have included the three principles and five-point policy for national reunification, proposals to replace the armistice agreement with a peace agreement, and proposals to found a confederal state; and the DPRK has consistently and sincerely made every effort possible to realize them.

However, even today, 32 years after the armistice agreement was put into force, the dark clouds of war, not peace, hang heavily over our country, and division, not reunification, continues.

This is entirely due to the criminal maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys. Even before the ink of the signatures on the armistice agreement had dried, the U.S. imperialists attempted to legalize their occupation of South Korea by concluding the aggressive treaty of mutual defense with the South Korean puppets. They have turned South Korea into the Far East's largest army barracks, war powderkeg, and nuclear forward base by moving the command of the UN forces from Japan to Seoul, by accelerating the introduction of new operational equipment into the South Korea military buildup, and by building or expanding military bases there.

Declaring the Korean peninsula as the forefront of the U.S. strategy and an area to defend their frontline with a view toward realizing their aggressive strategy toward Asia, the U.S. imperialists have accelerated the formation of a tripartite military alliance among the United States, Japan, and South Korea, while they earnestly push ahead with preparations to provoke a new war in South Korea. According to a newly established operations plan for an intensive surprise attack, the armed forces have recently been reorganized as a whole into an offensive type and their mobility and nuclear war capabilities have been strengthened in South Korea.

Over 80-90 percent of the puppet armed forces have been deployed forward near the Military Demarcation Line and a new special corps composed of approximately 180,000 men trained to conduct commando operations against the northern half of the Republic has been organized.

The "Team Spirit-86" exercise, which the U.S. imperialists, together with the South Korean puppets, waged over the entire area of South Korea from February to April, was a preliminary war and test nuclear war designed to perfect this war preparation posture.

The U.S. imperialists are not only the ringleaders who threaten peace in our country and Asia, but also the basic obstacle to reunification of our fatherland. Having set forth the criminal fabrication of two Koreas as their basic strategy, the U.S. imperialists have egged the puppets on to fascism, division, and North-South confrontation. It is at the instigation of the U.S. imperialists that the Chon Tu-hwan regime schemes for long-term power, infringing upon the people's aspirations for independence and democracy with bayonets and aggravating the strained situation by kicking up commotions about anticommunism and war. It is also according to a scenario of the U.S. imperialists that the ring maneuvers to legalize permanent national division by infringing upon the three great principles of national reunification and by spreading the theory of separate entry into the United Nations and simultaneous entry, the theory of cross-contacts, and the theory of cross-recognition. The ring is also despicably scheming to create international circumstances for the fabrication of two Koreas by hosting the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul.

Because of the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique, maneuvers which are more blatant each day, to perpetuate division and war, not reunification, the danger of permanent division instead of peace increases in our country, and the danger of nuclear war hangs heavy.

Today, the danger of permanent division and nuclear war is approaching a grave stage that no one can ignore. Preventing permanent national division and the danger of nuclear war, easing tension, and opening the road to independent and peaceful reunification are acute questions, the solutions of which are being awaited.

Our party and the government of the republic, which assume heavy responsibility for the fate of the fatherland and the nation, have advanced realistic proposals for peaceful settlement of the Korean question during every period of the developing situation and have exerted sincere efforts to realize these proposals.

During recent years alone we have proposed tripartite talks the main purpose of which is to sign a peace agreement between us and the United States and to adopt a declaration of nonaggression between us and South Korea. In June we proposed talks among military persons in authority from the DPRK, the United States, and South Korea to discuss stopping military exercises and the arms buildup and reducing armed forces, armaments, and so on. Our initiatives are based on the consistent stand of our party and the government of the Republic, which treasure peace, and on the historical lesson that without taking realistic measures to ease tension, neither the preservation and consolidation of peace on the Korean peninsula nor the improvement of North-South relations can be realized.

Because of the war commotion of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, North-South dialogue, including the Red Cross talks -- arranged thanks to our initiative for compatriotic relief of the South Korean flood victims -- have been suspended at least twice.

Only when a reliable guarantee to ease tension is provided -- and thus distrust and misunderstanding are removed and an atmosphere of trust and understanding is created -- can North-South relations be improved and developed. No improvement in relations can be expected under conditions in which a large number of armed forces of the two sides confront each other with a Military Demarcation Line between them, under conditions in which armed forces are augmented and their equipment is strengthened, or under conditions in which one side repeats war exercises against the other side.

Our repeated peace proposals were designed to remove these obstacles blocking the way of the North and South.

However, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets have opposed taking any measures to ease tension and have answered our peace proposal by inciting commotions of confrontation and war. A large-scale war commotion called "Ulchi-86" was also recklessly stirred up in South Korea. The exercise, which continued over the span of a week with the puppet army, reserve forces, puppet organs at all levels, and all residents as objects of mobilization, showed that hostile acts against us are escalating in South Korea.

South Korea is becoming a more dangerous hotbed of war.

The South Korean people, who have suffered disaster under the U.S. imperialists' military occupation and the fascist rule of their lackeys, have recognized through practical experience that without withdrawal of the U.S. troops and the termination of fascist rule, neither the restoration of sovereignty and democracy nor peaceful reunification of the country can be realized. They are actively advancing into the mass movement of the anti-U.S. cause of independence, the antifascist cause of democratization, and the cause of national reunification.

To remove the danger of nuclear war, a nuclear-free zone of peace without nuclear weapons and bases should be founded on the Korean peninsula.

To turn the Korean peninsula into a nuclear free zone of peace, on 23 June the government of the republic made it clear that it would not produce or introduce nuclear weapons, and would not allow the establishment of foreign military bases in the country or the passage of nuclear weapons through it, and demanded that the United States not ship more nuclear weapons into South Korea, but instead reduce and withdraw the nuclear weapons already introduced and so on.

If the United States is interested in preserving peace in Korea, it should not aggravate tension, but prudently deal with our proposal and work for peace.

Korea is one. All conscientious people in the North and South oppose division and aspire for the reunification of the country. The maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets to divide the North and South forever must be stopped at once.

The 24th Olympic Games must not be abused as a political tool to block the reunification of Korea and foster division. The 24th Olympic Games must be cohosted by North and South Korea as we have proposed to make the games contribute to the cause of reunification, to say nothing of the friendship and unity of sportsmen and peace.

Peace and peaceful reunification in Korea are the urgent demand of the times and the nation. The United States must realize that trying to hold on to South Korea is an anchronistic delusion, and it must withdraw all armed forces of aggression, including nuclear weapons, from South Korea without delay. The South Korean puppets must also not obstruct the way of reunification, but step down from power as demanded by the people.

Peace and peaceful reunification cannot be achieved of themselves, but can be realized only through the struggle against the splittists at home and abroad. The South Korean people must check and frustrate every step of the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys for war and division by more powerfully waging the anti-U.S., antifascist, antiwar, and antinuclear movement for independence, democracy, peace, and peaceful reunification.

Today, the prevailing situation demands that the revolutionary base in the northern half of the Republic be more firmly consolidated and a new upsurge be effected in socialist construction. All party members and workers should more solidly cement our revolutionary base politically, economically, and militarily by thoroughly implementing the line of the three revolutions -- ideological, technological, and cultural -- while upholding the militant tasks set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in his New Year's address and the decisions of the 11th Plenary Session of the Sixth Party Central Committee.

All people and the men and officers of the People's Army must increase revolutionary alertness and firmly defend the socialist fatherland and the revolutionary gains in a strained and mobilized posture.

Our people's struggle to prevent the danger of a new war and maintain and consolidate peace in Korea is part of the struggle for peace in Asia and the world. We express firm belief that the world's progressive people who treasure peace will also continue to express firm solidarity with our people's just struggle for peace and peaceful reunification in Korea and in the future.

Our people will check and frustrate the maneuvers of the splittists at home and abroad to provoke a new war and divide the nation and certainly achieve the national cause of preserving peace in Korea and reunifying the fatherland.

NODONG SINMUN ON PARTY IDEOLOGICAL WORK

[NODONG SINMUN 25 July Editorial: "Let Us Further Strengthen the Party's Ideological Work in Conformity With the Demands of Developing Reality"]

[Text] Today we are faced with the heavy task of strengthening the party and vigorously accelerating the revolution and construction. Such a revolutionary duty and the prevailing situation urgently demand that party organizations and party propaganda functionaries strengthen the party's ideological work more firmly than ever before.

In his recently published classic work, "Historical Experiences in Building the WPK," the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song elucidated the significance and importance of the party's ideological work in consolidating and developing the party ranks and in revolution and construction, and presented the direction and ways for strengthening ideological indoctrination work among party members and working people. This is a guideline our party organizations and functionaries engaged in ideological work should firmly grasp and embody.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: We should vigorously wage ideological work among party members and working people in conformity with the purpose and mission of the party's ideological work. Our party carries out the revolution, which constantly effects innovation and advances forward. Firmly giving priority to ideological work and deepening and developing it in conformity with the demands of the developing reality is precisely the policy our party has consistently adhered to. The duty to thoroughly implement this policy has been assigned to party organizations and functionaries engaged in the party's ideological work. The party's ideological work is important work for helping party members and working people become genuine communist revolutionaries and to inspire them to highly display their revolutionary zeal and creative positiveness.

For us to thoroughly imbue the party and revolutionary ranks with the chuche idea, to firmly consolidate and deepen the might of the revolutionary ranks, to successfully carry out the economic tasks set forth by the party, and to vigorously push ahead with the revolution and construction, it is important to strengthen ideological work. As has been demonstrated by practical experience in the past, when the masses are thoroughly indoctrinated and inspired, the difficult problem of guaranteeing ideological purity among the revolutionary ranks and the heavy and vast task of socialist construction can be smoothly resolved.

Essentially, the revolution advances amid the struggle against all sorts of revolutionary enemies and their reactionary ideologies. Ideology does not allow an instant of non-vigilance. The lessons of history have taught that discontinuing the indoctrination work in revolutionary ideology and spirit allows other ideologies to infiltrate the nation. In particular, under the present situation in which the imperialists' ideological and cultural infiltration from outside has continued, we should not neglect ideological indoctrination work even to the slightest degree, but should vigorously and continuously push ahead with it.

The internal and external circumstances of our revolution today are very complicated. The more the situation rapidly changes as seen today, the more we should firmly arm the people with the revolutionary ideology and lead them to vigorously struggle, upholding the banner of the revolution.

Peace cannot be achieved without struggle. The way to not only lead the entire people to resolutely struggle for peace in Korea and for Korea's independent reunification and the firm defense of national sovereignty and dignity with lofty zeal and indomitable vigor and spirit, but also the way to lead them to carry out the revolution to the end rests precisely with strengthening political and ideological indoctrination work among them. In particular, in raising the new generations -- who have grown up under peaceful circumstances without experiencing the rigorous trials of the revolution -- to become pillars of the revolution fond of carrying out the revolution and of struggling, there is no more mighty means than ideological work to indoctrinate them in a revolutionary manner and prepare them politically and ideologically.

From the standpoint of our party and revolution and from the standpoint of the revolutionary task and the change in the surrounding situation, deepening the party's ideological work is very important. The functionaries of the party's ideological work sector should fulfill their duty and responsibility in carrying out this work. The objective in carrying out the party's work at present is to bring up all members of society to be enthusiastic chuche-type revolutionaries whose chuche revolutionary world view is firmly established, who trust and follow the party and the leader with devoted hearts, and who struggle, at the cost of everything they have, to defend and carry out the chuche idea and the party's policy, its embodiment.

Above all, we should efficiently plan and supervise chuche idea indoctrination and vigorously conduct all indoctrination work. Chuche idea indoctrination is what we should emphasize in the party's ideological indoctrination work. In carrying out chuche idea indoctrination work, we should ensure that the party's slogan on living in our own way is thoroughly realized. The fundamental spirit consistent in this party slogan is the determination to resolutely adhere to the chuche banner in whatever situation or circumstance, to live with our own spirit as required by the chuche idea, and to carry out revolution to the end by our own strength.

By our own spirit we mean our party's ideology and policy. The party organizations should ensure that the functionaries and workers make the chuche idea and our party's policy, its embodiment, their flesh and bone and their firm faith, think and act as required by it, and resolutely struggle against any unsound ideological element contradictory to it. At the same time, they should ensure that functionaries and workers highly value everthing our party has created in its own way and thoroughly carry out all work which facilitates adhering to and developing it. They should also lead functionaries and workers so they can firmly maintain the principle whereby they solve all problems arising in revolution and construction in the manner required by the slogan in conformity with the interests of our people and revolution.

In the chuche idea indoctrination, great attention should also be paid to ensuring that the functionaries and workers thoroughly realize the chuche idea in carrying out revolution. In this it is especially important to ensure that the functionaries and workers highly demonstrate an attitude befitting the masters of revolution and the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle, and that the functionaries establish in themselves the revolutionary view of the masses, respect the masses, and resolutely struggle for the benefit of the masses. For this, care should be taken that chuche idea indoctrination is not limited to awareness of its pure principles, but also that it is effectively conducted in connection with its practice.

Our party's line and policy embodying the chuche idea are the correct strategy and tactics of our party.

The party organizations and functionaries of the party's ideological work sector should extensively and deeply conduct the party policy indoctrination, making the study of the great leader's works and the party's literature its basis, so all party members and workers can deeply understand the nature and justification of the party's policy and resolutely defend and carry it out. Here it is important to explain and publicize the current party policy in connection with the policy our party has carried out historically and to ensure that all the functionaries and workers are well-versed in the party's policy concerning their own sectors.

The essence in our party's monolithic idea indoctrination is to ensure that the party members and workers remain endlessly loyal to the party. The party organizations and the party's propaganda functionaries should conduct propaganda on the greatness of the party and the leader and the indoctrination concerning loyalty in an intensive manner to ensure that the party members and workers maintain loyalty to the party as revolutionary faith and fidelity.

Our party's revolutionary tradition is a mighty weapon for mass indoctrination. Extensively conducting the indoctrination for revolutionary tradition is the policy our party is presently stressing. The functionaries of the party's ideological work sector should intensify arming party members, workers, and the new generation with the chuche revolutionary tradition -- which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song created in the blaze of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, which was developed and enriched during the course of carrying out the revolutionary task in many stages after the liberation, and which our party is deepening and developing today.

Meanwhile, attention should be paid to having them deeply learn the theory about the inevitablity of forming, inheriting, and developing the revolutionary tradition, which the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il elucidated, and to ensuring that they resolutely adhere to the purity of the revolutionary tradition generation after generation. In revolutionary tradition indoctrination, the indoctrination work of having the functionaries and workers learn well our party's history, the history of the struggle to establish the chuche idea should be effectively conducted. The revolutionary tradition indoctrination can be conducted more effectively when it is conducted efficiently in combination with practical activities and in various forms and methods.

Revolutionary indoctrination and communist indoctrination are the important contents of our party's ideological work. For we who are still at the crossroads of revolution and are building socialism, confronting the imperialists directly, this indoctrination work is important work that should not be interrupted for even one moment. We should intensify anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. indoctrination among party members and workers so they can endlessly hate imperialism and the class enemies with a high class outlook and principle, firmly defend the class interests and revolutionary principle of the working class, and work and live militantly with high revolution-mindedness.

At the same time, we should vigorously press ahead with indoctrination work to clearly know the reactionary nature and poisonous effect of all the old ideological trends gnawing at the revolution-mindedness and class-mindedness of the working class and to prevent its ideological element and rotten bourgeois way of life from infiltrating us. We should also intensify indoctrination on socialism, patriotism, and the fatherland so everyone can warmly love the fatherland and the people with high national pride and self-respect and vigorously struggle for the lasting prosperity of chuche Korea.

It is also important to establish a revolutionary studious atmosphere in every sector and unit.

Study is the first stage in the process of establishing a revolutionary world outlook, and the basic means of study is by book. Books are our teachers and companions. We should ensure that functionaries and workers always carry books with them and make reading books a part of their lives and life habits so the entire people's studying can become a social trend. Here it is necessary to combine each individual's awareness properly with the party organizations' demands and to ensure that everyone learn from the study experiences of the self-educated persons and enthusiasts known nationwide.

It is important to vigorously conduct propaganda and agitation for socialist economic construction to intensify the party's ideological work. Our party is now conducting a bold operation to bring about an upturn in socialist economic construction. The party organizations at various levels and the functionaries of the ideological work sector should concentrate on propaganda and agitation work to realize the party's intent and idea. The relevant sectors, including the publishing and reporting sector, should place major emphasis on the propaganda for the party's economic policy and explain the justness of all the economic policies put forward by the party extensively, logically, and convincingly.

Also, we should ensure that the sound of the drums of economic agitation is heard loudly in all socialist construction battle sites, including the construction sites of (Kim Chol), Taechon, and Sonchon. The party's propaganda functionaries should place the emphasis on ensuring that in political work and economic agitation, all functionaries and workers open the road of advancing economic construction with the idea, spirit, method, and attitude demonstrated in construction of the Nampo lockgate.

Ideological work is the work of dealing with and remaking people's ideas, and the results always remain in the heads of people. Therefore, in order to score successes in ideological work, we should continuously improve methods and enhance the standards of the propaganda functionaries themselves. Like the commanding officers and political functionaries of the anti-Japanese guerrillas in the past, the functionaries should always go deeply among the masses and actively conduct propaganda and agitation work while living with them.

Also, they should conduct propaganda and agitation work with specific methods and in conformity with the special nature of the objective of this work. It is also important for them to produce well, maintaining the specific features of each of them, the indoctrination data and means including the study lecture notes, lecture notes, publications, reports, and literary and art works.

The party's propaganda functionaries, who are the indoctrinators of the masses, should learn more energetically than anyone else, acquire high political insight and rich and diversified knowledge, and firmly prepare themselves to be learned political activists. By so doing they can carry out their duty well in today's reality.

In order to carry out ideological work well in the right direction, we should firmly ensure the party Central Committee's monolithic guidance. In his classic work "The Historical Experience in Building the WPK," the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song stressed once again the importance of the problem of ensuring the party Central Committee's monolithic guidance in ideological work based on the lessons learned from our party's ideological work. The party's propaganda functionaries should deeply learn the ideology and theory contained in this work and conduct all the particulars of ideological work consistently and thoroughly in conformity with the party's will.

The duty given to the party's ideological sector functionaries in improving and intensifying ideological work in conformity with the development of reality is very heavy. The party's ideological sector functionaries should bear the party center's will deeply in mind and do their best to carry out their duties and roles to deepen and develop ideological work.

The party's ideological work is responsible work to be carried out by all functionaries, including not only the party's propaganda functionaries but also the responsible functionaries of party organizations at various levels, and the functionaries of science, educational, publication, reporting, literature, and art sectors. All party organizations and functionaries should uphold the party's will and deepen ideological work in conformity with the requirement of the development of reality so that they can remodel the entire party membership and the entire society on the chuche idea and effect a new advance in accelerating socialist construction.

'POWDER-REEKING' SOUTH UNFIT TO HOST OLYMPICS

[NODONG SINMUN 29 July special article: "A Powder-Reeking South Korean Cannot be a Venue for the Olympics"]

[Text] Arguing that South Korea, which reeks of war powder, is not an appropriate venue for the Olympics, political, social, and sports circles in various countries around the world are now raising their voices to oppose and reject the holding of the Olympics in Seoul. Such voices grow stronger with each passing day.

This is by no means an accident. The noble idea of the Olympics is to promote friendship and unity and contribute to the cause of world peace through sports.

This being the case, a venue for the Olympics should be chosen, as a matter of course, among places where the political situation is stable, democratic freedoms are ensured, and a peaceful environment is provided. South Korea, however, is a very unstable place where the situation is far more tense than in any other place in the world and in which the danger of war is constantly present.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: South Korea is the most tense place in the world, and the danger of a new war is ever present there.

Along with the U.S. troops, more than 80 to 90 percent of the nearly one million-strong puppet military forces, placed on a complete attack posture, have not been deployed in forward areas close to the military Demarcation Line [MDL] in South Korea where weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons, are massively concentrated, while modern military equipment is incessantly being increased and shipped there.

Because of this, the military forces deployed in the areas south of the MDL have reached the highest level since the Korean armistic [choson chongjon] and the situation has reached a dangerous phase capable of triggering a war at any time.

South Korea is a dangerous place where the danger of nuclear war is most imminent in the world. Thanks to the U.S. imperialists' criminal nuclear war strategy, South Korea has become the largest Far East nuclear forward base, as well as a test site for nuclear war.

As is widely known to the world, some 1,000 nuclear weapons have already been deployed in South Korea. This figure is equivalent to more than half the number of nuclear weapons the U.S. imperialists have deployed over the entire Asian region, and the density of nuclear weapons deployed is four times higher than that of the NATO region. In terms of variety, nuclear weapons of various kinds, including nultiple-purpose ones, have been deployed.

Although the U.S. imperialists have built nuclear bases in virtually every corner of the world, no other place is as ominously dangerous as South Korea in terms of nuclear weapons. Recently, the U.S. imperialists have even gone so far as to publicly announce a plan to build 36 special nuclear armories and are now pressing ahead with its realization. This clearly shows how grave the danger of nuclear war in South Korea has become.

South Korea is not only a dangerous nuclear armory, but is also a powder-reeking, murderous place where not a day goes by without the sight of gunsmoke because of the provocative war exercises of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets.

Just as war and peace are incompatible, it is obvious that war exercises and peaceful sports festivals are incompatible.

By annually conducting large-scale nuclear attack exercises like "Team Spirit," a de facto nuclear test war, and a preliminary war designed to perfect nuclear war strategy, the U.S. imperialists and the puppet clique have exacerbated tension to the extreme. During the past year, the puppets have harrassed the people almost every day by kicking up the commotion of approximately 50 large-scale military exercise throughout South Korea.

This year is the year of international peace. However, the puppet traitor Chon Tu-hwan, running counter to the trend of the times, has blanketed South Korea with gunsmoke by conducting many war exercises -- including the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise -- in succession since the beginning of the year, while exacerbating tension to the extreme.

The danger of war in South Korea is growing stronger as the ever-deepening crisis facing the fascist colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists and the puppet Chon Tu-hwan clique grows. It is therefore by no means surprising that a Japanese publication has written: It will probably be the clash between the North and South that Chon Tu-hwan may try to use as a last-resort effort to overcome an economic crisis. Attempting to ride out the crisis and divert the eyes of the people who have many complaints, by waging a war is something that can happen.

In South Korea today, confrontation between patriotism and treachery and between democracy and fascism is becoming more acute with each passing day. Despite the puppets' fascist suppression, the youths, students, and patriotic, democratic forces are staging anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle almost daily and the puppets' fascist rule is now facing a great crisis.

U.S. conspirators fly into South Korea in succession and hop from place to place in a bid to probe measures against it. However, the anti-U.S. and antigovernment struggle of the youths, students, and people continues and it now seems likely to expand even more with the puppet presidential election ahead in 1988.

In case the crisis facing fascist military rule enters a blind alley where it is impossible to control, no doubt the puppet traitor will try to find a way out of the crisis by lighting the dry kindling of a war of northward invasion.

This is demonstrated by historical lessons, as well as traitor Chon Tu-hwan'sbloody past. All this demonstrates that South Korea is the world's most dangerous area, an area in which the danger of war is ever present.

Arguing that not once in the history of the Olympics have the Olympics been held in a place where the situation is so tense and the danger of war so ever present as in South Korea, world public opinion now denounces the holding of the Olympics in south Korea, likening it to running in a mined area. It is obvious that the Olympics cannot be held in a place where only gunfire is heard as opposed to peace ideals, or in a murderous place where powder reeks.

To participate in the Seoul Olympics is to approve of the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and of an act which encourages the maneuvers of the U.S. imperalists and puppets to perpetuate division and the commotion of their nuclear war exercises.

Today, the Olympic movement is faced with a crisis. The only way to rescue the Olympic movement and guarantee its smooth execution is to realize our proposal for cohosting the Olympics. In case the puppets do not accept our just proposal, the 24th Olympiad will create grave consequences from which it will be impossible to recover.

MORE DENUNCIATIONS OF U.S., ROK REJECTION OF TALKS

DFRF Statement 23 Jul

[23 July "statement" issued by the DFRF Central Committee]

[Text] The unjust attitude of the United States and the South Korean authorities, who have rejected our proposal for talks by military persons in authority, are invoking great, vehement indignation and concern from all the Korean people and the peace-loving people of the world.

Our new initiative to hold talks by military persons in authority reflects our serious, sincere, and peace-loving position to eliminate the danger of war looming on the Korean peninsula by all means and to open a new phase in the alleviation of tension and peace. If our new peace initiative is realized, the present state of tension on the Korean peninsula will be eliminated, significantly alleviating the situation approaching the brink of war, and will provide a decisively advantageous atmosphere for the resumption of North-South dialogue as well.

Regrettably, however, the United States and South Korean persons in authority have rejected our peace initiative -- which is so reasonable, fair, and just that it is acceptable to anyone -- intentionally avoiding the road to dialogue and negotiation, and openly blocking the way to alleviation of tension and peace.

In the name of the entire Korean people, the DFRF Central Committee resolutely denounces the dialogue-negating and antipeace act of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique, noting that it is a challenge to dialogue and peace.

By rejecting our proposal for talks by military persons in authority, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique clearly showed what they are choosing at the crossroads of peace and war, dialogue and confrontation.

The fact that they even refused to accept the second letters from our side urging them to affirmatively respond to the talks by military persons in authority was little short of openly proclaiming to the world that they are following the road of war rather than peace, the road of confrontation rather than dialogue. Because of this, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets are being strongly criticized and denounced by public opinion at home and abroad and are being branded as warmongers.

In an attempt to cope with this desperate state, the South Korean puppets are hurriedly visiting the United Nations, making awkward vindications, and are trying to fabricate a false opinion that our peace proposal is a deceptive peace offensive. However, this gibberish from those who have rejected the peace talks will convince no one. In fact, the South Korean puppets, together with the United States, conducted the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise, suspending North-South dialogue, and continuously conducted such war exercises in South Korea as "Ttangbol-86," "Piho-86," "Pangpae-86," and "Ulchi-86," aggravating tension, and made themselves completely unworthy to even mention dialogue.

Acting as such, they avoided the talks by military persons in authority and even refused to receive our letters containing a peace initiative, and while so doing they babbled about the resumption of dialogue. It is all really quite ridiculous. The maneuvers for confrontation and war are incompatible with dialogue and the alleviation of tension. Raving about the resumption of talks while rejecting talks by military persons in authority is a different way of proclaiming confrontation and war maneuvers. We will keenly watch how far the South Korean ruling gang leads the situation, following its U.S. masters while rejecting our proposal for peace talks.

If the United States and the South Korean persons in authority truly desire the alleviation of tension on the Korean peninsula and North-South dialogue, they should affirmatively respond without delay to our peace proposal for talks by military persons in authority.

LSWYK Statement 24 Jul

[24 July "Statement" issued by the LSWYK Central Committee]

[Text] The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets who have refused our proposal for holding talks among military authorities are now running wild in a new slanderous racket against the Republic in a bid to escape the protest and condemantion at home and abroad.

At the instigation of the U.S. imperialists, the South Korean puppets are now slandering and defaming us more viciously than ever before, saying that our proposal for holding talks among military authorities is a plot to mislead world opinion on th eve of the upcoming summit conference of the nonaligned countries and the 1988 Olympics.

The LSWYK Central Committee, on behalf of all members of the LSWYK and youths, resolutely condemns the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets who have refused our proposal for holding talks between military authorities, while perpetrating slanderous rackets against the republic, recognizing it as an open challenge to the entire nation and peace-loving people of the world who want detente and peace.

While running counter to our patient efforts for detente, dialogue, and peace, the U.S. imperialist aggressors and the South Korean puppets are now frantically running wild in war maneuvers against us, while preporterously talking about peace and the like.

Not being satisifed with the fact that they have turned South Korea into a nuclear base, the U.S. imperialist aggressors have recently concocted a plot to introduce more new military equipment, including neutron bombs, to South Korea. They have also built numerous poison gas manufacturing plants in South Korea to accelerate the production of chemical weapons. In particular, the U.S. imperialists are planning to build 36 special nuclear weapon storehouses called WS-3's in Kusan in South Korea. They have gone so far as to clamor that the building of these storehouses is not a secret.

The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, who persistently staged the "Team Spirit-86" war exercise racket despite our sincere proposal and efforts for stopping war exercises, subsequently staged such new war exercises as "Ttangbol-86" and "Pangpae-86" in succession. Furthermore, last April they officially declared at the so-called annual Security Consultative Meeting that the "Team Spirit" military exercise will continue in the future.

At the instigation of the U.S. imperialists, the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique, while clamoring about the rapid establishment of a wartime system and preparations for wartime material, staged a new wartime mobilization exercise, beginning on 13 July, codenamed "Ulchi-86." Thus, they are creating a new atmosphere for war throughout South Korea.

Is there any justification or face for the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets -- who have responded to our timely and reasonable proposal for talks among military authorities to eliminate the danger of war on the Korean Peninsula, to guarantee peace there, and to create a favorable atmosphere for North-South dialogue with unscrupulous war exercise rackets -- to slander and defame us? Their act is nothing but a trick to conceal their real intention of seeking confrontation and war only, not detente and dialogue.

The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets should assume total responsibility for the grave consequences that will result from their rejection of the proposal for talks among military authorities and the aggravation of tension.

If the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets really want detente and dialogue, they should immediately renounce their maneuvers for confrontation and war, which run counter to dialogue and detente. Adhering to the maneuvers for confrontation and war will bring nothing conducive. History has already proven that warmongers and bellicose elements will meet only with ruin.

The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets should respond to our proposal for talks between military authorities advanced for detente and dialogue without delay.

TOURISM DOUBLES, FOREIGNERS INVITED TO VISIT

SK281028 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1014 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] Pyongyang July 28 (KCNA) -- Tourism is going on well in Korea. According to data released by the DPRK International Tourist Bureau, the number of foreign tourists is expected to double this year compared with last year. In the tourist season from May to October Korea is visited by many tourists from socialist countries and Finland, Britain, West Germany, Hong Kong and other countries and regions. Applications for tourism are coming from more countries.

There are many tourist resorts in Korea which is widely known to the world as a tapestry-like land for its beautiful mountains and clean rivers. Mt. Kumgang with more than 12,000 sky-kissing peaks, myriad-shaped rocks, many ponds and waterfalls forming rainbows in the air presents superb natural beauty. Also among the tourist resorts are Mt. Paekdu, the highest mountain in Korea, which gives wonderful views of the four seasons at a time, Mt. Myohyang which is famous for its superb beauty and wonderful view, Songdowon, Wau Island, Majon, Kyongsong Hot Spring, Sindok Spring and other world-famous scenic spots, recreation parks, seabeaches, peculiar hot springs, spas and springs.

There are well-appointed hotels including the 45-storeyed Pyongyang Koryo Hotel in Pyongyang and at other tourist resorts. A hotel of triangular tower style furnished with ultra modern service facilities made its appearance at the foot of My. Myohyang some time ago.

Tourists will go sight-seeing of scenic spots and visit the Tower of Chuche Idea, the Arch of Triumph, Nampo Barrage and other grand monumental edifices, the international friendship exhibition and Panmunjom. They can also go round well-known ancient tombs, temples, Buddhist figures, mountain fortresses and other historical remains and mementoes and appreciate beautiful and wonderful art works.

In Kaesong tourists will see the cultivation of famous Koryo Insam and get insam and various kinds of elixir of life made of insam. Sinsonro, dinner-set, meat broiled with mushrooms and other Korean dishes effective for long life are particularly favored by tourists. Tourist resorts and sports complexes in Pyongyang and local areas are linked with each other by express highways for the convenience of tourists. Tourists who come to Korea well known for hospitality to foreign visitors will be accorded all conveniences and warm welcome from the Korean people.

Mun Ki-yong, deputy director of the International Tourist Bureau, said the development of tourism is promoted in Korea. A hotel, highest in Korea, and other hotels of peculiar style will be built in Pyongyang and tourist hotels with tens of thousands of beds will make their appearance in Wonsan. And tourist resorts and modern service establishments will be built in different areas and, at the same time, the passenger transport capacity of the airports will markedly increase.

CHONGJIN HOLDS RALLY ON KIM IL-SONG GUIDANCE

[Text] North Hamgyong Province, one of the noted key industrial bases of our country, is filled with the revolutionary zeal of party members and workers thoroughly carrying out the great leader's on-the-spot teachings. While a militant spirit overflows everywhere in the province and new upsurges are being effected in production and construction, a Chongjin rally to thoroughly carry out the programmatic principles the great leader Kim Il-song taught during his on-the-spot guidance in North Hamgyong Province in July 1986 was held in Chongjin Stadium on 23 July 1986.

Placed in front of the meeting site was the portrait of the great leader of our party and people Comrade Kim Il-song. Placed in the meeting site were slogan boards reading "Long live the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song" and "Long live the glorious WPK." Also placed in the meeting site were slogan boards reading "Let us thoroughly carry out the July 1986 on-the-spot teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song" and "Let us unconditionally overfulfill the people's economic plan, upholding the great leader's on-the-spot teachings," and propaganda drawings strongly encouraging the workers to effect new labor exploits.

Participating in the meeting were Comrade Cho Se-ung, candidate member of the WPK Central Committee Political Bureau, responsible secretary of the North Hamgyong Provincial Party Committee, and chairman of the North Hamgyong Provincial People's Committee; An Mun-hon, chairman of the North Hamgyong Provincial Administrative and Economic Guidance Committee; Kim Yong-ho, chairman of the North Hamgyong Provincial Rural Economic Committee; other responsible functionaries of the provincial party and government organizations, administrative and economic organizations, and working people's organizations; together with some 50,000 working people.

At the meeting Comrade Cho Se-ung made a report, which was followed by speeches by Son Kyong-chun, manager of the Kim Chaek Iron Works; (Han Tae-yong), responsible secretary of the party committee of the construction complex for building the No. 2 metal plant; Yi Yun-sok, director of the general bureau of the northern district coal industry; Kim Yong-ho, chairman of the North Hamgyong Provincial Rural Economic Committee; and Kim Yong-yun, chairman of the Administrative and Economic Guidance Committee of Chongjin, North Hamgyong Province.

The reporter and speakers said that at this time when the entire country is filled with the passionate, loyal desire to celebrate, as a great festival of victors, the greatest national festive holiday coming next year, all the party members and working people of the province, having received the great leaders's on-the-spot guidance, are filled with endless deep gratitude, joy, a high victorious faith, and firm resolve.

They said that the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song came to North Hamgyong Province and gave on-the-spot guidance to the Kim Chaek Iron Works, Chongjin Thermal Power Plant, and many other units, and that he convened the expanded executive committee of the North Hamgyong Provincial party committee and gave important teachings, which were programmatic guidelines in developing the provincial people's economy to a new, higher stage.

The reporter and speakers stressed that the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song given during his on-the-spot guidance in North Hamgyong Province are programmatic guidelines to boost our people's economy onto a higher stage and a powerful encouraging banner to stimulate all the party members and working people to reach the 10 major prospective targets of socialist economic construction.

They said that thoroughly carrying out the July 1986 on-the-spot teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is the revolutionary duty of all party members and the working people of the province and fidelity to his endless love and benevolence. They stressed that they should uphold the three major tasks which the respected and beloved leader has given North Hamgyong Province and effect new innovations in industry, agriculture, and fisheries.

They noted that the Kim Chaek Iron Works, (?Songjin) Steel Complex, and The Musan mining complex will carry out facilities management well and vigorously conduct a technological innovation movement, thereby putting the already acquired production capacity into full operation and normalizing production at a high level. They will increase the production of ore concentrates, pig iron, steel, and rolled steel products during the second half of the year much more than the first half of the year.

They noted that in order to better realize the great leader's idea on further developing the Kim Chaek Iron Works into a modern and large-scale metallurgical base, they will wage a vigorous struggle to complete the second-stage expansion project in a short period and build a new large-scale iron production base in the near future.

The reporter and the speakers noted that based on his scientific insight into the status of the demand for electricity and energy resources in North Hamgyong Province, the great leader set forth a wise method for meeting the increasing demand for electricity in the province and providing heating for Chongjin and Kim Chaek. They noted that in order to thoroughly carry this out, they will drastically increase the production of coal and that, while massively conducting projects of newly building and expanding thermal power plants, they will continuously push ahead with the work of increasing the capacity of hydroelectric power generation, including the project of damming water for the 17 March power plant.

They noted that they will increase the production of chemical fertilizers, staple fibers, rayon yarn, and paper for the production of newspapers, that they will further develop the crude oil processing industry and pharmaceutical industry, and that they will supply the socialist construction sites with more good quality cement. They put forward the specific measures for this.

The reporter and speakers stressed that farming should be conducted scientifically and technologically as required by the chuche agricultural method so they can increase the grain yield under conditions where crops are much affected by cold weather.

They noted that under circumstances where they have natural and geographical conditions advantageous for the development of fisheries, they will uphold the party policy on properly utilizing the sea and increase fish production, including sardines; that they will produce more trawlers and refrigerated cargo ships; and that they will extensively conduct shallow water marine cultivation.

They stressed that the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il recently set forth various measures again to thoroughly carry out the great leader's July on-the-spot teachings and noted that they should highly demonstrate the spirit of absoluteness and unconditionality in carrying out the party's decisions and directives. They said that they will uphold the party's will concerning living and struggling like the fallen anti-Japanese revolutionaries, who always carried out the great leader's orders precisely wherever they were, and make the revolutionary struggle spirit overflow everywhere in the province, including the iron works, steel mills, collieries, and mines.

They noted that they will bear in mind that the people's economic plan is the party's directive and state law, and that they will normalize production at a high level in all sectors of the provincial people's economy, thereby fulfilling the people's economic plan by daily, weekly, monthly, and quarterly targets without fail, thus unconditionally overfulfilling the target for the second half of this year.

They said that the functionaries of all units will go deep among the workers, agricultural working people, and technicians, according to the party's call to the entire party membership to go among the masses, vigorously conduct political work, properly organize the work of carrying out the great leader's on-the-spot teachings, and powerfully encourage and push the masses, leading them by personal example in every difficult situation.

A letter of resolution was adopted at the meeting.

FORMER U.S., NATO OFFICIALS ENDORSE REUNIFICATION

[Text] Pyongyang July 26 (KCNA) -- Prominent professors, doctors, lawyers, human rights experts and politicians in Europe and the United States including Prof. and Dr. Hans Koechler, president of the International Progress Organization in Austria, Prof. Dr. Hans Klecatsky, former federal minister of justice of Austria, lawyer Ramsey Clark, former attorney general of the United States of America, and Ninopasti of Italy, former deputy commander general of the NATO forces, on July 11 published in Vienna a "declaration on achieving Korea's reunification through the founding of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo" signed by them.

They decided to establish a "Committee for Peace on the Korean Peninsula" with professors, doctors and lawyers who are obliged to contribute to peace in Korea and her peaceful reunification. They sent their declaration to the U.N. secretary general and the governments of different countries.

It says: The reunification of Korea should be realised in such a way that the North and the South unite and establish a confederal state, leaving the ideologies and systems in both parts as they are. The Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo would be a neutral and non-aligned state, remaining outside any political and military alliance or bloc. Saying that the confederal system which envisages a unified state would guarantee the safety of the South Korean economy and that of the foreign capital invested there. The declaration stresses: the doctrine of "simultaneous entry of the North and the South into the United Nations" or "separate entry" will undermine the efforts for Korea's reunificiation.

In conclusion, the declaration appeals to the governments of all countries to support this proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo, neutral and Non-aligned.

BATMONH LEAVES FOR 'VACATION' IN SOVIET UNION

Comrade J. Batmonh was seen off at the capital's Bayant-Uhaa airport by D. Sodnom, member of the MPRP Central Committee Politburo and chairman of the MPR Council of Ministers; B. Dejid, member of the Politburo and Secretary of the Central Committee of the MPRP, [words indistinct].

OFFICIALS ATTEND U.S. INDEPENDENCE DAY RECEPTION

BK221417 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 6 Jul 86

[Text] On the evening of 4 July, Theresa Tull, U.S. charge d'affaires to Laos hosted a reception at her residence in Vientiane on the occasion of the 210th anniversary of the American Independence Day. Attending the reception were Soulivong Phasitthidet, deputy foreign affairs minister; a number of ministers and deputy ministers; several high-ranking Lao cadres; and some diplomats and representatives of the international organizations in Laos.

RALLY MARKS MONGOLIAN REVOLUTION ANNIVERSAY

[Text] A major rally was organized on the morning of 19 July at Vientiane theater by the Laos-MPR Friendship Association and the administrative committee of Vientiane municipality to commemorate the 65th anniversary of the victory of the Mongolian people's revolution.

Present at the rally were Phoumi Vongvichit, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers; Phoun Sipaseut, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, and minister of foreign affairs; Sisavat Keobounphan, secretary of the party Central Committee and of the party committee of Vientiane municipality; and other party Central Committee members and alternate members, ministers and deputy ministers, representatives of mass organizations, and more than 1,000 cadres and state employees from various ministries. Yadmaaguine Dashnyan, MPR ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiry to Laos, and diplomats of fraternal socialist countries to Laos, also attended the rally.

Sisavat Keobounphan and Ambassador Yadmaaguine Dashnyan took turns delivering speeches. They pointed to the Mongolian people's struggle and the great and all-rou;nd achievements recorded by them in the cause of safeguarding and building the socialist economy over the past 65 years. Following the success of the struggle against imperialist aggression in 1921 and the establishment of the MPR in 1924 under the talented leadership of the MPRP, the MPR has advanced and now become a socialist state with strong national defense and developed economy.

In his speech, Sisavat Keobounphan stressed the relations and coperation between the LPDR and the MPR -- two countries that have had a tradition of fine relations. The Mongolian people have persistently rendered support and assistance for the Lao revolution until the Lao people's complete victory of the national liberation cause and during the new period of the Lao revolution. The two countries have strengthened their close bilateral relations.

Sisavat Keobounphan gave the assessment that the official friendly visit to the MPR of Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan and Comrade Souphanouvong and the official friendly visit to Laos of Comrade Jambyn Batmonh in 1979, during which the Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation between the LPDR and the MPR was signed, were important events in the hostory of bilateral relations and served to further strengthen the fraternal friendly relations, militant solidarity, and growing cooperation between the two parties, states and peoples of Laos and Mongolia. Since then the two countries have constantly exchanged visits, thus contrubuting to promoting and developing bilateral relations. At present, MPR experts are positively carrying out their internationalist duties in various services in the LPDR. For example, the MPR has assisted Laos in building the Laos-Mongolia friendship hospital and a sheep raising station in Xieng Khouang Province.

On behalf of the Lao party, government, and people, Sisavat Keobounphan expressed deep gratitude for and highly valued the precious and consistent assistance given by the party, government, and fraternal people of Mongolia to the Lao revolution.

Ambassador Yadmaaguine Dashnyan stressed that the fraternal friendly relations and militant solidarity between the MPR and the LPDR have been constantly developed in accordance with the spirit of the Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation signed by Comrade Jambyn Batmonh and Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan in 1979.

On this occasion, Sisavat Keobounphan and Ambassador Yadmaaguine Dashnyan pointed to the world situation which remains tense and complex as a result of the bellicose policy of the imperialists and their allies in stepping up the arms race in all parts of the world, carrying out the star wars program, and in openly and blatantly interfering in the internal affairs of many countries in the world. Meanwhile, the U.S. imperialists have continued to intensify their military alliance with reactionary forces in various regions against the Soviet Union, socialist countries, and progressive countries in the world. To advance toward the reduction of international tension and disarmament and to ensure a lasting world peace, the two personalities highly valued and expressed support for Soviet proposals, particularly Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev's 15 January 1986 statement, the June 1986 statement of Warsaw Pact countries issued in Budapest, and statements issued by other socialist countries seeking ways toward mutual trust and the elimination of armed clashes.

NEGOTIATIONS ON COALITION GOVERNMENT BEGIN

BK290108 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 29 Jul 86 pp 1, 3

[Text] Negotiations are in progress to form a coalition government which would include the three major winners in Sunday's general election -- the Democrat, Chat Thai and Social Action [SAP] Parties -- with Gen Prem Tinsulanon as premier.

The Ratsadon Party, led by Gen Thianchai Sirisamphan, is also being considered as a coalition partner, political sources told the BANGKOK POST last night.

At this stage, Samak Sunthorawet's Prachakon Thai is expected to lead the opposition.

A coalition of the "Big Three" would give them a commanding 214 seats in the new House, a majority of 40 seats over the 174 needed for control.

If Ratsadon joins the three major parties, the coalition would have 232 seats, a majority of 58 seats.

The sources said the "Big Three" have agreed to share the running of each ministry, with one party supplying the minister, and the partners each providing a deputy.

This is exactly the same formula Gen Prem used in the make-up of his Prem 1 Government in March 1980, but changed in March 1981.

The sources said that allocations of Cabinet portfolios would depend on the demands and compromises that could be reached among the parties.

Parliament President Ukrit Mongkhonnawin said he is ready to consult with party leaders soon to determine who is considered most capable of forming the coalition.

Gen Thianchai, whose party won 18 seats in the new 347-seat House of Representatives, said yesterday that Ratsadon will not demand Cabinet posts but will leave it to the premier and the other parties.

However, it is generally understood that Gen Thianchai is being considered for the post of Interior Minister.

Ratsadon has scheduled a meeting of its members at the Ambassador Hotel today.

Political analysts predict the administration will be put together swiftly because it is feared that "rivals" of Gen Prem might try to capitalise on the period when negotiations are taking place to muster sentiment against him in the form of protests.

A group of students yesterday rallied at the Democracy Monument to demand that parties honour their election promises to back an elected MP as the premier.

Statements by party leaders yesterday indicated that so far there were no hitches among the major parties as far as the formation of a government is concerned.

Mr Phichai Rattakun said that the Democrats would act as the nucleus in the formation of the government, having won 100 seats -- the highest number of seats in the election.

The Democrat leader said he did not mind if his party joined Chat Thai and the SAP because they had worked together before.

He said the Democrats had been in touch with other parties, "but no official contacts have been made so far about the formation of the next administration."

Mr Phichai would neither confirm nor deny word that he had discussed the formation of the coalition with Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut.

Sources said, however, that Gen Chawalit had no objection to the Democrats being the core party.

The Democrat leader, who has not yet met Gen Prem since the election, said a meeting will be held today to discuss the party's stand in the formation of the new government.

SAP leader ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Sitthi Sawetsila, meanwhile, met Chat Thai leader Maj-Gen Chunhawan after, calling on his predecessor, M.R. Khukrit Pramot, at his Soi Suan Phlu residence.

The SAP leader said he still needed to discuss the formation of the new government with his MP's at a meeting today when he would sound out their feelings and opinions.

MP's from most of the parties are still in their constituencies but are expected to converge on Bangkok within the next couple of days.

NATION Editorial on Results

[Editorial: "New Political Equation in the Balance"]

[Text] The most satisfying result of the general election held Sunday is that 61.4 percent of Thailand's more than 26 million registered voters turned up at polling booths to exercise their franchise proving wrong the Interior Ministry's pessimistic prediction of a 50 to 55 percent voter turnout. It is roughly the same percentage of voter turnout in older and bigger democracies. The figure might have been higher if only citizens of Metropolitan Bangkok had not been, as usual, nonchalant and lazy. The Capital registered slightly less than 37.3 percent voter turnout.

As expected the Democrat Party came out on top and won 100 seats in the House of Representatives although 74 seats short of a clear majority. It is only natural to expect that it will form the core of a coalition government. The Chat Thai Party, which changed leaders half-way through the run-up to the election and the strife-torn Social Action Party [SAP] naturally slipped badly by winning only 51 seats, a little more than half the number of seats it won in 1983.

There is no constitutional provision as to how soon a new government should be formed and the biggest battle which will be waged is who should become the prime minister. Almost all major political parties are on record, during their campaigns, as saying that they want an elected prime minister. It could have been a campaign ploy or it could have been a move to capitalize Prem Tinsulanon's diminishing reputation after the tantalum disaster in Phuket.

If there is to be an elected prime minister, the obvious choice will be Democrat Party leader Phichai Rattakun because he controls the most number of seats in the House. But he has to find coalition partners to make up the 174 seats to form a majority. (actually 174 seats are not enought because a couple of hospitalized MPs of the ruling parties will reduce it to a minority when a crucial bill is voted on. A coalition controlling 180 seats or more can be considered a safe majority).

But at the end of the campaign and immediately after the election, the leaders of the major parties have said that they will, if necessary, accept a non-elected member as the prime minister -- and naturally this means only Gen Prem. Although there is little difference in the policies of the major parties -- none of them spelled out a clear-cut platform during their campaigns -- the political rivalries between them are very deep.

If we play the numbers game, which is actually what the formation of a coalition is reduced to, then a coalition between the Democrat, Chat Thai and Social Action Parties will give a comfortable majority of over 200 seats. But it is extremely difficult for us to believe that Chat Thai leader Chatchai Chunhawan and SAP leader Sitthi Sawetsila will accept to work under the premiership of Phichai.

Constitutionally, Parliament President Ukrit Mongkonawin should seek an audience with His Majesty the King and submit to him the name of the prospective prime minister who can control a majority of seats in the House. Obviously, Ukrit cannot pick a name out of a hat. He has to let some time pass so that the leaders of the political parties either bilaterally or in joint meetings do some portfolio bargaining.

There should also be some clear indication as to who is agreed upon as the prime minister with whom the parties with the required number of seats in the House will be able to work. This has to take time and Ukrit will have to wait it out before he can talk to the various party leaders and determine who the choice of a prime minister is before he seeks audience with His Majesty.

So, for the moment at least, it appears that Gen Prem, who has acquired the reputation of being the great conciliator, will be asked for form the next government. He has reportedly said that he is very satisfied with the outcome of the election and possibly that means that in the equation for the coalition which he foresees, he will come out on top.

BANGKOK POST PROFILES NEWLY ELECTED MP'S

BK280309 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 28 Jul 86 p 5

[Text] A considerable number of newcomers will be taking their seats in Parliament alongside the seasoned veterans of previous campaigns. Some of the newcomers will inject young blood into the democratic system, while others will be expected to pass on the benefits of their working careers.

Drawn from the ranks of retired military officers, or from business or the public sector, some of the faces are familiar.

Among the best-known newcomers is Phong Sarasin, who took Constituency 4 of Khon Kaen for the Social Action Party.

Another newcomer is Dr Surin Phitsuwan, a former lecturer at Thammasat University and a columnist for the BANGKOK POST. Dr Surin, who is to represent Constituency 1 of Nakhon Si Thammarat, said the contest was a true test of stamina, wit and commitment.

Among the new and "not-so-new" faces taking their places in Parliament are:

Bunchu Rotchanasathian, 65, leader of the newly-formed Community Action Party. Once known as the "economic czar", Mr Bunchu has regained his popularity which suffered when his business empire ran into problems and after a feud with the First Bangkok City Bank management.

Mr Bunchu, a Chon Buri native, ended the eight-year tenure of former PM's Officer Minister and United Democratic Party candidate Sawat Khamprakop in Nakhon Sawan's Constituency 2.

The Thammasat graduate won Chon Buri for the SAP in 1975 and became finance minister in the Khukrit government. Resigning as president of the Bangkok Bank in 1980 to become a deputy premier in the Prem 1 government, Mr Bucnhu quit amid turbulence in the SAP and did not run in the last election.

Gen Thianchai Sirisamphan, leader of the Ratasadon Party, retired as deputy army commander-in-chief in October. The September 9 coup-crusher served in Lop Buri since 1953 with what became the Special Warfare Centre in 1966, which he commanded.

The former deputy commander of the Fourth Army and Territorial Defence Department director faced Lt-Gen Anek Bunyatthi, his former subordinate, in Constituency 1 of Lop Buri.

Tamchai Khamphato, secretary-general of the United Democratic Party, took his seat in Uthai Thani Province amid legal wrangling with the state-owned Krung Thai Bank, of which he was president until this year. Mr Tamchai, 50, who was a commerce minister under M.R. Khukrit Pramot, faces a lawsuit filed by the bank accusing him of granting loans which were beyond his authority.

Born in Bangkok in November 1936, Mr Tamchai graduated from Triam Udom Suksa School with the highest score nationwide. He studied at the University of Tokyo and emerged with a master's degree in engineering.

Dr Trairong Suwannakhiri has won Songkhla's Constituency 3 for the Democrats in a campaign in which his loyaty to Gen Prem Tinsulanon put him on a collision course with the Democrat candidates for Bangkok, including party leader Phichai Rattakun. The former government spokesman earned a bachelor's degree in economics from Thammasat, and returned as a lecturer. Dr Trairong, 50 [as published], later received a master's degree in economics from the University of the Philippines in 1970 and a doctorate from the University of Hawaii in 1975.

Dr Trairong failed to get elected in 1979 but became an adviser to Gen Prem before becoming spokesman.

Dr Suphachai Panitchaphak, 40, one of the country's most prominent economists, resigned from the position of Director of the Bank of Thailand's Financial Institution Supervision and Examination Department to make his debut in politics.

In 1963, after preuniversity schooling at Triam Udom Suksa School and a brief period as a student at Sirirat Hospital's Faculty of Medicine, Supachai left for Holland to pursue his studies as an economist on a Bank of Thailand scholarship. He received his master's and doctorate degrees in economics from the Netherlands School of Economics during 1963-1973.

He ran under the Democrat Party banner in Bangkok's Constituency 8 (Bang Kapi, Nong Chok, Min Buri) with his running mates, former Labour Department chief Nikhom Chantharawithun and Samai Charoenchang.

Gen Mana Rattanakoset, former assistant commander-in-chief of the Thai Army, was born in September 1925. After finishing his schooling in his hometown of Nakhon Phanom, he moved to Bangkok to further his studies at Chulachomklao Military Academy.

He was in Class Five and was a classmate of Gen Athik Kamlang-ek, Gen Thianchai Sirisamphan, Gen Han Linanon and Lt-Gen Yutthasak Klongtruatrok.

After completing his studies, he went on to the Army Staff College in the United States in 1960.

His first job in the Thai Army was platoon commander in an artillery unit.

Afterwards he became an officer attached to the 3rd Artillery Battalion, staff officer attached to the Directorate of Personnel and chief of the Reserve Affairs Department.

He became assistant chief-of-staff for civilian affairs in 1981, deputy chief-of-staff in 1983 and assistant commander-in-chief of the Army in 1984.

He was the first army officer to declare that he would take off his uniform to run in the election of Bangkok Governor.

Somphong Amonwiwat, 45, is an old hand in the brewery business. He is also a son-in-law of banker and business tycoon, Uthen Techaphaibun.

Somphong decided to enter politics because of his enthusiastic support of former Prime Minister Kriangsak Chamanan when the latter announced his decision to run in the last general election in Roi-et. He later joined the National Democracy Party and became deputy secretary-general of the party. He ran in Chon Buri's Constituency 1 this time.

An MS 5 graduate from Amnuaisin School, Somphong went on to study at the University of Berlin for two years and furthered his studies in business administration at Kelly College in Massachussets in the United States until he received a bachelor's degree.

He returned to Thailand and began working at the Thai Amarit Brewery Company as sales manager and was later promoted to marketing manager, and five years afterwards he became general manager.

When Kloster beer started its operations in Thailand, he was appointed managing director of the Kloster (Thailand) Co Ltd.

He also holds other important positions in a mining company, a glass company and an import-export company as well as a finance company.

He is married to Phetchari Techaphaibun and has four children.

Mr. Pramot Sukhum, 45, was a well-known figure in Phatthaya five years ago when he was the resort's first city manager and joint proprietor with his wife of the P.K. Villa resort hotel.

His impeccable record, honesty and efficient performance in Phatthaya was such that he won the confidence of the residents in the resort city who staged a rally to urge him not to quit the city manager's post.

A graduate in architecture from the United States, Pramot first joined the government service at the Ministry of Interior and became the youngest-ever first-grade official at the age of 27. He left the service at the age of 36 and concentrated on his own private businesses, including the hotel in Phatthaya, a law office and a restaurant in Bangkok.

Pramot was named deputy government spokesman -- a post he held until he decided to join the Democrat Party's ticket and run in the Thon Buri area with General Han Linanon.

Known as the "Hero of Ta Phraya," Col Prachak Sawangchit, 50, made an impressive debut into the political arena by winning a landslide over the more favoured candidates of the Prachakon Thai Party and Social Action Party.

Col Prachak is a folklore hero among thousands of military voters and their families in Bang Khen Constituency. His heated campaign rhetoric pleased voters and his organisation is among the best and most costly in the city.

Col Prachak is strongly against Gen Prem Tinsulanon and his return as the prime minister. As a member of the Young Turks group, Col Prachak was one of the plotters of the 1981 abortive coup who were subsequently dismissed from the Army.

He served as commander of the Second Infantry Regiment based in Prachin Buri before his dismissal. As a battalion commander in Prachin Buri in 1977, he was transferred to an inactive position in the Infantry Centre in Prachuap Khiri Khan for criticising the Thanin Kraiwichian government but was later moved back to a higher position.

The Democrat Party's Chulin Laksanawisit, 30, deserves the title of giant killer after defeating veteran Borom Tanthian of the Progressive Party. Borom is richer and more powerful than his junior contender, who lost to him about 1,000 votes in the last election.

Borom quit the Social Action Party after the dissolution of Parliament and announced his intention of joining the Democrat Party but later left in bitterness because the party ruled in favour of Chulin to represent the party in Phang-nga, which has only one seat.

Chulin graduated in political science from Thammasat University in 1978 and worked as a cartoonist on several Thai-language papers. He later joined the Democrat Party as a volunteer to help the party in campaigns until he was fielded as the Democrat candidate in the last election.

VOFA VIEWS NEW SRV STRATEGY IN CAMBODIA

BK251405 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1030 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Station article: "Vietnam Is Introducing a New Strategic Plan in Cambodia"]

[Text] According to a report, Vietnam is now introducing a new strategic plan, called SB1785, for implementation in Cambodia in continuation of the K5 plan. The design of the plan is to establish a 5-km safe zone along the Thai-Cambodian border from Ubon Ratchathani to Trat Province. This is to prevent the Cambodian people from cooperating with the CGDK, and stop them from fleeing for shelter in Thailand. Anyone found intruding into the zone would be severely punished by the Vietnamese soldiers.

The construction of obstacles along the Thai-Cambodian border under the K5 plan which was introduced by Vietnam in 1985 has nearly been completed. Vietnam has also been trying to establish stability in major cities and bring development and stability to remote areas as well. It has set up mass groups and local forces for villages, subdistricts, districts, and provinces for control of the people and natural resources. It forced the people to sell all their farm produce allowing them only the quantity needed for private consumption. Any food storage is absolutely prohibited. Travel is also strictly under control. Vietnam set up road checkpoints and deployed sentry squads and companies at important areas.

On 21 April the provincial committee in Battambang instructed the commune committees in Sisophon District to recruit 10 people from each village to work on the project of digging a ditch, 1 meter deep and 1 meter wide, for the forces of Vietnam and the Heng Samrin regime. On the same day, Cambodian soldiers of the Heng Samrin regime recruited 600 people from Kompong Cham Province to work for the construction under the K5 strategic plan in Sisophon District, Battambang Province. On 25 April, Vietnamese military advisers in Battambang called a meeting of commune chiefs and village headmen of the Heng Samrin regime. Instruction was given to the latter that Cambodian soldiers, officials, or people of the Heng Samrin regime would face punishment of at least 1-year imprisonment if they assault Vietnamese soldiers or Soviet officials. A soldier of the Heng Samrin regime would be given a special home leave in exchange if he captured one member of CGDK forces. As of May this year, Vietnamese soldiers started deploying support planes for mop-up operations against the CGDK forces in Battambang Province.

Such activities carried out by Vietnam reflected the fact that its strategic K5 plan failed to achieve any results as desired. Vietnam boasted about its victories during the 1984-1985 dry-season offensives saying that Vietnamese occupation forces in Cambodia nearly wiped out all camps of Cambodian patriotic forces belonging to Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Son Sann, and Khieu Samphan. In fact, those forces are as ever functioning and operating in close cooperation at the Thai-Cambodian border and in big cities such as Battambang and Phnom Penh.

In early April, resistance forces comprising 3,000 men from Khieu Samphan's faction, 800 from Prince Sihanouk's faction, and a number of men of Son Sann's faction, mounted an attack on Battambang airfield. Over 70 soldiers of Vietnam were killed and over 100 wounded. Five tanks, one oil depot, and a large amount of war material and weapons were destroyed. On 16 April, resistance forces comprising a group of Khieu Samphan's men, a number of defectors from the Heng Samrin regime, and a group of Cambodian civilians mounted an attack on Pochentong airport in Phnom Penh. The operation lasted for 1 hour. As a result, over 30 Vietnamese soldiers were killed and over 50 wounded. A large area of ammunition depots, an air control tower, and a large amount of weapons were destroyed.

No matter how Vietnamese leaders lied to themselves, they are faced with clear evidence that their country did suffer not only political setbacks in the international arena -- through voters in the United Nations and other international organs, but also economic difficulties. Even a high-level Politburo member like To Huu admitted that Vietnam made a mistake in administration, especially in industry and production, and proposed that the Vietnamese Government consider its actions. The poor quality of production and the serious inflation hinted to a possibility of leadership change in Vietnam in the near future.

From the military point of view, as we have already said, Vietnam has never been successful in completely wiping out patriotic forces of the CGDK. This is because Vietnam has to fight not only against the partiotic forces of Cambodia, but also with resistance from the Cambodian people who never wish to see their country and people under occupation and domination by Vietnam. Soldiers of Vietnam and the Heng Samrin regime do not have that strong morale to wage protracted war for decades. No matter which strategic plan the leadership in Hanoi may dig up for control of Cambodia, it will never be able to overcome the patriotic Cambodian people armed with justice, correctness, and high morale.

'EXCERPTS' OF LE DUC THO CPV CONGRESS ARTICLE

OW281734 Hanoi VNA in English 1537 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA July 28 -- The daily NHAN DAN today reproduces an article entitled "Let's Best Prepare Ideologically for the Sixth Party Congress" written by Le Duc Tho, member of the political Bureau and secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee. The article appeared in the "TAP CHI CONG SAN" (COMMUNIST REVIEW) in its July issue. Excerpts follow:

"To prepare for the Sixth Party Congress and to create a new atmosphere in the party and among the people together with the organisational and other tasks, ideological work holds a very important role in that it helps increase the political and ideological unity inside the party, overcome incorrect views and negative aspects within the party and in society".

"A lot remains to do in the ideological field. First of all, we have to carry through a good end the current campaign of criticism and self-criticism in the party and the holding of local party congresses at all levels. If well done, this will help increase the oneness of mind in the party, put forth correct measures and prepare a contingent of capable leading cadres for executing the party's policies and taking the revolution forward.

In the light of the resolution of the party Central Committee's 10th plenary session, ideological task in general and criticism and self-criticism in particular must actively contribute to improving the class character and combativeness of the party, the vanguard and exemplary character of party members, maintaining the principle of democratic centralism within the party. Only on the basis of democracy can the party effect its centralized leadership. Inversely, democracy must be observed under a centralized leadership.

"To better prepare for and successfully organize local party congresses in preparation for the sixth National Party Congress, party committees at all levels must make very substantial and truthful reports of their branches and their localities, and reach unity of views on the assignment of party cadres in accordance with the instruction of the Central Committee Secretariat".

Le Duc Tho then reviewed the work of a number of services led by the information and training commission of the party Central Committee such as newspapers, radio, television, publication, culture and arts, etc.

He went on: "To be a sharp and effective weapon, ideological work must be active, realistic and combative, must closely combine theory with practice. To deeply penetrate realities is the fundamental question of ideological and political education.

"We are very proud of the great achievements of our party. But we cannot help feeling aggrieved to see that a few party cadres and members have shown a certain deterioration of combative will, have violated the party's organizational rules and discipline and the communist moral code, thereby harming the party's prestige and reducing the people's confidence in the party.

"If the entire party is one-minded, ideologically and organizationally, in preparing for the Sixth National Congress, we will certainly succeed in unravelling the present difficulties and impediments and take the revolution in our country to stronger steps of development".

THAI BINH CONDUCTS SELF-CRITICISM, CRITICISM

BK142316 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 23 Jun 86 p 3

[Text] The Thai Binh provincial party committee has conducted a self-criticism and criticism drive. Through self-criticism, all the comrade members of the provincial party committee reached a high identity of views on the party's domestic and foreign policies. They have become more concerned about fulfilling tasks assigned to them by the party and have been noted for their high sense of responsibility, their efforts to overcome difficulties, their high sense of organizational discipline, and their endeavors to stay close to the infrastructure and help the grass-roots level overcome difficulties in production and life. The provincial party committee, both collectively and individually, has matured and achieved improvements in many respects. Many comrades have made effective contributions to the collective leadership of the party committee echelon and have carried out successfully all the tasks assigned to them by the provincial party committee.

The majority of comrade members of the provincial party committee have been noted for their simple and modest lifestyle. Throughout its term of office, the provincial party committee has never advocated selling imported goods at low prices on a preferential basis. Many comrades have continued to live uncorrupted lives.

However, the provincial party committee has collectively criticized itself for its poor revolutionary determination. The provincial economy, although achieving some development, has done so at a slow pace compared to nearby provinces and cities and in view of its existing potentials in material-technical bases, and manpower, and its traditional experience in intensive rice cultivation and handicraft production as shown by people in the province. The province's export volume has shown a rather small increase. Those party committee members in charge of economic affairs have failed to seek ways to increase quickly the source of export goods and to prevent the wasteful use of imported materials without any standards. In providing guidance for economic development and the improvement of economic management, there are still indications of subjectivism, hastiness, conservatism, and sluggishness, and there is a lack of sensitivity toward new things. Attention has not yet been paid to promoting increased cooperation in order to develop the strengths of every unit. Positive efforts have not yet been made to learn from those good experiences obtained by adjacent units and provinces. Although everyone is fully aware that agriculture is the most important and essential front of the province, various sectors and localities have had no specific and uniform activity programs and objectives for supporting this front. Efforts to make capital investments in rebuilding frequently-waterlogged areas and industrial crop areas have not yet been satisfactory, while attention has not been paid to providing close guidance for soil improvement, thus making it impossible to compile a roundup report. Winter crop production output has shown a decline for several years in a row. Many incentive policies for laborers, especially those promotional policies for industrial crop and export-oriented crop production areas, have been studied and worked out. They are, however, uncomprehensive and do not concentrate on using economic measures to promote vigorous development of the sources of raw materials and to create conditions for renovating the production structure. These policies toward handicraft and export production workers and those policies governing the distribution of income between branches and echelons as well as between raw materials production and processing workers and the public organs that consume these raw materials have not yet been studied comprehensively.

The prices, wages, and money situation has developed in a very complex manner. The provincial party committee has not yet involved itself further in making studies to overcome difficulties and ensure that production and circulation work is carried put smoothly. It is especially noted that the mode of goods purchasing and barter trade between the state and pesants is inconsistent. Its constant change has caused peasants to lose their confidence and become less enthusiastic in production. Great disparity in prices once occurred following the introduction of a state general policy. The provincial party committee has failed to promptly take necessary measures to gather all the money obtained from price differences into the hands of the state. At times they have been so negligent that they have allowed private traders and unscrupulous peddlers to earn too much profit.

In capital construction, careful discussions have not been made by the standing body on the unexpected differences facing the country in general and the locality in particular, nor have careful calculations been made to balance supplies and capital in the building of many major, necessary projects, such as the Xuan Hai dike, the museum, the cultural house, the Bo Bridge, the financial house, and so forth; and furthermore, neither have clearcut reports been filed to nor opinions sought from the provincial party committee. The comrade provincial party committee members who were in charge of these projects wanted to speed up construction work for some illegitimate reasons, thus incurring waste and making it impossible to meet the technical specifications and quality standards. Regarding the Xuan Hai dike in particular, the provincial party committee made a thorough investigation and found that responsibility rests partially with the standing bodies of the provincial party and people's committees and partially with members of these bodies. The vice chairman of the provincial people's committee, being eager to quickly finish the project, disregarded technical processes and consequently caused serious damage that weakened the spirit, ideology, and confidence of party cadres and members, and the masses.

The low struggle spirit of many provincial party committee members is reflected in their unwillingness to study and think, their slowness in improving work methods, and their reluctance to point out the problems experienced by the blocs or sectors under their charge; and a small number of them do not try to grasp the general situation of the province in order to contribute to collective leadership.

The struggle spirit displayed by the provincial party committee in making self-criticism and criticism has been poor. Some comrades did not speak out frankly and truthfully out of fear and deference; and others did not fully express their thoughts during party meetings, especially those in conflict with the views held by key cadres. Some took a "bend with the wind" approach and did not voice their disagreement on certain issues, thus straining work relations between members of the standing bodies of the provincial party and people's committees and causing undesirable effects to a certain extent. Nevertheless, one of the important results is that the self-criticism and criticism drive has contributed to strengthening unity and one-mindedness within the party committee echelons.

The provincial party committee members made deep analyses and helped one another not only in evaluating the results of immediate tasks as well as every activity over the past 3 years, but also in criticizing impure motives that had surfaced during the course of struggle; and consequently, they discovered particular issues that are highly significant to educational efforts aimed at enhancing the revolutionary ethics and quality of party committee members. There was a comrade who was capable and eager to work and had made certain contributions to the overall performance of tasks, but he lacked the integrity characteristic of a leading cadre. In dealing with his colleagues and subordinates, he often adopted an arrogant, self-conceited, and contemptuous attitude. [paragraph continues]

He was also inconsistent in evaluating the results of his own work, occasionally allowing himself to be influenced by personal motives and bent on showing off achievements and grandstanding to promote self-importance. He took advantage of the weaknesses of each of his superiors and flattered them while frequently ignoring the views of his subordinates, talking immodestly, and disregarding public opinion and the masses' reaction. He favoured those who catered to his whims but shunned and sought to cause trouble for those who refused to toe his line... These manifestations showed a lack of truthfulness toward his comrades and also smacked of opportunism. Despite the advice of the key leading comrades and many other comrades in the provincial party committee, and due to his subjectivism, self-conceit, and incorrect motives, this comrade was very slow in accepting criticism and rectifying his shortcomings. During this provincial party committee conference, many comrades in the committee have sincerely and clearly pointed out all aspects of this comrade's errors so he could see them clearly.

The provincial party committee also severely criticized itself and criticized the bad habit of feasting and drinking at parties to celebrate success during the anniversaries of various sectors, and at ceremonies held to receive emulator titles and orders. The provincial party committee had previously issued a directive strictly prohibiting drinking at meetings or organs from the provincial down to the grass-roots level and urging the practice of thrift.

Concerning work style, generally speaking, in its recent term of office the provincial party committee gradually implemented the work regulations based on its functions and its task of providing comprehensive leadership overall aspects of the locality's tasks. Step-by-step, it concretized the principle of party leadership, state management, and people's mastery and made distinctions between the provincial party committee's leading function and the provincial people's committee's role in organizing the implementation of tasks.

In its work style, the provincial party committee implemented in a relatively satisfactory manner the system of regular meetings of the committee itself and of its standing committee. Major and key issues concerning socioeconomic development, security, national defense, party building, administration, mass organizations, and various directives and resolutions of the party Central Committee were brought up for discussion at various conferences of the provincial party committee and its standing committee. In recent years, all sectors and branches were called on to take part in deciding the contents of such meetings.

The provincial party committee has, however, not yet paid adequate attention to educating, providing training to, and improving the ethical qualities of party cadres and members, to punishing law breakers, and to dealing stringently with negative phenomena. Party discipline and state law have yet to be given due respect. Few cases of under-the-table dealing, bribery, and persecution have been handled because they are being uncovered only slowly.

Members of the provincial party committee have yet to give adequate attention to party building and to work regarding the masses. They have yet to devote enough time to meeting with the masses at the grass-roots level and to listening and trying to understand the people's aspirations. The quality of the many meet-the-people sessions of various state organs, inspection organs, and party organs has not been high enough, while on such missions, certain comrades are fond of just listening to reports of achievements and balk at listening to reports on shortcomings. Others, preoccupied only with achievements, have unfaithfully reported the situation to higher echelons. While directing work, some cadres have shown signs of authoritarianism, preferring such to persuasion and education. [paragraph continues]

There exist indications of undemocratic, bureaucratic, and paternalistic attitudes, aloofness from the masses, and failure to stay close to the grass-roots level. A small number of comrades have been very reluctant to work with basic units, and they rarely go to the weak and lagging units that are beset with difficulties. Showy, formalistic practices and impracticality in performing tasks -- as reflected in the holding of ceremonies to start construction work on or to inaugurate various projects -- have resulted in wasteful expenditures and, at the same time, set bad precedents for the lower echelons.

The provincial party committee also severely criticized using too much paperwork. Numerous directives and resolutions have been issued; but many of them are not specific, nor do they clearly assign responsibilities and set forth uniform measures; and, as a consequence, they have been implemented at a slow pace and with poor results. Many party committee members have spent too much time holding meetings and, consequently, do not have the time to review the work of basic units and correct their mistakes. Many leading comrades of the various sectors and administrative bodies have spent 60-70 percent of their working time attending meetings; and, therefore, they cannot keep a close watch on their sectors and basic units. Regarding the activities conducted by party committee echelons, democracy, though there is no indication of a lack of it, has in effect not been properly observed and is still a formality; and centralism has not been strictly upheld. Consequently, the collective strength of party committee echelons has not been developed. Some comrades have spoken and acted at variance with the adopted resolutions; and they often interpret resolutions in accordance with their personal views. In the course of work, measures have not yet been taken nor proper attention given to employing the service of staff sections and specialists; and the views of capable scientific-technical cadres have often gone unheeded. As a result of this, some decisions taken by party committee echelons do not have a firm scientific basis. Conflicting opinions are not carefully debated; and consequently, the initiative and enthusiasm of party committee echelons are not promoted.

The provincial party committee has introduced too many issues for discussion at each meeting; and, therefore, a lot of issues are not carefully debated. Regarding some issues, it is still not clear whether responsibility rests with the standing body of the provincial party committee or the standing body of the people's committee.

There are numerous model units in the province, but the provincial party committee has neglected to guide and review their efforts. Although some models have been subjected to review, slow progress has been made in increasing their number.

One of the major shortcomings brought up by many members of the provincial party committee while making their self-criticism is that they have failed to satisfactorily carry out their leadership functions that require control over lower echelons' implementation of directives and resolutions. Although they have made some improvements over the past few years, as they have been able to map out a control program, their control functions, in fact, remain a weakness in their methods of leadership. As a result, the task of gathering and handling information is still slow and badly prepared.

With regard to the cadre policy: Fully aware of the party's line on cadres, the provincial party committee has paid attention to providing guidance for the formulation of a cadre plan from provincial to grass-roots levels and has implemented that plan positively. [paragraph continues]

It has also assigned more cadres to various districts and basic units; boldly promoted young cadres, female cadres, and scientific and technical cadres who have undergone practical training; and gradually changed and rejuvenated the contingent of cadres. In general, cadres in the province -- especially those at the district level -- have matured rapidly and have developed their effect satisfactorily.

The provincial party committee has paid special attention to improving the quality of party members, building and consolidating party bases, and making party organizations firm and strong. In its current term of office, the numbers of district and grass-roots party organizations rated as firm and strong have increased enormously compared with the past.

Basically, all policies concerning the interests of cadres, workers, and civil servants have been implemented satisfactorily and in accordance with the regulations of the party and state. However, some shortcomings still exist in the cadre policy. Adequate attention has not yet been paid by responsible cadres to training cadres to be close aides. While considering promotion for cadres, they have failed to listen attentively to the views of cadres and the masses at the grass-roots level or to consult the professional sections concerned. There are some cases in which cadres have been assessed and appraised out of personal sympathy. Consideration for the promotion of cadres has often been focused on their resourcefulness and the immediate results of their work performance, and not on the process of their work or their ethics and quality. Meanwhile, attention has not yet been paid to cadres who have undergone training and ordeals or cadres who have matured from the grass-roots level, or to female cadres. As a result, there are cases in which cadres have been assigned inappropriately.

There are cases in which the assignment and use of cadres are not based on the demands of work, but on the whim of those in charge of this task. There have often been cases in which the promotion of cadres has not yet been proposed boldly and directly to directors of the services, enterprises, and corporations concerned, but to acting directors instead, thus wasting quite a lot of time. The settlement of the problem of cadres reaching retirement has also been carried out slowly. This has affected the replacement of cadres.

In general, the party and state machineries remain cumbersome and less effective. Due to the lack of a careful study, the restructuring of the management machinery at some units has fomented unnecessary disturbances. The streamlining of staff personnel in the administrative and professional domains is still slow and lacks decisiveness. Control over the recruitment of state staff personnel and contracted personnel is not rigorous enough. As a result, the numbers of staff personnel and contracted personnel are still on the increase.

Many party committee members, especially those holding administrative positions, have not yet paid attention to cadre work as they have relied on various sections of the party committee for the performance of this work. A number of districts and sectors have even allowed disunity to exist among their ranks, thus adversely affecting the common movement.

The enformcement of discipline against a number of cadres has not yet been carried out strictly and justly as it has gone "easy on the higher echelons and hard on the lower echelons." There are also cases in which the province has failed to investigate and severely and promptly deal with those leading cadres who have violated discipline.

After conducting self-criticism and criticism, the provincial party committee has advanced a number of emergency measures to overcome shortcomings:

1. Review and reapportion funds for capital construction and, on that basis, rearrange the construction schedule and priority of all major construction projects and appropriate an essential part of these funds for the protection of the Xuan Hai dike system to minimize losses during the rainy and typhoon season.

Strive to streamline the organizational structure of and intensify leadership over the Vietnam-Bulgaria Friendship Hospital. Allocate funds and materials to ensure that electricity and water are sufficiently supplied to serve patients at the hospital. The renovation of the hospital's polyclinic must be finished in a short period of time so that it can be put into use.

Invest in the repair and ensure better management of the multi-storey living quarters for cadres, workers, and civil servants. Clearly delegate responsibilities over the management and use of these living quarters to ensure order and sanitation.

2. Constantly improve the methods of distribution and satisfactorily organize the distribution network to ensure that goods are distributed in accordance with production demands and reach consumers.

3. Study ways to solve step by step problems concerning various policies toward village cadres. Supervise the implementation of the policies and systems concerning the interests of war invalids, retired cadres, families of fallen combatants, and those who are entitled to other policies.

4. Put an end to the practices of holding dinner parties and staging lavish entertainment. If an organ holds dinner parties and or stages entertainment in excess of state regulations, the head of that organ or the person who issues the decision to do so must pay for all the expenses and materials involved and must be subject to party discipline.

5. All leading cadres at various levels, from provincial to grass-roots levels, must play an exemplary role in refraining from accepting or offering gifts bought at state and collective expense. The use of state money to buy gifts for bribery purposes is strictly prohibited. The use of state goods for distribution at cheap prices by various economic units is also strictly prohibited. In the 1984-85 period, if a locality or a unit has distributed import goods to cadres, workers, and civil servants through this method, that locality or that unit must depend on each specific case to recover these goods or collect extra payment from the buyers to turn in to state budget. It is necessary to report each case openly to both the lower and higher echelons.

6. Strictly prohibit any organ that does not possess a permit issued by the provincial people's committee from engaging in trade at will. Enterprises and corporations that have set up stores to sell or introduce new items, or explore the market are allowed to sell only items produced by their units in prescribed proportions. They are not allowed to sell items not produced by their units.

7. All sectors, organs, and units responsibile for service, production, and daily life activities must overcome immediately the waste and loss of materials in transit, ensure the stipulated rate of depreciation, supply materials to various enterprises and cooperatives in full quantities, immediately correct shortcomings in their sense of responsibility and service attitude, and immediately eliminate all procedures that cause inconvenience to production establishments and the people.

8. All echelons and sectors must establish and review their work regulations and improve their work methods in compliance with a new spirit to ensure that the principle of democratic centralism is correctly implemented and work is performed with high productivity, quality, and efficiency.

The provincial party committee will modify its work methods and modes in directing and preparing the work contents for all party committee echelons, improving the quality of various decisions and conferences, and reducing the number of unnecessary meetings to devote time to intensively inspecting the implementation of various directives and resolutions and satisfactorily ensuring the specific role of leadership and management of the local administration.

9. All members of the provincial party committee should arrange work in a way that can enable them to visit the basic units, at least once a month or 2-3 days a quarter, to directly meet and exchange views with the masses, as well as to listen to their opinions and aspirations and seek an understanding of their situation and livelihood. They should also rearrange time to receive the people and quickly settle their complaints. It is necessary to put an end to the practices of forwarding the people's complaints around and slowly answering questions raised by them.

10. The provincial party committee should assign the provincial people's committee to direct the party committee organization body and other organs and sectors concerned in examining and dealing with various cases involving the allocation of land and recruitment of staff personnel for local state organs and overseas assignments not in accordance with policies. Meanwhile, it must study and specifically stipulate the measures and policies to solve problems concerning living quarters for cadres and the allocation of land or sales of raw and other materials to them for housing construction.

HA BAC DISCIPLINES ERRING PARTY MEMBERS

OW280043 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 25 Jul 86

[Text] After conducting a self-criticism and criticism drive in the entire party organization, the Ha Bac Provincial Party Committee has directed all party committee echelons in all sectors to immediately remedy their shortcomings in order to bring about new changes in the entire organization.

During the first phase, party committee echelons have disciplined, to varying degrees, 681 erring party members, either by dismissing them from their jobs, censuring them, or expelling them from the party. Fourteen cadres under provincial management were censured or expelled from the party.

HO CHI MINH CITY HANDLES SMUGGLING, THEFT CASES

[Text] Economic protection organs of Ho Chi Minh City have recently detected and handled many serious cases of smuggling and illegal practices. Naval, public security, and market management forces, working closely together and being aware of their operating practices, have nabbed violators involved in big cases, recovering millions of dong for the state.

In the recent past, city authorities have also handled many cases of theft of socialist property at a number of state organs. Recently, checks by workers and public security organizations of the fuel storage of the south's Riverine Transportation Corporation revealed that 44,000 liters of diesel oil, 13,000 liters of distilled water, and 4,000 liters of gasoline were missing. The chief storekeeper and chief of the technical workshop of the city's transportation service, in collusion with dishonest traders, pilfered and sold on the open market 17,600 liters of diesel oil, over 1,600 liters of distilled water, and 286 liters of gasoline. Reports have been made on the above cases, which are being handled by the legal authorities.

JAPANESE FOREIGN MINISTRY DELEGATION VISITS

[Text] Hanoi VNA July 25 -- Hiroshi Fukuda, deputy director of the Asian Affairs Bureau of the Foreign Ministry of Japan, paid a three-day visit to Vietnam from July 23 as guest of the Vietnamese Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

The Japanese guest had working sessions with Nguyen Dinh Phuong, acting head of the Department for Asia of the Foreign Ministry, and discussed with him international and regional questions of mutual concern. H. Fukuda was received on July 24 by Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son. Japanese Ambassador Koichi Tsutsumi was present on both occasions.

MAHATHIR PROMISES NOT TO USE MARCOS-STYLE METHODS

BK240915 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Prime Minister Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed says the National Front will not resort to a National Operations Council or Marcos-style of government to hold on to power. The people are free to choose the political party they want to run the country through elections. The National Front government has been genuinely practicing the principles of democracy and has no wish whatsoever to declare emergency to remain in power, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir told a 1,000-strong gathering of National Front supporters in Jitra, Dedah, last night. He warned the people that if they fall into the propaganda of the opposition, the May 13 trouble of 1969 [race riot] could recur.

MAHATHIR ASKS PEOPLE TO REJECT PAS IN ELECTION

BK241216 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 24 Jul 86

[Text] Prime Minister Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed today launced the Barisan Nasional campaign in Kedah with a call on the people in the state to reject PAS [the Pan Malaysian Islamic Party] and its struggle. He was addressing thousands of people in front of the UMNO [United Malays National Organization] building in Kubang Pasu after filing his nomination papers at a center in the Kubang Pasu District Office in Jitra. He said PAS is contesting in the general election only to fulfill its ambitions and to satisfy its members. The Barisasn Nasional, on the hand, is contesting to ensure the country's stability and prosperity of the people. The people should place their confidence on the Barisan.

The prime minister, who is the Barisan Nasional chairman, hopes the people will not be complacent, but work hard not only to ensure the Barisan's victory in the state, but also to ensure it wins the election at national level with a bigger majority than the last time. Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir is involved in a straight fight with PAS candidate Dr Azizan Haji Ismail.

NATIONAL FRONT ISSUES ELECTION MANIFESTO

[Text] The ruling National Front today unveiled its election manifesto, which offers the best promise for the future.

The manifesto, with its slogan "The People's Champion" calls on the people to keep their future safe by making a wise choice. It focuses on 13 major issues covering peace and stability, poverty, a religious awakening, education, housing, employment, and culture. Other main issues include the setting up of a liberal, moderate, and tolerant society, a democratic society, social justice, national pride and foreign policy, balanced development, and national unity.

Speaking at the unveiling ceremony in Kuala Lumpur, the prime minister, Dr Mahathir, who is chairman of the Front, said that National Front is the only coalition party which is sincere in efforts to promote unity among the various communities in the country. He said several opposition parties have tried to form a (?pact) like the one that the National Front has, but it was clear that they were not sincere as was evident in their scramble for the same (?place) in the general election. He said the alliance and other National Front governments have had a coalition since 1951, but the opposition parties only cooperated whenever an election was held.

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir pointed out that the National Front was also the only coalition representing all races in Malaysia, including Sabah and Sarawak. The opposition PAS [Pan Malaysian Islamic Party] is confined to only two or three communities and, in addition, opposition parties like PAS and the DAP [Democratic Action Party] dared not cooperate totally.

In an open letter contained in the manifesto, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir called on all Malaysians to stand firmly in supporting the National Front again for stability and better future. He urged them not to experiment with untested ideas. The people must now unite for a better future. He said, Malaysia was going through a difficult period in its history. Like all developing countries, it is facing a serious recession. Though Malaysia is not as badly off as the others the slow-down has worried Malaysians who saw high economic growth in the past. It was easy to blame the government and use it as a scapegoat. He said Malaysians must face the reality that government revenue had shrunk. Money was hard to earn and assets difficult [word indistinct] now. However, the facts showed that the fall in commodity prices was not the country's own making and lack of demand, substitue materials, and market manipulation by rich countries have depressed primary commodity prices.

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir said the only way to ride through the recession was to face it calmly, plan careful moves and to utilize (?intensive plans). He pledged, if the people gave in to emotion, if they choose the easy way out and widely accuse each other it will only compound the damage. It is exactly when the going got tough that the nation needed a steady, experienced, and firm government to deal with the problems.

NATIONAL FRONT TAKES 6 SEATS BY DEFAULT

[Text] The ruling coalition party National Front made a flying start in the forthcoming general election by winning six parliamentary seats and eight state seats unopposed so far when nominations closed this morning. Sabah Chief Minister Datuk Joseph Pairin Kitingan is among those who won unchallenged in the parliamentary seats. He is standing in the Keningau constituency. The others include Mr (Kasisah Katam), who won the Kinabalu parliamentary seat in Sabah, Datuk Dr Sulaiman Haji Daud in [name indistinct] constituency in Sarawak, and Datuk Abang Abu Bakar in [name indistinct], also in Sarawak. Datuk Dr Sulaiman is the minister of culture, youth, and sports, while Datuk Abang Abu Bakar is the deputy minister of defense.

The deputy minister in the Prime Minister's Department, Hajjah Sharifah Dora, won the (Parit Sulung) parliamentary constituency in Johor, while the parliamentary secretary in the Prime Minister's Department, Mr Hohamed Mustapha, secured the (Sri Gading) seat, also in Johor.

Of the eight state seats won unopposed by the National Front, four are in Johor, two in Selangor, and two in Negeri Sembilan.

In the 1982 general election, the National Front won 12 parliamentary seats and 16 states unopposed on nomination day. The opposition Pan Malaysian Islamic Party [PAS] captured two state seats unopposed.

A total of 177 parliamentary and 315 State Assembly seats are at stake in the forthcoming election to be held on the 2d and 3d of next month. Five political parties are contesting. They include the opposition Democratic Action Party [DAP], PAS, the Socialist Democratic Party [SDP], the Socialist People's Party of Malaysia, and the Nationalist Party of Malaysia [Nasma] are also in the fray.

The prime minister, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed is contesting the Kubang Pasu parliament constituency in Kedah. He is being challenged by PAS candidate, Rm (Ayihan Haji Ismail). Deputy Prime Minister Mr Ghafar Baba, who is standing for reelection in the (Jasin) parliamentary seat in Melaka, is also involved in the strait fight with Mr (Rahidin Baling) of PAS.

The presdient of the Malaysian Chinese Association [MCA], Mr Tan Koon Swan, is involved in the 4-cornered fight in the Gopeng parliamentary seat in Perak. His opponents are Mr (Kwok Swie Siang) of DAP, Mr (Abdul Majid) of PAS, and Mr (Leo Wai Man) of the SDP.

The president of the Malaysian Indian Congress, Datuk Samy Vellu, is being opposed by DAP (Lew San Font) and (Wan Hassan Wan Mahmood) of the SDP of the (Sungai Siput) parliamentary constitution.

Political observers say an understanding has emerged between PAS and DAP in facing the National Front. In areas where PAS is facing the National Front, DAP has not filed any candidates and vice versa. Only in (?13) constituencies are both contesting against the National Front, apparently with the aim of splitting votes.

COMMENTARY ON NATIONAL FRONT'S ELECTION PROSPECTS

[Station Commentary]

[Text] The seventh general election in Malaysia is looming large in the consciousness of the people. Polling is to take place on the 2d and 3d of August and election fever is gradually building up. On nomination day, no less than 14 seats were declared unopposed -- six for the Federal Parliament and eight for the State Assembly. There are 177 seats in the Federal Parliament and a total of 351 seats in the 11 State Assemblies, for which elections will be held. The fact that 14 seats have been won without any contest is a victory and a great morale booster for the ruling Barison Nasional, or National Front. This is a coalition of several major political parties that has been in power in Malaysia ever since the first general election was held in 1955. That election took place 2 years before the achievement of Merdeka, or independence.

The National Front has grown in strength over the years.

It began with only three political parties formed by and represented the principal ethnic groups. It established its credibility to such an extent that other political parties have tried to join it and this itself is a major factor for stability.

The Barisan Nasional as a coalition has evolved a unique system of accomodating compromise and simple give-and-take. In this manner, it has been possible to avoid [words indistinct] tensions that are a prominent feature of many multiethnic societies.

There can be no cause for doubting that the Barisan Nasional under the leadership of the prime minister, Dr Mahathir Mohamed, will emerge as the victor.

Malaysia is not a one-party state and there are several opposition parties contesting elections. Therefore, an essential feature of democracy is quite prominent in our political system.

The remarkable political stability that the country has enjoyed has made it a favorite place for investors from abroad. The influx of foreign capital has been welcomed by successive prime ministers and governments.

With the people's energies fully occupied with the challenging and rewarding task of economic and social development, there has been very little scope for mischief makers and narrow-minded racists. Malaysians of all races and creeds subscribe to the belief that national unity must be the prime goal and that economic development must never be allowed to slacken.

This outward-looking attitude is reflected in Malaysia's external relations. Malaysia enjoys cordial relations with numerous members of the international community, irrespective of political or economic ideology. It is also willing to learn from more experienced nations those areas of technology that are relevant to its own need and aspiration.

The Malaysian electorate is fully aware of the adverse economic condition prevailing in the world today and the need for realism at all times. The benefits that have accrued from the accomodation and good-will approach of te National Front will ensure that it is returned to power again. In turn, the new government that is formed will continue to play a responsible role in world affairs.

CONCERN SHOWN OVER U.S. CON-COM 'OBSERVERS'

[Text] They are known among members of the Constitutional Commission [Com-Com] to be observers from the American Embassy. In the last several weeks, some commissioners had seen the pair approach some members. To others, they appeared harmless.

But this week, a group of 20 Con-Com members had begun to show concern over the presence of the two, identified as Richard Holmes and his assistant Sylvia Alejandro. And very soon, according to a commissionr who requested anonymity, the group will "denounce" what they believe are attempts to "influence by subtle intimidation through their continuous presence during the plenary sessions and committee hearings" the voting on constitutional provisions affecting U.S. military and economic interests in the country.

"They are so blatant about it," the commissioner told NEW DAY. The American observer approaches commissioners and asks them how they intend to vote on issues, particularly the bases question. This, to us, constitutes a disregard for the integrity of the commission, and the sovereignty of this country. This constitutes foreign interference."

NEW DAY attempts to confirm the identities of the two has yielded a calling card identifying the lady as Sylvia Lopez Alejandro, Political Specialist, Embassy of the United States of America.

One commissioner told NEW DAY that Holmes had denied being connected with the U.S. Embassy, claiming that he is in fact "not even an American but an Australian." But a check with the U.S. Embassy confirmed that a Richard Holmes is a political officer at the embassy.

Several Con-Com commissioners have confirmed reports that Ms Alejandro has been religiously attending all committee hearings, but particularly those of the Committee on Preamble, National Territory and Declaration of Principles. "It will be noted that this is the committee tasked to cover provisions concerning, among other issues, the presence of U.S. military bases in the country," a NEW DAY source said.

"They're not here merely to keep abreast of what's going on; they're here to intimidate and also to directly influence the members, in exchange for favors, present or future, or to 'collect' on favors previously granted," he said.

Should the group of commissioners push through with the plan to "denounce U.S. meddling," the Con-Com members' ranks may be split, thus giving a preview of the trend of voting when the Con-Com in plenum finally takes up the proposed provision to ban "foreign military bases, troops or facilities... (from) the Philippine territory" after the expiration of the RP-U.S. Bases Agreements in 1991. The Committee on Preamble, National Territory and Declaration of Principles approved the proposed provision by a vote of 6-2 last July 17.

Statements from commissioners expected to join this group are expected by next week. The NEW DAY source explained the need for anonymity as a safeguard against pre-empting the planned protest.

Except for one, however, commissioners who gave NEW DAY statements in a random interview on the presence of Holmes and Alejandro were evidently not among those who would be likely to join the projected protests.

Those who appear undisturbed by the pair's presence are Commissioners Christian Monsod, Napoleon Rama, Francisco 'Soc' Rodrigo and Efrain B. Trenas. Commissioner Chito Gascon, representing the youth sector, conceded that "this assembly is open to anyone; anyone can watch freely." But he added: "It's common knowledge that the United States has political and economic interests to protect here. And they're threatened by the presence of nationalist and progressive forces in the Con-Com, those who would present the issues and interests of the Filipino people. So I guess (the presence of the two observers) is a message to us that Uncle Sam is watching."

Saying that Holmes "can sit there all day if he wants, as long as he wants, as long as he does not meddle in the affairs of the commission," Gascon gave some indication of his likely position in case the protest gets off the ground. "You can rest assured that if there are any attempts, the members will denounce any form of intervention and meddling."

Said Commissioner Monsod: "The sessions are public; everybody can come and watch. I guess it's pretty obvious that they're very interested in the commission -- naturally because) they're looking at it from their own selfish interests. Interference? Only if the commissioners are not independent-minded enough and allow themselves to be influenced by (Holmes') presence. This is a very independent-minded group of people."

Commissioner 'Soc' Rodrigo seemed entirely undisturbed by the U.S. Embassy observers' presence. "Well, he's not violating anything. I have not seen him talk to any of the commissioners. Unless he does something to unduly influence any of the commissioners, I don't see any need for concern."

Commissioner Trenas added, "I do not feel any pressure at all. I don't think any of the commissioners are feeling any pressure."

From the looks of it, the bases question may yet spawn a related issue that will see a sharp split among the members -- one that will highlight yet again the variety of conflicting political persuasions on the perennially sensitive issue of Philippine-U.S. relations after Marcos.

SANCHEZ ASKS TO MEET U.S. ENVOY ON BASE WORKERS

[Text] Labor Minister Augusto Sanchez requested an immediate meeting with U.S. Ambassador Stephen Bosworth to discuss the dismissal of Filipino workers in the U.S. bases on Wake Island. According to reports, some 200 Filipinos were replaced by Thai workers in violation of the Philippine-U.S. offshore labor agreement. The Filipino workers are expected to return to Manila starting next week. Nevertheless, Sanchez asked the U.S. Government to postpone the replacement of workers in accordance with the agreement.

AQUINO SHOULD BE 'GIVEN ALL THE OPTIONS' ON BASES

HK250720 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 23 Jul 86 pp 1, 10

[Text] President Aquino should be given all the options to decide on the controversial issue of United States military bases in the country, Vice President Salvador Laurel said yesterday.

Without saying he was for or against the bases, Laurel said the ticklish issue should be resolved outside the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com].

Laurel was reacting to the Con-Com's Preamble Committee's alleged "steamrolling" of the vote for the termination of the bases agreement in 1991 without renegotiation. The voting was 6-to-2 against the retention of the bases.

He said the President should be given all the "elbow room" to decide on the matter. "What is good for the country in the wake of worldwide developments should be the overriding principle in making the decision," he added.

Laurel was working overtime on the papers pertinent to the bases with his experts at the ministry. These will be used as an overview of the entire issue in the form of a briefing memo for the President.

Ms Aquino is scheduled to leave for the United States on July 27. [date as published] The subject of the bases will likely surface in her official talks with American officials led by President Reagan.

ARTICLE URGES CAUTION ON U.S. BASES ISSUE

HK290607 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 27 Jul 86 p 6

[By Melchor P. Aquino]

[Text] Vice-President and Foreign Minister Salvador Laurel and Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile have endeavored to place the bases issue and its concomitants in perspective. It appears that their rational, sober, realistic, and objective observations have somewhat dampened the emotional frenzy and the partisan mummery of the debate on such questions. The points Laurel and Enrile have raised bear underscoring.

Mr Laurel has argued that the Constitutional Commission should steer clear of the bases issue, and leave the determination of the future of Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base to the judgment and wisdom of the President. According to the foreign minister, who is conversant with constitutional law, any attempt at disposition of the bases issue has no proper place in the Constitution.

Explaining that foreign policy is a dynamic matter, the foreign minister has contended that definitive pronouncements on bases, nuclear-free zoning, and nonalignment would needlessly and unfortunately delimit the options of the President and the administration in the making and conduct of foreign policy. This argument jives with the position jointly taken by the President and the Vice-President, namely, let the bases agreement operate until 1991, the stipulated date of its expiration, and keep the Philippines' options open thereafter.

Mr Enrile has argued that, in the light of the geopolitical situation in which the country finds itself, the Philippines would be well advised to opt for extension of the term of the bases agreement even up to the year 2000. The defense minister has pointed out that the withdrawal of the United States from Clark and Subic and the resultant cessation of U.S. military presence in the region would create a power vacuum into which the Soviet Union could quite easily walk.

The defense minister has warned that fancied omniscience should not replace sobriety and realism in the assessment of the country's short-term and long-term security problems.

Mr Enrile has underlined the real, continuing problem of communist aggression and expansionism in Asia and the Pacific. These phenomena call, in his view, for vigilance, not complacency.

We believe the advocates in the Constitutional Commission of the adoption of constitutional provisions for the termination of the Philippine-American bases agreement in 1991 with no option for its renegotiation, the classification of the Philippines as a "nuclear-free area," and the election of a "nonaligned policy" are engaged in a deliberate, insidious, and nefarious move to foreclose Philippine-American relations, ignorant of or insensitive to the geopolitical considerations adverted to by Defense Minister Enrile.

The nuclear-free zone and nonalignment ideas of the anti-bases bloc in the Constitutional Commission would, as we have more than once stated, reduce to a nullity the bases agreement and the whole scheme of mutual security arrangments between the Philippines and the United States.

It should be stressed, in the view of Ambassador Leandro Verceles, that "nonalignment is a bad word in international diplomacy." India, Iraq, and Cuba, he says, are "very vocal in the nonaligned camp, but they are firmly committed to the support of the Soviet Union." He asks, "What nonalignment are its Philippine advocates talking about?"

If the Constitution finally is saddled with the aforementioned proposals, its framers shall have flown in the face of realities, and exposed their handiwork to the dire prospect of popular repudiation. Judging from recent public opinion polls and surveys conducted by responsible and non-partisan groups the majority of the Filipino people favor the continued operation of Philippine bases by the United States.

Red slogans and shibboleths, leftist propaganda, and strident rhetoric cannot conceal or obscure the stark and present dangers posed to national security and to peace and stability in the region by communist forces on the march.

The Constitutional Commission should be guided by facts as they are, not as the bleeding hearts in its midst would want them to be. As the enemies of the nation know only too well, the realities of history determine the shape of the world and the fate of mankind.

LAUREL, ENRILE STANCE

HK250508 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 24 Jul 86 pp 1, 2

[By Vicente M. Tanedo]

[Text] The positions of Vice President Salvador H. Laurel and Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile on U.S. bases are expected to neutralize the junk-the-bases agreement moves in the Cabinet and the Constitutional Cokmmisson [Con-Com]

Highly placed sources in the United Nationalist Democratic Organization (Unido) said that Laurel is being encouraged to edge closer to Enrile to prevent any government action prejudicial to the country's international commitments.

Enrile had earlier been quoted by newsmen as opposed to the inclusion of a provision in the constitution now being drafted by the Con-Com calling for the automatic pullout of the U.S. military facilities upon expiration of the bases agreement in 1991.

The establishment of the U.S. bases was originally stipulated in the 1935 Constitution but this was replaced by the 1973 charter, which excluded any bases proviso.

Laurel, like President Aquino, had urged that the bases agreement be horored until its expiry date. But unlike Aquino, Laurel would not bar RP [Republic of the Philippines]-U.S. negotiations before or after 1991.

Ultra nationalistic elements in the Cabinet and the Con-Com are demanding total abrogation of the agreement to "remove the last remaining vestige of colonial domination and a potential magnet for foreign invasion."

However, other members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations like Singapore and Malaysia still have military bases within their territiries.

The U.S. maintains a naval base in Singapore [as published] while the Australian Air Force operates out of a certain area in southern malaysia.

Unido's plan for closer Laurel-Enrile ties are intended to create a balancing force in the new government, sources said.

It was no coincidence that both Laurel and Enrile had also taken the same side in the controversy over the officers-in-charge for local government units, it was said.

The two leaders have also been meeting to compare notes on the insurgency problem.

Sources also said that Enrile was the first official contacted by Laurel on his arrival from a recent loan mission in European capitals.

ENRILE OUTLINES NATIONAL PROBLEMS IN SPEECH

HK250835 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 24 Jul 86 pp 1, 5

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile urged the private sector yesterday to assume a greater role and lead the way in the efforts for national reform and development.

Enrile made the call in a speech before the members of the Manila Medical Society at the Manila Hilton Hotel last night.

"It is only through the joint and dedicated efforts of the private sector that the security and stability of the republic can be maintained, especially during this difficult period of political transition," he said.

"I need not remind you that there are forces around us who persist in undermining the tranquility and progress we have been working for all these years," Enrile said. "The threats of subversion, criminality, and secession remain both real and criticial even as we have instituted firm measures to contain them."

According to him, military commanders have been directed to impose the highest level of discipline on all military and defense ministry men in order to achieve maximum rapport and understanding between the military and the civilians and to cleanse the military organization of erring personnel.

As the protector and defender of the nation and community, the Filipino soldier and the police officer are duty-bound to exercise the fullest measure of discipline, integrity, compassion, and courage in the performance of their duties and responsibilities, especially at this stage of transition to a new democratic order, he stressed.

"We must admit that formidable challenges stand in the way of our efforts" he said, "pockets of political instability still abound in the land, the economic crisis shows no let-up in the immediate future, national security continues to be threatened by leftist insurgency and an incipient problem in Southern Philippines."

He said these factors combine and converage into a single pressure point directed at the core of body politic, so that each cannot be treated in isolation.

The entire problem, Enrile pointed out, requires longtern, and comprehensive therapy founded on a consistent ideological direction and backed-up by effective social reforms, economic measures, military action, public information, and diplomacy.

The defense minister said the national interest must be served regardless of the position of individual personalities. Security as well as development programs must proceed on the basis of objective criteria and lawful standards, he added.

Comments on Marcos

HK291039 Hong Kong AFP in English 1027 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Excerpts] Manila, July 29 (AFP) -- Deposed President Ferdinand Marcos should stop meddling in Philippine politics following the military's pledge of support for the Corazon Aquino government Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said Tuesday.

"I think he (Mr. Marcos) should stay in Hawaii and refrain from further involving himself with the political life of the nation," Mr. Enrile told the Foreign Correspondents' Association of the Philippines. [passage omitted]

Mr Enril also dismissed speculation of a possible military coup, saying that the Filipinos and the local church leadership would not favor such a move. In any case, he added, "I doubt very much whether (the military will) want to establish a precedent like that in this country." Doubts persist about the loyalities of the 250,000-strong armed forces, which served as a pillar of Mr. Marco's 20-year-rule. Some officers are specially critical of Mrs. Aquino's efforts to strike a ceasefire with communist rebels.

On Generals' Retirement

HK260854 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0700 GMT 26 Jul 86

[Texxt] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile denied reports of dismissal of personnel within the military establishment following the retirement of some top generals. He explained that the retirements are part of normal procedure in the armed forces and are based on the law. He added that they have nothing to do with the professional performance of the retires during the Marcos period. Moreover, he said recommendations for retirement from services of the generals were made even before the Manila Hotel incident.

MANILA CHRONICLE CALLS FOR ENRILE'S RESIGNATION

HK250728 Manila THE MANILA CHRONICLE in English Jul 24 86 p 11

[Text] The policy conflicts within the Aquino Cabinet have become so irreconcilable that the President may no longer postpone a decision imposing Cabinet discipline without damaging the integrity and credibility of her government.

Since the failed Manila Hotel power grab on July 6, the Defense Minister, Mr Enrile, has steeped up his campaign to criticize what he perceives as the uneven application of the President's reconciliation policy and to underline policy differences over the United States military bases.

Mr Enrile claims that the policy is inconsistent because it is lenient to the leftist dissidents and tough on soldiers and supporters of former President Marcos who staged the Manila Hotel putsch. In what seems to be calculated provocation, Mr Enrile has not missed any opportunity to accent, in public forums, the position that the U.S. bases must stay. This contrasts with the President's position that they stay until 1991, after which she would exercise her options.

In arguing his case, Mr Enrile has made it an art form to muddle the reconciliation issue and to play demagogue in a cheap attempt to buy loyalty of the soldiers. He argues for example, that the Government must pardon Marcos loyalists who took part in the failed coup in the same way that it granted amnesty to communist leaders. A careful examination of this argument shows that it is not only misleading but also intellectually dishonest. Although it is true that in both cases, the communist rebels and the loyalists rose against the state, the crucial difference is that the leftist insurgents had been detained and held in jail for many years. In many of these cases, no charges have been filed. in the case of the loyalists, they won instant amnesty -- thanks to the overzealous absolution by Mr Enrile.

He also ignores the fact that thousands of people, many of them non-combatants in the war against the communist guerrillas, had been salvaged -- or summarily executed without due process by soldiers who are now being shielded by Mr Enrile in the name of "due process".

Mr Enrile also trivialized Arturo Tolentino's offense by saying that "what did he do anyway except drink a few bottles of whisky and brandy." An uprising against the state, regardless of whether it flopped or was ineptly carried out by comedians, is a serious offense that cannot be dismissed away by flippant remarks of a minister responsible for national security.

But the crucial issue for President Aquino in this controversy is the principle of Cabinet discipline. Even mature democracies are unforgiving in evicting from Cabinet ministers who disagree publicly with the leader's policies. just a few days ago, Israel's Justice Minister, Yitzhak, Modak was forced to resign after he had insulted his Prime Minister, Mr Peres, for not knowing enough economics.

Mr Enrile's offense against Cabinet integrity is even more serious because it involves fundamental policy disputes. Normally, it should have been left to the sense of honor of a minister to quit the Cabinet whose views are incompatible with his. But apparently, that is not the norm that governs Mr Enrile's actions. The other option is that the President sacks the offending minister.

In either case, the Cabinet cannot go on cradling a pocket "dirty war" waged by a minister against the President. For both President Aquino and Mr Enrile, it is time to act. Mr Enrile is not indispensable. The government's credibility is on the line. Mr Enrile has to go. If he is allowed to stay, the future of this government is not assured.

MP RECOMMENDS ENRILE FOR PRIME MINISTER

HK251503 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 25 Jul 86 p 14

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile has found an ally in former member of parliament (MP) Homobono Adoza of the ruling coalition.

Adaza proposed yesterday the restoration of the office of the prime minister. He recommended Enrile for the job whom he described as "an able helping hand to orchestrate forumlation and implementation of national policies."

In a speech before an organization of accountants at the Makati Sports Club, Adaza who is president of Mindanao Alliance, said President Corazon C. Aquino can stabilize government by appointing Enrile as prime minister.

"The uncertainties in the military ... will disappear since Minister Enrile is trusted by the military, "he argued.

He also said forces identfied with the previous regime "can feel at ease" with Enrile as prime minister; he added that the government's conciliatory attitude can become a reality.

Adaza allayed fears that President Aquino may be rendered a figurehead, if Enrile would become prime minister. "We had a prime minister during the time of Marcos, yet Marcos did not become a figurehead in government," he said.

The former MP also proposed a Cabinet reorganization since "many have outlived their usefulness... Instead of the Cabinet ministers defending the policies of the President, the latter has to defend her Cabinet minister."

Adaza said he was merely giving unsolicited "second opinion" on the national situation.

He said there is a growing perception that the government is unstable because "it is not safely anchored on a democratic constitution ratified by the people. Instead, it depends on the continous and unqualified support of the military for its survival."

The popularity of the President, Adaza said, is not enough to assure the stability of government.

"For popularity of presidents and politicians is like Parisian fashion. It is as evanescent and as treacherous as the weather. One day it overwhelms, next day it is gone," he said.

Adaza also pointed out that the conflict between the "Aquino loyalists" in civil government and the military on the insurgency and human rights probes, among other issues, has contributed to the perception of instability.

He said President Aquino should not remove Enrile from the Cabinet.

This move "could have fatal consequences... since Enrile is one of the three pillars of stability of the Aquino government," he added.

LENDINGS FROM WORLD BANK INCREASE TO $150 MILLION

HK280849 Quezon City Radio DZFM in English 0800 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] The World Bank has increased its lendings to the Philippines from 50 million dollars to about 150 million dollars. At the same time, the World Bank reduced interest rates on the loans from 9 percent to 7 percent per annum. The loan package, which is intended to finance the country's coconut replanting and rehabilitation program was offered by World Bank official (John Cutter) to the Philippine Coconut Authority [PCA] officials last week. Earlier, the World Bank's offer of 50 million dollars loan was rejected by PCA officials due to the condition of setting up a 25 cent [words indistinct]

IMPORT LIBERALIZATION 'MAJOR HITCH' TO IMF TALKS

[By Daniel C. Yu]

[Text] The import liberalization program is likely to become the major hitch in ongoing talks between the Philippines and the International Monetary Fund for a new standby credit agreement.

Monetary sources said the Philippine negotiating team has submitted to the fund a draft schedule covering the liberalization of the remaining 383 items under the import liberalization plan.

The Ministry of Trade and Industry, however, is opposing the plan. It has even called a meeting of the government inter-agency committee on trade liberalization to review the schedule submitted by the government negotiating panel.

Under the latest liberalization schedule, 137 items which should have been liberalized last April will be liberalized as soon as possible, another 169 items will be liberalized by the end of this year and the remaining 77 items will be liberalized by the end of June next year, documents obtained by NEW DAY showed.

Monetary sources said the IMF is in general agreement with the schedule but Trade and Industry Minister Jose S. Concepcion is pressuring the government negotiating panel to defer the import plan.

Concepcion has been criticizing the liberalization program which he believes could seriously damage domestic industries which are just beginning to recover from the economic crisis of the last three years.

The principal proponent of the program, Economic Planning Minister Solita Monsod, however, argued that the government can no longer continue to delay the plan as it will only postpone the painful but necessary adjustment needed to improve industrial efficiency.

A meeting Friday was reportedly punctuated by heated arguments between Monsod and Concepcion on the timing of the plan and its impact on domestic industry.

Private sector representatives who were invited to attend the meeting argued against implementation of the plan not only because domestic industries are operating at below capacity but more importantly, the government has not set up necessary safeguards to protect domestic industries.

In particular, they cited the Bureau of Customs which will not be able to enforce the safeguards that may later be drawn up. They said there is a need to undertake a major revamp of the customs bureau since it will be critical when violation of imports becomes an important procedure.

The tariff commission said the government intends to adjust the tariff rates to whatever is agreed upon simultaneously with the deregulation of imports. Private sector representatives interviewed by NEW DAY however, believe that even if tariff rates are adjusted but cannot be enforced, the entire effort to give domestic industries adequate protection would be flawed.

As far as the IMF talks are concerned, monetary sources said, the government has reached agreement with the IMF on tax reform measures, the bulk of restructuring of government financial institutions and part of the budget review.

The letter of intent for new standby credit agreement will likely be drafted by Tuesday, covering the package of economic measures committed by the Philippine government for implementation. This will pave the way for the release of the new standby credit agreement from the fund.

No figure has been cited by monetary sources on the amount of credit the Philippines will be requesting. But they added it will depend on the projection of the payments deficit, expected this year.

In addition, the Philippines is also requesting availment under the Fund's compensatory financing facility, a short-term credit line extended to countries that will experience temporary shortfall in export receipts.

Areas that remain unresolved in the IMF talks include the restructuring of the sugar and coconut sectors, sources of financing the budget deficit this year estimated at P27-billion, the import liberalization plan, the external frameworks such as the payments deficit and domestic targets such as reserve money levels.

IMF Allows Reserves Increase

[Text] The international Monetary Fund has agreed to the request of the Phililppine Government to increase the level of reserve money. A government official close to the negotiations said at the same time the IMF has also approved to government's proposal for a P27 billion budgetary deficit ceiling for this year to be able for the government to pump-prime the economy.

ECONOMY, POLITICAL STABILITY TOP ISSUES IN SURVEY

[Text] With the February revolution six months old and Ferdinand Marcos thousands of miles away, what is now uppermost in the minds of Filipinos?

The Philippine Futuristics Society [PFS] and the Filipinas Foundation sought to answer this question through a survey conducted earlier this year.

The results were revealing. The main issue that should be addressed by the government of President Corazon C. Aquino, according to the more than 200 respondents from a cross section of Philippine society, is economic recovery.

This comes as no surprise, according to Miguel Z. Patolot, executive director of PFS who conducted the survey with the help of Filipinas Foundation's Dr. Alfonso J. Aguirre.

He cited the present economic conditions, in which the country is mired in foreign debts it cannot afford to pay and the fact that prices of basic commodities are still high compared to the average income of the people.

Second in rank in priority was political stability, partly because of the continued threat to the Aquino government of the communist and Muslim rebels, and the Marcos loyalists.

This concern is complemented by the fact that the survey showed that national security came in a close third, which could indicate that the people are concerned over such issues as insurgency, the U.S. military bases, terms of foreign military assistance and neutrality for the country.

The survey also showed that people do not expect the government to go out of its way to change people's beliefs as well as moral and personal values.

And despite the constant airing on television and radio of songs and videos on the February Revolution, which aim at reinforcing people's love of country, the survey indicated that respondents put less emphasis on nationalism.

A breakdown of the survey results indicated that in all classes of society and among both sexes, the three most important issues that the government should give priority to are economic conditions, political stability and national security in that order.

However, the respondents also cited other policy issues that the government needs to tackle, like labor (employment opportunities, labor unrest and minimum wage), administration (graft and corruption, ill-gotten wealth, policy of reconciliation), education, information (like press freedom being abused by some press people), urban development, housing and population.

The significance of these issues, which could be grouped under the five main issues covered by the survey, is that they were raised by the respondents voluntarily and thus enjoiy a high level of specificity of concern, Patolot said.

AQUINO ORDERS ARREST OF SUSPECTS IN MURDER

Steve Rodriguez, 30, died from injuries he sustained when he was mauled by Marcos supporters following a police break-up of their banned gathering at Rizal Park here Sunday. Branding Marcos supporters "hooligans" and "traitors to the Filipino people," Mrs Aquino said she had instructed the metropolitan Manila police chief, Brigadier General Ramon Montano, to "file the corresponding charges and arrest those concerned without delay."

Mrs Aquino banned pro-Marcos protests following an abortive July 6 coup in which Marcos ally Arturo Tolentino, backed by thousands of civilian supporters and 300 troops, seized Manila Hotel and proclaimed a rebel government with him as acting president. Mr Marcos, who ruled the country for 20 years, was toppled in a popular uprising which swept Mrs Aquino to power in February.

"The full force of the law will be meted out to those who may be found guilty. They of course will get due process," Mrs Aquino said. "There will be swift disposition of this incident, which shows the utter bankruptcy of the tactics employed by the pathetic few who still cling to a lost cause," she added. "As we look at the causes of hooliganism in our midst, let each Filipino reflect on the motives of the deposed president and his handful of fanatics who are decided [as received] to revert to the violent ways of the unlamented dictatorship. "Having found these claims absurd, let each Filipino ostracize these fanatics as traitors to our people," she said.

TOLENTINO READY TO FACE REBELLION CHARGES

[By C. Valmoria Jr]

[Text] Former Manila member of parliament Arturo M. Tolentino said yesterday he is ready to face any charges the Aquino administration may wish to file against him for having taken his oath of office as vice president and acting president of the republic.

He issued the statement as he reiterated his refusal to swear allegiance to the "Freedom Constitutioin" which, he said, he does not recognize as a Constitution because it was never ratified by the people.

Tolentino requested that he be furnished a complete list of those to be included in the proposed charges so he can consult with them on their views regarding President Aquino's requirement that they swear allegiance to the "Freedom Constitution" to qualify for amnesty.

The former Manila lawmaker was reacting to reports that the administration plans to accuse him and 43 others of rebellion for their participation in the "Manila Hotel incident" last July 6.

He cautioned the administration against violating due process and other constitutional guarantees to avoid inflaming the people.

Tolentino said he was willing to face all the legal consequences, provided the administation observes the provision of the constitution and its guarantees for the political and human rights of all Filipinos.

Former Senator Leonardo B. Perez meanwhile, broke his self-imposed silence on public issues to express his concern over what he called "an attempt to 'sequester' Tolentino's allegiance."

He observed that any criminal case to be filed by the Aquino government will have to be prosecuted in the name of the People of the Philippines versus Tolentino, et al.

"Since the People of the Philippines have not approved the so-called 'Freedom Constitution,' no one has right to compel any defendant in a criminal case to pledge allegiance thereto in exchange for clemency," Perez said.

Charges Filed Against Tolentino

[Text] The administration filed charges of rebellion against former Senator Arturo Tolentino and 40 others involved in the aborted coup attempt on 6 Juiy. Justice Minister Neptali Gonalez said five former assemblymen and 15 military officials and soldiers, including four generals, and seven movie actors are among respondents to the rebellion charges. In a news conference, Gonzales said that under Philippines law, preliminary investigations will be conducted to affirm if there is sufficient evidence to indict the accused.

FREED FILIPINA YET TO CONTACT SWISS EMBASSY

[Text] Manila, July 28 (AFP) -- Negotiations for the release of a Swiss tourist have been stalled as the Moslem kidnappers await a reply from the Swiss Government to their 100,000 dollar ransom demand, the PHILIPPINE NEWS AGENCY (PNA) said here Monday. The kidnappers of Zurich commercial painter Hans Kuenzli freed his Filipina companion, Adelaida Gamboa, in the Southern Philippines on Friday so that she could inform the Swiss Embassy here of their ransom demand. But Swiss Ambassador to the Philippines Francis Gover told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSEE that Miss Gamboa had not yet contacted the Swiss Mission. He added that any ransom demand would first have to be discussed with the Swiss Government.

The kidnappers, said to be members of the separatist Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), have been holding Mr. Kuenzli hostage on Jolo Island -- 900 kilometres (540 miles) south of here -- Since July 19. They threatened to kill him unless the ransom was paid within three weeks. The MNLF has refused to speak to a panel of government negotiators in Jolo until Miss Gamboa had returned from Manila after contacting the Swiss Embassy, the state-run PNA said. The Philippine Government has rejected the ransom demand.

MUSLIM LEADER SENDS LETTER TO AQUINO ON TALKS

Hadji Limpasan B. Idjirani, chairman of the Muslim Democratic Party-United Moro Nationalist Organization (MDP-UMNO) told the INQUIRER that "the freedom fighters among the masses of the Bangsa Moro People are converging at a crossroad, awaiting the result of the projected second phase of government-MNLF settlement talks over the question of Bangsa Moro autonomy."

Idjirani said the 46 member-states of the Organization of Islamic Conference which recognizes the Nur Misuari-led MNLF as the "legitimate representative of the Bangsa Moro people" is probing the sincerity of the new government in relation to the Tripoli Agreement where the OIC is a signatory.

In his four-page letter addressed to President Aquino, Idjirani said, various Bangsa Moro national and regional organizations, led by the MDP-UMNO, have petitioned the President for the official designation of Agapito 'Butz' Aquino as official negotiator with the Libyan based MNLF chief, Nur Misuari.

"The President's announcement for top-level peace talks with the OIC-recognized MNLF chairman Misuari is welcomed by the MDP-UMNO as substantiation of her election campaign promise," Idjirani said.

Idjirani expressed full trust and confidence in Ms. Aquino's leadership.

AFP OFFICER CASTS DOUBT ON ESTIMATES FOR NPA

HK280931 Quezon City NEW DAY in English 28 Jul 86 pp 4, 7

[From the "Direct Line" column]

[Text] Does anybody really know how many New People's Army guerrillas are roaming in the archipelago? If one subscribes to the figure normally released by NAFP [New Armed Forces of the Philippines] there are about 20,000 to 22,000 NPA's in the Philippines. Of this number, about 16,000 to 22,000 are said to be armed regulars. How exact are these figures anyway? "Not too exact, I'm afraid," was the recent sheepish admission of a high-ranking military officer in the NAFP hierarchy. "You see," explained this general, who is very much respected for his vast experience and savvy in dealing with both the communist and Muslim insurgency, "all these estimates of insurgency strength or head count are based on numerous sightings made by our AFP Regional Unified Commands (RUCs) and the PC [Philippine Constabulary] Regional Commands (Recoms). Say, there's a large clash in Northern Samar, the Recom there reports its estimate of the enemy strength they believe they encountered. The problem is, that very same, say 100 STs (subversive/terrorists) that just figured in an encounter with government troops in Northern Samar could easily travel within 30 minutes to Sorsogon and engage the government Recom troopers there; and likewise, be included in a new estimate of enemy strength. So in no time, we may be counting the rebels two, three or even four times," he noted. The officer said this is a deliberate ploy by the rebels to confuse the military. He agrees that this has been quite effective. "There are about 6,000 commanders that the AFP has already identified by name," he said, "but we've also discovered that a certain commander Pedro in Bicol can be Commander Rene in Quezon Province and could very well be the Commander Nato in Laguna."

ARMY KILLS 20 NPA MEN IN DAVAO DEL NORTE

[Text] Twenty NPA rebels were killed in a 2 and 1/2 hour battle with army troops in Barangay (Sangab) in Maco, Davao del Norte. The encounter took place Sunday between an army sent out on patrol led by Captain Abraham (Forganan) and 38 NPA rebels. Eighteen of the rebels were killed at the scene of the encounter. Two others died later.

MUSLIMS KILL 5, WOUND OTHERS IN PALAWAN AMBUSH

[Text] Manila, July 28 (AFP) -- Five people were killed and several wounded when Moslem rebels ambushed a bus in the Central Philippine island of Palawan, the paramilitary constabulary said here Monday. The bus was bound for the capital city of Puerto Princesa Sunday when it was ambushed by Moslem National Liberation Front (MNLF) rebels at Brooke's Point in Palawan, 700 kilometers (420 miles) southwest of Manila, constabulary spokesmen here said.

The ambush came two days after Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile announced that separatist Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) leader Nur Misuari had ordered his field commanders to refrain from attacking soldiers despite the absence of a formal ceasefire. The MNLF is at the forefront of a 14-year old insurgency in the Southern Philippines seeking the establishment of a separate state in Mindanao and other southern islands, including Palawan.

NAKASONE INTERVIEWED ON USSR, U.S. TIES

OW291255 Tokyo TBS Television Network in Japanese 0702 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Interview with Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone by TBS Newscaster Keiko Kawato and guest commantator Hideo Akimoto, entitled "An Interview with the Prime Minister -- Mr Nakasone at a Crucial Juncture," conducted at the prime minister's official residence in Tokyo -- recorded, date not given]

[Excerpts] [Akimoto] Mr Prime Minister, the rainy season is now over and the Japanese archipelago is finally experiencing the height of summer. As I understand, no cabinet meeting has been scheduled for today. Does this mean that the cabinet has begun a summer vacation system?

[Nakasone] Yes, with the month drawing to an end, I intend to hold a cabinet meeting once, on Friday.

[Akimoto] You mean once a week?

[Nakasone] Yes. From the week beginning on 20 July, I proposed to have no meetings on either Friday or Tuesday. Whenever there is a cabinet meeting, bureau directors and section chiefs must come to work to make the necessary preparations since vice ministers must meet prior to a cabinet meeting. In the case they can not rest. [passage omitted]

[Kawato] Changing the subject, if I remember it correctly, one of your election pledges was to build an international society or to internationalize Japan. I have been told that a hotline will be installed at the Foreign Ministry. In this connection, what foreign policy do you plan to pursue in the days ahead?

[Nakasone] Needless to say, my policy is to promote peace and disarmament. In that sense, I will strive to improve relations between Japan and the Soviet Union as well. We are cooperating with the United States most closely and are united with the Free World as its member. We are also striving to keep our bilateral relations with China and South Korea, which are important countries to us, in the best possible condition at all times. Thus, while consolidating our footholds, we are striving to improve the situation with the Soviet Union and to expand friendly, cooperative relations with it by having the northern territories restored and expanding dialogue with it. The other side also seems to be inclined not to ignore the possibility of visitng Japan in the near future, and I do hope that they will visit us at an early date.

[Akimoto] Mr Gorbachev visited Vladivostok, which lies next door to Japan across the Sea of Japan, and made a statement which gave us the impression that mutual visits by leaders of the two countries have been placed on their agenda. Mr. Prime Minister, as you have often said, it is now their turn to come here this time.

[Akimoto] However, you have said that if you can obtain even the slightest concession from the Soviet side on the northern territories issue, you may visit the Soviet Union.

[Nakasone] Yes. That is true.

[Akimoto] Now, did you see any bright signs in the Gorbachev speech yesterday?

[Nakasone] No. What he said is the same as what he has said before. In that, he is consistent. At any rate, it seems that he wants to visit Japan as soon as possible. From the Soviet viewpoint, a visit by him to Japan amounts to a significant diplomatic strategy. Japan is like a gateway to Asia and the Pacific. To enter it leads to opening up prospects for entering the Asian and Pacific region. To come to think of it, the visit may have a Soviet impact on the Asian Continent as well. Economically speaking, the Soviet Union is now finding itself in a not too favorable situation, and its global diplomacy has come to a standstill. Thus, the Asia-Pacific region or Japan can become an important card for making a breakthrough. We cannot deny this possibility.

[Akimoto] I agree with you. Looking at the present economic situation in the Soviet Union, it seems that the Gorbachev regime has been driven to a point where it must do something. From this viewpoint, economic cooperation with the United States and Japan may look very attractive to them. In his speech yesterday, Mr Gorbachev said that he will pull troops out of Afghanistan. This looks like an effort to improve relations with the United States. By the same token, it makes us entertain the hope that there will be progress also on the territorial issue. We think it would be great if everything goes well. However, the Soviet Union being the country it is, we do not think that things will be that simple.

[Nakasone] Yes. But if Mr Gorbachev visits Japan, the Soviets can make a very significant diplomatic move. For them, there is nothing to lose.

[Nakasone] I think that they have also taken that aspect into consideration. Since thus far Japanese prime ministers have visited you without reciprocation, it is now your turn to come and see us. Please come and see us by all means. We will accord you a hearty welcome. This is what we have been telling them. If he comes, we really want to accord him a hearty welcome.

[Kawato] It is my feeling that the LDP's winning 304 seats in the election may change Japanese-U.S. relations a little bit. What is your view?

[Nakasone] It is often said that the LDP winning as many as 304 seats will result in stepped-up U.S. demands on Japan.

[Akimoto] In other words, the United States will find it easier to make demands.

[Nakasone] Yes, that is what people say. However, that is absolutely incorrect.

[Akimoto] Do you mean that the reverse is true?

[Nakasone] The contrary is rather true. Japanese-U.S. relations will remain unchanged. First, the winning of 304 seats has not changed my position at all. It has not changed my previous assertions or positions. I still maintain that we should have good, friendly relations and keep strong cooperation with the United States. Actually, if we observe the whole world situation, we will realize that Japan and the United States have been leading the world economy. Europe is not a leading partner. The world economy relies on how Japan and the United States behave. Therefore, it is important for the two countries to cooperate strongly in leading the world economy. From the viewpoint of security, Europe is systematically and tightly bound to NATO, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. However, in Asia, there still is ample room for flexibility. In this context, in the security field, too, it is very important for Japan and the United States to firmly cooperate in order to maintain peace in the world and in Asia. In this sense, we attach importance to our relations with the United States. The United States also highly values this important role on the part of Japan. Therefore, I believe that the two countries will continue to have good, friendly, and mutually sympathetic relations. Incidentally, U.S. Commerce Secretary Baldrige arrived here yesterday.

[Both Kawato and Akimoto] Yes, he did.

[Nakasone] He is an old acquaintance of mine, and we had talks on many things. He talked in a very humble way. The press reported that he had made strong requests, but this is not true.

[Akimoto] In short, the winning of 304 seats reflects the choice of the Japanese people, their thoughts, including yours. Therefore, it is natural for us to think that, unless the United States is careful, there may be the impression that the winning of many seats will result in stepped-up U.S. pressure on Japan. Is it not?

[Nakasone] Yes, it is natural for us to think so. Bilateral relations have not changed. That is, the United States does not intend to apply pressure on Japan.

[Akimoto] It is expected that the off-year election in November will create an unusual psychological climate in the U.S. Congress. [Laughter] However, I think it would be better -- and it is about time -- for Japan to say what it has to say to the United States. Do you not think so?

[Nakasone] Yes, I do.

[Akimoto] We know that you expressed your views quite frequently in the past... When faced with a business downturn, the United States called on Japan to increase domestic demand. When it faced deterioration in its international payments, it called for the yen's appreciation. Of course, Japan's economy is in markedly good shape. However, the United States is asking too much. [laughter] I would like for Japan to actively ask the United States to strive to improve itself. [passage omitted]

[Kawato] Turning to another subject, I am very much interested in the education issue, being the mother of two sons. Education Minister Fujio's remarks on this issue have recently casued a fierce reaction in the ROK. When the cabinet was formed, he also said that he would handle the education issue as he likes. I doubt that his remarks are appropriate. It was announced that Mr Fujio and Mr Prime Minister found a consensus of views through talks among ministers. I would like to know the truth about all this.

[Nakasone] It is very regrettable that Education Minister Fujio's remarks have produced misunderstandings and incurred displeasure in some foreign countries. The chief cabinet secretary and the Foreign Ministry are now working hard to dispel these misunderstandings. I found that they were partly due to this clumsiness in using language. He himself admitted this. He did not mean to specifically single out any particular nation. Rather, his remarks were made in a general sense and from the viewpoint of world history. I think that his remarks should be interpreted in this context. Therefore, we are now striving to dispel the misunderstandings as soon as possible. As has been said, education is a very important area. Japan is now at a turning point where it must advance as a state with international and global awareness, while skillfully keeping harmony with the ideas of liberalism and democracy and the spirit of international peace and cooperation, which have been introduced into Japan since the Meiji Restoration, on the basis of the spiritual order or spiritual culture peculiar to Japan. Our central task now is to develop Japan into a state with internationl awareness. With this in mind, we should implement educational reforms. [passage omitted]

[Kawato] This is the last question. While making speeches during the election campaign, you showed real toughness. I believe that there are loud voices calling for the extension of your term. What do you think is the difference between you and the new leaders?

[Nakasone] So far we have had such leaders as Miki, Fukuda, Ohira, Suzuki, and Nakasone. Mr Akimoto, you are familiar with all of them, I am the tailender of that group. Now there is a group of new leaders. I believe that it is my task to transfer power to them tactfully. This transfer should be conducted in a manner which is safe to the state and causes no apprehensions to the people. This is my task. It is my task to consolidate the direction of politics as we move toward the 21st century, and to turn over power safely. Therefore, it has been my thinking that this is my big, future task.

[Kawato] Do you have any practical plans in this connection?

[Nakasone] As I have said, I will abide by party rules. This position remains unchanged.

[Kawato and Akimoto] Thank you very much.

[Nakasone] Thank you very much.

Welcomes Early Gorbachev Visit

[Text] Tokyo, July 30 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said Wednesday he would welcome an early visit to Japan by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. Nakasone told reporters at the prime minister's official residence he would like to arrange a schedule with the Kremlin for Gorbachev to visit within this year. Nakasone said the foreign ministry has not yet set a concrete date for the proposed visit, however, the sooner the Soviet leader comes to Japan, the better. He also said that Gorbachev's visit would precede a trip by the Japanese premier to Moscow.

Kuranari To Discuss Visit

[Text] Tokyo, July 30 KYODO -- Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari will meet with Soviet ambassador to Tokyo Nikolay Solovyev, possibly next week, over the timing of a Japan visit by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, a senior foreign minister official said Wednesday. The official, who declined to be named, said the Kuranari-Solovyev meeting may take place after the foreign minister meets members of the diplomatic corps in Tokyo next Monday for the first time after he was appointed foreign minister on July 22. The official had earlier said Kuranari may raise the matter with his Soviet counterpart Edward Shevardnadze when they meet in New York for the United Nations General Assembly session this fall, terming the meeting a significant step in setting up a Gorbachev trip to Japan.

Gorbachev expressed his strong intention to visit Japan in the "not too distant future," in his June 16 letter to Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

NAKASONE CAUTIOUS ON YASUKUNI SHRINE VISIT

[Text] Tokyo, July 28 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, reflecting on whether or not to visit Japan's War Dead Memorial to mark the end of the Pacific War August 15, said Monday that he will take international reactions into consideration when he makes his decision. Nakasone, commenting on a possible visit to the Shintoist Yasukuni Shrine in his official capacity as government head, said, "since Japan has risen to the stature of a powerful nation, it can no longer limit itself solely to domestic issues," adding that it was necessary to take the response of other nations into consideration on the issue.

When Nakasone visited Yasukuni Shrine as the first postwar prime minister to do so in his official capacity on August 15, 1985, the 40th anniversary of the war's end, he drew widespread criticism for his action from China and other neighboring Asian countries.

Controversy over the shrine, which commemorates Japan's war dead -- and several World War II leaders executed for war crimes -- is linked to the site's role as a national symbol during Japan's militaristic period before and during World War II.

FUJIO EXPLAINS REMARKS ON HISTORY TEXTBOOK

[Text] Tokyo, July 28 KYODO -- Education Minister Masayuki Fujio explained to Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda on Monday that his remarks in a press conference about a controversial high school history textbook did not refer to any specific countries. Fujio told reporters after meeting with Gotoda that he explained that some reports of his speech were misleading and corrections had already been published. He had made the remarks at a press meeting held last Friday.

The textbook, compiled by a nationalistic group, has been criticized by such countries as China and South Korea as attempting to glorify Japan's military activities in Asia before and during World War II. South Korean newspapers, including the TONG-A ILBO, Saturday quoted a Japanese newspaper, SANKEI SHIMBUN, as reporting Fujio's remarks that "those who complain of Japan's history textbook should look back themselves to see if they didn't commit similar things in world history."

The South Korean press quoted the SANKEI SHIMBUN as saying that, "Fujio said Korea and China should recall if they don't have a history of invading other countries before they make complaints about Japanese history textbooks." The reports sparked new criticisms and both China and South Korea pressed the Japanese Government for an apology.

As a result, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone ordered Gotoda to meet Fujio and find out what he was really trying to say, according to informed sources.

Fujio told reporters on Monday that if he has an opportunity of visiting the countries (criticizing the textbook), he will explain the real intentions of his remarks.

The controversial textbook, prepared in May by the National Council for the Defense of Japan, was partially revised by the Education Ministry due to criticism from China and South Korea before being finally approved earlier this month for publication.

PRC TRADE PROMOTION FAIR OPENS IN TOKYO

[Text] Tokyo, July 28 KYODO -- China opened the biggest export promotion fair it has ever held in Japan in Tokyo Monday in a fresh effort to sell more products and at the same time reduce its huge trade deficit with Japan.

Guo Dongpo, vice chairman of China Council for the Promotion of International Trade (CCPIT), said the fair is not simply an exhibition but a venue for business transactions.

CCPIT and the semigovernmental Japan External Trade Organization (Jetro) are cosponsoring the event at Sunshine City in Ikebukuro. They said it is the biggest trade promotion fair staged here by China since the establishment of diplomatic relations in 1972.

Jetro Chairman Shoichi Akazawa said 1,100 Japanese companies have approached the 110 Chinese companies from 24 provinces, cities and autonomous regions which have set up booths to display a wide variety of products ranging from toys, sporting goods, carpets and chopsticks to underwear and nonferrous metals.

Guo, one of some 300 Chinese officials visiting Japan for the fair, said through an interpreter that China is prepared to meet the needs of Japanese companies and consumers by designing clothes suited to Japanese tastes and improving the quality of their products.

Alarmed by its huge trade deficit of 14.9 billion dollars in 1985, including 6 billion dollars with Japan, China is actively pursuing ways to whittle down the deficit via the current exhibition and other promotional efforts.

Partly as a result of China's import controls on durable consumer goods and Japan's decreasing crude oil imports, two-way trade between China and Japan, its second biggest trading partner after the United States, in the first six months of this year suffered the first decline in four years.

Wang Gang, vice president of China National Nonferrous Metals Import and Export Corp. (CNIEC), which is one of the 111 Chinese concerns at the exhibition, said he is projecting winning just below 30 million dollars worth of contracts at the fair for nonferrous metal exports.

CCPIT's Guo said the council plans to hold a similar trade exhibition in Osaka next year.

RADIO PROTESTS 30 JUL SR-71 OVERFLIGHT BY U.S.

[Text] The U.S. imperialist aggressors have committed an act of espionage by infiltrating a spy plane into DPRK airspace.

From 1233 to 1237 on 30 July, the U.S. imperialist aggressors perpetrated an espionage act against the northern half of the republic by infiltrating an SR-71 high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane deep into the airspace above our territorial waters east of Kosong and flying it above the coastal waters off Kim Chaek City, North Hamgyong Province.

For the month of July alone, the U.S. imperialists' aerial espionage acts against the northern half of the republic have numbered as many as 15.

This nakedly shows that the U.S. imperialists are creating a grave obstacle to the realization of dialogue, and are incessantly aggravating the strained situation on the Korean peninsula.

BOSTON MEMORIAL FOR KOREAN WAR VETERANS LAMBASTED

[Text] Pyongyang July 30 (KCNA) -- MINJU CHOSON today lambastes the U.S. imperialists who set July 27 as "Memorial Day" for those who participated in the Korean war and staged a "memorial function" in Boston.

This burlesque vividly shows that the U.S. imperialists are trying to justify their bloody war of aggression in Korea and imbue the American people with bellicose idea to ignite another war of aggression in Korea, the author of the commentary says, and continues:

What is noteworthy is the fact that warmonger Reagan sent a "message" to the farce beautifying the crimes committed by the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces in the Korean war and calling for "courage" in such aggression.

The moves of the U.S. imperialist bellicose elements laid bare their aggressive design on Korea.

It must not be overlooked that they openly committed such act while stepping up preparations for a new war, covetously watching for a chance to attack Korea.

With no amount of attempts can the U.S. imperialists erase the bloody marks of their aggression and war or justify their policy of occupation.

SOUTH'S ALLEGED COLONIAL DEPENDENCE ON U.S. SCORED

ROK-U.S. Trade Pact Criticized

[NODONG SINMUN 27 July commentary: "Brazen-Faced Submission]

[Text] The South Korean puppets, who have engaged in negotiations with their U.S. masters on pending trade issues, recently said they had reached final agreement on them in accordance with the so-called U.S. Trade Act 301, and then they announced the outcome of the negotiations.

The gist of the agreement is to open up to U.S. cigarette imports beginning in September, to apply and put into practice the protection of intellectual property rights and copyrights beginning next July, and to allow U.S. life insurance companies to operate in South Korea.

As indicated by the contents of the agreement, the recent settlement of trade issues between the United States and the puppet clique is thoroughly filled with the U.S. imperialists' brigandish demands and tyranny and with the brazen-faced submission of the colonial running dog.

The recent settlement has enabled the U.S. imperialists to use South Korea more effectively as a colonial market to sell their goods to. The Chon Tu-hwan ring has so endeared itself to the U.S. masters by once again offering the South Korean economy to them that it will be more dearly loved as a colonial servant.

What the so-called U.S. Trade Act 301 does is retaliate against countries practicing unfair trade activities against the United States by applying the allocation system or by raising customs barriers. In other words, it is a brigandish and plundering regulation that seeks to protect U.S. economic interests at the expense of U.S. trading partners.

Now, with the decision to apply U.S. Trade Act 301, South Korea's subordinate colonial economy, which has been in a moribund state, will literally be a fish placed on a chopping board.

Even if the puppets import only 1 percent of their total supply of cigarettes in South Korea from the United States, the South Korean farmers will lose a total of 1.5 billion won a year on the whole. The measure for protecting U.S. intellectual property rights and copyrights will result in more than $1 billion per year in losses for the South Korean economy. When the market is open to U.S. life insurance companies, South Korea will inevitably incur a staggering loss of somewhere around $4 to $5 billion a year.

It is because the U.S. imperialists regard South Korea only as a mere colonial fiefdom as well as a victim from whom to extract profits that they are applying such an unfair and plundering regulation to South Korea.

By affixing their signature to the humiliating document of treachery, the Chon Tu-hwan ring has once again fully laid bare its dirty nature as a colonial puppet engrossed in prolonging its life by endearing itself to its masters, taking no notice of what happens to the country and its fellow countrymen.

In the course of the settlement, the South Korean people have come to clearly realize that the U.S. imperialists are neither friends nor protectors, but agressors and plunderers instead.

They have also realized more acutely that the Chon Tu-hwan ring is nothing but a group of traitors who have turned their backs on their fellow countrymen.

The puppet's traitorous measure has provoked denunciations not only from the people of all walks of life in South Korea, but also from even the opposition parties. In a statement issued on 21 July, the NKDP charged that the recent measure taken by the puppets will result in mounting debts for 100,000 households growing leaf tobacco and declared that it will struggle to the end to oppose this. The Korea National Party also issued a statement calling on the government to revoke the recent traitorous measure.

How can the U.S. imperialists, who will unscrupulously commit any evil if they see something profitable in it, and the traitorous group of Chon Tu-hwan, which will sell anything at its disposal regardless of whether it is the land or economy in search of the individual luxury, be tolerated? The South Korean people will undoubtedly place the aggressors and the group of traitors before the judgment of history.

[Text] Pyongyang July 24 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Thursday allots much space to a signed article titled "To Make South Korea Independent Is Vital Demand".

In the first part the article says the United States advertises as if South Korea were an "independent state" and a "companion" with relations of alliance with it on an equal footing. But the South Korean "regime" acts under the U.S. baton, the article notes, and goes on:

South Korea under the political, economic and military domination and control of the United States cannot independently settle or deal with internal and external affairs in accordance with its will and determination. It has no right to do so.

The United States is not a defender of human rights, nor does it want the democratization of South Korea. While pretending to be a mouthpiece defending human rights, the United States patronizes the South Korean dictator who is hated as a violator of human rights, and encourages him to suppression. The democratisation of South Korea is possible only when the U.S. interference is brought to an end and independence realized. Without independence, peace cannot be preserved or consolidated in South Korea.

If the U.S. forces withdraw from South Korea and their interference in the internal affairs of Korea is terminated, peace will not be menaced in Korea but a peaceful phase for the solution of the national problem be opened.

The South Korean authorities who fawn on and tail behind the United States, clamour that the students movement for independence is a dangerous act endangering the "security" of South Korea by causing "southward invasion" from the North. But in the North there is no one who threatens the security of South Korea, the article says, and stresses:

For the economic independence of South Korea, the infiltration of foreign monopoly capital and comprador monopoly, which plays the role of its guide, should be rejected and an economy which is run with its own capital and technique and its own internal resources should be built and national capital be raised.

In the second part the article says:

For the realisation of the Chajusong of the popular masses in South Korea, society should be made independent. This can be achieved only when the South Korean people themselves abolish the colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists and establish a government of national independence. In order to awaken the South Korean people, the flunkeyist idea of worship towards the United States should be opposed and the consciousness of national independence be raised.

The movement of social advance is started by pioneers educating and enlightening the masses. One man educates and enlightens ten, ten hundred, hundred thousand, and thousand ten thousand centering around pioneers and thus the popular masses will win victory in the end.

The cause of independence itself calls for pulling [as received] the efforts of the South Korean people of all walks of life. It is a lawful demand for independence that the people of all segments in South Korea wage a nation-wide struggle, transcending the differences of their principles and party affiliations.

The South Korean youth and students play a leading role in the movement for independence. Students who took to the streets for justice should not be pulled back behind. They must not be artificially divided into "radicals" and "moderates" to sow discord among them nor an indifferent attitude taken to their righteous onward movement.

If all fellow countrymen join in the movement for independence no matter where they may reside at home or abroad, the U.S. forces will be made to withdraw from South Korea and the histroical cause of restoring sovereignty be successfuly carried out, stresses the article.

MINJU CHOSON ATTACKS U.S. 'NEW PACIFIC STRATEGY'

[Text] Pyongyang July 26 (KCNA) -- MINJU CHOSON today hits at the U.S. imperialists for having worked out a "Pacific strategy to attack someone by forming a new "front" in the Far East. Noting that it was made clear at the U.S. Naval College by Solomon, policy planning director of the U.S. State Department, the daily says in a signed commentary:

This clearly proves that the U.S. imperialists' schemes to start another war in the Asia-Pacific region, notably, in the Far East, have reached an adventurous stage. It further says:

The U.S. imperialists openly clamour about a "new Pacific strategy" and "front" in the Far East in an attempt to realise their aggressive designs through forestalling nuclear attack on our republic and on the Soviet Union and other socialist countries.

This is an open challenge to the Korean people and peoples of other socialist quntries in Asia who are striving to convert the Korean peninsula and the Asian-Pacific region into a nuclear-free, peace zone and a grave menace to peace in Asia and the rest of the world.

ROK EMERGENCY WAR SYSTEM HIDES 'UGLY' INTENTIONS

Chon Increasing Tension

[NODONG SINMUN 26 July Commentary: "Powder Is Reeking Behind the Curtain of Peace"]

[Text] On 23 July traitor Chon Tu-hwan unexpectedly inspected the puppet Air Force Headquarters and the puppet Central Government Building, and talked about the need to establish a constant emergency duty system for the Army and civilians to cope with an emergency.

After saying this, the puppet traitor babbled about the importance of the coming 2 or 3 years because of the 1986 Asian Games and the 1988 Olympics.

The situation threatens to grow worse because the puppet traitor again took the lead by calling for mobilization in an emergency, even after conducting the "Ulchi-86" war exercise, which was indeed a general mobilization war exercise in preparation for war. This is an open instigation for confrontation and a plot to get rid of us by force under the pretext of the international games.

The most urgent problem to be resolved on the Korean peninsula is to eliminate acute military confrontation and the tension between the North and the South.

Everyone acknowledges that it is impossible to solve any questions with confrontation -- questions of improving relations between the North and South, alleviating tension, and resuming the suspended dialogue, questions that are usually part of pioneering the future road for peace and reunification.

Why then does the Chon Tu-hwan ring babble about alleviating tension and resuming dialogue in words, while assuming a firm attitude of confrontation in actual deeds? Traitor Chon Tu-hwan is clamoring about someone's threat of southward invasion and surprise attack. This is a hackneyed practice by the provoker. They are the ones who are watching for a chance of northward invasion, deploying various nuclear weapons aimed at us in all areas throughout South Korea and deploying large-scale Armed Forces in forward areas along the Military Demarcation Line.

Turning away from our repeated demands for dialogue, which should be resumed under circumstances in which military exercises are not being conducted, they have suspended dialogue by conducting, with the U.S. imperialists, the unprecedented large-scale "Team Spirit-86" joint war exercise and other war exercises. At the same time, they have totally rejected our epochal peace proposal to alleviate tension and create a favorable atmosphere for dialogue.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan carries two faces under one hood. The puppet traitor's act of calling for assuming a posture for mobilization in an emergency is designed to mislead public opinion as if someone else was responsible for heightening tension and suspending dialogue on the Korean peninsula. This act proceeds from a hidden intention to accelerate war preparations by wearing a mask advocating peace and dialogue and seeking survival by kindling the fuse of war.

Despite attempts by the Chon Tu-hwan ring to wrap its body in the clothing of peace, its ugly natural shape cannot be hidden. Traitor Chon Tu-hwan's emergency duty system is a mobilization system for war, and is necessary only when war breaks out.

Confrontation by force is a crime of selling the country and rebelling against the nation and is a road to ruin.

CPRF Secretariat Statement

[Information No. 349 issued by Secretariat of the Committee for Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland on 25 July in Pyongyang]

[Text] According to a report, traitor Chon Tu-hwan, appearing in the duty officer's room in the central building of the puppet government and in the operations room of the Air Force headquarters on the morning of 23 July accompanied by the puppet home minister, defense minister, and chiefs of staff of the three services, staged a farce of inspecting the guard system in the major organizations for 3 hours.

At the place of the farce, the puppet again babbled that we will launch (?hindrance) maneuvers during the 1986 Asian Games and the 1988 Olympics. He made absurd remarks on immediate punishment, establishment of an emergency service system, and so forth, thus inciting confrontation.

We cannot but direct our keen attention to the ominous inspection racket conducted in the early morning. At a time when we should be creating an atmosphere for North-South dialogue and striving to realize talks by military authorities, a man called president is frantically inciting North-South confrontation by loudly advocating the nonexistent southward invasion theory. This is a wicked challenge to us, and clearly shows once again that the South Korean puppets are not interested in dialogue and peace but are merely pursuing confrontation and war.

As is known, we have repeatedly clarified that we have no intention of invading the South, tht we will peacefully settle the questions between the North and South not by force but through dialogue and negotiations, and that we have no intention of interfering by means of force in any situation which may develop in South Korea.

We took the intiative in taking measures for unilaterally suspending large-scale military exercises in the northern half of the Republic this year and took various other measures for resuming dialogue and easing tension and peace. However, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, ignoring our sincere initiatives for peace and peaceful reunification, not only abruptly drove the North-South dialogue into a state of suspension by staging the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise, but also staged in succession such war exercise rackets as "Ttangbol-86", "Piho-86," and "Ulchi-86" while openly declaring that they will continue the "Team Spirit" war exercise, thus straining the tension on the Korean peninsula to an extreme point.

Despite this, traitor Chon Tu-hwan kicked off confrontation rackets while raving about a surprise attack by the North. This is a brigandish act similar to a thief calling "Stop Thief!" and is a shameless act which will not convince anyone. The anti-Republic confrontation racket of the puppet traitor who has groundlessly slandered us is a last-ditch effort aimed at settling the crisis in his rule, deepened by the anti-U.S. and antifascist advance of the South Korean popular masses.

However, one cannot resolve the question with a confrontation racket. No matter how frantically he may slander us and rave about the anachronistic theory of southward invasion after he cut off [patan] dialogue and kicked up provocations, he will gain nothing but the condemnation of history.

The South Korean ruling faction should immediately respond to our proposal for talks between military authorities instead of advancing along the path of confrontation and war while trumpeting the song of southward invasion that their former dictators, who perished in the end, loudly played.

SKNDF ON ANNIVERSARY URGES ANTI-AMERICANISM IN ROK

SK290013 (Clandestine) Voice of National Salvation in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 26 Jul 86

[Letter of appeal to the masses issued by the Central Committee of the South Korean National Democratic Front [SKNDF] on 25 July on the first anniversary of the founding of the SKNDF, carried in the "We Think of the Nation" program]

[Text] To the people of all walks of life: The SKNDF marks the first anniversary of its beginning as the patriotic vanguard of the South Korean masses. Changing the RPR into the SKNDF on 27 July last year by responding to the demands of the developing South Korean mass movement was a historic and epochal event in the history of the South Korean struggle for national liberation. With the launching of the SKNDF, the patriotic masses of all walks of life came to have a genuinely patriotic vanguard representing their rights and interests pioneering with conviction the anti-U.S. movement for independence under the invincible guiding banner.

Along with the patriotic masses of all walks of life, our SKNDF has powerfully waged the anti-U.S. and antidictatorial struggle for national salvation, thus opening a new turning phase. The anti-U.S. struggle of the South Korean masses for national liberation, which has grown stronger since the Kwangju uprising, has developed into an irresistible movement, which no physical force can reverse, and constitutes a firm mainstream of the South Korean mass movement.

Amid the fierce currents of the anti-U.S. struggle, the antifascist struggle for democratization designed to overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan dictatorial regime has become heated and the struggle to revise and legislate the Constitution has expanded nationwide.

Faced with the worst critical situation, the United States and the military dictatorial regime have desperately maneuvered to reverse the situation through iron-fisted measures accompanied by appeasement measures. Confrontation between patriotic democratic forces and colonial fascist forces has already entered the phase of an unavoidable clash and the entire country has reached on important time during which enslavement or independence, and fascism or democracy will be decided.

At this acute time, proceeding from a sense of mission to smash the desperate reactionary offensives of the enemy with the united strength of the patriotic democratic forces and to expedite victory in the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle for national salvation, the SKNDF appeals as follows:

1. Let us accelerate the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle under the banner of independence.

Today's situation demands that all patriotic and democratic forces powerfully wage the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle for national salvation under the banner of independence. The anti-U.S. struggle for independence in the movement of our masses for national salvation is the starting point of a mass struggle and a shortcut leading to the settlement of all problems. Without eradicating U.S. colonial rule in South Korea -- in the midst of relations of subjugation -- national sovereignty, democratization, or national reunification cannot be achieved. When in the past the dictatorial regimes have been toppled by the movement of the South Korean masses for democratization, the dawns of democracy and reunification have disappeared without any trace. This has been caused by the intervention of the United States, lording it over South Korea as a colonial master. Desiring democratization while refusing the anti-U.S. cause of independence negates the movement for democratization. A struggle for democratization devoid of the anti-U.S. struggle for independence is nothing but an empty struggle. Those who genuinely seek national independence and freedom, regardless of who they are, should unanimously turn out for the anti-U.S. struggle for national salvation, upholding the anti-U.S. banner of independence.

The antidictatorial struggle for democratization is a factor promoting the anti-U.S. struggle for independence. Under the South Korean circumstances, during which the dictatorial system is desperately maneuvering to bar the aspirations of our masses for independence and fascist suppression schemes to obliterate the anti-U.S. movement, the anti-U.S. struggle for national liberation cannot be expanded without the antifascist struggle for democratization.

What has come to the fore as a focal point in the current antifascist struggle for democratization is the struggle to revise the Constitution and legislate a democratic constitution. Patriotic masses and every party, faction, and figure should expose and smash the deceptive plot of the United States and the Chon Tu-hwan group for the agreed upon constitutional revision and struggle to abolish the fascist Constitution and legislate a democratic constitution. All patriotic and democratic forces should closely combine the antidictatorial struggle with the anti-U.S. struggle, upholding the banner of independence.

2. Let us wage the mass movement in a straight manner without deviation.

The anti-U.S. and antidictatorial struggle, which has entered a new phase, demands that the mass movement be waged without deviation based on scientific strategy and tactics. When it comes to compromise with an enemy without any principle, our movement for national salvation cannot but be plunged into the trap of ruin; when it comes to an adventurous struggle, it can only fall into the mire of self-destruction.

Independence and democracy are not a by-product of compromise with the enemy, but an outcome of a bloody struggle. Throughout history there has been no precedent in which freedom and democracy were acquired through compromise with the enemy and no incidents in which aggressors and dictators transferred their rights of domination to others willingly. Only through struggle can a democratic constitution and democracy be obtained and national sovereignty and independence be acquired. All patriotic masses who eagerly aspire to live in independence and democracy should fight to the end without compromise until they drive the U.S. imperialists out of this land, put an end to the politics of colonial domination, uproot the fascist dictatorship, and realize genuinely democratic politics.

The mass movement for independence, democracy, and reunification can attain success only with the participation of a broad range of the masses from all walks of life. If the forms and methods of the movement fail to arouse sympathy from the masses however good and just its purpose may be, the participation of the masses cannot be expected and successful development cannot be achieved. This struggle cannot escape isolation and frustration.

All patriotic masses should create reasonable and proper fighting forms and methods with which everyone can sympathize, and which help in the anti-U.S. and antifascist movement for national salvation and by which one can be encouraged, and apply them to the movement. Let us pioneer the road of independence, democracy, and reunification through struggle and attain victory through the mass-orientation of the movement.

3. Let us strengthen the unity of the patriotic and democratic forces.

There is no mightier weapon than unity in our masses' anti-U.S. and antidictatorial struggle for national salvation. Today's situation, in which the enemy's maneuvers to split and break up the mass movement are becoming intensified, raises the unity of the patriotic and democratic forces as a more vital question. Only division will be brought about if forces which should fight at the same rank persist in their own assertions and enlarge differences of opinion when unity is more precious and urgent than anything else. All patriotic and democratic forces should unite with each other, discard egotism, honor each other's opinions from a long-range viewpoint, leave differences behind, and find points in common.

Solidarity and joint action are the concrete manifestation of unity. During the situation in which aggressive and treacherous forces attack independence and suppress democracy in collusion with each other, all forces of the patriotic movement should turn out to assist in the joint struggle, holding hands and helping and supporting each other.

The strength of unity is displayed to the maximum through a united front. All political parties and organizations, figures from all walks of life, and people from all strata of the masses who love the country and the nation and aspire for democracy should advance in unity under the national and democratic front for national independence, sovereignty, freedom, democracy, and peace and reunification on the Korean peninsula. Every party, faction, and figure from all walks of life, and the patriotic masses should pool their will and strength to expedite realization of the anti-U.S. and antidictatorial cause of national liberation.

4. Let us powerfully conduct the awakening movement.

The development and victory of our anti-U.S. and antidictatorial movement for national salvation depends on whether or not our masses are armed with ideological consciousness. All mass movements begin from awakening work and are realized through it. Our awakening movement is a movement to become armed with the immortal chuche idea -- the leading ideology of the SKNDF -- and an ideological movement to build the ideology of independence.

At present, our awakening movement targets the vitality of the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and the antifascist struggle for democratization. Our awakening movement should concentrate efforts on removing the consciousness of worshipping the United States and flunkyism from the masses, on fostering the anti-U.S. consciousness of independence, and on inciting the consciousness of resisting fascist dictatorship.

The site of our awakening movement is among the masses. The more essential the awakening task is in the anti-U.S. and antidictatorial struggle, the more deeply all patriotic fighting organizations and core movement members, including the SKNDF organization members, should go among the masses. They should increase our anti-U.S. and antidictatorial ranks for national salvation to 1 million and 10 million by the 1 awakening 10, 10 awakening 100, 100 awakening 1000 method, spreading the flames of struggle to workers, peasants, youths, students, intellectuals, the poor in urban areas, religious figures, and other members of the masses from all walks of life.

The movement organizations are basic awakening strongholds and a mighty means for practice. All patriotic fighting organizations and forerunners should form many kinds of organizations for the movement for ideological enlightenment -- including ideological circles -- wherever there are patriotic masses aspiring for independence and democracy and should vitalize them. The operations for sending letters to high school students and peasants, which have been conducted among university students, are a very efficient awakening movement. Ideology is stronger than bayonets. The source of strength to defeat the powerful enemy and win victory in a hard struggle lies in awakening the masses. All anti-U.S. and antidictatorial organizations should concentrate all efforts on the movement to awaken the masses.

At the historic juncture when the darkness of oppression and enlsavement should be dispelled and the dawn of freedom and liberation precipitated, all people should accelerate the performance of the just cause of national salvation with indomitable bravery once again. Let us bring to this land a new independent world without subjugation and a new democratic morning without fascism, and create a new history of national reunification without national division through heated anti-U.S. and antifascist resistance for democracy.

Long live independence, democratization, and national reunification!

[Text] A Soviet-Korean friendship meeting was held at the (Bankinski Gonzizioner) industrial complex, Azerbaijan, in the Soviet Union on 25 July for the 25 June-27 July joint anti-U.S. struggle month. Participants in the meeting have expressed solidarity with the Korean people's struggle for the withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea and for the peaceful reunification of the country on a democratic basis. They have also exprressed support for the statement issued by the government of the DPRK, which decisively denounces the policy of aggression of the United States and demands that the Korean peninsula be turned into a nuclear-free zone of peace. Kwon Hui-kyong, ambassador of our country to the Soviet Union, was invited to this meeting and delivered a speech.

Meanwhile, exhibitions showing the achievements attained by the Korean people in building a socialist country and the Soviet-Korean relations being strengthened more than ever are being held in many cities and rural areas of Azerbaijan on the occasion of the joint anti-U.S. struggle month.

USSR, PRC MESSAGES FOR ANTI-U.S. STRUGGLE MONTH

[Text] Pyongyang July 25 (KCNA) -- Korean public organisations received solidarity letters and messages from an international organisation and their foreign counterparts on the occasion of the June 25-July 27 month of anti-U.S. joint struggle.

The Secretariat of the Trade Unions International of Workers of the Building, Wood and Building-Materials Industries says in a letter that it supports in every way the just struggle of the government and the working people of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to have the U.S. forces and all their weapons including nuclear weapons withdrawn from South Korea and reunify the country on a democratic principle without foreign interference.

The Soviet Peace Committee declares in its message that the Soviet people reaffirm their solidarity with the Korean people in the struggle for a peaceful settlement of the Korean question and support the DPRK Government's proposal for converting the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free peace zone.

The Central Committee of the Communist Youth League of China, the All-China Youth Federation and the All-China Students' Federation said in a message that the Chinese youth actively support the proposals for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and having tripartite talks and will resolutely support as ever the just struggle of the Korean people and youth for the independent and peaeful reunification of the country.

Expressing support to the DPRK's proposal for holding three-way talks, the Bulgarian Committee for Solidarity With the Peoples of Asia and Africa says in its letter: We demand that the talks be held without delay and believe that an affirmative result would be achieved at the talks.

The Democratic Organization for Afghan Women stresses in its letter that all U.S. forces must be withdrawn from South Korea and the Korean people's desire for reunification be realised.

A message and a letter came respectively from the Soviet Women's Committee and the Central Committee of the Democratic Women's League of the GDR.

KPA General Writes Article

[Text] Pyongyang July 26 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique must clearly realize that if they persistently follow the road of war, challenging our peaceloving initiative, they will sustain a more crushing defeat than that in the past fatherland liberation war, warns General of the Korean People's Army Kim Pong-yul.

Our People's Army is always watching the enemy's moves with heightened revolutionary vigilance, he says in an article contributed to NODONG SINMUN today under the title "The U.S. Imperialists Must Stop Running Riot, Clearly Mindful of Lessons of History" on the anniversary of the victory in the war.

The article says: The Korean war started by the U.S. imperialists was a rigorous war decisive of life or death for our people. But our people and People's Army, thanks to the outstanding military strategy and tested guidance of the respected leader President Kim Il-song, the ever-victorious iron-willed brilliant commander, dealt a heavy blow at the U.S. imperialists who were boasting of being the "strongest" in the world and started them on the downhill.

Today the U.S. imperialists are getting more frantic with their scheme to provoke another war, staying on in South Korea, far from drawing a lesson from their crushing defeat in the past Korean war, the article notes, and says: Clamouring about the fictitious "threat of southward invasion", the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppet clique are making false propaganda and zealously whipping up the consciousness of confrontation and war fever with increasing frenzy. The enemy is now frantically kicking up "an anti-communist" racket, crying without any ground that North may mount a "surprise attack" and start an "armed provocation" with the Asian Games and the 1988 Olympic Games as an occasion.

Today it is not the United States or South Korea but our republic that is exposed in actuality to the threat of aggression. The U.S. imperialists have already deployed more than 1,000 pieces of nuclear weapons in South Korea and additionally deployed there "B-52" strategic bombers, "F-16" fighter planes, various missiles, rocket guns, tanks, armored cars and other new type military equipment and new units and try to introduce even new chemical weapons.

Recently the Supreme Command of the Korean People's Army proposed to have talks between the military authorities involving the DPRK, the United States and South Korea. But the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique openly rejected our constructive peace initiative. The reality clearly shows what they want is not detente or peace but confrontation and war and that the "threat of southward invasion" on their lips is merely a product of their plots.

Noting that today the Korean People's Army has grown and strengthened to be invincible revolutionary Armed Forces capable of smashing any aggressor and safeguarding the party and the country, the article stresses: The Korean People's Army has grown incomparably stronger politically and ideologically and in military technique than it was when it inflicted an ignominious defeat upon the U.S. imperialists in the period of the fatherland liberation war.

The military line whose keynote is to turn the whole army into a cadre army and modernize it, to arm the entire people and fortify the whole country has been carried out under the wise leadership of our party, with the result that our People's Army has been further strengthened to be a one-beats-a-hundred revolutionary army, the entire people placed under arms and the whole country has turned into an impregnable fortress. The U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppet clique must look straight at the reality and refrain from running riot.

Articles contributed by KPA Colonel General O Chae-won and KPA Major General Kim Tok-hyon are printed respectively in MINJU CHOSON and PYONGYANG SINMUN.

DJP POLICY ON CONSTITUTION CALLED SUBTERFUGE

[Text] Pyongyang July 29 (KCNA) -- Commenting on the formation of a "National Assembly Special Committee for Constitutional Amendment" in South Korea, NODONG SINMUN Tuesday says: The switchover of the "Democratic Justice Party" from "defence of the Constitution" to constitutional revision is its artifice in the hell of a fix into which it has been driven by pressure within and without.

The author of the commentary says: The puppets who had been dead set against a change to the "Constitution" made a sudden volte-face, agreeing to it. It was because the growing socio-political confusion in South Korea was fanned by the public opinion at home and abroad that the storm of democratisation in the Philippines would sweep South Korea sooner or later.

The commentary continues: Not much penetration is needed to guess why the "Democratic Justice Party" agreed to constitutional revision on condition of its debate inside the Assembly. By taking the question of constitutional amendment to the "National Assembly" under the pretext of ruling-opposition negotiation, it seeks to head off the expansion of the street movement for the revision of the "Constitution" among the masses and block the movement for democratisation. It intends to help traitor Chon Tu-hwan serve out his term without mishap in face of the strong demand for his resignation, whiling away the time with ineffective debate on constitutional revision in the "National Assembly," and lay the foothold of the "Democratic Justice Party" for long-term office behind its curtain. It has failed to produce any proposal for a change to the "Constitution" even after it agreed to the amendment under the pressure of the masses demanding it. Under this situation, a chance of solution is nil, even if a special committee is formed and negotiation is continued a hundred days.

JAPANESE MINISTER'S TEXTBOOK REMARKS 'SHAMEFUL'

[Commentary by station commentator Kim Kyong-pok: "A Brazen Challenge"]

[Text] Newly appointed Japanese Minister of Education Fujio has made very shameful and absurd remarks in connection with the question of school textbooks.

According to a news report, in a press conference held on 25 July, he picked a quarrel with Japan's neighboring countries over their denunciation of the maneuvers of the Japanese authorities to distort history. He asked: Have not those who are complaining committed similar acts in their history? He then issued a challenge, saying: Although it is good for our side to acknowledge its acts, the opposite side should also acknowledge its acts. This is natural. Indeed, it is the very brazen act, like shoutig stop thief. It is also an intolerable act of degrading the people of Asia, including our people, who want an end to these distortions of history.

The person who is in charge of education in Japan, including the question of school textbooks, unhesitatingly made these remarks after individually meeting with the Japanese prime minister shortly after taking office. We take a serious view of this. We are also naturally compelled to react with resentment and awareness.

High school history textbooks recently published by the National Association for Protecting Japan, after undergoing a review by the Japanese Ministry of Education, contain distorted historical facts, which the people of our country and Asian countries, who once suffered aggression from the Japanese imperialists, can never overlook. For example, the chapter that deals with the Japanese imperialists' conquering of Asia did not use the words aggression and attack, reduced the number of those killed by the Japanese imperialists in the 1 March movement and of those forcibly drafted by the Japanese imperialists, and described patriotic fighter An Chung-kun as a libertine. It was natural for our people and the Asian peoples to strongly protest and denounce an attempt to conceal, beautify, and decorate the Japanese imperialists' past aggressive and criminal acts. Accordingly, the Japanese authorities were compelled to revise the school textbooks. Nevertheless, they brazenly resist public opinion. This is an act of carrying two faces under one hood and is very brazen.

Picking a quarrel with his neighboring countries, Fujio raved that our country has a history of aggression. This is outrageous. When did our country invade other countries, especially Japan? Before modern times as well s since then, Japan was and has been an aggressor against our country, and our country has been a victim. The absurd remarks by Fujio are those of a swindler attempting to find fault with others and pressed by public opinion.

As is known, the Japanse reactionaries' distortion of history in school textbooks has been subject to denunciation by public opinion since 1982. Nevertheless, they have challenged public opinion by using tricks. This shows that they do not want to sincerely repent for the Japanese imperialists past aggression and crimes and reveals a wild desire to repeat these crimes.

We can clearly see their true intentions when we consider that the ministers of the Japanese Government are trying to invoke militarist ghosts by openly visiting the Yasukuni Shinto Shrine, and that the Japanse reactionaries are zealous in maneuvers to reinvade South Korea and Asia by accelerating the work of making social and political life fascist-oriented and by greatly increasing their aggressive Armed Forces.

The Japanese reactionaries are trying to drive members of the new generation in Japan to reinvade Korea and Asia by arming them with the militarist ideology of aggression by distorting history in school textbooks. However, no matter how great the desire of the Japanese reactionaries may be, history can never be distorted. The Japanese reactionaries should understand that the road to fascism and overseas invasion is the road to death, and will lead Japan to its second defeat.

SYRIAN MINISTER VISITS, MEETS WITH LEADERS

GFTUK HOLDS PLENUM IN PYONGYANG 21-22 JUL

[Text] The 12th plenary meeting of the GFTUK Central Committee was held in Pyongyang on 21-22 July. Present at the plenary meeting were Ho Chong-suk, secretary of the WPK Central Committee; Kim Pong-chu, chairman of the GFTUK Central Committee; members and candidate members of the GFTUK Central Committee; and responsible functionaries of provinces, cities, counties, plants, and enterprises. Discussed at the plenary meeting were the tasks of trade unions to mark the nation's greatest felicitous day in 1987 with a high political ferver and brilliant labor feats and the thorough materialization of the programmatic instruction given by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on 15 May 1986.

Following a report on the first and second agenda items by Chairman Kim Pong-chu, many participants debated in the plenary meeting. The reporter and debaters said: Our people can end the long history of suffering and mark a new era of the worthwhile revolution because we have the great leader, the brilliant sun of the nation, and we can brilliantly complete the revolutionary cause of chuche generation after generation because we have dear Comrade Kim Chong-il, the guiding star of the revolution.

Placing stress on marking the nation's greatest festive day next year with lofty political ferver and brilliant labor feats, they further said: To do so, all trade unions must more aggressively carry out ideological indoctrination work to train all their members to be chuche-type communist revolutionaries who are endlessly loyal to the great leader and the party, thereby strongly organizing the ranks of trade unions politically and ideologically.

At the plenary meeting, they stated that loyalty to the party and the leader must be shown in the practical struggle. They also emphasized bringing about new innovations in socialist construction by vigorously carrying out organizational and political work to mark the nation's greatest festive day in 1987 with brilliant labor feats, and put forth concrete tasks for this.

The plenary meeting emphasized creating new miracles and innovations on battlefields to erect large-scale facilities of the chuche era and in all sectors of the people's economy by boldly carrying out socialist emulation of loyalty and by holding the National Technological Innovation Festival on a large scale according to the appeals of the employees of the First Hydraulic Power Station Construction Complex Enterprise.

Saying that the militant function and role of trade unions must be heightened by all means to carry out the tasks of the trade unions, the plenary meeting stressed vigorously carrying out the ideological indoctrination work and guiding organizational activities to strongly establish the unitary ideological system of the party in the trade unions and to uphold the party's leadership with loyalty, and pointed out that the work method and work style of trade union functionaries must be improved.

The task of the trade unions on thoroughly materializing the programmatic instruction of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song given on 15 May was discussed at the plenary meeting. The reporter and debaters said: The programmatic instruction of the great leader on better solving the problem of food, clothing, and housing facing the people and of more quickly building the communist society was a militant program that elucidates a short cut to the occupation of the two fortresses of communism in our country, and was an encouraging banner leading the entire party and country, and all of the people, to a new revolutionary upturn.

Thoroughly materializing the recent instruction of the respected and beloved leader is an impending task of the trade unions. All trade unions and union functionaries must, with a high political and ideological resolve and endless loyalty toward the party, vigorously organize and mobilize the working class and the members of the trade unions in completing the construction of important facilities in socialist economic construction ahead of schedule in the spirit with which they erected a modern socialist industrial and agricultural state from the ashes after the war.

The plenary meeting stressed that all of the working class and members of the trade unions must display their unlimited power and spirit in building important facilities by clearly understanding the significance of building these facilities and the method for building these facilities and by adopting this method. The meeting also put forth concrete tasks in doing so.

The plenary meeting pointed out that all trade unions in the industrial machinery sector, the railway transportation sector, and all other sectors concerned must vigorously help build important facilities in terms of material, technology, and labor by waging a struggle to produce more material and equipment in a timely manner -- including modern mechanical devices, cement, and steel -- by carrying out organizational and political work.

The plenary meeting stressed carrying out the organizational and political work of various types and by using various methods in each level of trade unions to successfully complete the construction of important facilities within the shortest possible period of time. They also stressed the task of more firmly preparing the members of the trade unions for socialist construction. A relevant letter of decision and an implementation plan were adopted at the plenary meeting.

200 STUDENTS CLASH WITH POLICE IN SEOUL

H301231 Hong Kong AFP in English 1216 GMT 30 Jul 86

Meanwhile, some 30 women, mostly mothers of jailed student dissidents, staged a street demonstration in downtown Seoul demanding the immediate release of all political prisoners, witnesses said. At the hour-long anti-government demonstration in downtown Seoul, the women denounced the military dictatorship and carried banners calling for the unconditional release of all prisoners of conscience, the witnesses said. The demonstration was led by the wife of the reverend Moon Ik-hwan, chairman of the dissident United Minjung (people) Movement for Democracy who was arrested in May on charges of inciting students at the Seoul National University (SNU) into violent demonstration. Most of the demonstrators dispersed voluntarily after riot police arrested some of them, the witnesses said.

MP's of both the opposition and the ruling Democratic Justice Party of President Chon Tu-hwan are sitting on the parliamentary committee on the Constitution which was inaugurated Wednesday. The committee was set up in response to opposition demands for constitutional changes towards greater democracy, and is to present a constitution revision bill before the opening of the next full parliamentary session in September.

ROWNY INVITES ROK TO PARTICIPATE IN SDI

[Text] Seoul, July 30 (YONHAP) -- Edward Rowny, special adviser to the U.S. President on arms control matters, said Wednesday that South Korea could participate in the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) project through research into steel and personal computers, and the development of cotton products. In a press conference here, Rowny said that Korea's participation in the SDI research program would also benefit that nation in non-military fields, including telecommunications, and computer and optical sciences, because it would give Korea access to state-of-the-art technologies. Rowny said that the United States does not want to pressure Korea to join the SDI, often referred to as "star wars." He said that the United States "invites" Korea to take part.

In March 1985, the United States invited Korea, its NATO allies and other countries to participate directly in SDI research, according to the adviser.

The institute for Far Eastern Studies at Kyungnam University is sponsoring the three-day seminar, which opened Tuesday. Rowny came here to attend an internatioanl seminar on the SDI. Rowny delivered a keynote speech titled "The SDI and America's Asian Allies" Tuesday.

The U.S. presidential adviser said that he met with Korean Prime Minister No Sin-yong and Foreign Minister Yi Won-Kyong Tuesday and that his talks with them were "positive, constructive and fruitful." He said he briefed the Korean leaders on SDI and recent progress in U.S.-Soviet arms control talks. Rowny is scheduled to leave Korea Thursday.

JAPANESE MINISTER'S COMMENTS ON TEXTBOOK CONDEMNED

'Deep Regret' Expressed

[Text] Seoul, July 30 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government Tuesday expressed "deep regret" over recent remarks made by Japanese Education Minister Masayuki Fujio in response to foreign criticism of Japan's history textbook screening process. Kwon Pyong-hyon, director-general of the Foreign Ministry's Asian Affairs Bureau, conveyed the message to Sakutaro Tanino, minister at the Japanese Embassy here.

Kwon said Tanino, acting on instructions from the Japanese Foreign Ministry, expressed the "deep regret" of the Japanese Government over the trouble that the education minister's remarks caused to Korea. Kwon quoted Tanino as saying that "the remarks were not made with any specific country in mind." Tanino said he will convey the official position of his home government later, according to Kwon.

Earlier Tuesday in Tokyo, Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone also expressed regret over any misunderstanding or displeasure that Fujio's remarks may have caused foreign countries. In a televised interview, Nakasone said that Fujio's remarks were not made in reference to any specific country and that there were "shortcomings" in his expression.

Fujio was quoted by Japanese newspapers as saying at a press conference last Friday, "Did the 'yatsu' (brats) who are complaining never commit such a thing in their history?" After his remarks triggered an uproar of criticism, Fujio explained that the remarks reflected his personal point of view and he later said that he would be a "fool" to name any specific country in making such remarks.

TONG-A ILBO Editorial

[Editoral: "The Root of the Japanese Education Minister's Way of Thinking -- the Absurd Remark of Fujio Is Not Accidental"]

[Text] Japanese politicans and high-ranking public officials make absurd remarks from time to time that prevent us from forgetting. Yet though these may be intolerably absurd remarks to us, they may be, from the Japanese officials' standpoint, the manifestation of their inner thoughts, thoughts they hoped would be uttered by someone. As to the absurd question asked by Education Minister Fujio in connection with the new Japanese history -- "haven't those who are complaining committed similar acts in their own histories" -- we might as well understand his statement in this context.

Therefore, rather than adhering merely to one remark made by the Japanese Government or those who actually participate in Japanese politics -- which is only a piece of the whole reality -- we ought to check into the thinking behind it. Exploring on this basis, we find that the distortion of history in Japanese textbooks is not unrelated to this situation, it also has a close bearing on Fujio's absurd remark. Moreover, we should attach importance to the fact that Prime Minister Nakasone spoke ambiguously about Fujio's remark, describing it as a "personal view," despite the fact that Education Minister Fujio's remark at the press conference was made immediately after talks with Nakasone on educational reforms.

This is truly a manifestation of the concept of dichotomy -- "the true color and the cause upheld" -- conveniently used by the Japanese.

Looking into this reality, we find that it is not entirely new. The Japanese political strategy of scoring double points in a game has emerged since they absurdly described their defeat in the war as their having ended the war -- easily ignoring the cause of the war they provoked, exaggerating and taking advantge of the nuclear attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and pretending overnight ot be leading advocates of peace. We can easily see the root of their thinking when we look closely at a series of policies they have implemented since the end of World War II -- taking advantage of their economic growth under (?McArthur's) protective umbrella, in contrast to Germany which, though a defeated country in World War II like Japan, implemented a sincere postwar policy based on repentance.

In particular, since Prime Minister Nakasone took power, their attempt to escape from "the history based on Japan's defeat in war," which had been developed little by litte, has been openly manifest in various forms, taking advantage of their international position and economic confidence. Instead of being humble before history and aspiring for new state ethics by severing ties with their past, they have not abandoned their homesickness for it. Taking advantage of the boredom of their mature capitalist society -- which the old generation calls the "new mankind," with Japanese youth indulging in fetishist thinking, and with the resultant weakened criticism -- they are heading upstream step-by-step, feeling little need to understand others, going against the current, and reviving a view of history based on the imperial state.

Strictly speaking, we need not express anything more than concern for a neighbor no matter what road Japan follows. We cannot afford it because we are occupied with too many things. However, our nation has spirit enough to be articulate when we witness the haughtiness with which the Japanese continue to irritate the injury we suffered rather than making an indirect remedial effort for it though self-reflection. Nevertheless, Fujio was guilty of an absurd outburst, comparable to a thief turning on the victim and asking, "Haven't you ever done anything like that," when he referred to those, including us, who have never invaded them or caused any loss or damage to them. We cannot help feeling indignant at the shamelessness of Fujio, who holds the position of an educator. With the sweeping vicotry of the LDP in Japan's recent general elections, their perverse way of thinking will be further escalated and it will be necessary for us to wisely cope with a situation in which we must live with this audacious neighbor. In the midst of all this, we will trust, for the present, the conscientious forces of Japan, and expect the authorities to make a restrained but stern protest to them, after we have obtained, as requested by the ROK Government, the truth of the remark in question.

Social Democrats Hold Rally

[Text] Seoul, July 29 (YONHAP) -- About 50 members of South Korea's Social Democratic Party held a rally in front of the Japanese Embassy here Tuesday afternoon. During the 40-minute demonstration, the protesters demanded an apology for the reportedly insulting remarks recently made by the new Japanese education minister concerning the contents of his country's high school history textbook. The demonstrators wore head bands with a slogan reading "Down With Japanese Imperialists." They also carried a placard with a phrase challenging Japan's "neo-imperialism." They handed out to people about 100 leaflets in which they called for an immediate apology by the Japanese Government for the "insults" made by the Japanese minister. The leaflet then urged the Korean people to launch a nationwide campaign to boycott Japanese products and todrive out "all things Japanese."

BCP POLITICAL REPORT ON EVOLUTION OF CAPITALISM

BK271354 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese 1200 GMT 27 Jul 86

[Text] Monopoly institutions such as cartels, syndicates, and trusts emerged with the rise in production and capital, and the capital of these institutions merged with banking capital to become what is known as financial capital. Banks which had once served as middlemen, then became monopoly capitalists with financial capital in hand. In the most advanced capitalist countries, the largest banks amalgamated into banking groups, comprising at least three of five member banks, on the basis of their industrial and financial capital expenditures, thus bringing together the largest portion of the country's capital and income into their heads. These monopoly financiers were considered powerful men with infinite resources. They control, without exception, the entire network of economic and political institutions in today's capitalist society.

Monopoly capitalist institutions emerged in all the developed capitalist countries in the early 20th century, and (?a few) of these richest nations gained the stature of monopolists. The buildup of capital in these nations was phenomenal, leading to excessive buildups of capital. In such a situation, conditions emerged for the export of capital. Several backward countries were then in contact with world capitalist circles, and they were in the process of constructing or had completed the construction of their main railway lines. Preliminary requirements for the development process were already in place in the countries.

The need for a few capitalist nations to export capital was urgent as capitalism was already overdeveloped. Also, due to uneven development, agriculture lagged behind industry while people were impoverished. Under these circumstances, there were no spheres of investment left that would yield profit from capital in these capitalist countries. Hence, to gain greater profits, capital was exported. The export of capital was directed particularly to the backward countries because capital was scarce there, agricultural costs were lower, labor was cheap, raw materials were available at lower costs, and greater profits could be reaped from invested capital.

The British colonies became the prime target for British investment while for France, Europe was the main area of capital export -- first of all Russia, particularly in the form of credit capital. French capital was not in the form of investments in state ventures but rather government loans. Hence, Frence imperialism, unlike British colonial imperialism, was based on loans.

Germany, however, belonged to a third category. Because it did not have many colonies, Germany invested equally in Europe and America.

STATION EDITORIAI ON ASSEMBLY RESOLUTIONS

BK271048 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 2300 GMT 25 Jul 86

[Text] In an atmosphere full of socialist optimism, in which our entire party, Armed Forces, and people are striving to emulate and implement the resolutions of the party's Fifth Congress and every task assigned by the party and state, the 11th Session of the 1st National Assembly, which lasted for 5 days from 21 to 25 July, successfully concluded its work.

As genuine representatives of the people, at this session National Assembly members most attentively followed every significant event raised and discussed and energetically took part in expressing their opinions with the knowledge and experience gained from activities in their constituencies. This made the session lively and contributed to further improving the meeting. The National Assembly enthusiastically followed and debated the report of the Council of Ministers on the implementation of socioeconomic plans in the 1st half of the year and the targets for the 2nd half of the year. It unanimously agreed on the report and various measures of the Council of Ministers in implementing the socioeconomic tasks and the budget for the last 6 months of 1986. The National Assembly listened to the report on building defense works along the Cambodian-Thai border and sincerely praised tens of thousands of workers who clearly understood their duty and took part in this task, braving every difficulty and obstacle and achieving satisfactory results. This is a great contribution to firmly defending the border.

The National Assembly also heard the report by the proselytizing commission and gladly welcomed compatriots who have awakened in time and rejoined their families and the nation. It appealed to those compatriots who are still among enemy ranks to return to the fold quickly. The National Assembly highly praised the rapid development of our Revolutionary Armed Forces, which have closely cooperated with the Vietnamese volunteer army in smashing the enemies along the border and inside the country. The Assembly praised militiamen in villages and communes who have fought against every plundering activity of bandits to ensure safety and defend the people's peaceful life. The National Assembly warmly congratulated the party's correct leadership, which has adopted resolutions on building the working class into a genuine vanguard class in the cause of the Cambodian revolution and the party policy toward intellectuals at the recent session of the party Central Committee. This shows the party's high sense of responsibility for the fatherland.

The National Assembly highly appreciated the all-round development of the Cambodian revolution in the past, particularly in the military, political, and economic fields. Under the correct leadership of the KPRP, with assistance from the parties, state authorities, and peoples of Vietnam, Laos, the Soviet Union, and other fraternal socialist countries, our people and Armed Forces have braved every difficulty and scored noble results in defending and building the beloved fatherland.

After this serious defeat along the border, the enemies' morale is low and their internal conflicts have deepened. They are seeking ways and means to attack and kill one another. This has pushed them into a desparate situation. Increasing numbers of enemy soldiers are surrendering to our authorities.

Our people's three revolutionary movements -- fighting the enemies, winning over enemy soldiers, and expanding production and building revolutionary forces -- on the contrary have scored successive results. Our Armed Forces have develcped rapidly both in quantity and fighting quality and have closely cooperated with the people and the Vietnamese volunteer army in successfully smashing every enemy maneuver and activity and defending national independence and revolutionary gains.

We have restored and created good conditions for continued development and progress in agriculture and expanded the area to be planted with rice, rubber, and other subsidiary crops. The cultivation of rice and rubber and exploitation of forestry and aquatic products -- the four economic spearheads put forward at the party's Fifth Congress -- have been gradually expanded. Worthy of pride is the fact that our peasants throughout the country have a better understanding of intensive rice cultivation involving the IR-36 variety, which has a high yield and requires a small amount of capital and time. Our peasants have heightened their patriotic spirit and enthusiastically and vigorously sold their paddy and paid patriotic contributions.

Workers in factories, enterprises, and handicraft workshops have also paid attention to increasing production to serve the people's needs. This has gradually stabilized the people's life and contributed to building new socialist cultural basis.

All this more clearly reflects the firmness of our pure and new regime. It has created conditions allowing a recent fifth partial withdrawal of Vietnamese volunteer troops from Cambodia. The victories we have scored are great. However, our immediate tasks are still serious. The enemies, despite their defeat and deterioration, have not yet abandoned their undeclared war maneuvers to oppose and topple us. Recently, they had made up the so-called 8-point proposal, which was in fact concocted by Beijing in an attempt to return the genocidal Pol Pot clique to power to massacre the Cambodian people again. And more recently, the Thai rightist reactionary clique has colluded with the U.S. imperialists by staging a joint military exercise codenamed "Cobra Gold-86." This is a direct provocation and threat to the PRK and an opposition to the three Indochinese countries and peace in the region.

This calls for all of us to heighten the spirit of self-sufficiency and brave obstacles by firmly sticking to the revolution's strength and winning position. We should combine the tasks of fighting the enemies and rainy-season production and vigorously promote patriotic emulation movements, thrift, and lively improvisation in production. We should continue eternally to expand and strengthen the spirit of national and international solidarity, particularly the solidarity with the Vietnamese volunteer army, for the benefit of the fatherland's prosperity and to contribute to building a peaceful, friendly, and cooperative Southeast Asia.

The entire party, Armed Forces, and people should clearly see the advance of the Cambodian revolution, which no enemy can reverse. The next 2 years, 1986 and 1987, are the ones in which we should successfully implement the first 5-year socioeconomic plan. This requires all of us to grasp at good experiences firmly, take various concrete measures, and effectively implement tasks assigned by the party and state. In particular, we should successfully implement all the resolutions of the first National Assembly's 11th session to advance the fatherland's cause toward socialism.

PASASON ON UNMASKING OF U.S. 'STATE TERRORISM'

[PASASON 21 July commentary: "Unmask State Terrorism"]

[Text] According to foreign reports, a conference was recently held by the so-called opposition groups from six countries from Central America, Africa, and Southeast Asia, who called themselves representatives of the resistance forces from Laos, Cambodia, Afghanistan, Ethiopia, Angola, and Nicaragua. The aim of the conference was to solicit additional military, financial, and political assistance from the White House. It is worthy of note that the conference was hosted by the so-called Foundation of the U.S. Security Councils which are a group of private conservative organizations. However, those addressing the conference were none other than Pentagon chief and U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, Senator Robert Hearns [as received] of President Reagan's Republican Party, and some other U.S. congressmen.

This conference clearly unmasked the state terrorists. The U.S. imperialists have clamored throughout the world that they are against terrorism. With that deceitful declaration as the pretext, they sent planes to barbarously and cruelly bomb and kill the innocent Libyan people in April this year. In fact, the chief of state terrorism is no one less than the chief of the White House. Reagan arbitarily sent troops to invade Grenada, approved several hundred million dollars to support counterrevolutionaries in Afghanistan, reactionary groups in Thailand, and counterrevolutionaries in Angola and Ethiopia, and, recently, coerced the Congress into allocating $100 million to give assistance to the Nicaraguan counterrevolutionaries -- an act which runs counter to international law and the verdict of the World Court.

The conference of the so-called resistance groups from six countries in Washington is clear proof that Washington is further opening and dangerously promoting the cause of state terrorism. Thus, all sovereign countries, especially those who are threatened by the U.S. imperialists' state terrorism, must unite more closely and maintain a high sense of vigilance to smash all schemes of the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen.

As for Laos and Cambodia in particular, and the three Indochinese countries in general, the acts of state terrorism carried out by the United States against these countries are very obvious. The U.S. imperialists have not only colluded with the Beijing big-nation expansionist-hegemonists to train, feed, and arm exiled Lao reactionaries and Cambodian reactionary elements to be smuggled into Laos to undermine peace in Laos and to sabotage the revival of the Cambodian people, but have also colluded with Thai ultrarightist reactionaries to create tension along the Lao-Thai and Thai-Cambodian borders by supporting the exiled Lao and Cambodian reactionaries and by increasing the military might of the Thai Armed Forces by arming them with new artillery pieces, tanks, armored vehicles, and F-16 warplanes to threaten the revolution in the three Indochinese countries. More serious still, the U.S. imperialists and the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries have lately staged successive joint sea, land, and air military exercises in Thailand. At present, they have staged the largest ever joint military exercise near the Cambodian-Thai border, codenamed "Cobra Gold." In the meantime, the U.S. imperialists are holding detailed negotiations with their Thai counterparts to build a weapons reserve stockpile in Thailand. With regard to this development, the Japanese ASAHI SHIMBUN newspaper recently said that there is a tendency to reactivate the U.S. bases in Thailand.

All this means that preparations have been made for the U.S. Rapid Deployment Forces to carry out state terrorism against the revolution in the three Indochinese countries in general and to obstruct and destroy the national construction in our country and to oppose the revival of the Cambodian people. Nevertheless, the era in which the U.S. imperialists were able to do whatever they pleased in this region is now over. If they continue to obstinately support the exiled Lao reactionaries and the Cambodian reactionary groups, the nature of their state terrorism will be more clearly unmasked and condemned by peace- and justice-loving people in this region and throughout the world, including the American people themselves. As a result, they will suffer a defeat at the end as they did in the past.

PASASON EXAMINES 'TRICK' OF THAI ALLEGATIONS

[Text] According to a foreign news report on 22 July, Thailand has accused the Lao side of sending more troops to reinforce its forces along the two countries' border with a view to launching attacks in Thai territory. At the same time, radio Thailand has also arrogantly stated that the Lao side has plotted to attack vehicles traveling along roads and to plant bombs in Pua and Thongchang Districts, and so forth. This accusing others by the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries is unquestionably in line with their trick of slandering other people. Hurling an allegation against the Lao side has become traditional practice for the ultrarightist reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles. All their allegations are aimed at covering up their evil schemes against neighboring countries as well as covering up their brutal acts of acting upon orders of foreign countries without thinking about the interests of the Thai people and nation at all.

As everyone knows, in the past as well as at present, the ultrarightest reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles have totally protected and fostered hooligan reactionaries and bandits in Thai territory and have used them as tools to conduct provocations or launch armed attacks against neighboring countries and to create disturbances along the border areas, in particular with the PRK and the LPDR. Whenever the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries created any incident against Laos, they would hurl various allegations against the Lao side with a view to covering up their acts. Examples of this were the burning down of a school in Cheng Muang village, Tha Li District, [in Thailand's Loei Province] on 30 May and another incident in Huai Kong Village, Phayao District, Phayao Province, on 14 June. Nevertheless, such acts by the Thai side can deceive no one. They will only further expose even more clearly before the Thai people and the world the true nature and evil intentions of the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries who have colluded with the Beijing reactionaries in implementing the big-nation expansionist-hegemonist plot and with the imperialists in carrying out an arms race in Southeast Asia.

By fabricating another story slandering and accusing the Lao side of placing reinforcements along the border in preparation for launching attacks against Thailand, the ultrarightist reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles have not other purpose than to continue to gain more support from the United States with a view to expanding the U.S.-Thai military exercises -- which are currently being held in areas adjacent to the Thai-Cambodian border -- to areas adjacent to the Thai-Lao border.

This fanfare of fabrications, cooked up by the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries, is also aimed at creating additional conditions for the prompt making of the final decision on the building of the war reserve stockpile of the U.S. imperialists in Thai territory to favorably pave the way for the U.S. imperialists to return to Southeast Asia again.

These vicious acts of the Thai reactionaries have produced no good results to serve the interests of the two peoples of Thailand and Laos. On the contrary, they have only aggravated the already tense Thai-Lao situation which has resulted from the acts of the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries, thus serving the aspirations of the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists who have tried to fill this region with instability and confrontation, in particular to create tension along the Thai-Cambodian and the Thai-Lao borders so that they can finally have a pretext to directly oppose the revolutions of the three Indochinese peoples.

But, this trick by the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries of slandering and making allegations against others is already outdated. It can no longer fool anyone. It is certain that they, like their masters -- the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists -- will be defeated.

LAO REBEL LEADER INTERVIEWED AT BASE IN INTERIOR

PM290929 Paris LE FIGARO in French 21 Jul 86 p 3

[Charles Denou dispatch: "The 'Forgotten War' in Laos"]

[Excerpt] A Lao village -- [passage omitted] The Lao resistance exists, and I have met it. It usually operates quite a long way from the Thai border. Moreover, it took me several days of walking across mountains and through forests infested with mosquitoes and land leeches to reach one of its rear bases somewhere in northwest Laos where I was received by General Thonglith who, after 7 years of exile in France, returned to the underground in 1983.

This former pupil of the Paris military school, who is over 50 and pugnacious-looking, is one of the military leaders of the Laos United National Liberation Front, formed 5 years ago by a group of right-wing former Laos leaders. Its main driving force is General Vang Pao, former French Army officer, known for his charismatic appeal to the fighters from the Hmong mountain people who have been causing trouble for the Vietnamese occupiers for some time, estimated to have 60,000 men in the country.

The base I visited is a group of around 10 bamboo huts with a kind of courtyard in the center furnished with a few benches made from tree trunks. "This is our briefing room," Gen Thonglith told me, pointing to an old general staff map, faded by rain, hanging beside something which resembled a blackboard. Outside were young people carrying arms, some dressed in fatigues and others all in black, guarding the camp.

"We have done a considerable amount of work in 3 years. We have quietly infiltrated our men deep into national territory with the aim of winning the population's confidence and support. It is encouraging to see that people are increasingly disillusioned with communism. Some of our units have the mission of hindering supplies to the Vietnamese troops, especially in the center of the country. For instance, a few months ago we partly destroyed the pipeline bringing oil from the Vietnamese port of Vinh to Thakhek on the Mekong. Our commandos regularly attack enemy convoys along the strategic Highway 13 which crosses Laos from north to south."

As if to convince me more fully, the general showed me several photographs showing the "exploits" of his men.

When will Laos be liberated? Gen Thonglith, look serious, rubbed his neck as if to ease a pain, and answered: "The struggle will be long, but you do not need hope to wage it. We now have around 8,000 very poorly armed men. The enemy is 100 times superior and is overequipped. We are forced to fight a guerrilla war like the Afghans and the Khmer Rouge, especially because no country is helping us. The world has completely foregotten us."

Questioned about the source of the arms and supplies his troops have, the general was clearly embarrassed and reluctant to give details. "We have a wide assortment of weapons. We have American M-16s, Chinese AK-47'S, and Czechoslovak-made Kalashnikovs. We are not far from the Golden Triangle here; arms smuggling exists and is not new. What we lack is funds with which to buy arms. Hitherto our compatriots living in France and the United States have sent us some money, but it is a drop in the ocean compared with our needs. In addition we desperately lack medicines."

The general then led me to a hut bigger than the others, where his sick fighters were "resting." Some are suffering from malaria, others from beriberi, and yet others from skin diseases. A little further away was a 16-year old youth suffering from a nasty boil on his left leg. In one corner of the hut were Nivaquine and Ercefuryl boxes sent from France. They were empty.

Despite everything Gen Thonglith remains confident. "It took the Pathet Lao 30 years to seize power. It may take us less time. It will all depend on how the international situation develops and on what support, if any, the Free World gives our cause. Meanwhile, we will continue our long march, constantly keeping this proverb in mind: It is better to live in your own little home than in somebody else's mansion."

It is a message which is full of significance for Lao exiles.

INTERIOR MINISTER COMMENTS ON ELECTION TURNOUT

BK280930 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Statement to newsmen by Interior Minister General Sitthi Chirarot, date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] The number of eligible voters nationwide, as reported by the provincial administrations on 30 April 1986 which is regarded as the official figure, is 26,160,100. A total of 16,079,949 turned out for the 27 July election, making a record 61.43 percent turnout. This is good news and shows the considerable political awareness of the people. Chaiyaphum Province had the biggest turnout -- 85.19 percent; Buriram had the next biggest turnout -- 80.68 percent; while Nan's turnout was 79.83 percent. Bangkok had the lowest turnout percentage-wise -- 37.29, Nonthaburi next lowest at 42.16 percent, and Samut Prakan third lowest with 47.86 percent.

Five elected MP'S gained more than 100,000 votes -- Narong Wongwan in Phrae Province gained 156,698; Banhan Sinlapaacha in Suphan Buri, 151,096; Bunua Prasoetsuwan in Suphan Buri 134,351; Chumphon Sinlapaacha in Suphan Buri, 131,045; and Sano Thianthong in Prachin Buri 105,042. The over 60 percent turnout and the number of candidates receiving over 100,000 votes are good news for the 27 July election.

KHUKRIT SEES 'NO NEED' FOR 'OUTSIDER' PREMIER

[Text] Former leader of the Social Action Party (SAP) M.R. Khukrit Pramot said yesterday there is no need to invite an outsider to lead the coalition to be formed by the major parties which won the general election on Sunday.

He said the leaders of these parties are ready to be the next prime minister.

Speaking to reporters at his Suan Plu residence, Khukrit said he personally was of the opinion that only the Parliament should decide who the next prime minister will be. He was answering a question whether the prime minister must be someone acceptable to the armed forces.

Stressing that he had washed his hands of politics, the former premier said that it would be the most convenient if the three major parties (Democrat, Chat Thai and Social Action) could get together to form a coalition.

He declined to comment when asked about the possibility that Prem Tinsulanon is likely to be invited to lead the new coalition.

"I have nothing to do with it," he said.

However, Khukrit said that under the present circumstances the leaders of the major parties are prepared to be contenders for the premiership. "I see no need for an outsider to become prime minister," he said.

He said the present situation is different from that in 1983 when Prem had to be brought in as a compromise to lead the coalition.

Nine of the newly-elected MPs of SAP yesterday called on Khukrit to pay their respect.

Khukrit said so far nobody had consulted him about politics. "Even if people want to consult me, I would decline because I am no longer involved with politics," he said.

BUNCHU SUPPORTS PREM, SEEKS COALITION ROLE

BK300223 Bangkok BANGKOL POST in English 30 Jul 86 p 3

[Text] Community Action Party leader Bunchu Rotchanasathian reiterated his support for Gen Prem Tinsulanon to head the next government, saying no one else was better qualified to assume the premiership.

He said the country might have several equally capable persons to become the next prime minister, but Gen Prem was an honest person who has proven to be a capable leader.

Comparing his party to a young girl waiting to be approached by a man wanting to get married, Mr Bunchu said his party was ready to join the next coalition.

"But that does not mean CAP will go with any party. We will have to see how the coalition will be formed, " he said.

Mr Bunchu said he met former Social Action Party leader M.R. Khukrit Pramot yesterday and was advised to wait for other political parties to approach him for talks.

He said the problem of the number of parties in the coalition was less important than whether the new coalition would be able to solve the country's economic problems.

DEMOCRATS NEGOTIATE TO FORM NEW GOVERNMENT

BK300227 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 30 Jul 86 pp 1,3

[Text] The Democrat Party caucus yesterday appointed a five-member committee to negotiate with other parties to work out an agreeable coalition with the party as its core.

Party sources told the BANGKOK POST that the Democrats prefer to have the interior, commerce and agriculture portfolios but would not mind if the next prime minister -- presumable Gen Prem Tinsulanon -- wanted to carry on as defence minister and to have a free hand in selecting his finance minister.

The sources said the Democrats regard the interior post as "desirable" and the foreign affairs portfolio as "negotiable". But the party has no conditions regarding the communications, education, public health, industry and justice portfolios.

Democrat spokeswoman Suphattra Matsadit said after a three-hour party meeting that the ad hoc committee headed by Democrat leader Phichai Rattakun was given only broad guidelines which require coalition partners to have similar or compatible platforms and the new government's economic policies to be based on those formulated by the Democrats.

She said no time frame was imposed on the committee, but Mr Phichai had said before the meeting that he expected it would take about two weeks to form the coalition.

Informed sources said the new coalition might be announced after Her Majesty the Queen's birthday on August 12.

Mrs Suphattra confirmed that the caucus made no mention of the Cabinet portfolios the Democrats want nor did it discuss the premiership issue.

"The premiership issue must depend on (political) circumstances. But it is hoped that he will be the leader of a political party," she said.

Stressing that the committee was authorised only "to negotiate," she said it will report to the caucus again before any agreement is reached.

Other committee members are Mr Phichai's deputies Marut Bunak, Banyat Banthatthan, Khunthong Phuphiuduan, and party secretary-general Wira Musikapong.

Meanwhile, Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut and Democrat leader Phichai denied having met recently to discuss the government formation.

However, sources said they believed the two to be working through an intermediary. Gen Chawalit was also thought to be playing a key role in linking up possible coalition partners, although this could not be confirmed.

"I haven't met Khun Phichai for some time," Gen Chawalit said. Several newspapers had quoted Mr Phichai as saying that he had met the Army chief recently to discuss the new government.

Asked if any party leaders or their representatives had called on him recently, Gen Chawalit said many people had done so but their visits had nothing to do with the formation of the new government.

The Army chief said there was no need for the party leaders to seek his advice since all of them have "their own ideas."

"Take it easy. Everthing will be just fine," he said.

Speaking before the Democrat caucus, Mr Phichai denied having met either Gen Prem or Gen Chawalit. He also declined to discuss the coalition issue, saying that it was for the party caucus to decide on the matter.

He added that he was not aware of any attempts by the other major parties to supercede the Democrats as the core of the new coalition.

Mr Phichai said the Democrat Party had always tried to persuade voters to go for parties rather than individuals. But despite its efforts, the party still failed to win a majority in the House and this had caused problems as feared.

"Although the party has gained many more seats (compared to the previous election), it is still short of an absolute majority. So this is the way it is: he said.

Mr Phichai said the election results clearly showed that voters in many parts of the country still preferred to choose individuals rather than parties. He cited as an example the case of Dr Akhom Sorasuchat, his running mate in Bangkok's Constituency 4, who lost.

Mr Phichai said the formation of a new government should take about two weeks. "We'll talk again in two weeks," he said, adding that the delay would not pose a problem.

Asked whether he would accept the prime ministership, Mr Phichai said the issue would be decided by the party.

Democrat deputy leader Banyat Banthatthan said the government formation will be discussed at the party's caucus to be attended by the party's central committee and 100 newly-elected Democrat MPs.

5-Party Coalition

[Text] A five-party coalition formula led by Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon surfaced last night following the first round of informal negotitions, highly-placed sources in the caretaker government said.

The tenative composition has been relayed to Gen Prem who is still in Nakhon Ratchasima, the sources said.

According to the formula, the five parties in the new coalition will include the Democrat (100 seats), Chat Thai (63), Social Action (51) Rassadorn Party (18) and Ruam Thai (19). The proposed coalition will command a comfortable total of 251 seats in the 37-member House of Representatives.

RATSADOON Party is led by former Deputy Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Thianchai Sirisamphan while Ruam Thai Party is headed by former Agriculture Minister and ex-deputy leader of the Social Action Party [SAP] Narong Wongwan.

Under the formula, the Democrats will get 17 portfolios, while Chat Thai will get 10-11 Cabinet seats and SAP will get 8 portfolios in the new line-up. Ruam Thai and Rassadorn will get three seats each.

Prime Minister Prem's "quota" will compromise four Cabinet seats.

The sources said that Chat Thai, SAP, Ruam Thai and Rassadorn had in fact held talks earlier and agreed on the principle that Gen Prem will resume premiership. The Democrat Party was the last to agree to the proposed formula last night "because of some internal disagreement within the party on the issue of who should be the prime minister."

With a more flexible stand taken by the Democrat Party's leadership yesterday, behind-the-scenes talks last night managed to agree on the composition, with the consent from the Democrats that Gen Prem would head the new coalition government.

If the formula is finally carried out, the new coalition will hold a clear majority in the Lower House while the opposition camp will comprise some tough, veteran political groupings that could pose an exciting, if not formidable, challenge in several quarters.

For one thing, the anti-Prem United Democratic Party (UDP) led by Buncheng Thongsawat which has 38 House seats will not let the new coalition go unchallenged over several key issues while Prachakon Thai Party, a former coalition partner, whose House strength has been reduced to 24, will not wait idly by. Bunchu Rotchanasathian's Community Action Party, with 15 seats, will take on the government on some basic economic issues.

The Progressive Party under former House Speaker Uthai Phimchaichon, with 9 seats, has said it will be in the opposition camp with its insignificant number of MPs in the House. But the divergent non-government parties do comprise some very well-connected personalities who could make the new political scheme of things lively and politically vulnerable to a certain extent.

"The new government under this five-party formula will be reasonably firm but the number of opposition parties is large and every one of them is a potential challenge in itself. The new game will be much more lively than the previous one when Chat Thai was the only opposition party," said an informed analyst.

The final touch to the coalition formula is expected to be completed in the next few days.

MP'S SAID 'COMING TO TERMS' WITH PREM AS PREMIER

BK300245 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 30 Jul 86 p 3

[Text] After high anti-Prem feeling during the elections, many MPs yesterday appeared to be coming to terms with the likelihood of the incumbent Prime Minister continuing in the post.

Social Action Party [SAP] MP for Khon Kaen Phone Sarasin, when asked if the premier should be an elected MP, said: "He can be anyone who is honest and just, can coordinate the various factions and can carry out his duties."

Asked if the prime minister could be Gen Prem, Mr Phone said: "I have not thought about it. But it depends on the party leaders. I don't know if they will accept it."

Chat Thai secreary-general Banhan Sinlapa-Acha said Gen Prem's return depends on whether the various political parties can agree on who they want.

Asked if it could be one of the leaders of the big parties, Mr Banhan said, "maybe the other parties won't accept it."

Asked if the leader of a small party could be Premier if the large parties cannot agree, Mr Banhan said, "If the large parties can't agree then they would have to go for a middle man from outside. If you take a leader of small party that means it will be a coalition of numerous parties and then the Government can't stay long."

He said that by political etiquette the largest party should be the core in forming the coalition and Chat Thai will not try to combine with the SAP to out stage the Democrats. He said that the largest party should also take the House Speaker position without having to go through a battle in Parliament.

He also said that since the economy is the main problem that every party will have to tackle all of them should be allowed to play a part in solving economic problems.

Chat Thai deputy leader and Ratburi MP Thawit Klinprathum said that things could still change as to which parties would be included in the coalition. "Now the Democrat is the core with the Chat Thai and the SAP as the constant factors. But in the past we have seen that the core party have lost their edge to other parties," Mr Thawit said.

Asked if things could turn out like the situation in 1975 when the large parties lost their edge to the SAP and M.R. Khukrit Pramot became Prime Minister with only 18 seats in the House, Mr Thawit said, "there are some indications that that is possible."

The only MP to voice objections to Gen Prem becoming the Prime Minister were Chat Thai MP for Bangkok Col Prachak Sawangchit and former party leader Maj-Gen Praman Adireksan.

Maj-Gen Praman said that by democratic principles the Premier should be an elected MP. "MPS come into Parliament with blood, sweat and tears and they should take the position. They are also in close contact with the people and non-MPS are not and don't know the real problems facing the people," Maj-Gen Praman said.

"Gen Prem said that he has no political ambition so we shouldn't go and try to force him to become Prime Minister. The fact that he said he has no ambition means that he does not want to be Prime Minister," Maj-Gen Praman said.

Asked if the leader of a small party of Mr Phichai Rattakun could be Premier, Maj-Gen Praman said that this depends on the agreement that the political parties could reach.

He said that the setting up of the Government should not take long and that agreements on which parties would be responsible for the economic portfolios should not be difficult to achieve.

Col Prachak said that all the political parties should bear in mind their promises to the people during the election campaign. "They must think about their promises to the people when they choose the Prime Minister. They shouldn't think too deeply that a civilian cannot be the Premier. If the person did not come from the elections he should not get any acceptance," Col Prachak said.

However, he said that if it came to a party decision he will not oppose it. "I will abide by the decision of the party but I won't raise my hand in support. It's better if they cut my hand than if I should support Prem," Col Prachak said.

The former Young Turk leader said earlier in the morning at the Bangkok Metropolitan Administration that he is forming a "dump Prem" movement with MPs from various parties.

PARTY LEADERS OFFER COMMENTS ON NEW PREMIER

BK300243 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 30 July 86 pp 1, 3

[Text] Ratsadon Party leader Gen Thianchai Sirisamphan said Thailand is ready to have an elected MP as premier but other factors must be considered as well.

In Chon Buri, former House Speaker Uthai Phimchaichon said yesterday his Progressive Party had no objection to a non-MP prime minister. His remark contradicted his early statements which strongly backed an MP for the premiership.

Democrat Party deputy leader Gen Han Linanon reiterated yesterday that the prime minister "in principle" should be an elected MP.

Gen Thianchai, whose party won 18 seats in the general election and who is widely tipped to join a new coalition government, made the comment after meeting his MPs at the Ambassador Hotel.

He said his party authorised him to negotiate if contacted by major parties, but while none has done so, he had held unofficial talks with Chat Thai leader Maj-Gen Chatichai Chunhawan.

Gen Thianchai said Thailand could now have a premier who was an MP. In the past, he said, disputes among political parties had prevented an MP from taking the post.

He said one vital consideration is whether a would-be premier is qualified.

Gen Thianchai said a civilian government headed by an elected MP may not last despite its ability. Other factors needed to be considered, he said.

Gen Thianchai said his party had no objection to the Democrats leading the coalition.

The general said his party would make no demands to join a coalition but would review the intentions of any party which approached the Ratsadon Party.

Meanwhile, Uthai Thani MP Col Phon Roengprasoetwit of United Democratic Party [UDP] said the prime minister must be an MP. The new premier must be decisive in solving the country's problems.

He said an elected MP knows the hardships the people are facing. Any party leader can become a prime minister, he said.

He said his constituents were fed up with the outgoing government because they believed it could not help them sell agricultural products at good prices. He said the new premier must not resort to favoritism.

"If leader of any major party cannot be a prime minister, he should not be in politics at all," he said. He said parties should ignore military threats if they decide to form the government their own way.

UDP leadere Buntheng Thongsawat is to represent the party in coalition talks, he said.

Meanwhile Parliament President Ukrit Mongkhonnawin said since no political parties have gained a clear majority in the House of Representatives they must first consult each other on the composition of the coalition government and who should become the prime minister.

Dr Ukrit said the parties should nominate such a person whose name he will submit to His Majesty the King as the next premier.

He said Parliament will be called to session by a Royal Decree. After that the Parliament secretary will call for a session to elect the House Speaker and deputies.

He pledged to perform his duty to the best of his ability.

In Chon Buri, former House Speaker Uthai Phimchaichon said yesterday that as a small party the Progressive Party has no objections to a non-MP prime minister. His remark contradicted his early statements which strongly backed an MP for such post. The party won nine seats in the election.

The Chon Buri MP said that he was prepared to again assume the post of House Speaker if most parties support him.

Mr Uthai yesterday had a meeting with Chon Buri Governor Sup Rotprasoet during which he reportedly asked the governor to take decisive action against 12 election officials who were allegedly caught cheating at two polling units in Tambon Saensuk on Sunday.

THAI TROOPS CLASH WITH CPM INSURGENTS 28 JUL

[Text] Three government troops were wounded in a clash with insurgents of the Communist Party of Malaya (CPM) in the southern province of Yala on Monday, a senior military official said.

Col Chamnong Phairot, commander of Civilian, Police and Military Force 43, told THE NATION yesterday that two rangers and an infantryman were seriously injured when they stepped on landmines during the clash with about 10 CPM insurgents in jungle-clad mountains on the boundary of the three districts of Betong, Bannang Sata and Than To.

The commander said more than 10 troops of the Phairot tasks force, one of two task forces currently fighting against CPM guerrillas in the jungled mountainous area in Yala, have been wounded since the middle of this month.

He said the Fourth Army Region on July 12 began Operation 293, which is being carried out by the Ekkachat and Phairot task forces, to drive CPM guerrillas out of Yala.

The Phairot task force is commmanded by Col Chamnong while the Ekkachat is led by Col Ekkachat Siwannaphruk.

Chamnong said government troops have captured two satellite jungle camps of the CPM in Yala during Operation 293. More than 200 CPM insurgents were reportedly operating in the area.

NHAN DAN VIEWS GORBACHEV'S VLADIVOSTOK STATEMENT

[Text] Hanoi VNA July 30 -- NHAN DAN today editorially acclaims the Soviet Union's important peace initiatives for Asia and the Pacific as expounded in M. Gorbachev's statement in Vladivostok on July 28.

NHAN DAN says: "Asia and the Pacific, scene of the most bloody and prolonged wars and of the most drastic changes during the past four decades, remains to this day one of the hotbeds of bitter struggle. Not resigning themselves to their setback; U.S. imperialism and other reactions [as received] are colluding with one another to increase their military forces in this part of the world.

"Contrary to the reactionary strategy of the U.S., the policy of the Soviet Union towards Asia and the Pacific is one of peaceful coexistence among nations of different social systems.

"With regard to the situation in Southeast Asia and Kampuchea, and the relations between Vietnam and between the three Indochinese countries and other countries in this region, the Soviet Union has reiterated its stance for maintaining and promoting political dialogues, continuing to seek possibilities of limiting armaments and improving the international situation, and promoting constructive cooperation among nations."

The paper goes on:

"The Vietnamese people, now as before, always cherish the traditional friendship between the peoples of Vietnam and China. Responsibility for the worsening relations between the two countries and the tension along the Sino-Vietnamese border rests completely with China. If China really wants peace and better relations with neighbouring countries, it must give up at once its hostile policy toward Vietnam and the other countries of Indochina, and negotiate with Vietnam to solve the problems still existing in their bilateral relations, and as an initial step, stabilize the situation along the common border and create favourable conditions for the normalization of the relations between the two countries, thereby contributing to making Southeast Asia and Asia a region of peace, stability and cooperation."

"The Vietnamese people firmly allying themselves with the fraternal peoples of Laos and Kampuchea, closely uniting and cooperating in all fields with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, are determined to actively contribute to the common struggle for peace, security, mutual understanding and cooperation among nations" NHAN DAN concludes.

VNA REJECTS 'SLANDEROUS' XINHUA REPORT

[Text] Hanoi VNA July 29 -- VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY today is authorized to reject a slanderous report of the Chinese news agency XINHUA on July 26, 1986 that Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea have poisoned foodstuff and vegetables in some markets in Kampot Province.

This is Beijing's cunning move to sling mud at Vietnam in an attempt to paper over its continued backing of the genocidal Pol Pot clique to work against the Kampuchean people's rebirth.

COMPARISON OF NHAN DAN COMMENTARY ON THAI, U.S. TALKS

Hanoi International Service in Thai at 1130 GMT on 23 July transmits a 19 July NHAN DAN commentary entitled " Dangerous Moves by Washington and Bangkok". This Thai version of the NHAN DAN commentary has been compared with the Hanoi Domestic Service Vietnamese version published in the 21 July Aisa & Pacific DAILY REPORT, page K 5, revealing the following variations:

Paragraph one, line five in the Hanoi Thai version reads: defense secretary. This is a dangerous move paving the way for U.S. soldiers to return to Thailand and increasing the U.S. military presence in Southeast Asia. This also constitutes (adding new sentence)

Paragraph two, line three in the Hanoi Thai varison reads: and the Pacific, which is to destroy the Soviet Union and the socialist community, the national independence movements in Southeast Asia and Asia and the Pacific? (adding phrase)

STATION EDITOR ON NEW U.S. 'DANGEROUS SCHEMES'

[Station Editor Vu Dinh Vinh's feature: "Heighten Vigilance for National Defense"]

[Text] Dear comrades and friends, implementating their counterrevolutionary strategy, the imperialist and reactionary forces have again plotted new dangerous schemes and actions. Recently in Washington, the U.S. administration called a meeting of its henchmen to discuss measures aimed at opposing and sabotaging the revolution in each country and in the world. These lowly henchmen -- who are leaders of counterrevolutionary organizations in Nicaragua, Afghanistan, Angola, Ethiopia, Laos, and Cambodia -- have assembled in the United States at the command of their masters. They have considered opening an office in Washington to facilitate the coordination of their activities. The U.S. National Security Council gave a banquet for these henchmen. Attending the banquet U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger affirmed the Reagan administration's total support for these henchmen and pledged not to abandon them. However, Weinberger bluntly told this group of henchmen that U.S. support depends on the condition that they will act as directed by the United States.

The henchmen happily boasted that Washington had given the UMITA rebels in Angola $15 million in military aid, including ground-to-air missiles and antitank weapons. Earlier, the United States had given the reactionary Contras in Nicaragua $100 million in aid. It is believed that the remaining henchmen, including the genocidal killer Pol Pot -- will also get their generous shares of aid from their masters.

Indeed, it is true that in the Reagan administrations' global policy of expansion, southeast Asia is being given fairly special attention by the United States. Colluding with the Chinese ruling circles and other reactionary forces, Washington has pursued a hostile policy toward the Indochinese countries, opposed the rebirth of the Cambodian people, and supported and helped foster the Pol Pot clique and other Khmer reactionary groups.

The U.S. Administration is also taking very dangerous actions aimed at paving the way for the return to Thailand of U.S. troops and intensifying its military presence in Southeast Asia. While Bangkok is making slanderous charges about Vietnam sending troops into Thailand and Vietnamese Army volunteers in Cambodia setting up positions 500 meters deep inside Thai territory, and U.S. and Thai forces are conducting a large joint military exercise code-named "Cobra Gold '86" not far from the Thai-Cambodian border, the United States and Thailand have openly held a new round of talks in Bangkok on the establishment of a U.S. arms stockpile in Thailand. These new talks were aimed at concretizing what had been agreed upon between the two sides during U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger's visit to Thailand early in April.

Commenting on this, the Japanese paper SANKEI SHIMBUN pointed out: The United States is formulting a long-term strategy aimed at turning Thailand into a prop of the Pentagon in this region. It can be clarified further that the establishment of U.S. arms stockpile in Thailand serves no other purpose than to directly oppose and sabotage the revolution in the three Indochinese countries and, at the same time, to realize the new U.S. doctrine on Asia and the Pacific which is aimed at opposing the Soviet Union and the socialist community and undermining the national independence movement of nations in Southeast Asia as well as in Asia and the Pacific as a whole.

A dangerous design of the United States was revealed during the recent trip to Asia and the Pacific by U.S. Secretary of State Shultz. It is to turn Southeast Asia into an arsenal of nuclear and other mass-killing weapons. The Pentagon deems that its new nuclear bases in Southeast Asia, coupled with the existing ones in Japan and South Korea, would form a gigantic network of nuclear bases in Asia and the Pacific aiming at the Soviet Union and other socialist countries from the east and southeast.

Nevertheless, peoples in the region, fully aware of this dangerous design of the United States, have put up a firm resistance. Many countries have expressed their attitude. They support continued Soviet-U.S. dialogue and continued maintenance of the SALT II treaty. The Indonesian foreign minister stressed that no nuclear umbrella is needed whatsoever. Speaking at a seminar on foreign policy held recently by the Indonesian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja again declared that Indonesia supports the initiative of the countries in the South Pacific on setting up a nuclear zone weapons free in this region. He disclosed that Indonesia is planning a conference on the establishment of a zone free of nuclear weapons in Southeast Asia.

Meanwhile, mass organizations in the central islands of the Philippines have recently declared their islands to be a zone nuclear weapons free zone, prohibited the use of these islands as sites for foreign military bases and arsenals, and banned the landing there of aircraft carrying nuclear weapons. In the view of public opinion, this new initiative by the people of the Philippines shows that they are protesting against the United States because the Washington administration is trying to steer their country into the orbit of the adventurous U.S. policy in Asia and the Pacific.

Our people and the peoples of the other Indochinese countries -- with their goodwill for peace and constructive attitude -- are resolved to struggle against aggressive and reactionary forces for a peaceful, stable, and cooperative Southeast Asia; and thus, they are joining the broad struggle of nations for peace in every region as well as in the world.

Recently at the United Nations, the Special Committee on the World Disarmament Conference consisting of delegates from 40 member countries held its second meeting in 1986 to discuss the possibility for holding the World Disarmament Conference. It is also necessary to recall that at present, warlike forces led by the United States have created a very tense and complicated situation in the world. Washington and its NATO allies have been plunging ever more deeply into the arms race, intensively building up a dense network of military bases together with a gigantic military force equipped with modern war means in many regions. Following the SDI -- "star wars" -- Program of the United States, a number of NATO member countries have put forward the EDI -- European Defense Initiative -- program, making the arms race in outer space even more dangerous and extremely costly. On 17 July, the Pentagon conducted another underground nuclear test with a 150-kiloton blast in Nevada; and on 19 July, U.S. President Reagan brazenly defended the SDI program.

Today, everyone can see that the arms race initiated by the United States and other imperialist countries not only threatens the survival of mankind, but it is also one of the chief causes leading to serious socioeconomic difficulties in many countries, especially the developing ones. World disarmament is an imperative demand of mankind and an issue relating to the destiny of all nations. As part of this issue, nuclear disarmament is the most urgent problem. It is universally known that the Soviet Union has set a shining example in this area by putting forward a series of important peace initiatives, including the overall program to totally eliminate nuclear weapons by the year 2000; and the Soviet Union has taken the first step by unilaterally suspending all nuclear tests since August 1985 until now.

Last June, the Warsaw Pact member countries also offered to the NATO and European countries realistic proposals for a disarmament process in this strategically important region. The peace initiatives and proposals of the Soviet Union and other socialist countries clearly reflect the lofty sense of responsibility displayed by the socialist community toward the fate of mankind; and, at the same time, they lay bare the negative and blindly adventurous attitude of the United States and other reactionary imperialist forces. They also serve as reminders urging all nations to persist in the struggle for peace and independence of their own as well as in each region and throughout the world.

CPV CENTRAL COMMITTEE GREETS KPRP ON ANNIVERSARY

BK261608 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 28 Jun 86 pp 1, 4

[Text] On 26 June, the CPV Central Committee sent a congratulatory message to the KPRP Central Committee. The message says:

Dear comrades,

On the occasion of the 35th founding anniversary of the KPRP and on behalf of the CPV, the Vietnamese working class and people, we convey to the KPRP Central Committee and through you, to all fraternal Cambodian party members, the working class, and people our most profound and warmest greetings.

Over the past 35 years, promoting the national tradition of undaunted and indomitable struggle and the glorious revolutionary cause of the Indochinese Communist Party founded by President Ho Chi Minh, the KPRP has successfully led the Cambodian people through a protracted struggle full of difficulties and hardship to win great victories over the colonialist and imperialist aggressors and overthrow the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary regime, henchmen of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists. [paragraph continues]

These victories have ushered in a new era of total independence and genuine freedom for Cambodia which is embarking on a period of transition to socialism.

Over the past 7 years since the historic victory on 7 January, 1979 and implementing resolutions of the Fourth and Fifth KPRP Congresses, the Cambodian people who are genuine patriots, diligent, and brave have carried out tasks on reviving the country and scored inspiring achievements in national construction and defense. The Cambodian economy is being restored; the cultural, education, and public health fields have been developed; the people's daily life has gradually been stabilized; and political security and social order and safety are maintained. The people's administration at various echelons is being firmly consolidated. The young people's republic, full of vitality, is developing and strengthening vigorously its superiority and prestige at home and aboard. With a foreign policy of peace, independence, friendship, and cooperation, the Cambodian revolution has won more and more sympathy and support from revolutionary and progressive forces all over the world. The international prestige and position of the PRK are rising.

These glorious achievements and especially the 1984-85 dry season victories have continuously enhanced the position and strength of the Cambodian revolution and constituted a great contribution to the common struggle for peace and stability in Southeast Asia as well as for peace, national independence, democracy, and socialism the world over.

Dear comrades,

The militant solidarity and the pure, faithful fraternal friendship between our two parties and peoples have been tested and forged through the protracted revolutionary struggle in each country which are based on the principles of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism. This solidarity and friendship has consistently been strengthened and is invincible to all enemies. The special relationship between Vietnam and Cambodia and between Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos is a decisive factor guaranteeing all victories of the revolution in each country as well as of the common cause of the three countries on the Indochinese peninsula.

Loyal to President Ho Chi Minh's testament, the party and people of Vietnam pledge to do their best to fulfil their lofty internationalist duty toward the fraternal Cambodian people's revolution, strive to strengthen the special relationship between Vietnam and Cambodia as well as between Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos in order to make it evergreen and last forever for the vitality of each country and for the common interests of our three countries.

The Vietnamese party and people will forever remember the great and valuable support and assistance, full of fraternal sentiment, provided by the fraternal Cambodian party and people to the Vietnamese people's revolutionary cause.

We wish the KPRP and the fraternal Cambodia people new and ever greater achievements in their undaunted struggle to protect the revolutionary gains and in their socialist revolution.

Long live the glorious KPRP!

Let the militant solidarity, the great friendship, and the comprehensive cooperation between the Vietnamese-Cambodian parties and peoples last forever!

Long live invincible Marxism-Leninism!

On this occasion, Phan Trong Tue, chairman of the Vietnam-Cambodian Friendship Association also extended greetings to his Cambodian counterpart, Chan Ven.

LEADERS' ACTIVITIES ON WAR INVALIDS DAY REPORTED

PW270757 Hanoi VNA in English 0723 GMT 27 Jul 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA July 27 -- President of the Council of State Truong Chinh has sent a letter to war invalids, sick soldiers and families of fallen combatants on the occasion of the War Invalids' Day (July 27).

In his letter, President Truong Chinh called on the entire people and army to implement the party and state's policies toward the war invalids, sick soldiers and families of fallen combatants to give them preferential treatment in the economic, cultural and social life.

On this occasion, General Van Tien Dung, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committe and minister of defence, has visited the tailoring enterprise of war invalids in Ha Nam Ninh Province. Nguyen Van Linh, Politburo member and secretary of the CPV CC, has toured the July 27 engineering enterprise of disabled soldiers in Ho Chi Minh City.

Today, the dailies NHAN DAN and QUAN DOI NHAN DAN run editorials marking this anniversary and paying homage to all those who have worked with self-abnegation for and even sacrificed their lives to the cause of national defence and socialist construction.

DELEGATION TO OPPOSE U.S. SUBSIDIZED WHEAT SALES

BK300214 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0130 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Excerpt] An all-party parliamentary delegation leaves Australia later today for Washington where they will lobby against American plans to sell subsidized wheat to the Soviet Union and China. Australia has already protested to the United States over the plan which targets wheat subsidies at Australia's two largest wheat markets. The government has said the move threatens up to $1,000 million worth of Australian wheat sales -- or about U.S. $610 million.

A Radio Australia Canberra reporter says the delegation, which is being led by the minister for primary industry, Mr Kerin, leaves with a united front after agreement from one member not to raise the issue of United States bases in Australia. The member, Senator Macklin, of the Australian Democrats, said earlier this week that the joint bases were the only bargaining advantage Australia had in its negotiations with American officials. However, he has now agreed not to raise the issue publicly during the visit. [passage omitted]

NUCLEAR MONITORING SITE PLANNED FOR CANBERRA

[Text] Australia is expected to have its own monitoring capacity for nuclear tests by the end of the year. The monitoring center is being installed at the Bureau of Mineral Resources in Canberra as part of the federal government's disarmament program. It will give Australia the capacity to exchange information on both nuclear explosions and earthquakes with other independent monitoring centers in Sweden, Norway, and Canada.

The head of the Australian Seismological Center, Dr (David Denniman), says the center will be able to monitor French nuclear tests at Mururoa Atoll in the South Pacific as well as nuclear tests in the Soviet Union, China, and India. It is hoped the center will begin operating in September in time for an international symposium on nuclear issues organized by the Foreign Affairs Department.

GOVERNMENT MOVES TO SUPPORT RECOVERY OF DOLLAR

[Text] The Australian dollar has steadied on overseas money markets closing at 61.5 U.S. cents in New York -- down slightly, but stable compared to yesterday's wild swings. The plunge of the Australian dollar on world markets which at one stage saw it trading as low as 57 U.S. cents prompted the federal government to announce a package of measures aimed at supporting the dollar's recovery.

Under the changes, there will be a relaxation of foreign investment restrictions in the manufacturing and real estate sectors. The government also decided to abolish certain taxes that affect investment by foreign residents in Australia.

MINISTER URGES GREATER U.S. PRESENCE IN PACIFIC

BK290922 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0800 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Text] Papua New Guinea's primary industry minister, Sir Iambakey Okuk, says he wants a greater American presence in the Pacific through fishing interests to prevent Soviet expanison in the area.

Sir Iambakey said the Americans would counter communist influence and threat. He said these were being experienced with links already established between Vanuatu, Kiribati, and Russian fishing interests.

Sir Iambakey said such links would be utilized by Soviet fishing boats to transport weapons from Russia and Cuba to OPM [Free Papua Movement] separatist rebels in Indonesia's province of Irian Jaya.

MALAYSIA

COMMENTARY LAUDS REULING PARTY'S POLICIES

BK281135 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] The various political parties that are contesting for seats in the Malaysian general election for both parliament and 11 state legislative assemblies have published their manifestos. Particular attention naturally will be paid to the manifesto of the ruling party coalition, the Barisan Nasional, and those of the principal opposition parties, such as the Democratic Action Party [DAP] and the Pan Malaysian Islamic Party [PAS].

The prime minister, Dr Mahathir Mohamed, in his capacity as president of the Barisan Nasional, or National Front, has issued an open letter to the people of Malaysia. It is written in clear and simple language and expresses several perceptions and frank ideas that the prime minister feels ought to be taken into account seriously by the voters. If read together with the manifesto, it is a blueprint for stability and continuity of policy against the backdrop of the world economic recession and the Malaysian internal political situation.

The ruling party's manifesto is a call for national unity and an opposition to fanaticism and extremism of any sort. It draws attention to the dire consequences of intolerance and the deliberate aggravation of communal feelings. At the same time, the people have been reminded of the success of many projects aimed at promoting higher living standards and enhancing the quality of life. The Malaysian war on poverty, with specific attention to the rural areas, began after the achievement of independence.

The Barisan Nasional manifesto reiterates this commitment to poverty eradication, not only in rural areas but also in the urban sector and in the plantation and land development schemes. The commitment to settle the unemployment problem has also been underscored in the National Front's manifesto. The policy statement is clear that all illegal immigrants will be deported. The desperate length to which such illegal immigrants will go to gain a foothold in this country is a proof of Malaysia's affluence and political stability. The finance minister, Encik Daim Zainuddin has also stressed this factor. The opposition DAP is aware that the Barisan Nasional, or National Front, will be returned to power. Therefore, its own objective, that has been stated very clearly, is to secure a larger number of seats in this election so as to prevent the ruling party from obtaining a two-thirds/majority parliament. However, as the prime minister says a government can function with a simple majority. It is just that since independence, the ruling National Front has always enjoyed a two-thirds majority here.

The PAS has been talking about the establishment of an Islamic state. The fact is that Islam is the official religion of Malaysia while all faiths are also freely practiced. All right-thinking Malaysians will reject any party or candidate who uses religion as a root to political power. In the words of the National Front's manifesto, freedom of worship is guaranteed, but any attempt to exploit religion and to inflame passion to turn men against men must be condemned.

The Malaysian voters are more sophisticated today than the electorate who is 1955 voted in our first general election. There is no doubt that the majority of seats will be won by the National Front, thus assuring stability.

MALAYSIAN UNITED ISLAMIC FRONT MANIFESTO

BK290052 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Malaysia in Malay 1230 GMT 27 Jul 86

[First part of "9 June 1986 Manifesto" by the newly established Malaysian United Islamic Front unveiling the objectives of its struggle: "To expose all the evil deeds done by the UMNO ruling clique, and to put forward priorities to protect the interests of the Muslims"]

[Text] 1 Shawwal 1406 Hegira or 9 June 1986 was the Id al-Fitr day -- a highly revered and auspicious day for all Muslims all over the world. In conjunction with this happy day, the Malaysian United Islamic Front was formally established. This is important and good news to the people throughout the country in general and to Muslims in particular. We thank God the Almighty and the most merciful for His blessing in making it possible for the Malaysian United Islamic Front to be established. We have full confidence that the Malaysian United Islamic Front will be able to cope with all ups and downs and continue to expand with the support of a wide circle of people in general and of Muslims in particular. It will also contribute positively in its struggle for the interests of the country, race, and religion. As a newly established force, the Malaysian United Islamic Front will intensify efforts begun by the preceding organizations which went forward to seek justice under the banner of Islam even though a blood bath was unavoidable. The front will be loyal in making its objectives a reality -- that is, to attain the respectable Islamic religious tradition and to spread the teachings of Islam, uphold the purity of Islam, fan the spirit of patriotism; to unite all Muslims and make them participate actively in efforts to create a sense of loyalty to the country, race and, religion; to expand as well as draw closer friendship with political parties, groups, and individuals that love the country, democracy, and peace; to uphold justice, freedom, and human rights; to oppose tyranny and set up a government which protects the interests of the people and is blessed by God.

Malaysia is a multiracial country with various religions and cultures. Its people are composed of the Malays, Chinese, Indians, Kadazans, Ibans, and others. Among these races, the Malays who are Muslims make up more than half of the total population in the country. Similar to other races in the country, the Malays also belong to the oppressed group although they have contributed to the prosperity of the country along with other races. The Malays have also participated in community development programs in the country but they still live in misery and the wealth of the country is not for them to enjoy. The majority of poor Malays who practice the Islamic religion have a respectable tradition in struggling against foreign forces. It is taboo for them to bow to other powers and they hold high the banner of patriotism. They are known to have struggled against foreign aggressors, such as the Portguese, Dutch, British, and the Japanese. In the struggle against these foreign aggressors, the Malays sacrified a great deal and their heroic deeds are unforgettable.

Since the achievement of independence, the great number of the poor Malay people continued to carry out a brave struggle against imperialism and the ruling groups which went against God's will in oppressing and being cruel to the people. In recent years, the Malays, who are becoming more conscious of the fact that they are being oppressed, continue to expose and oppose the hypocrisy of the ruling group which claims to rule the country in accordance with Islamic teachings when it does not. This struggle has come to a new phase and is threatening the treacherous government of the ruling group.

The above said facts tell us that the people of the Malay race - which has a respectable tradition of struggle - are a force which cannot be defeated by others. So long as they unite closely and struggle for something blessed by God until the end, eventually, victory will be theirs. However, there is a handful of those in the ruling group who belong to the upper class that reject the will of God. In Sura (?al Qad), sentence 26, God commands: "You should not follow all your heart's desires because some desires may lead you away from the right path". No one in the ruling groups practises the mentioned command of God, neither that of the Abdul Rahman era nor anyone else up to the present one. As a matter of fact, they promote the antipopular and anti-democracy policies inherited from the British so as to protect their own interests. They rob the natural resources, oppress the people, and continue to play their charades. They make use of religious values to secure their governments, and carry out various evil deeds contradicting the teachings of Islam. Ever since independence, the livelihood of the majority of Malays who are Muslims continues to be neglected and for that matter, they live under cruel oppression and exploitation of the ruling group. Life becomes more miserable, so to speak. All the while, the ruling group has made verbal promises to the people in our country, particularly the Malays. It seems that it promises to eradicate poverty among the Malays, to narrow the wide gap between the rich and the poor. It also promises to raise the standard of living of the Bumiputera [indigenous people], to protect the fate of the Malays, and so on. However, all these are empty promises and the people have been cheated.

In fact, the so-called special Malay rights loudly echoed by the ruling group have not brought about any benefits to the poor Malays. On the contrary, many UMNO [United Malays National Organization] big shots have become millionaires and billionaires by plundering national resources under the slogan of preserving the special Malay rights, while the Malay working masses, particularly rural Muslims, are living in misery. According to statistics issued by the government in 1985, there were more than 4,000 Malay villages [words indistinct] in the peninsula. These undeveloped villages are facing many problems such as declining agricultural production, massive urbanization among the youths, abandonment of agricultural lands, lack of proper medical services, inability of children to continue their education, and so on. The monthly income of every village family is far below 330 ringgit which the government has set as the poverty line. The majority of the villages are scattered in Kelantan, Terengganu, Kedah, and Perlis. These facts prove that the ruling group is hypocritical. Almighty God will definitely condemn its hypocrisy.

For years, the UMNO ruling group has been heavily dependent on and indebted to the foreign monopoly capitalists. At home, it is stepping up activities to plunder national resources. As a result, the country and people are burdened with heavy debts. The national economy is facing difficulties. Inflation is soaring. The prices of goods are rising. The prices of agricultural products are declining. Taxes are increasing. Many factories have laid off workers or lowered their wages. Many factories and mines have gone into bankruptcy. All this has caused the people to live miserably.

In his Hadith, Prophet Mohammed stressed the need to oppose corruption. The agencies and corporations controlled by the UMNO ruling group, echoing the clean slogan, are in fact plagued with corruption. The corruption scandal in Bank Bumiputera and its branch involving billions of ringgit is a striking example. This brought about heavy losses to the country and people. Some leaders are even involved in the scandal. However, the UMNO ruling group has been making every effort to conceal the true facts surrounding the scandal. The group is not ashamed of its own crimes which have desecrated Islamic values.

The UNMO ruling group has claimed that it will promote Islam and apply Islamic values in the country. However, it continues to issue permits to open casinos, bars, night clubs, and massage parlors; to hold half-naked beauty queen contests; and to import indecent films and magazines. Its crimes are designed to preserve its own interests, corrupt Islamic morality, and undermine patriotism. As a result our youth are living in illusion.

The UMNO ruling group always boasts that it will strengthen Muslim unity. But, it is in fact dividing the Muslims. The group has divided Malays into UMNO Malays and Muslims on the one hand and non-UMNO Malays and Muslims on the other. It has misused its power to beat PAS [Pan Malaysian Islamic Party] and persecute PAS supporters and Muslims who do not support it. It has slandered these people as religious fanatics and extremists, arrested and imprisoned them, and even used force to oppress them. The bloody oppression of inhabitants of Kampung Memali is indeed a striking example. In fact, the present disunity between the Malays and Muslims in the country has stemmed from the deeds of the ruling group. In Sura Baqara, verse 216, Allah says: "Fighting is prescribed for you, and ye dislike it." In recent years, the Muslims have been fighting the evil ruling group to defend Islamic dignity and free themselves from suffering. Faced with this struggle, the exteemely fearful UMNO ruling group has played various tricks to eliminate the struggle of Muslims. For example, it has arrested a number of PAS leaders and members under the Internal Security Act; prevented and barred the opposition party from holding several assemblies and other activites; expelled settlers from the Federal Land Development Authority estates who do not support it for various reason; banned newspapers and magazines that uphold truth and justice such as MIMBAR SOSIALIS, NADI INSAN, AKHBAR WATAN, and so on; and murdered Uztaz Ibrahim Mahmud and 13 supporters fighting to defend Islam. Despite the cruel persecution and bloody oppression of the ruling group, the Muslims are persevering in their struggle.

These facts show that the Muslims in our country are fighting the cruel and anti-Islamic ruling group. Islamic glory will not prevail and the people in general and the Muslims in particular will not live peacefully and happily so long as the group controls national power. This being the case, the Muslims in our country must close ranks to totally eliminate the roots of poverty and sufferings.

SOVIET EMBASSY QUOTES GORBACHEV ON BASES REMOVAL

[Text] The Soviet Union is prepared to expand economic, scientific and cultural cooperation with the Philippines and other developing countries. More on this from Marilou Linggad.

[Begin Linggad recording] This statement by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev was announced by the Soviet Embassy in Manila. According to Gorbachev, his proposal to promote closer ties with countries in the Asia-Pacific region aims to maintain the region's peace and security. He revealed that nuclear war is not simply an issue of contention between the USSR and the United States, but it could also lead to [word indistinct] disaster. The Soviet Union wished to expand bilateral relations with countries in the Asia-Pacific region including China in order to achieve international seucirty and regional cooperation.

On the Philippines-U.S. bases question, Gorbachev promised to reduce the Soviet fleet in the Pacific if the United States removes its military bases from the Philippines. [end recording]

TALKS ON DISMISSED BASE EMPLOYEES 'DEADLOCKED'

HK290537 Manila THE MANILA CHRONICLE in English 27 Jul 86 p 3

[By Romina de Los Reyes]

[Text] Negotiations between Philippine and American representatives on the case of 42 Filipino Subic Naval Base workers dismissed last June were deadlocked Friday after the U.S. panel refused to present evidence justifying the dismissals.

Deputy Labor Minister Pablito Sanidad, Chairman of the Philippine panel in the RP-U.S. Joint Labor Committee (JLC), said the U.S. position was "unfair, arbitrary, whimsical and oppressive."

He also said U.S. allegations about the workers' case were "bare, empty, unsubstantial, and unacceptable to the Philippine panel."

The U.S. panel said Friday the 42 workers were dismissed because they were "no longer consistent with the U.S.' military requirements."

U.S. authorities had accused the workers of involvement with groups "ideologically committed" to the dismantling of U.S. bases in the Philippines and of illegally barricading entrances to Subic during a strike last March. But they did not substantiate those charges.

The U.S. panel Friday still refused to present any evidence to support the U.S. authorities' claims. It also declared that it considered all 42 employees as separated without cause.

U.S. base authorities had previously classified 38 workers as separated "without cause" and four as separated "for cause."

Sanidad said the U.S. panel hoped to avoid presenting evidence by lumping all 42 together as separated without cause.

He said he would consult Labor Minister Augusto Sanchez on possible steps the ministry may take since the Bases Labor Agreement offered no remedies for deadlocks.

Manuel Torres, vice president of the 22,000-strong Federation of Filipino Civilian Employees Association and one of those dismissed, said the U.S. panel was now invoking international law which supposedly gives U.S. authorities the prerogative to dismiss workers they no longer needed.

Torres said the dismissed workers were appealing to the Philippine government, to President Aquino in particular, to help them.

He said their case had a bearing on the security of tenure of the rest of the 22,000 Filipino U.S. base workers. If U.S. authorities could dismiss base workers "no longer consistent with military requirements," their collective bargaining agreement would be useless and no base worker would be secure in his job, Torres said.

He said the dismissed workers had been barred from not only U.S. military facilities but from all Philippine bases on orders of AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] Chief Fidel Ramos.

Torres said the government should do something about the "unfair treatment" of Filipino workers by Americans.

Sanidad said the U.S. Government had not yet received the diplomatic note the Philippine Government had sent on the renegotiation of the 1968 Bases labor Agreement.

He said, however, a panel composed of representatives of the labor, foreign affairs, and defense ministries would soon meet to draft the Philippines' position paper.

He said a major point to be raised would be American recognition of Philippine sovereignty.

ENVOY TO U.S. SAYS AID NOT TIED TO BASES ISSUE

[Text] Ambassador to the United States Emmanuel Pelaez yesterday [29 Jul] told the Constitutional Commission the U.S. Government does not link the mutual security treaty and the bases agreement with the Philippines to the aid program for national economic recovery or to the forthcoming state visit of President Aquino. Pelaez said both the U.S. and the Philippine Governments appear to rank economic recovery and political stability as the highest priority in mutual cooperation.

(Luna) said that even though they live in the United States, Filipinos in the movement have not forgotten the needs of their fellowmen.

MARCOS LOYALISTS WELCOME REBELLION CHARGES

[Text] Manila, July 29 (AFP) -- Allies of deposed President Ferdinand Marcos who were allegedly involved in an abortive coup on July 6 Tuesday vowed to fight any rebellion charges. Marcos spokesman Oliver Lozano said in an interview on state-run television: "We are the victims of character assassination and black propaganda through trial by publicity. This formal complaint will enable us to put up our own defences." Arturo Tolentino and 25 other civilians accused of plotting the coup met in private here Tuesday to map out their plans. They may meet again on Thursday, an aide to Mr Tolentino told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE.

Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales on Monday sent a police report, recommending rebellion charges be filed against Mr Tolentino and 40 other coup suspects, to the Manila prosecutor's office. They have been accused of leading a coup bid in which Mr Tolentino -- backed by 300 troops and crowds of civilians -- seized the Manila Hotel and proclaimed himself acting president on behalf of Mr Marcos.

Under Philippine law, the state prosecutor allows suspects 10 days to answer charges filed against them, then initiates court action following a preliminary investigation to determine if there is enough evidence to merit a trial. President Corazon Aquino's Executive Secretary, Joker Arroyo, said Tuesday that charges would be dropped against the 15 military men named in the ministry report who pledged allegiance to the constitution on Monday. He told reporters that it would be up to Mr Gonzalez to decide if Mr Marcos should be included in the charge sheet. Mr Marcos is now living in exile in Hawaii following a popular uprising in February which swept Mrs Aquino to power. Mr Arroyo described as "poetic justice" the fact that Marcos supporters will now be prosecuted under a Marcos decree which made rebellion punishable by death.

No Basis For Prosecution

[Text] Cebu City -- Former Senator Rene Espina, secretary general of the United Nationalist Democratic Organization (Unido), said last Saturday that Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales will find it difficult to prosecute former MP Arturo Tolentino for rebellion for lack of basis.

He said Tolentino took his oath as vice-president and then as acting president verbally before Justice Serafin Cuevas, a resigned member of the Supreme Court, at the Manila Hotel on July 6.

He said when Cuevas swore in Tolentino, he was no longer authorized to administer the oath.

He also revealed Tolentino did not sign his oath and neither was it signed by Cuevas.

In short, Espina said, Tolentino's oathtaking was not valid so there was no basis for prosecution under the crime of rebellion.

In an interview with Cebu newsmen, Espina also said:

President Corazon C. Aquino should resign if the new constitution that will give her a six year term without reelection is rejected by the people in a plebiscite.

Proposals to revert to the Freedom Constitution if the new constitution is rejected "is foolishness." What is proper, he added, is to return to the 1935 Constitution.

Disunity in the Aquino Cabinet will escalate unless the President starts wielding powers to discipline members of her official family.

Justice Minister on Rebellion Charges

[Excerpts] Rebellion charges were filed yesteday against former member of parliament Arturo Tolentino and 40 others trying to set up a new government last July 6. [passage omitted]

Aside from Tolentino, among those charged were former Batasan speaker Nicanor Yniguez, former MPS Rafael Recto, Manuel Collantes, Salvador Britanico, Edelberto del Valle and former Assemblyman Gerry Espina.

Military officers who were also named respondents were Maj Gen Prospero Olivas, Brig Gen Jose Ma. Zumel, Brig Gen Jaime Echeverria, Brig Gen Antonio Palafox and Col Rolando Abadilla.

Of the 41 charged, 20 are civilians, including some movie personalities. The remaining 15 are military men.

Gonzales said he had informed Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces chief of staff Gen Fidel V. Ramos about the inclusion of the 15 military men in the rebellilon raps.

The justice minister requested Enrile and Ramos to furnish the justice ministry with the names of those charged who had taken their oath of allegiance to the government and the Freedom Constitution yesterday so their names can be dropped from the list of respondents.

President Aquino had earlier said participants in the failed coup who pledge their allegiance to the Freedom Constitution promulgated by her government will be spared from rebellion charges.

The filing of rebellion raps yesterday was prompted by the apparent collapse last Friday of the negotiations between Gonzales and Tolentino.

Gonzales said he had waited for Tolentino to reply on the offer of the government which consisted of four points in exchange for clemency:

A pledge of allegiance to the Republic of the Philippines and continued fidelity to it.
Recognition of the existence of the present government under the Freedom Constitution.
Renunciation of the use of force and violence for the overthrow of the government.
A pledge not to allow themselves or their names to be used directly or indirectly for the violent overthrow of the government.

The justice minister said up to last Friday, he had waited for Tolentino's word but it did not come.

The government had to take its move, Gonzales said. "I think the patience of the government is not really limitless," he said.

"The fact that he (Tolentino) did not call up and send the documents promised, I consider it as slamming the door to further talks," Gonzales said.

Gonzales said Tolentino appeared to be amenable to the first, third and fourth conditions, but the second condition seems to be unacceptable to Tolentino and the Marcos loyalists to whom he consults.

Gonzales said the second condition does not even require Tolentino and his group to take their oath of loyalty to the Freedom Constitution.

It is just a recognition of the fact that the present government exists and that it operates under the Freedom Constitution, Gonzales said.

The justice minister added that the government's last offer to Tolentino was to remove the phrase "under the Freedom Constitution." But it appeared that it was still unacceptable to Tolentino and his group.

"The government have leaned over backwards so many times," Gonzales said.

The justice minister said he had gone over the 14 previous amnesty proclamations and he found out that there is a uniform condition: an oath of allegiance to the government is always required.

The requirement is "understandable," Gonzales said, because rebellion is a political offense. Even former Senator Jose W. Diokno, during the Marcos regime, was required to pledge his allegiance to the Constitution, although it did not specify which Constitution.

Gonzales said other respondents may be included in the rebellion charges by the fiscal during the preliminary investigation.

The fiscal will determine if there is prima facie evidence against the respondents to warrant filing of the charges in court.

The arrest of the suspects will come only when they are charged in court. Rebellion charges being a capital offense, the accused cannot avail themselves of bail for temporary release.

The others accused are Chito Lucero, former Manila City councilor; former immigration commissioner Edmundo Reyes; former Manila vice-mayor Felicisimo Cabigao; former Rizal governor Isidor Rodriguez; former San Juan mayor Joseph Estrada; former Caloocan City mayor Macorio Asistio; Gregorio Licaros; former Quezon City mayor Adelina Rodriguez; former Batangas provincial fiscal Felizardo Lota; lawyer Oliver Lozano, Sonia Valenzuela; actor Carlos Salazar; actress Annie Ferrer; actress Alona Alegre; actress Elizabeth Oropesa; actress Rio Diaz; actor Mohamad Faisal; actor Weng-Weng; and actress Amalia Fuentes.

The other military men accused are Col. Dictador Alquiza, Lt. Col. Reynaldo Cabawatan, Lt. Pablo Cardenas, Navy Capt. Bernardo Patinio, a certain Sgt. de la Cruz, Msgt. Casilan, T/Sgt. Bajo, T/Sgt. Malabanan, petty officer I Punzalan and petty officer I Genatin.

UNKNOWN GUNMEN KILL SENIOR POLICE OFFICER

[Text] Manila, July 29 (AFP) -- Gunmen killed a senior police officer in an ambush near the presidential palace here Tuesday, police said. They shot a Major Jaime Victorino, chief of the theft and robbery division of the Manila Police Force, while he was aboard a staff car, police Sergeant Julian Pascasio told ACENCE FRANCE-PRESSE. The major's car was stopped at a red light at the foot of Nagtahan Bridge some 500 metres (yards) from the Malacanang Presidential Palace when two men drew up in a second vehicle and opened fire with an M-14 rifle, police said.

Maj. Victorino was rushed to the palace hospital, but was dead on arrival, other police officials said. Police were investigationg the possibility that the killing was related to an incident last year, when a policemen under Mr. Victorino's jurisdiction shot dead a fellow officer in a personal dispute. They said they planned to question the dead officer's brother. The police would not comment on whether the attack might have been aimed at President Corazon Aquino.

A Swiss Embassy spokesman (Hans Gerard) said that it is the policy of his government not to pay ransom. He added that should family and friends of Hans Kuenzli decide to pay the amount demanded by the kidnappers, then it is a personal measure and has nothing to do with the Swiss Government. The Filipina girlfriend of Kuenzli released last Friday revealed that the kidnappers demanded two million pesos for Kuenzli's release.

MONSOD DISCUSSES IMF BUDGET DEFICIT AGREEMENT

[Text] The Philippine Government and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) have reached an agreement to peg the 1986 budget deficit "to a more realistic level" that the Philippine economy badly required in reflating the economy.

Economic Planning Minister Solita Monsod said the agreement was reached after the government convinced the IMF that such deficit level had to be incurred to attain a projected growth of 1.5 percent in the economy.

Monsod did not provide the exact deficit figure but it was assumed that the level would be around P27 billion as earlier projected before the start of the negotiations with the IMF. Monsod said the Government turned down IMF requests to trim the P14-billion increase in maintenance and operating expenses and the P9-billion additional capital expenditures. She further said that there was also no way for government to cut the deficit of government financial institutions.

"The only way by which the deficit can be cut is for the government to stop payments of interests on foreign loans," she reportedly told IMF officials.

Monsod said that with the inflation and the level of international reserves required by the economy, debt services should be subservient to growth.

Monsod also said that government has to relax reserves imposition on commercial banks from the present level of 22 percent of total deposits to increase money supply.

The government is planning to finance the budget deficit from foreign loans and monetary expansionary measures. In doing so, however, the government has to assure that interest rates will not move up from their present low levels.

Monsod said that for economic activity to perk up, interest rates must be brought down further while inflation had to be pushed up after posting negative rates from April to June on a month-to-month basis.

NEW RESERVE CEILING 'COMPLETE SHIFT IN FORMULA'

[Text] The Philippines and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) have reached agreement on a P45-million reserve money ceiling for this year. Meanwhile, talks for a new standby credit agreement are expected to be completed this week.

Monetary sources said yesterday the setting of a much higher reserve money ceiling, about 20 percent over the P37.4-million limit set for end-March, marked a complete shift in formula which the Fund would likely enter into under the new agreement.

The reserve money, consisting of new currency releases of the Central Bank [CB], is a prime measure of liquidity in the financial system which, under the previous standby agreement, was closely monitored by the IMF.

The IMF, under the previous standby agreement, forced the government to meet reduced targets in order to check runaway inflation that characterized the period between 1984 and 1985.

It was this tight control on liquidity which sharply increased interest rates, constricted business, and caused the less resilient firms to close down and lay off thousands of workers.

The CB then complied with reserve money ceilings through the issuance of high-yield government securities that eventually caused the unusually high interest rates regime during that period. [sentence as published]

Sources said the relaxation of the ceiling in the ongoing negotiations reflects clearly the Fund's agreement with the Philippine negotiating team to adopt this year and next an expansionary program.

Based on government data submitted to the IMF, the Philippines is targeted to grow by 1.4 percent this year in terms of gross national product (the sum total of all goods and services produced) compared to a GNP decline last year of 3.95 percent.

All however, preliminary estimates on the overall economic activity this year showed a decline of 3 percent. This means that the government will have to reflate the economy for the rest of this year to effect at least a 6 percent growth for the second half of 1986 just to be able to meet its growth target.

Data on the movements in reserve money from the CB showed small but steady increases since last month. The latest data, covering the June 30 to July 3 week, showed reserve money at P38,860 million compared to the week ago level of P38,860 million and the month ago level of P38,208 million.

A monetary official confirmed to BUSINESS DAY the new reserve money ceiling but indicated that reserve money does not have to rise to that level since the government would still like to keep inflation down.

"We certainly do not want on our hands again runaway inflation just because a higher ceiling has been set." the official said, explaining that all factors will have to be balanced.

Monetary sources however are optimistic the higher liquidity in the financial system will not result in a resurgence of inflation due to two factors. First, inflation for the first semester has remained very low, a little over 2 percent, with the June 1985 to June 1986 data showing zero inflation. Second, excess capacity in domestic industries would have to be filled up first before prices could move upward.

Sources said the government is still the only moving force in the domestic economy as the private sector has remained timid and will only start real production if a perceptive rise in demand is noted.

The government submitted an inflation rate of 6 percent to 8 percent to the IMF which means that inflation, as a result also of the higher reserve money, could even rise to an 11 percent average for the six-month period for an overall year-to-year average of 6 percent to 8 percent.

Massive pump priming of the market by the government has been agreed upon for the remainder of this year which will involve substantial expenditures in the rural sector and in support of laborintensive industries.

For the second half of this year, government pump priming will come from an outlay of P23 billion. For capital expenditures, a total of P9 billion has been set aside while for while for maintenance and operating expenses a total of P14 billion has been budgeted.

The IMF and the Philippine negotiating team will meet today to finalize the draft letter of intent, tie the remaining loose ends and hopefully come up with the final draft by the end of this week.

TRADE MINISTER ON IMPORT LIBERALIZATION POLICY

[By Julie C. Del Castillo]

[Excerpt] The government will take retaliatory measures against countries restricting markets for Philippine exports once the import liberalization program is fully in place, Trade and Industry Minister Jose S. Concepcion Jr. said yesterday.

Concepcion said the government is set to deregulate by next week 71 import items, mostly of raw materials, in compliance with a World Bank-International Monetary Fund prescription for completion within this year of the import liberalization program.

However, he said that despite World Bank-IMF pressure, the Ministry of Trade and Industry was still hopeful that it could take steps to protect local industry from adverse effects of import decontrol.

He said the ministry had not given up efforts to convince the WB-IMF to postpone liberalization for at least 40 "most sensitive" import items.

Concepcion said the MTI has "made it clear (to the WB-IMF that it would) take unilateral action" against countries that restrict markets for Philippine products.

He said such action woiuld be necessary to balance trade opportunities between the Philippines and its trading partners, particularly industrialized countries from which the Philippines buys much of its raw material requirements but which do not import much from the Philippines or restrict such purchases.

Concepçion said the government's plan to raise tariff walls to shield local industry from an import surge would not be enough because of non-tariff barriers in other countries against Philippine products.

He cited, for example, restrictions imposed by Japan, South Korea, Taiwan and other countries which all have an edge over the Philippines in terms of economic and industrial development.

These restrictions include quarantine and health regulations which hamper the entry of Philippine agricultural products; quotas and so-called orderly marketing arrangements such as "trigger levels" that limit garments shipments; and licensing requirements.

Concepcion said these restrictions should be dismantled because most Philippine export products have reached world-class standards to be competitive.

However, precisely because of the products' competitiveness, other countries limit their entry into their markets. [passage omitted]

CON-COM ESTABLISHES LEGISLATIVE EXECUTIVE TERMS

HK281454 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 26 Jul 86 pp 1, 7

[By Miguel Genovea]

[Text] The Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] voted yesterday to give president, vice president and senators a six-year term, and to congressmen and local officials down to council members, a three-year term.

Under this scheme, there will be elections every three years and, all elections will be synchronized by 1992, when the terms of the incumbet president and vice president shall have ended.

Thirty-three members voted in favor of the plan, which defeated an earlier consensus calling for a six-year term for the president, vice president, senators and a four-year term for congressmen and local officials, with elections to be held every two years.

With the Con-Com decision, elections for the 24 senators (12 for 6 years and 12 for two years), congressmen and local officials will be held either in March or April next year.

A Committee approval for inclusion in the transitory provisions set the election for the legislative not earlier than 30 days or not later than 50 days upon approval of the Constitution.

The Committee on Amendments and Transitory Provisions headed by Jose Suarez had also voted to fix the six-year terms for President Aquino and Vice President Salvador Laurel.

After lengthy deliberations, the Con-Com voted to limit the tenure of the president to six years without reelection and the vice president for one reelection.

It was also agreed that senators will only have one immediate reelection and congressmen and local officials with two reelections [as published].

A move to perpetually ban senators, congressmen and local officials after serving for two and three conservative terms, respectively, was voted down.

This means that after serving two consecutive terms, a senator, after resting for one term can run again. This is also true for congressmen and local officials, who can run again after three consecutive terms, provided there is a break of one term.

Con-Com President Cecilia Munoz Palma expressed confidence that the deadline for the completion for the framing of the charter could be met, notwithstanding the delay in the floor deliberations on the articles on legislative department.

"It is necessary to finish the Constitution on time to hasten the country's economic, political and social stability," Palma said.

HOW THEY SHALL BE ELECTED

Position	Terms	Reelection	Set of Conditions
President	6 years	No reelection	--
Vice President	6 years	1 immediate reelection	After a break of one term, can run again
Senator	6 years	1 reelection	After a break of one term, can run again
Congressman	3 years	2 immediate reelections	After a break of one term, can run again
Local officials	3 years	2 immediate reelections	After a break of one term, can run again

COLUMN OPPOSES SINGLE TERM

HK290459 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 27 Jul 86 p 4

["Opinion" column: "The Con-Com and the People"]

[Text] Since it began its task of forging a Constitution for the Filipino people, the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] has been acting more and more as if they wanted the people to decide on less and less.

To cite one particular provision which they decided upon, there is the matter of closing the door for the re-election of any President, beyond one single six-year term.

Thinking negatively, a distinct feature emerging in Con-Com deliberations, proponents of the measure resurrected the ghost of Marcos by saying one term would prevent the setting up of political dynasties such as the 20-year rule of Marcos.

By banning a presidential re-election, the Con-Com shuts the door on the return of a good and decent President and deprives the Filipino voter of the option to throw out a bad President with his vote. Unless the Con-Com delegates are suffering from convenient amnesia, it could not have escaped them that the people have thrown out Presidents before, till one of them perverted the whole political process, something which even the 1935 Constitution could not prevent.

The point which the Con-Com should remember is that the Filipino people, whom they are supposed to represent, but technically do not because they were not elected, have shown themselves to be capable of acting outside any Constitution to determine their own fate.

It would be unfortunate if the Con-Com thought it knew best, and continued limiting the political decisions the Filipino can make for themselves with restrictive provisions motivated by a desire to exorcise Marcos on the one hand and an effort to tell the people what they need on the other.

Perhaps then, the wisdom of electing a Constitutional Commission will emerge because of the character of the Constitution which the appointed Con-Com seems determined to impose on the nation.

[Editorial: "On Impeachment"]

[Text] There need not be many grounds for the impeachment of a president. One ground, culpable violation of the Constitution, ought to be enough, because the Constitution is broad enough to cover almost all malfeasances a president can possibly commit. Probably, the presentation of additional grounds for impeachment at the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] was meant to stress the desirableness of a president who can tread the straight and narrow path of virtue. Or it could have been a reaction to recent experience.

The probability of the impeachment of a president is a function of the institutional arrangements. If the system of government has a workable checks-and-balances arrangement, a constitutional provision on impeachment will more or less be a dead law, because the president will not be tempted to commit mischiefs. A president commits an impeachable offense only when he is sure of impunity.

If a president controls only one-half of the lower house and one-half of the upper house he is not likely to commit an impeachable offense because he would feel he is not powerful enough. Either that or he is a fool.

We are sure that on the basis of past experience the Con-Com will come up with a Constitution that will prevent the recurrence of the kind of material law regime imposed on the people beginning in 1972.

Accomplishing that one thing will make a number of provisions reported in the papers unnecessary.

VOTERS GIVEN RIGHT TO INITIATE, NULLIFY LAWS

[By Marlen Ronquillo]

[Text] The Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] yesterday decided to grant unto Filipino voters the power to propose, enact, and nullify laws passed by Congress.

The granting of law-making powers to voters was one of the most progressive features of the article on the legislature which the Con-Com was expected to pass yesterday.

The approved article in the draft Constitution provides for a bicameral legislature similar to the old Congress, and radical measures that "nurture people power."

The approved provision specifies two methods on how voters can actively participate in the legislative process.

The first method allows 10 percent of the registered voters to go directly to Congress to propose a bill.

The provision contains safeguards that shall compel Congress to listen to initiatives from the people.

The second method allows 10 percent of the voters to prepare bills and submit the proposed legislative measures in a nationwide referendum. A bill is considered enacted through a majority vote.

The same percentage of voters can also initiate a referendum either to reject a law passed by Congress or to pass a bill rejected by Congress.

Another innovative feature of the article was the introduction of a party list system in legislative polls. Under this scheme which is being adopted in some US states, people vote for political parties and not politicians.

Political parties which obtain a sufficient percentage of votes will be allowed to name representatives to Congress. The number of representatives will depend on the total votes obtained by the parties.

This will ensure that parties and their platforms and not personalities will be voted on by the electorate, committee chairman Hilario Davide said.

The article also sets limits on what members of Congress can do during their terms in either the Senate or House of Representatives.

Members of both houses cannot appear as counsel in courts, quasijudicial bodies and administrative agencies.

They are also required to disclose their personal assets and business interests upon assumption of office.

They are also prohibited from passing bills which will serve their "pecuniary interest."

The approved provisions also incorporate some features which are only practiced in a parliamentary form of government.

There is a provision for the holding of a Question Hour at least once a month.

COMELEC CHAIRMAN, COMMISSIONERS SWORN IN

[By Ding Marcelo]

[Text] Ramon Felipe Jr took his oath yesterday as the new chairman of the Commission on Elections (Comelec) and said that he has recommended to President Aquino the holding of national and local elections in March or April next year and the plebiscite for the new Constitution in December this year.

Felipe, who served as the lone voice of the opposition in the Comelec during the tumultuous presidential elections and its bitter aftermath, was sworn in along with five new commissioners.

The new appointments finally brought the curtain down on the five remaining commissioners appointed by former President Marcos and signalled the completion of the revamp of the government body that conducted the nation's elections, plebiscites, and referendums, and announced results that often prompted debates during the Marcos years.

Besides Felipe, others who took their oath before President Aquino were Andres Flores, Leopoldo Africa, Haydee Yorac, David Rama, and Anacleto Badoy.

Froilan Bacungan, also a Marcos appointee, however, will remain as commissioner until the end of August when his term expires.

Those whose resignations were acted upon only yesterday were Commissioners Quirino Marquinez, Jaime Layusa, Jose Agpalo, and Mario Ortiz.

Earlier, Mrs Aquino had accepted the resignations of former Comelec chairman Vic Savellano and members Jaime Opinion and Mangontawa Guro.

Felipe had been serving as acting Comelec chairman since Savellano resigned after the February revolt. But it was only yesterday that he was sworn in.

Felipe's commission is expected to oversee the plebiscite that will ratify or reject the Constitution now being formulated, the election for mayors and governors, and for members of the legislative body and, perhaps, even for the presidency.

Excluding the election for president, Felipe estimated that the commission will need at least P670 million for the holding of local and national elections, the plebiscite for the Constitution, and lthe listing of new voters.

One of President Aquino's programs calls for the complete change of the voters list, and that to accomplish this, Felipe said, P370 million is needed. P270 million of the amount will go to the payment of new ID cards with pictures.

He said new voters' ID cards will be used when the plebiscite is held sometime in December, a month he has also recommended to Mrs Aquino.

For the plebiscite, Felipe estimated that the government will spend P110 million while for the local and national elections for March or April, the amount is pegged at P190.

SEVERAL NEW ENVOYS APPOINTED TO POSTS

HK281248 Manila THE MANILA EVENING POST in English 28 Jul 86 p 3

[Text] Former Sen. Mamintal Tamano and former Lanao del Sur Gov. Madki Alonto head the list of political appointees to ambassadorial and top foreign ministry posts.

Tamano, who is now third deputy foreign minister, and Alonto, the new envoy to Libya, were Unido [United Democratic Nationalist Opposition] political leaders for Mindanao.

Another Unido leader, Augusto Cesar Espiritu, former dean of the University of the Philippines college of law, is ambassador to West Germany.

Alfonso Yuchengco, former board member of the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. and now envoy to China, is among the prominent businessmen named ambassadors.

Ramon del Rosario, of the Philippine Investment Management Consultant (Phinma), is ambassador to Japan. Previously assigned to West Germany, he was one of few ambassadors who pledged support for President Aquino before the February revolt.

The rest of the appointees are prominent businessmen who, according to foreign minister sources, "were staunch opposition supporters during the campaign."

Howard Dee, ambassador to Vatican; Eduardo Manzano, Switzerland; Jose Zaldarriaga, Italy; Francisco Benedicto, Singapore; John Quimson, Britain; Benjamin Sanvictores, deputy chief of mission to Tokyo.

Former Ambassador to Korea Nicanor Jiminez, the sources said, is being groomed for either deputy permanent representative to the United 1Nations or consul-general to San Francisco.

USSR'S SOLOVYEV ON GORBACHEV-NAKASONE MEETING

OW310831 Tokyo KYODO in English 0807 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] Tokyo, July 31 KYODO — The prospect of tangible results is a necessary precondition to a meeting between Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Soviet ambassador in Tokyo Nikolay Solovyev said Thursday.

Solovyev told a press conference at the Japan National Press Club that the question of whether Japan or the Soviet Union should host the first meeting between the two leaders is a relatively minor problem.

"It is important that top leaders of both nations talk on issues that need discussion and that they produce tangible results. The meeting should be a step for further development of bilateral relations," Solovyev said. He said he does not yet know whether Gorbachev will visit Japan this year or next year.

The new envoy also expressed hope for Soviet-Japanese cooperation in the fields of peace and disarmament. "I believe Japan and the Soviet Union can cooperate in the international scene such as in promoting general disarmament, reducing nuclear weapons and enhancing security," Solovyev said in his first press conference after he came to Tokyo last month to take up his post. "Nuclear arms reduction depends largely on talks between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, but Japan can do something in this field," said Solovyev, who, however, did not elaborate.

Japan and the Soviet Union are two important nations in the Asia-Pacific region and his country attaches importance to its relations with Japan, Solovyev said. But he said improvement of relations with Japan does not mean the Soviet Union wants to step up its presence in the Asia-Pacific area. "This region is not as much militarized as Europe," Solovyev said, calling for all-out efforts to help stop arms buildups in the area.

Gorbachev's pledge to withdraw six regiments from Afghanistan this year in his recent speech at Vladivostok will be a "significant step" to settle the Afghan problem, he said.

There are many fields -- economic, political and cultural -- [in which] Japan and the Soviet Union can cooperate, he said adding that where the important thing is to minimize tensions and maintain contacts.

Concerning joint venture projects with Japanese industry which were proposed in the Gorbachev speech in Vladivostok, Solovyev said the Soviet side is now studying Japanese questions concerning credit supply and management and legal systems to promote the projects. He said Kremlin officials are seeking simple joint projects in the initial stage such as processing of marine resources, rice or other items.

He said he is not opposed to Japan maintaining good relations with the United States, China and other countries.

"Our country looks calmly at these relations as long as they are not against the Soviet interest and they do not increase tensions," he said. No nation should intervene between countries enjoying good relations, he said, adding his country also seeks good relations with the U.S. and China.

Commenting on Gorbachev's proposal to hold an Asian security conference, he said it will be impossible to have such a conference at the moment. "But our proposal will finally win," he said. "I hope the conference will help reduce tensions in Asia and the Pacific, leading to advancement of relations between the countries in the area," he said.

FINANCE MINISTRY REPORTS 1-20 JULY TRADE SURPLUS

[Text] Tokyo, July 30 KYODO -- Japan had a 4,368.9 million dollar trade surplus on a customs clearance basis in the first 20 days of July compared with a 2,151.6 million dollar surplus a year before, the Finance Ministry announced Wednesday.

Exports totaled 11,203.9 million dollars on an FOB basis, up 24.1 percent from a year earlier, and imports 6,835 million dollars on a CIF basis, down 0.6 percent.

KCNA: OLYMPICS COHOSTING PROPOSAL 'REASONABLE'

[Text] Pyongyang July 29 (KCNA) -- One year has passed since the Democratic People's Republic of Korea proposed in July 1985 that the 24th Olympic Games be cohosted by the North and the South of Korea. For its justness and reasonableness, this proposal has evoked deep sympathy worldwide and earned welcome and support from the governments, peoples and sportsmen of socialist and many other countries. The cohosting proposal is a most just and reasonable one which fully accords, above all, with the fundamental idea of the Olympic Games.

Justice of the Olympic cohosting proposal can also be explained by the fact that it will make it possible to tide over the present crisis of the Olympic movement. If the DPRK's cohosting proposal is realized, all countries of the world including those weighing the problem of participation in the 24th Olympic Games will take part in it and the Olympic movement be saved from the crisis of division.

This proposal is a very reasonable one in view of achieving national unity between the North and the South. If this proposal is carried into effect, it will have a favourable influence on the removal of misunderstanding and distrust between the North and the South, achievement of national reconciliation and unity and promotion of North-South dialogue.

Several problems should be solved for the realization of the cohosting of the '88 Olympic Games. The DPRK proposed that the Olympic Games be equally divided into halves for Pyongyang and Seoul. This is a most fair proposal acceptable to anyone. Another important point is the name of the Olympic Games and the formation of its organizing committee. The DPRK advanced a fair and aboveboard proposal to call the games to be held in Pyongyang "the 24th Olympic Games, Pyongyang" and form the Pyongyang organizing committee. The DPRK also proposed that such functions as the opening and closing ceremonies be fairly shared between the North and the South.

In this recent press statement, Kim Tuk-chun, vice-chairman of the DPRK Olympic Committee, emphasized that if the cohosting of the '88 Olympic Games is to be realized, the DPRK's basic demand concerning such fundamental questions as the name of the games, sharing of games, formation of the organizing committee and the organization of opening and closing ceremonies must be met. He expressed the belief that the governments of the socialist, non-aligned and other peaceloving countries of the world and sports lovers of broad segments would continue to pay deep attention to the DPRK's Olympic cohosting proposal and extend full support to it.

MINJU CHOSON ON CIA 'PLOT' TO FOIL HARARE SUMMIT

[Text] Pyongyang July 30 (KCNA) -- MINJU CHOSON today denounces the U.S. CIA for craftily and maliciously scheming to tear asunder the eighth summit conference of the non-aligned countries by allotting 20 million dollars. In its signed commentary the paper says:

The U.S. imperialists have hatched up a plot to frustrate the summit conference and are spending tens of million dollars to instigate reactionaries. This shows that their manoeuvres to destroy the Non-Aligned Movement are becoming more crafty as the days go by.

The non-aligned countries as well as the progressive nations of the world hope now that the Harare Summit will discuss practical problems of the non-alignment and major international issues to work out a joint strategy and thus greatly contribute to the development of the non-alignment and the accomplishment of the cause of anti-imperialism and independence.

It is foolish of the U.S. imperialists to attempt to foil the Harare summit and break the unity of the non-aligned countries by bribing a few reactionaries. The maneuvres of the U.S. imperialists are the last-ditch efforts of those afraid of the development of the non-alignment. They can frighten no one.

SANKEI SHIMBUN CRITICISM OF DPRK DENOUNCED

[Text] Pyongyang July 30 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today comments on the smear campaign of the Japanese SANKEI SHIMBUN which attacks our republic for no reason, openly going against peace in Korea and throwing obstacles to her reunification.

The signed commentary captioned "how much was SANKEI paid?" says:

SANKEI SHIMBUN arbitrarily branded the proposal of the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to establish a nuclear-free, peace zone on the Korean peninsula and its sincere efforts for its realisation as "a camouflaged peace offensive" and alleged that the north was "building arms" and scheming "armed invasion of the South". The paper also spun the lie that the North was plotting to commit "terrorism" in South Korea by employing guerrillas in other parts of the world. Its smear campaign serves entirely for the execution of the aggressive strategy of the United States in Korea.

As for us, the target of SANKEI's unfounded vilification, we are making every possible effort for peace on the Korean peninsula and a peaceful settlement of the Korean question, contrary to the false propaganda of the paper. Only recently, we proposed to establish a nuclear-free, peace zone for the removal of the danger of a nuclear war from the Korean peninsula and open talks of military authorities for the relaxation of tensions there. Our "armed invasion of the South," "terrorism" and the like are a sheer hokum.

We are now concentrating on peaceful construction and allotting large stage budgetary appropriations preferentially to it and the People's Army soldiers have undertaken a big share in socialist construction. They have successfully constructed the Nampo Barrage and are performing feats in such major construction objects as the Sunchon vinalon complex and the Taechon power station.

This is truth and reality quite different from that of the South.

Is SANKEI too blind to see this, too deaf to hear about this and too wry-tongued to talk things honestly?

It is not likely so. The paper deliberately shuts its eyes to the acts of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique building arms and increasing the danger of war on the Korean peninsula and wilfully provokes and slanders us who push for peace. And it must be noted that the phraseologies SANKEI used to slander us sound just like the murmurings of the U.S. high-level authorities, Japanese reactionaries and the South Korean puppet clique.

The paper seeks the hideous aim of covering up the criminal acts of those going against peace in Korea and her peaceful reunification by its false propaganda reversing black and white and of isolating us by creating a distorted impression of us.

We do not know how much SANKEI was paid for its role as a shock force and trumpeter in the service of the U.S. imperialists, the Japanese reactionaries and the South Korean puppet clique. But, anyhow, it is a very shameful role.

Ignoring the desire of peoples for the relaxation of tensions on the Korean peninsula and its peaceful reunification, it gains profits and keeps itself going by publishing articles that please the Japanese reactionaries, the South Korean puppets and their masters. Such stand and attitude of the paper are a far cry from the impartiality and truthfulness of the press. This will only earn itself the disgust of people and disdain by public opinion and, eventually, prick its own eyes.

Such false propaganda full of prejudice, falsity and fabrication as did by SANKEI will only increase the tensions and render the confrontation acute on the Korean peninsula. The Korean people will never tolerate such act of the paper. SANKEI SHIMBUN should apologize to the Korean people for its error and stop doing such despicable act.

KIM HWAN RECEIVES JSP ASSEMBLYMEN'S DELEGATION

[Text] Pyongyang July 30 (KCNA) -- Comrade Kim Hwan, member of the Political Bureau, and secretary, of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea, on July 29 met and conversed in a friendly atmosphere at the Mansudae Assembly Hall with the delegation of local assemblymen's groups of the Japan Socialist Party with Keiji Sato, member of the JSP Central Executive Committee and member of the House of Representatives, as its advisor and Tooru Kurihara, chairman of the National Council of the Local Assemblymen's Groups of the JSP, as its head. Present on the occasion was Kim U-chong, vice-director of a department of the WPK Central Committee.

33D ANNIVERSARY OF CUBAN REVOLUTION COMMEMORATED

[Text] On the 33d anniversary of the attack on the Moncada Barracks, the Cuban ambassador to our country, Ricardo Danza Sigas, arranged a banquet yesterday evening at Ongnyu Hall. Invited to the banquet were Comrade Yi Chong-ok, member of the WPK Central Committee Political Bureau and vice president of the DPRK; Comrade O Kuk-yol, member of the WPK Central Committee Political Bureau and chief of the general staff of the KPA; Kim Pok-sin, candidate member of the WPK Central Commiteee Political Bureau and vice-premier of the State Administation Council; Comrade Hwang Chang-yop, secretary of the WPK Central Committee; (Yi Mong-ho); Chong Ki-chol; Kil Chae-kyong; Pak Chung-kuk; Han Pong-ku; Chon Chae-hong; (Kwak Po-kyong); Kang Chong-pal; Wang Kyong-hak; and other functionaries concerned.

At the banquet, Ricardo Danza Sigas spoke first. Referring to the historic significance of the attack on the Moncada Barracks organized and launched under the guidance of Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, the supreme commander of the Cuban people, Ricardo Danza Sigas stated that since then the Cuban people have traversed the proud road of struggle and victory.

He noted that the Cuban people, under the leadership of Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, their supreme leader, have vigorously waged the struggle to implement the decision of the 3d Congress of the Cuban Communist party. He indicated that the historic meeting between Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, the supreme leader of the Cuban people, and Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of the Korean people, was an epochal event which developed the militant friendship between the people of our two countries into a higher stage. He then stressed that the meeting between the leaders of the two countries vigorously confirmed the firm will of the people of the two countries to further strengthen unity on the single road of anti-imperialist struggle and to advance toward the victory of the socialist cause based on the principle of proletarian internationalism.

He said: Our Cuba highly estimates the DPRK Government's efforts to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea. In particular, the 23 June proposal put forward by the DPRK government is an important initiative to alleviate tension on the Korean peninsula, to make it a nuclear-free zone of peace, and to contribute to the cause of world peace.

Referring to the U.S. imperialists' criminal maneuvers to have the 1988 Olympic Games held only in South Korea, he exposed this aim designed to perpetuate the division of Korea. He then stressed that Cuba resolutely supports the DPRK proposal for cohosting the Olympic Games in the North and South of Korea.

He said that the Cuban Communist Party, the Cuban Government, and the Cuban people extend full support to the struggle of the WPK, the Korean Government, and the Korean people to achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country without foreign forces' interference and for withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from South Korea.

He said Cuba extends the warmest congratulations to the Korean people for their great successes attained in socialist economic construction under the correct leadership of Comrade President Kim Il-song, general secretary of the WPK Central Committee and the great leader of the Korean people, and the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il.

Comrade O Kuk-yok spoke next. He stated that the attack on the Moncada Barracks launched by the brave Cuban revolutionaries under the guidance of Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz was an epochal event which brought about a new turning point in the Cuban people's struggle to liquidate the old ruling system and to achieve freedom, liberation, and socialism.

He referred to the fact that the Cuban revolutionaries and people waged an arduous struggle, holding aloft the beacon fire of armed struggle raised in Moncada, and finally achieved the victory of their revolution by overthrowing the Batista pro-U.S. dictatorial regime on 1 January 1959.

He said: Since the victory of the revolution, the heroic Cuban people, under the correct guidance of their supreme commander Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, have firmly defended the fatherland and the gains of the revolution from the U.S. imperialists' repeated maneuvers for aggression, interference, and blockade, and have vigorously advanced along the road of socialism.

Noting that Cuba has become an island of freedom, whose people are all leading happy lives, and a model of socialism in the Western hemisphere, he said that the international position of the Republic of Cuba is enhanced with each passing day and that Cuba plays an important role in international political life.

He then said: We sincerely wish the fraternal Cuban people greater success in their struggle to carry out the new 5-year plan and increase the defense capability of the country by implementing the decision of the 3d Congress of the Cuban Communist Party.

He said: Although Korea and Cuba are far away from each other, in the Eastern and Western hemispheres respectively, the people of our two countries have forged close ties of friendship as class brothers, have struggled together in the outpost line of the anti-imperialist struggle, and have closely supported and cooperated with each other.

He said that the historic meeting in Pyongyang last March between the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and esteemed Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz was an epochal event that strengthened and developed the traditional relations of friendship and cooperation between our two countries into a new, high stage.

He said: Holding aloft the revolutionary banner of independence against imperialism, we will, as ever, advance in firm unity with the fraternal Cuban people and extend active support and firm militant solidarity to the Cuban people in their struggle to take back Guantanamo, achieve territorial integrity, and safeguard peace and security in the Caribbean and Central America.

The participants in the banquet toasted the invincible friendship and solidarity between the Korean and Cuban people, the long life and good health of Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our people, the long life and good health of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, and the long life and good health of Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, the supreme leader of the Cuban people.

Dailies Praise Cuba

[Text] Pyongyang July 26 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN and MINJU CHOSON today observe the 33rd anniversary of the July 26 armed uprising of the Cuban people.

The gun report sounded at the Moncada Barracks was a historic event of weighty significance in the Cuban people's national liberation struggle against the U.S. imperialists and their stooges and for freedom and liberation, the author of the MINJU CHOSON article notes, and says: Since the victory of the revolution, the fraternal people have registered big successes in the building of a new life and socialist construction, braving the persistent aggressive and interventionist moves of the imperialists and their blockade.

Although Korea and Cuba are far away from each other with an ocean and continent in between, the two peoples have forged the firm bonds of friendship. The Korean people have invariably voiced firm solidarity with the Cuban people in their just struggle for defending the gains of the revolution and building socialism, repulsing the aggressive and subversive manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists.

The Korean visit of Comrade Fidel Castro in March this year marked an important milestone in strengthening and bringing the friendly and cooperative relations between the peoples of Korea and Cuba to a new higher stage. The Korean people will as ever do their utmost to expand and develop the relations of friendship and cooperation with the Cuban people in different fields. They sincerely wish the fraternal Cuban people greater success in the endeavours to carry out the new five-year plan and increase the nation's defence capacity, upholding the decisions of the third party congress.

A signed article of NODONG SINMUN says the Republic of Cuba, a beautiful island in the Caribbean Sea, has become an island where the people enjoy freedom and happiness, an island of heroes where they dynamically advance without hesitation and vacillation and a beacon of hope which imbues the Latin American people with courage and confidence. All these changes in the land of Cuba, it stresses, are the fruition of the correct leadership of the Communist Party of Cuba headed by Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, the supreme leader of the Cuban revolution, and the creative labour of the heroic Cuban people.

KIM HWAN ATTENDS SEMINAR ON KIM CHONG-IL BOOK

[Text] An education seminar was held in the Grand People's Study House on 22 July to mark the second anniversary of the publication of "On Further Developing Educational Work," a historic work by dear Comrade Kim Chong-il.

Present at this seminar were Comrade Kim Hwan, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the WPK Central Committee; Choe Tae-pok, chairman of the Education Committee; and other functionaries concerned, together with university professors, researchers, and functionaries in the educational sector.

Yi Chae-kun, junior doctor [chunbaksa] of Kim Il-song University; Pak Chol-su, junior doctor of Kim Hyong-chik Teachers College; Kim Chun-sok, teacher at the Kim Chaek University of Technology; Kim Kyong-yong, junior doctor of the Construction and Building Materials College; Choe Chong-ui, associate professor and junior doctor of the Educational Science Institute; and Cho Chu-kyong, professor and doctor of Kim Il-song University, made speeches entitled "'On Further Developing Educational Work,' a Historic Work of Dear Comrade Kim Chong-il, Is a Programmatic Document for a New Turn in Educational Work in Conformity With the Demands of Developing Reality"; "Strengthening Education in Basic Science and Foreign Languages Is a Key That Makes it Possible to Elevate the Quality of Secondary General Education to a Higher Stage"; "Improving the Work of Training Technicians and Experts Is an Important Guarantee for Rapidly Developing Modern Science and Technology and Accelerating Socialist Economic Construction"; "Improving Education Methods Is an Important Demand Which Makes it Possible To Elevate the Quality of Education at Present to a Higher Stage"; "Systematically Promoting the Distinguished Aptitudes and Talents of Students Is an Important Way to Rapidly Develop the Sciences, Technology, and Culture of the Country"; and "Enhancing the Sense of Responsibility and Roles of Teachers Is a Fundamental Guarantee for Improving Educational Work."

The speakers stressed that dear Comrade Kim Chong-il's historic work "On Further Developing Educational Work" is a powerful ideological and theoretical weapon and a militant banner which our party and people should constantly grasp tightly in raising able and useful chuche-type communist revolutionary personnel and building socialist and communist education.

They said: In his document, dear Comrade Kim Chong-il has set forth an original policy designed to effect a new turn in educational work on the basis of the position and role of educational work in pioneering the fate of the country and the nation and the scientific analysis of the inevitable demands of our developing revolution. The speakers explained that the historic work is an educational program comprehensively elucidating the theoretical and practical questions arising in constantly developing educational work to a new, higher stage.

They stressed that the work gives comprehensive answers to all questions on further developing educational work -- such as the question of improving educational methods and systematically promoting the distinguished aptitudes and talent of the students, the question of improving the work of training technicians and experts and accelerating intellectualization of all of society, and the question of raising the qualifications of teachers, enhancing their role, improving educational conditions, and strengthening the party's guidance over educational work.

They pointed out: The historic work "On Further Developing Educational Work" is genuinely an immortal series which monolithically systematizes the theoretical and practical questions of further developing chuche-oriented education in conformity with the demands of developing reality, in which the cause of imbuing all of society with the chuche idea is developing at a high stage, and is a programatic document which makes it possible to enact a new turn in educational work.

They stressed: The functionaries in the educational sector should excellently nurture the growing generation into genuine chuche-type communist revolutionaries by deeply grasping the original ideas and theories delineated in the work and by thoroughly embodying them in educational and indoctrination work.

CENTRAL MEETING CELEBRATES WOMEN'S RIGHTS LAW

[Text] Pyongyang July 30 (KCNA) -- A central meeting was held on July 29 at the People's Palace of Culture to mark the 40th anniversary of the promulgation of the historical law on sex equality. Attending the meeting were Yi Chong-ok, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea and vice-president, and other senior cadres, women anti-Japanese revolutionary fighters and officials concerned as well as working women in the city. The chairman of the Central Committee of the Korean Democratic Women's Union delivered a report for the occasion.

The reporter said that the unique chuche-based programme of women emancipation put forward by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and the precious feats and experience attained by him in the struggle for its implementation became the deep and strong historic roots of the Korean women's emancipation movement and solid assets and eternal wealth for the solution of the women problem.

The great leader promulgated the law on sex equality on July 30, 1946 and thereby solemnly declared that the Korean women had equal rights with men in all spheres of the political, economic and cultural life and they were completely free from the inhumane yoke and unequal position. The reporter said the promulgation of the law on sex equality was an epochal event which made the Korean women, who had been left outside history for a long time, the master of their own destiny and a significant event which brought a radical turn in the solution of the women's question.

With the solution of the women's question and the vigorous promotion of the cause of their emancipation on a new, higher stage under the wise leadership of the great leader, a fundamental turn has been effected today in the position and lot of the Korean women and their role has risen immensely in the revolution and construction.

The reporter further said:

The women of our country are doing themselves justice on the agricultural, light industrial and other major fronts of socialist construction and performing shining feats by vigorously rushing ahead at the speed of chollima spurred on by the speed campaign. Thus they are contributing to the historic cause of modelling the whole of society on the chuche idea by energetically pushing ahead with the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural.

The Korean women hold their legitimate place in the international arena and the brilliant example of the solution of the women's problem in Korea gives deep confidence and inspiration to the women groaning under the yoke of imperialism and colonialism and the progressive women of the world who rose up in the building of a new society.

The proud victory achieved in the accomplishment of the cause of women's emancipation in Korea and all the changes in the socio-political position of the Korean women are attributable to the wise leadership and deep care of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the Workers' Party of Korea, reporter stressed.

The reporter further said:

Today the human dignity and rights of the South Korean women are ruthlessly trampled underfoot and they are subjected to unbearable humiliation and insult as "tools" for gratifying the lust of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique and playthings of money and power and hundreds of thousands of women are abused by the U.S. soldiers and other foreign lewd animals.

The reporter stressed that the South Korean women should wage a more valiant anti-U.S. struggle for independence and anti-fascist struggle for democracy together with students and people of all walks of life to win the rights to live and democratic freedom.

WPK'S IDEOLOGICAL REVOLUTION THEORY VIEWED

[Text] Pyongyang July 29 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Tuesday emphasizes that the theory of ideological revolution, the work with man, is an original revolutionary theory advanced by the Workers' Party of Korea long ago on the basis of the chuche idea. A signed article of the paper says it was from the middle of the 1940's, the first days after the Workers' Party of Korea seized power and began building a new society, that the ideological revolution started to be promoted as a part of the three revolutions, ideological, technical and cultural, in Korea. But, the history of the evolution of the theory of ideological revolution and work with people traces its origin to the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, it notes, and further says:

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song advanced the original idea that the political work, work with people, is the first process of the revolutionary struggle and the first duty of the communists and created the work method of the anti-Japanese guerrillas by thoroughly appling it during the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle. Now, the Workers' Party of Korea solves all problems by definitely giving precedence to the ideological revolution and through work with people. This is a brilliant inheritance and thorough application of the work method of the anti-Japanese guerrillas. This means that the WPK has attached greatest importance to the ideological work, work with people and invariably maintained it from before the WPK took power.

The WPK's ideology and theory on ideological revolution, on work with man, comprehensively expound its essence, necessity and questions of principle which should be adhered to in carrying it out. The essence of the ideological revolution propounded by the WPK is human remoulding for revolutionizing and working-classizing all the members of the society to train them as true communist revolutionaries and a political work to enhance the revolutionary enthusiasm and creativity of the working people. Work with man is the work to educate the people in revolutionary idea and rally them organizationally so they might voluntarily participate in the revolutionary struggle and constructive work.

The WPK also gave a correct definition of the position held by the ideological revolution and work with man and principles and methods for their realization. The party's ideology and theory on the ideological revolution and work with man most correctly reflect the principle and lawful character of communist construction.

Even after communism is built, the political work and work with people should be continued and, through this, the party should steadily develop society to a higher stage. This clearly shows that the ideological work and work with people are a precious guideline which should be strictly adhered to in building and managing socialism and communism.

The Workers' Party of Korea has performed immortal exploits in the development of the theory of building socialism and communism and the revolutionary practice of the present era by advancing the original theory on ideological revolution, work with people, and brilliantly applying it from the first days of building a new society, the article emphasized.

FUNCTIONARIES' ROLE IN ECONOMIC WORK VIEWED

[NODONG SINMUN 29 July Editorial: "Functionaries, Let Us Organize and Command Economic Work in a Revolutionary Manner"]

[Text] As socialist economic construction is deepened today, the problem of enhancing the role of guiding functionaries has become more important. In order to successfully carry out the party's militant task for this year and to vigorously push ahead with socialist economic construction, guiding functionaries should organize and command economic work in a more revolutionary manner.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught:

All guiding functionaries should organize and command socialist construction battles thinking of themselves as the masters of the revolution, and should gallantly overcome all difficulties and obstacles, standing at the head of the masses.

Our functionaries are the commanding members of the revolution who directly organize and carry out the struggle to implement the party's economic policy by fulfilling their respective work in a responsible manner. Therefore, our party has entrusted the important duty of managing the country's precious property and of operating the economy to them. Accordingly, economic guiding functionaries' loyalty to the party and leader should be seen in the work of organizing the economy, which is their own revolutionary task.

The tasks we should fulfill this year are enormous. Half of the period for this year's battle has already passed. We properly carried out the battle for the first half of the year. However, in order to achieve great success this year and achieve greater economic success next year, we should stage more strained battles from now on. Those who should directly organize and command these strained battles are none other than the economic guiding functionaries.

In our country today, there are outstanding conditions under which, when economic guiding functionaries do their best, they can achieve great successes. We have the correct line and policies of the party, the mighty foundation of the self-reliant economy, the superior economic management system, the socialist economic management principles, and the working class, who are infinitely loyal to the party. Besides these factors, we have every favorable condition that can reasonably organize enterprise complexes and rapidly develop the economy.

Indeed, our country has an outstanding agile horse which can accelerate socialist economic construction like a gust of wind. How can we drive this outstanding agile horse? This depends entirely on economic guiding functionaries. Experiences have shown that, when guiding functionaries are deeply aware of their revolutionary duties and carry out their organizational and command work to implement economic tasks in a revolutionary manner, a breakthrough can be opened and innovations effected. All functionaries should vigorously accelerate socialist economic construction by organizing and commanding economic tasks in a responsible and revolutionary manner in conformity with developing reality.

What is important first of all in organizing and commanding economic tasks is for functionaries to vigorously struggle with a lofty sense of responsibility toward the revolutionary duty assigned by the party. Guiding functionaries' assignments and responsibility is the heavy and honorable revolutionary duty that guarantees our party's operations for economic construction, operations which have been carried out in accordance with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's plan for socialist economic construction. Only when the revolutionary task of each functionary of the party's economic construction operations bears brilliant fruition can this year's battle achieve victory.

Functionaries at committees and ministries of the State Administrative Council and functionaries at enterprise complexes and plants should be deeply aware of the importance of their organizational and command tasks and carry out their economic task in a more revolutionary manner. Thus, they should thoroughly carry out all economic tasks that have been assigned to their sectors and units. Stubbornness in carrying out the revolutionary task finds expression in gallantly breaking through difficulties and obstacles without trepidation and trembling. Our functionaries may face many obstacles and difficulties in carrying out this year's battle. However, if they hesitate to break through these difficulties or resort to others, their work style is by no means that of revolutionaries.

The experience attained by construction workers of the Nampo lockgate has shown that no matter what difficult revolutionary task may be confronted, when commanders push ahead with their tasks with certainty and with a firm determination to carry out the task assigned by the party, workers can resolutely struggle with firm faith in victory and with firm courage. As taught by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, those who are carrying out the revolution should gallantly break through any difficulties. The more difficulties there are, the more they should be broken through with even greater stubborn vigor. This is precisely the revolutionary work habit that our functionaries should possess.

All functionaries should resolve knotty problems through their own efforts, and thus carry out the militant tasks assigned by the party to the end by gallantly breaking through all difficulties with the spirit of crossing the burning rivers and walking over a marsh. Setting forth a far-sighted goal and carrying it out without fail is precisely the revolutionary work style our functionaries should display. Any task, the goal of which is high and far-sighted, can bring about zeal and effect an innovation. Setting forth a low goal and carrying it out simply has nothing to do with the work style of those functionaries who are carrying out the revolution.

We are now carrying out economic construction under circumstances in which the U.S. imperialists' new war provocation maneuvers have become more unscrupulous. Reality demands that we work in a more strained manner and more militantly than ever before. Economic guiding functionaries, when they establish a plan, should establish it reflecting the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the demands of the party; they should establish it in such a way that its nominal capacity can be fully displayed. At the same time, they should implement it in a revolutionary manner. Thus, they should fulfill all plans that they have established under any conditions.

Functionaries' revolutionary spirit and habit and their organizational and commanding abilities find expression in implementing a state plan. The national economic development plan is precisely an instruction of the party and a law of the state. Our functionaries should assume responsibility to the party and the state for the plan they have been assigned. At the same time, they should perform the mission and duty as commanding members of the revoluton without fail by exerting themselves in implementing their plans.

Success in functionaries' work is firmly guaranteed only when they work in a scientific way, not in a subjective way. Problems cannot be resolved when functionaries simply assign tasks to lower echelons and urge them to carry out the assigned tasks. Therefore, guiding functionaries, once they have received a party task, should consult it with the masses and sincerely and repeatedly ponder over it to find a way to solve the problem. Functionaries at the committees and ministries of the State Administrative Council and functionaries at all units, including enterprise complexes and plants, should seek scientific ways to resolve problems, based on their deep grasping and correct analysis of party policies and their correct understanding of the regulations of socialist economy. Thus, they should actively resolve assigned tasks and knotty problems.

Ways for progress and innovation are always found amid the masses. It is the consistent work principle of our party to trust in the strength of the masses and thoroughly resort to them. All functionaries should live and mingle with the masses of producers at all times, should inform them of the teachings of the great leader comrade Kim Il-song and the demands of the party in a timely manner, should find out ways to implement these teachings and demands together with them, and should inspire and move the hearts of the masses through vigorous political work, thus seeing to it that the masses of producers highly display their revolutionary zeal and initiative.

Today's reality, which is constantly developing on the basis of modern science and technology, demands that functionaries have high commanding ability. Without ability, functionaries cannot have the right to speak nor can they properly manage and operate the large-scale national economy.

Therefore, all functionaries should more properly prepare themselves to become able people politically, ideologically, technologically, and practically through their spirit and study efforts.

All functionaries should have all battle sites of socialist construction effect great innovations in accordance with the intention of our party by organizing and commanding the economic work in a more revolutionary manner through their vigorous will, militant spirit, and high commanding ability.

INCREASING DPRK-USSR MILITARY COOPERATION NOTED

ROK - Japan Amity Group Concerned

SK310110 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 31 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] Tokyo (YONHAP) -- The Korea-Japan Cooperation Committee said Wednesday that Japan pledged to spare no efforts in helping to make the Asian Games this fall and the Seoul Olympics in 1988 successful.

A communique, released after the end of the 24th joint session of the committee here, said Korea and Japan agreed to play a role of bridge in promoting the understanding among youths and academic research about the history of the relations to become "closer and most friendly nations."

The announcement for the program to promote understanding and history research well reflects Korean side's request to create a climate for avoiding misunderstanding regarding a series of controversy over the revision of Japanese history textbooks.

Expressing concern over intensified military ties between North Korea and the Soviet Union, the communique said both sides reaffirmed that stability on the Korean peninsula is crucial to peace of the world and agreed to firmly support the resumption of the stalled inter-korea talks and promote creation of an atmosphere for continued talks between South and North Korea.

SK310046 Seoul SEOUL SINMUN in Korean 29 Jul 86 p 2

[Editorial: "The Exchange of Visits by North Korean and Soviet Warships"]

[Text] Military cooperation between North Korea and the Soviet Union has been further accelerated. This has been demonstrated symbolically through the mutual exchange of visits in July by warships of both sides.

The mutual exchange of naval warships of both sides began with the visit to Wonsan port from 4 to 9 July by three Soviet warships led by Sidorov, commander of the Soviet Pacific Fleet, to mark the 25th anniversary of the signing of the Korean-Soviet friendship treaty. In return, North Korea sent three warships led by Kim Il-chol, commander of the North Korean Navy, on 25 July, to a function held in Vladivostok to mark Soviet Navy Day. It is noteworthy that CPSU General Secretary Gorbachev participated in this function marking Soviet Navy Day.

Great powers around the Far East, which are greatly interested in peace and security in this region, are concerned about the trend toward military cooperation between North Korea and the Soviet Union, which has been further accelerated, because this trend has delicately influenced the military situation in this region. Through RENMIN RIBAO, Red China, which once maintained relations of close military alliance with North Korea, has unusually expressed feelings of discontent with the recent visit to the Soviet Union by North Korean warships.

Countries that should above all the vigilant against the strengthening of military cooperation between North Korea and the Soviet Union are South Korea and Red China. South Korea is compelled to consider influence exercised by this cooperation over the balance of power on the Korean peninsula.

Red China is also compelled to consider the Soviet line of encirclement linking the Soviet Union, North Korea, and Vietnam.

Because of this, Red China has recently urged North Korea to suspend the crossing of North Korean territorial airspace by Soviet aircraft and conveyed its strong will to take countermeasures when Soviet warships visit Nampo port. If Soviet warships freely visit Nampo port situated along the West Sea, the activities of the Red Chinese northern sea fleet, which has its base at Lu Shun port, will be greatly hampered.

In May 1984, when he visited Moscow after an interval of 24 years, Kim Il-song began to lean toward the Soviet Union after maintaining equal-distance diplomacy between Red China and the Soviet Union under the pretext of independent diplomacy. Since then, military cooperation between both sides has rapidly developed.

It is known that the Soviet Union has supplied 36 MIG-23 squadrons, in a step-by-step manner. The Soviet Union has also supplied considerable qualities of surface-to-air missiles and SCUD ground-to-ground missiles to North Korea. In return for this, North Korea has allowed Soviet military aircraft to fly over North Korea to conduct reconnaissance and sortie exercises in North Korean territorial airspace and Soviet warships to visit Najin and Nampo ports. Military cooperation between both sides has become very active. The Soviet Union has urged North Korea to establish a joint intelligence command to conduct joint military exercises and training in the Soviet Union for North Korean Army officers and to closely exchange information. The Soviet Union has also urged North Korea to jointly conduct military research activities.

Needless to say, military contact between North Korea and the Soviet Union constitutes a factor increasing military danger in the Far East. If this influences the military situation, the Korean peninsula will become the first target zone. We should not avert vigilant eyes event for a moment from their military cooperation and collusion.

NKDP 'APPALLED' AT U.S. PRESSURE TO OPEN MARKET

[Text] Seoul, July 30 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's leading opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP) Wednesday condemned the increasing U.S. pressure on the Korean Government to open up its market for more than 40 additional items of U.S. commodities. In a strongly-termed statement, the NKDP warned that such pressure is feared to result in anti-government sentiment among Koreans to pose as an obstacle to the friendly relations between the two countries.

"We are appalled that the United States is again increasing its pressure on Korea to open its market for more than 40 additional items of U.S. products, including beef and computers, on the pretext of negotiations for extension of U.S. generalized system of preference benefits to Korean products," the statement said. It said the latest pressure is coming in the wake of a recent package deal about trade friction between the two governments which it contends were made because of Seoul's unilateral concession.

"The U.S. demand for further opening of the Korean market without withdrawing various protectionist measures which are clearly against the regulations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade is an attempt to make our economy a scapegoat for the solution of American economic trouble," the statement said.

MEASURES TAKEN TO CUT TRADE DEFICIT WITH JAPAN

Shift of U.S. Exports to Japan

[Text] Seoul, July 25 (YONHAP) -- South Korea in a bid to redress its growing trade deficit with Japan plans to make it mandatory for companies which import a large amount of parts and raw materials from Japan to export a certain amount of their goods to Japan. It also considers boosting the export to Japan of several commodities, including textiles and steel, which have been mainly exported to the United States. Exporters of those products to the United States will be required to ship to Japan a certain ratio of their exports bound for the United States under a measure to cope with the ever-growing trade imbalance with Japan.

South Korea's trade deficit has risen sharply recently with the first six-month deficit reaching 2.7 billion U.S. dollars. The deficit is feared to swell to 5 billion dollars at the end of this year. Last year's trade deficit was 3 billion dollars.

In a meeting of working-level officials from government ministries and trade organizations and the Bank of Korea, the participants also decided to regulate some imports from Japan which have excessively increased recently. The meeting, which was chaired by assistant Economic Planning Minister Mun Hui-kap, reviewed ways of giving financial assistance to importers which plan to switch its import sources from Japan to the United States or other countries.

Shift of Japan Imports to U.S.

[Text] Seoul, July 26 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government Friday decided to place under import surveillance some Japanese-made commodities that have recorded recent exports gains in Korea. In an effort to help reduce Korea's snowballing deficit in its trade with Japan, the government also decided to shorten the repayment period for short-term credits for trade with regions accessible within 10 days, a ranking economic planning board official said.

In a meeting with representatives from Korea's leading export industries, Assistant Economic Planning Minister Mun Hui-kap said that the government will reduce tariff benefits for some Japanese-made commodities that have experienced significant import increases in recent days. The government has no alternative but to take these and other hardline measures to reduce Korea's mounting deficit in its trade with Japan, Mun said. The government's decision, outlined by Mun in the meeting, will also require firms that depend heavily on Japan for the importation of raw materials and parts to shift their import sources from Japan to the United States and European countries.

The government will support firms that shift their import sources by covering some of the expenses incurred in the process through financial support and tax favors, Mun said. Firms that export large volumes of commodities to the United States will be required to shift a specified quantity of their exports to Japan. In a related move aimed at boosting exports to Japan, the government has decided to encourage firms to open a joint sales promotion center in Japan.

In the first half of this year, Korea incurred a deficit of 2.7 billion dollars in its trade with Japan, compared with a 3 billion dollar-deficit in all of 1985. The deficit is expected to surpass 5 billion dollars by the end of this year.

CONSTITUTION PANEL BEGINS WORK, RIVAL PARTIES MEET

NKDP Delegates Listed

SK240108 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 24 Jul 86 p 4

[From the "Press Pocket" colunm]

[Text] After a month of turns and twists, the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party yesterday completed the selection of its 17 delegates to the special House panel on constitutional revision.

Of them, six were appointed by Kim Tae-chung, another six by Kim Yong-sam, two by NDP president Yi Min-u and three by minor faction bosses.

Those selected by Kim Tae-chung were Yi chung-chae, Yi Yong-hui, Ho Kyong-man, Cho Sun-huong, Ho Kyong-ku and Chang Ki-uk.

The six by Kim Yong-sam were Pak Yong-man, Kwon O-tae, Pak Chan-chong, Mok Yo-sang Yi Yong-chun and Kim Chong-kil.

Reps. Kim Tae-yong and Yi Chol were appointed by Yi Min-u. The minor faction representatives were Kim Su-han, Kim Yong-pae and Pan Hyong-sik.

The delegates include seven law-makers who were indicted by the prosecution in connection with the so-called "floor violence" last year.

Among the appointees are five first-term Assemblymen.

Rep. Pan Hyong-sik who was recommended by an NOP vice president Yi Ki-taek was a last-minute replacement of Rep. Pak kwan-yong.

Rep. Pak Sil who has been active in developing new policies for the past year but was dropped in the list expressed a strong complaint, saying that there is no standard for the selection.

No Tae-u, Yi Min-u Meet

[Text] Seoul, July 29 (YONHAP) --Top leaders of South Korea's two rival political parties agreed Tuesday to finalize the projected constitutional revision before theend of the three-month regular session of the National Assembly begining in September. In an exclusive working luncheon at the National Assembly building, No Tae-u, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DIP), and Yi Min-u, president of the leading opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP), reaffirmed the constitutional amendment based on national consensus through the special committee set to be launched in the Assembly Wednesday. The two also agreed on the early resolution of pending political issues, including the one that involves seven NKDP lawmakers who have been indicted for their roles in a melee at the National Assembly last year.

The No-Yi meeting was the opener of a scheduled series of top-level meetings between major political parties ahead of Wednesday's inauguration of the special National Assembly committee. Wednesday morning, No is scheduled to meet with Yi Man-sop, president of the Korea National Party. In the meeting that lasted about two hours, their talks concentrated on the release of dissident detainees, the amnesty and reinstatement of dissident leader Kim Tae-chung, and other pending issues that might hinder the operation of the committee. In connection with the release of dissident detainees, No pledged his efforts to help set free some of them on parole as part of the amnesty scheduled for the National Independence Day that falls on Aug. 15. He recalled that through efforts made by the government and the ruling party, 446 of them have already been released since their similar meeting on May 29. No indicated an early settlement of the issue involving indicated NKDP lawmakers by saying, "Let's wait and see the actions of the government authorities."

In response to Yi's appeal on the alleged sexual abuse by a police investigator on an arrested college coed, No expressed regret but called for leaving the case in the hands of the judiciary institution. He denounced the aborted opposition rally to protest the case, saying that the opposition should have tried to dispel suspicions, if any, through the court action rather than to make political use of it by holding an illegal assembly.

Regarding the operation of the special committee, No called on the political parties to cooperate with mutual concession for the success of the committee, which he said is the key to the success of democracy on the Korean soil. "It would be desirable to leave the details of the committee's operation, including the duration of the committee activities, up to the hands of floor leaders and the committee itself," he added.

Saying that the DJP will finalize its platform on the draft amendment by Aug. 20 after undergoing all the procedures, No urged the NKDP to decide on its policy with flexibility for possible compromise by accommodating wide-ranging opinions on overall issues, including basic rights and form of government, and not to be confined to the direct presidential election method.

As for the granting amnesty and reinstatement of Kim Tae-chung, No reiterated earlier positions of the government and the ruling party that it could be considered only after preconditions such as his repentance of his past activities are fulfilled. Prior to the meeting, Yi had complained that no progress was made in connection with the release of dissident detainees although No had pledged his utmost efforts in their meeting on June 21. He demanded an early release of dissidents who are standing trials or serving jail terms for their roles in anti-government activities and reinstatement of those who have been released after being detained for their involvement in activities for constitutional revision. Yi also demanded that the governmemt grant amnesty and reinstate Kim Tae-chung at an early date so that all people may participate in the debate for constitutional amendment.

[Text] Seoul, July 30 (YONHAP) -- No Tae-u, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, met with Yi Man-sop, president of the opposition Korea National Party, over breakfast on Wednesday to discuss how to cope with difficulties stemming from the process of revising the constitution.

The National Asssembly's ad hoc committee for constitutional revision is scheduled to open a plenary session on Wednesday to draft a constitutional amendement.

In the meeting, according to No, Yi responded positively when No explained to him the results of Tuesday's meeting between himself and Yi Min-u, president of the leading opposition New Korea Democratic Party, thereby creating an atmosphere conducive to constitutional revision.

No quoted Yi Man-sop as saying that the government should pardon political detainees on the occasion of the independence day, Aug. 15. In response, No said that some detainees will be freed on that occasion.

Concering the operations of the ad hoc committee, the two leaders agreed to deal first with easy matters, such as basic rights and economic aspects of the Constitution, and to hold public hearings on the matter of constitutional revision in major cities.

Panel 'Inaugurated' 30 Jul

[Text] Seoul, July 30 (YONHAP) -- The special constitutional revision committee set up in Korea's National Assembly was inaugurated on Wednesday. The panel will take on the task of rewriting the Constitution, based on negotiations among the rival political parties.

In the inaugural plenary sessison, Rep. Chae Mun-sik of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) was elected chairman of the 45-member special committee. The assemblymen also selected five lawmarkers to represent the three parties: Reps. Yun Kil-chung and Yi Chi-ho of the DJP, Yi Chung-chae and Kim Su-hwan of the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP), and Sin Chol-kyun of the minor opposition Korea National Party (KNP)

The rival parties plan to reach a compromise on the major contents of the revision before the regular National Assembly opens on Sept. 20 to vote on the proposed revision. Under the committee's schedule, a national referendum on the matter of constitutional revision will be held before next spring. The committee is not expected to have an easy time revising the Constitution because the rival parties differ sharply over what type of government should be set up under the new constitution. The NKDP has adamantly supported the adoption of a presidential system involving the direct election of the president, while the ruling party has pushed for the establishment of a cabinet system.

Under the existing Constitution, the constitutional revision requires approval by more than two-thirds of the National Assembly members and finalization in a national referendum. No single political party has enough National Assembly seats to unilaterally pass the revision bill. Political observers said that the Assembly's special committee is expected to begin full-fledged activities after the DJP presents its own version around Aug. 20.

PASASON ASSAILS U.S. AID FOR CAMBODIAN REFUGEES

[29 July PASASON commentary: "Adventurous U.S. Step Against PRK"]

[Text] According to a foreign report on 24 July, a Bangkok-based U.S. official stated that the United States is providing additional assistance worth $5.5 milion for the so-called Cambodian refugees at various camps in Thailand, thus raising U.S. financial assistance for the so-called Cambodian refugees in Thailand to $9.5 million in 1986.

It is well known that the announcement on additional U.S. assistance for the so-called Cambodian refugees in Thailand followed the conclusion of the conference of the so-called resistance groups from six countries recently organized in Washington D.C. with the participation of U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and some U.S. senators. The purpose of the conference was to seek additional assistance from the White House in terms of weapons and money and support in the political sphere. The so-called resistance groups from six countries include representatives of the Cambodian reactionary groups -- Pol Pot, Ieng Sary, Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk, and Son Sann disguised as members of the so-called Democratic Kampuchea coalition group. For this reason, the announced additional assistance worth $5.5 million for the so-called Cambodian refugees living in various camps in Thailand is in fact intended for this Cambodian reactionary group. In addition to providing food for the reactionaries, the assistance includes training and the provision of weapons for them so that they can oppose the Cambodian people's revival efforts.

As a matter of fact, the announcement on additional assistance for Cambodian reactionaries disguised as refugees is a direct result of the Washington conference of the so-called resistance groups from six countries held early this month. To hoodwink world opinion cherishing peace and justice in the world as well as U.S. public opinion which is still beset with the U.S. Indochina war nightmare, the Reagan administration announced the assistance for the so-called refugees as a pretext. In fact, this move is intended to increase U.S. assistance for various groups of Cambodian reactionaries, including the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan group. This action, coupled with the U.S. declaration of 10 July as the day of solidarity with the Cambodian people, clearly shows that the United States is increasingly interfering in the internal affairs of the PRK while carrying out a state terrorism strategy against Libya, Nicaragua, Angola, and other countries in Asia, Africa, and Latin America. The announcement on the additional assistance is a new, more dangerous step taken by the United States against the revival of the PRK.

Despite all this, it is certain that the PRK's wheel of history will move forward continuously. If the United States refuses to draw lessons from its shameful defeat in the war of aggression against Indochina in the past, each of its current steps will undoubtedly lead it closer to the abyss of more bitter defeats.

RETURNING TRADE DELEGATION STRESSES SOVIET TIES

BK301417 Vientiane KPL in English 0901 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] Vientiane, July 30 (OANA-KPL) -- "More attention on economic cooperation with the Soviet Union in the coming years is to be paid on the building of communication, transportation and the development of the production of export goods, and other key branches," said Vanthong Sengmuang, head of a Lao econo-commericial delegation upon his arrival here yesterday after ending a week friendship visit to the Soviet Union.

An agreement on bilateral economic cooperation, good exchange financial clearance as well as on Soviet scientific and technological assistance for 1986-90 to Laos and protocol on 1986 goods exchange were signed in Moscow by the Laos delegation and its Soviet counterpart.

According to these documents, the Laos side is to increae its export quota such as wooden products, tin, coffee and other forestry products; and the Soviet Union is to provide Laos with machine, means of transportation, oil, construction materials, and ncessary goods.

"These documents are factors developing the all-round cooperation of mutual interest between Laos and the Scviet Union, and hence contributing to the development of socio-economics and the profitable exploitation of Lao natural resources," described Vanthong Sengmuang, minister of commerce.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE DRAFT POLITICAL REPORT STUDIED

Vientiane Military School

[Text] On 14 July, the administration of the primary combined military training school in Vientiane organized a session to officially study the draft political report of the party Central Committee with attendance of all officers and men attached to the school. The documents which were studied at the school were basically the contents of the draft political report of the party Central Committee which will be presented to the forthcoming Fourth Party Congress.

After listening to the lecture and exchanging views with one another during group discussions, all the participants unanimously agreed that the draft political report outlined by the party for the 1986-1990 period was full of rich contents because it contains the orientation, tasks, and policies of the party both for short and long-term objectives. It outlined more details for national defense and public security work, and the two strategic tasks of the party. At the same time, the draft report also spells out the regulations on international relations, especially toward neighboring countries sharing common borders with our country.

After studying the draft political report of the party Central Committee, all the participants came to more clearly understand the status, role, and responsibilities of our country as well a the responsibilities of our entire party, army, and people in guiding the country toward socialism and to understand more clearly the duties of the armed forces in fulfilling the tasks of national defense and socialist construction in our country.

Air-Defense Battalion

[Text] On the morning of 16 July 86, Air-Defense Battalion "A" in Vientiane region launched a campaign to study the draft political report of the party Central Committee which will be submitted to the forthcoming Fourth Party Congress. Attending the study in addition to all the cadres and combatants attached to the battalion, were cadres and combatants from the technical battalion and independent air-defense company. The participants studied together the draft political report and expressed views with a sense of responsibility to this report before it would be presented to the Fourth Party Congress. At present, these battalions are attentively studying the contents of the report.

The report went on to say that earlier, Air-Defense Battalion "A" also successfully organized a political life campaign for its leading cadres who subsequently more clearly understood the victories scored by our revolution scored over the past 10 years. They completely approved the draft political report of the party Central Committee.

Industry Ministry Study Session

[Text] At a time when our entire party, army, and people are striving to score achievements to welcome the forthcoming Fourth Party Congress, cadres and workers attached to the Ministry of Industry and Handicrafts recently organized a session to study the draft political report of the party Central Committee which will be presented to the Fourth Party Congress. It was attended by 617 people, including 89 women.

Ki Thoumphala, deputy minister of industry and handicrafts and secretary of the grass-roots party committee of the ministry, gave an interview to our station reporter on the success of the study session.

[Begin recording] From 30 June to 7 July, our entire ministry organized a political life campaign on the basis of the draft political report of the party Central Committee which will be presented to the forthcoming fourth party congress. During the campaign, all cadres and members of the party profoundly studied together and appreciated the situation, orientation, immediate and long-term tasks of the socialist revolution in the country. The political life campaign unanimously agreed with the contents of the draft political report. During the campaign, we came to understand more clearly the great and firm victories and achievements scored by our people in carrying out the socialist revolution in our country in the past 10 years. We are very proud of the achievements and victories we have scored together. At the same time, we are also able to pinpoint the difficulties, weak points, and remaining shortcomings faced by our people in the past. Then, the party cadres and members paid attention to solemnly analyzing their own weak points and shortcomings. [end recording]

FOUR PARTIES TO FORM COALITION GOVERNMENT

[Text] The Democrat, Social Action, Chat Thai and Ratsadon parties have agreed in principle to form a coalition with General Prem Tinsulanon as head of the Government, Chat Thai leader Maj-Gen Chatchai Chunhawan said yesterday.

He said further that his party had forwarded to Parliament President Ukrit Mongkhonnawin Gen Prem's name as its choice for the next prime minister.

He said: "The four parties have agreed to form a government. Chat Thai has decided to propose Gen Prem as premier and from what I have heard other parties will also be proposing his name."

Asked if the Democrat Party would go alone with this, Maj-Gen Chatchai, who said that he had met with Democrat deputy leader Marut Bunnak and Banyat Banthatthan as well as Democrat secretary-general Wira Musikaphong on Tuesday, replied, "I understand that the Democrats also agreed with naming Gen Prem."

The breakthrough in the coalition set-up followed hectic negotiations between representatives of the parties concerned which started in earnest a day after the election.

The Democrat negotiating team, led by Mr Marut, met with SAP leader Sitthi Sawetsila yesterday to discuss formation of a government. ACM Sitthi also met with his key ministers and party stalwarts separately, named Phong Sarasin, Surat Osathanukro, Montri Phongphanit and Prayut Siriphanit.

A senior SAP source said, however, that the SAP had not yet made any demands as far as Cabinet portfolios were concerned.

The source said that the SAP-Chat Thai link-up was made so as to indicate to the Democrats that they should not make too many demands.

The Chat Thai Party administrative committee voted to give full authority to Maj-Gen Chatchai and secretary-general Banhan Sinlapa-acha to carry out all negotiations and make all decisions concerned with the setting up of a government.

Maj-Gen Chatchai said that Chat Thai has also "joined hands closely" with the SAP in an effort to set up a government though the party feels that the Democrats, as the largest party, should be the core in a new government.

Mr Banhan said that if the Democrats cannot set up a government, Chat Thai may take the initiative and try to form one.

Asked if Democrat leader Phichai Rattakun could be prime minister, Mr Banhan said, "Other parties probably will not agreed. They could only do that if they have a majority in Parliament and under present circumstances it would be difficult. We shouldn't stress that the prime minister must be an MP."

However, he said that Chat Thai is still opening its door for negotiations with other parties like the United Democratic Party. He said that a coalition government of five to six small parties was still possible and could be stable with good coordination.

During the Chat Thai Party meeting, a group of people from Bang Kapi staged a protest in front of the Royal Hotel calling on MPs not to foreget that they had promised not to name Gen Prem as prime minister. Representatives of student groups also came to see the party leadership to protest the naming of Gen Prem.

Maj-Gen Chatchai said that the four parties had not yet discussed which ministries each will be responsibile for. He said that this should not be a problem because it should rest with the Prime Minister to delegate responsibility to each party.

A well-informed source, however, said that Chat Thai had set its eyes on the Communications and Industry portfolios.

Another source said that the SAP wants the Commerce and Agriculture portfolios as also insisted by the Democrats. The smallest of the four coalition partners in terms of seats, Ratsadon, has not made any demands, but it is speculated that its leader, Gen Thianchai Sirisamphan, who has close ties with Gen Prem, may be made deputy defence minister. The party is likely to be given a few more seats in the Cabinet, said the source.

Meanwhile, Narong Wongwan, leader of the Ruam Thai Party, which is still possible partner in a coalition government, said that he had been approached by two parties to join the Government. Mr Narong declined to name the parties, but said that Ruam Thai had not yet decided whether or not to join.

Mr. Narong, however, strongly backed Gen Prem for prime minister. "If the parties which contacted me don't want to have Gen Prem, then I will have to reconsider whether Ruam Thai should join the Government. But the likelihood is that we won't. I want someone who is sincere, honest and loyal. Those are the qualities of Gen Prem that I have come to know from working with him," he said.

Ruam Thai secretary-general Piyanat Watcharaphon said that it has decided to "stay still" and wait to see if the parties setting up a government would offer it one with a good image that has the support of the majority of people. The party voted to give Mr Narong full authority to decide whether or not it should join the Government.

He said that formation of a government is far from over because the prime minister has not yet been named. He said that by democratic principles the premier should come from the elections, but added "you also have to think about the well-being of the democratic system in the long run. If the person is someone elected and there will be problems, then this will have to be carefully thought about."

UDP leader Tuntheng Thongsawat said that he is opposed to the idea of having Gen Prem as premier, but said that he had not yet thought about trying to combine the small parties to complete in forming a government.

"But if the big parties forming a government want Gen Prem, then I will be the Opposition because I don't support him. This type of thing is already obsolete. Political parties don't have to worry about military. Each of us can do our duty," he said.

Samak Sunthorawet leader of the Prachakon Thai Party, which is likely to be excluded from the coalition set-up, said yesterday that he didn't mind being in the Government or on the opposite side because he used to play both roles before.

Talks Hit Snags Over Portfolios

[Text] The haggling over the formation of a new coalition government headed by Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon has apparently hit snags because of the Democrat Party's demand for three key Cabinet portfolios, government sources told THE NATION last night.

The source also said that the Democrats wanted a commitment that the party will take control of the Interior, Finance and Commerce Ministries while Gen Prem's political strategists want non-partisan figures on whom the premier can rely to take up the two key portfolios and the defence posts.

The negotiations so far have failed to set specific quotas for the political parties and Gen Prem but sources said that at least seven Cabinet members should be hand-picked by Prem. The Ratsadon Party has also been eyeing the interior ministry post.

As a result of the obstacles, Chat Thai and Prem's political strategists proposed that the details should be worked out once Gen Prem is appointed prime minister.

Informed sources told THE NATION that the Ruam Thai Party of acting Agriculture Minister Narong Wongwan has been left out of the coalition talks, leaving only four political parties as prospective partners: Democrat, Chat Thai, Social Action and Ratsadon.

Democrat leader Phichai Rattakun told reporters that he had held talks with SAP and Chat Thai leaders on a four-party formula.

"There are still some problems we have to iron out on the details of the new line-up," he said. But Chat Thai sources said that details of the coalition have yet to be agreed upon and should be left to Gen Prem as new head of the coalition government.

We have to listen to him (Prem) on how many outsiders he will nominate to what portfolios," one Chat Thai source told THE NATION.

Chat Thai MP from Khorat Thoetrit Bunyarit charged that the problem was with the Democrat Party. "Chat Thai and the others have no problems now," he added.

Realiable sources said that the only agreement reached so far by the parties is that they would support Gen Prem Tinsulanon as prime minister.

The sources said that Gen Prem's quota should be seven or more. The portfolios under his quota should be the posts of finance, interior and defence ministers as well as the PM's Office minister.

There were different versions explaining why Ruam Thai was left out. A Ruam Thai source told THE NATION that the party was left out because its demand for control of the Agriculture Ministry was rejected by Chat Thai Secretary General Banhan Silapa-acha. But a Chat Thai source only said that the party was left our of quota talks.

Highly-placed sources with access to negotiations however, attributed it to a "complaint" against Ruam Thai's election campaign which happened to offend somebody.

Phichai told reporters that he would report the details of his talks with the SAP and Chat Thai leaders to the executive committee which will meet today.

Earlier, the Chat Thai executive committee huddled and later on met its MPs on the coalition talks. As a result of the meetings, Chat Thai leader Maj Gen Chat Chai Chunhawan said, the party decided to officially back Gen Prem for the post of prime minister and to form a coalition with Democrat, SAP and Ratsadon.

A flurry of activities continued yesterday. These included a meeting between Banhan and Chatchai at the latter's residence last night. The duo were authorised by the party members to handle the negotiations.

SAP executive committee also met yesterday after a party meeting of MPs and SAP men resolved to empower party leader ACM Sitthi Sawetsila to negotiate on the coalition and appoint any SAP men to help him.

Move To Make Khukrit P.M. Fails

[Text] Moves are under way among a number of parties to form a coalition government led by M.R. Khukrit Pramot and with General Athit Kamlang-ek as defence minister, the BANGKOK POST was told last night.

Political party, military and government sources said the architects of the move wanted to bring together the United Democratic, Social Action, Community Action, Prachakon Thai, Chat Thai, Muan Chon and, probably, the Ruam Thai parties to blunt the Democrats attempt to set up a coalition with General Prem Tinsulanon as premier.

If such a coalition can be set up, they will invite M.R. Khukrit to assume the premiership and offer Gen Athit the defence portfolio, the sources said.

This set-up, if it ever succeeds at all, would command a comfortable majority in the House of Representatives with altogether 210 seats.

A SAP source who acknowledged the existence of the move, told the BANGKOK POST it was doomed to failure because the SAP had rejected it. He further said there was no way SAP leader Sitthi Sawetsila would be able to work with UDP leader Buntheng Thongsawat, who led the mass defection from the SAP in May.

Army sources said Chat Thai would also stay out of the move. Furthermore, Chat Thai leader Maj-Gen Chatchai Chunhawan said yesterday that agreement had already been reached in principle for the Democrat, Chat Thai, SAP and Rasadon parties to form a coalition with Gen Prem as the prime minister.

The army sources said that with the Democrats in the opposition, this planned rival coalition would not last long.

Radio on Post-Election Tasks

BK301049 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 30 Jul 86

["News in Perspective" Feature]

[Text] As economic issues will continue to be the major task facing the post election coalition government, foreign policy is expected to be increasingly geared toward boosting exports and reducing the adverse effects of protectionist measures in Western countries. The new government will have to seek new markets for Thai products while at the same time trying to regain its export shares in the United States, European countries, and Japan. This will pressure the government to consider trading with socialist countries.

Mr Phichai Rattakun, leader of the Democrat Party which is tipped to be the core of the new coalition government, has said he would like Thailand to adopt a free trade policy with Indochinese states and has indicated that his party's intention to have more say in formulating Thai foreign policy. However, with the election of Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, leader of the Social Action Party, no dramatic change is likely since he is expected to continue at the helm of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Air Chief Marshal Sitthi will undoubtedly adhere to his omnidirectional foreign policy declared last November. The policy says that Thailand's internal and external security, economic power, and international political influence must be strengthened and that this is what Thailand's foreign policy has been based on.

Regarding relations with the Soviet Union, Thailand needs to find a proper response to the more open and diplomatically skilled overtures made recently. Air Chief Marshal Sitthi has said potential exists for the two countries to improve their economic ties. He said that Thailand has been moving on a broad front and would deal with the Soviet Union on the basis of its reciprocal action, taking as the basic assumption that progress of their relations in one area could eventually induce progress in another, but previously there might have been an impasse. [sentence as heard] But so far, Thailand has been cautious to its approach to Moscow's initiatives for expanding Thai-Soviet economic relations.

The 7-year old Cambodian problem continues to be the main impediment to improved relations between Thailand, Vietnam, and the Soviet Union. Solution to the problem will be the main political role ASEAN will continue to play, although Air Chief Marshal Sitthi wants the regional grouping to focus more on economic cooperation. He has proposed that the next ASEAN summit to be held in Manila next 9-11 July should concentrate mainly on economic issues. The foreign minister will have to convince his partners to accept that economic priorities should be at the top of the agenda for the summit.

With a seat at the UN Security Council, Thailand has had a wider role to play than just as a member of ASEAN. Sitthi has said Thailand has to take a major role in international affairs. The Foreign Ministry has also been working to improve its political and economic relations with other developing countries. Countries in Latin America and Africa have been supporting ASEAN on the Cambodian issue in the United Nations, and Thailand has succeeded in mastering Latin American support against the export subsidizing policies on agricultural products of the major Western countries.

[Text] Businessmen, professional politicians and lawyers dominate in the new House of Representatives in which a majority of members are aged in their forties.

An Interior Ministry report shows that businessmen overwhelmingly comprise the biggest single group by occupation, with 86 having won seats in the general election.

Full-time politicians hold 41 seats, followed by lawyers with 32 seats.

Twenty-four newly-elected MPs are former government officials and another 12 are farmers. Eight are employees in private businesses and four are doctors.

A further 99 listed a range of livelihoods and 41 did not specify their occupation, the report said.

Of the total 347 House members, 12 are women.

A total of 126 new MPs are aged from 40 to 49. Ninety are in the 50-59 age range and 74 are aged from 30 to 39.

Forty-one are aged over 60 and sixteen fall into the 23-29 age bracket.

More than 200 MPs in the new House have a university education with 159 having completed bachelor degrees and 53 having studied at graduate level.

Fifty-one MPs completed primary level education (Prathom 1 to Matthayom Suksa), 40 completed secondary school and 17 hold vocational education certificates. Four are graduated of teachers' training colleges.

BURMESE DELEGATION ARRIVES FOR BORDER TALKS

[Text] A Burmese delegation arrived in Bangkok today to investigate the border dispute with Thailand over the Mae Sai River. The Burmese team, led by U Sein Lwin, director general of the Survey Department, will spend 4 days in Thailand during which they will go to Chiang Mai and Chiang Rai Provinces with a team of Thai officials to find facts along the river.

Director general of the Thai foreign ministry's legal and treaty department Waikun Samruatruamphon recently said that Burma claimed that it had lost about 1,000 rai of land due to the change of Mae Sai River as a result of the construction of water gates and weirs on the Thai side of the river. Mr Waikun said that under the Britain-Thailand Treaty in 1939 it was agreed to use the channel of Mae Sai River as the demarcation line between Thailand and Burma. He also said that in the past the Mae Sai River channel has changed several times in the course of nature, causing disputes between the two countries.

ARMY CURTAILS COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES IN SOUTH

[Text] The 4th Army Region has successfully crippled the activities of the communist insurgents in southern provinces. Commander of the 4th Army Region Lieutenant General Wanchai Chitchamnong said government forces continued to put pressure on the remaining members of the Communists Party of Thailand. As a result, he said, a large number of insurgents had given themselves up to the authorities while their activities in the area have been sharply reduced. He said that the communist insurgents could no longer launch large-scale attacks against the government forces in the south.

Regarding the problem of the Communist Party of Malaya [CPM] Lieutenant General Wanchai said 14 CPM strongholds had previously been seized during the "Thaksin operation," a coordinated operation with the Malaysian forces. He said the government has also developed some villages in the south into so-called strategic villages in which small villages have been merged into a large community. He added that several development programs have been jointly implemented by government agencies in these strategic villages.

[Text] General Secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union Mikhail Gorbachev reaffirmed the Soviet Union's stand to broaden new and equitable relations in Asia and the Pacific.

Speaking in Vladivostok on Monday, General Secretary Gorbachev stressed that the Soviet Union will do its utmost to consolidate and develop the friendship and diversified relations with Mongolia, the DPRK, Vietnam, Laos, and Kampuchea. The Soviet leader said his country is considering the question of partial withdrawal of its troops from Mongolia.

It is ready to broaden relations with Indonesia, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Burma, Sri Lanka, Nepal, Brunei, and the Republic of Maldives.

Regarding China, Gorbachev affirmed that the Soviet Union is ready to discuss at any time and any level with China additional measures to create an atmosphere of good neighborliness.

On relations with the United States, General Secretary Gorbachev noted that his country advocates another summit (?be held) United States. At the last Geneva summit the two sides tried to normalize Soviet-U.S. relations, clarify the international situation, [and] promote talks on arms reduction. The coming summit, Gorbachev pointed out, must serve the same.

He also said by the end of 1986 the Soviet Union will pull from Afghanistan six regiments along with their military equipment.

RADIO COMMENTS ON THAI GENERAL ELECTIONS

[Text] On 27 July Thailand held general elections for 347 seats in the House of Representatives. Sixteen political parties ran in the election and more than 50 percent of the total 26 million eligible voters cast their ballots. In the capital of Bangkok only about 30 percent of eligible voters exercised their right. Incomplete results show that the Democrat Party of Deputy Prime Minster Phichai Rattakun won 100 seats, an increase of 41 seats over the last election, thereby becoming the strongest political party. The Chat Thai Party won 62 seats, and the Social Action Party won 51 seats.

No party holds a majority -- more than 50 percent of the seats -- in the new House of Representatives, so the new government is likely to be a coalition. Various political observers predict that the Democrat Party, which is leading in this election, will approach the Chat Thai and Social Action Parties to form a new government. The problem now is who will be the prime minister in the coalition government. Public opinion believes that the new Thai prime minister must be acceptable to and supported by the military, the most powerful circle in this country.

VU DINH LIEU VIEWS FOOD PRODUCTION SITUATION

[23 July NHAN DAN article by Vu Dinh Lieu, vice Chairman of the SRV Council of Ministers: "Will Our Country Be Able To Reach the Target of 24-25 Million Tons of Grain by 1990?"]

[Text] Over the past more than 10 years, especially during the period of the 1981-85 5-year plan, our country has encountered many difficulties created by successive natural disasters in almost all regions, by the two border wars waged by the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, the multifaceted war of sabotage and land-nibbling attacks at the border that have caused many losses and hardships to our people, and by a serious imbalance due to untimely supplies and lack of material and technical bases. Yet, we have succeeded in gradually practicing intensive cultivation on the agricultural front, especially in rice production.

It is the general view that when the volume of production increases 1 percent, the amount of material supplies must be raised 2 percent. Over the past years, our country has increased fertilizer production, which was noted in 1983 in particular. A number of irrigation works, which had been built in accordance with the previous 5-year plan, have begun to show their effectiveness. Our people have contributed tens of millions of working days to digging millions of cubic meters of earth in building water conservancy projects. Scientific advances concerning seeds, cultivation periods, and production intensity, have been applied. However, draft power, especially that of tractors, has decreased. Agricultural materials, especially fertilizers and insecticides, have been provided insufficiently for production and not on schedule.

In 1984 and 1983, although we ran into the problem of importing additional amounts of chemical fertilizers from capitalist markets, rice productivity and output kept rising, thanks to the application of new management systems, including the system of contracting out end-product quotas to workers' groups and individual workers. This system proved to be satisfactory as it helped encourage our peasants and workers to devote more labor to practicing intensive cultivation, mixed crop cultivation, and catch crop overlapping [goois vuj]. In fact, Hai Hung Province planted four crops per year while the suburban areas of Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City planted six vegetable crops.

Regarding subsidiary food crops, no remarkable changes have been noted in general, but a new factor has appeared: North Vietnam notably increased its winter crop production in 1985, achieving an output of more than 300,000 tons in paddy equivalent. In particular, many localities planted corn, even in ricefields, thus increasing the corn acreage, output, and yield. They planted as many as 390,000 hectares of corn in 1985, raising the corn yield from 11.5 quintals per hectare in 1976 to 13.9 quintals per hectare on an acreage of 10,000 hectares. Corn output was raised from 386,000 tons in 1976 to 584,000 tons in 1985. Corn production is expected to develop further in the years to come. Regarding potato cultivation, many localities have applied the (?cloning) method to save seeds. They have also experimented with sowing potato seeds in ricefields.

Greater attention has been paid to subsidiary crop processing. Ho Chi Minh City has initiated a method of mixing 35 percent manioc flour with 65 percent of wheat flour to make bread and various kinds of very tasty cakes.

Development of agricultural production, especially grain production, constitutes a condition for promoting livestock production.

Within 10 years, our country's livestock production has developed both quantitatively and qualitatively. The number of buffaloes, oxen, hogs, and domestic birds has increased by 20, 60, 45, and 16 percent respectively. In 1985, the average weight of a slaughter hog reached 60-80 kilos. There are many models of combining agricultural cultivation with livestock breeding and of simultaneously raising two species, such as fish and hogs. I will have an article on livestock production later.

Thanks to production development and the implementation of more rational policies, our annual grain procurement norms have been raised. The amount of grain procured was 2,308,000 metric tons in 1980 and 3,961,000 metric tons in 1985. To me, this increase was due to the following main factors:

First, our party's very correct, creative line has begun to promote some systems, especially the system of contracting out product quotas to workers' groups and individual workers and the two-way contract system. In perfecting agricultural production relations, Nam Bo has adopted the lowest form of production collectives. Although the entire country has continued to be slow in perfecting these relations, this task continues to be a very important one and there remain many problems to be solved. Scientific and technical advances have been applied to production, especially rice production. Various sectors and echelons, especially installations, have provided more intensive guidance. In particular, our collective peasants have worked industriously and creatively while the working class has given them its support.

Besides our achievements, we have displayed many shortcomings and weaknesses. Although the paddy yield has increased, the entire country achieved only 28.5 quintals per hectare in 1985, a low yield compared with that of other countries in the world. In 1984 and 1985, our grain production increases were not very high due to many reasons, mainly the shortage of fertilizers and insecticides. The area of land left lying fallow has remained large, including millions of hectares of bare lands and hills. In many regions, the number of cultivation cycles of land remains very low, not over 1.3 times a year in the Mekong Delta for instance. There has still been no close coordination in the use of labor and land. Adequate attention has not been paid to combining agriculture, forestry, fishery, and industry; to coordinating specialized cultivation and trade operations; and to applying anti-erosion measures.

Although the perfection of production relations in Nam Bo has been basically completed by forming production collectives as the main form, there remain many issues that require profound study. No specific measures and suitable steps have been taken to perfect production relations nationwide. No adequate attention has been paid to combining state, collective, and family operations, with state operations being the kingpin. No proper efforts have been made to organize models of cooperatives or associated agriculture, industrial, and credit production collectives in order to affirm and multiply their good aspects and correct the bad ones. Many cooperatives and production collectives still practice rice monoculture and good models have developed slowly. The application of the system of contracting out product quotas to workers' groups and individual workers has not been consistently monitored and reviewed in order to develop their good aspects and correct the bad ones. There has been no adequate coordination between agricultural transformation and industrial and trade transformation and between the rural and urban areas. There has been no specific plan for improving the people's diet in accordance with local conditions. Since the plan for lowering the population growth rate has not been implemented properly, this rate has increased by over 2 percent annually. The systems and policies regarding agricultural management in general and grain production in particular have not been firmly and uniformly improved. Many of these systems are irrational.

Although we have achieved fair progress in the application of scientific and technical advances in production, especially in the selection of plant strains, breeds, crop cultivation patterns, crop seasons, cultivation intensity, and so forth, many shortcomings still prevail. Since capital survey work has not been implemented properly, we have not yet secured reliable installations for planning work and plan building. The greatest progress has been noted in the selection of rice strains. However, most of these rice strains are imported. No adequate attention has been paid to selecting local rice strains to be hydridized with foreign ones and turned into Vietnamese rice strains.

Regarding material and technical bases in support of agricultural production, we have achieved progress in water conservancy work in the Red River Delta. However, we have experienced electricity shortages and encountered many difficulties in fighting waterlogging. In many regions, especially in the Mekong Delta, the number one rice granary of the entire country, and in the Central Highlands, our progress has been insignificant.

Regarding agricultural materials, fertilizers, insecticides, and tractors, we still depend on foreign countries. We still experience severe shortages of drying grounds, warehouses, wrapping materials, processing plants, and transportation means and their deterioration rate remains high. From harvesting to consumption, the waste of grain and other farm products has reached 7.8 percent and even 20 percent in some localities. We still fail to protect paddy and other farm products from waste, although we have made some progress each year in protecting our grain. If the food production rate reaches 300 kilos per capita and if we adopt plans to control grain and goods, can lower the deterioration and waste rates, and implement rational distribution plans, we will be able to solve in the main the food problem for the entire society although rations may be small.

The aforesaid shortcomings and weaknesses have been caused by the failure of various echelons and sectors to realize that agricultural production is the foremost front and to concentrate their efforts on supporting it. We must not only consider agricultural production as the foremost front and the production of grain and foods as the central task, but must also translate this awareness into action.

It has been noted that the rate of investment in agricultural production for 1981-1985, though higher, was lower than that for 1976-1980. Adequate attention has not been paid to making investments in industry in support of agriculture and to studying and solving promptly and satisfactorily the issues regarding systems and policies for agriculture and food production. As a result, the rice-growing areas have generally become poorer than other areas and those localities known for intensive cultivation and high production have become even poorer.

To achieve this important objective, the entire country must strive to reach by 1990 the target of 24-25 million tons of grain converted to paddy equivalent, including 21.5 million tons of paddy and 3.5 million tons of subsidiary crops measured in terms of paddy; or 21 million tons of paddy and 3 million tons of subsidiary crops measured in terms of paddy. If we can produce 24-25 million tons of grain, the average per capita rate will be 350-360 kgs. It is estimated that our population will reach 68 million by 1990. This rate, though still lower than that of other countries in the world, is difficult to achieve in the present conditions of our country. At this point, we may ask: Will our country be able to reach the target of 24-25 million tons of paddy by 1990? And how can we reach it?

Over the past years, scientists have made calculations on the basis of advantages and difficulties and advanced many plans based on set requirements. To me, however, the proposed 24 million tons is fairly realistic, and concentrated guidance and resolute efforts are needed to reach this target. The planend 25 million tons is the highest target. To attain the proposed target, it is planned that the Red River Delta must achieve 4,030,000 tons of paddy and 580,000 tons of subsidiary crops; the Mekong Delta 9,840,000 tons of paddy and 180,000 tons of subsidiary crops; the Midlands and northern mountainous region 2,200,000 tons of paddy and 900,000 tons of subsidiary crops; Former Zone 4 2,050,000 tons of paddy and 560,000 tons of subsidiary crops; the Central Highlands 480,000 tons of paddy and 410,000 tons of subsidiary crops; the coastal areas of Southern Trung Bo 1,700,000 tons of paddy and 480,000 tons of subsidiary crops; the Eastern Nam Bo 1,200,000 tons of paddy and 390,000 tons of subsidiary crops.

To attain the proposed figures and settle a number of issues raised for each region, we must pay attention to better implementing the following tasks:

All regions must thoroughly understand the party's line, more vigorously develop the laboring people's collective mastery, and simultaneously carry out these three revolutions: the revolution of production relations; the scientific-technological revolution; and the ideological and cultural revolution, in which the scientific-technological revolution is the kingpin.

We must always bear in mind that socialist industrialization is the center of the entire period of transition, but agricultural production is the foremost task and grain and food production is the center. This awareness must be manifested by a revolutionary movement and practical, harmonious, and uniform revolutionary actions, in support of the foremost front of agriculture which is the basis of socialist industrialization.

We must further intensify scientific and technological work and concentrate our efforts on completing at an early date the perfection of the capital survey as a basis for planning work and plan construction, and on deploying cultivation patterns for crops, domestic animals, crop seasons, density, technical and working rules, and so forth.

We must, on the basis of planning, work out a plan for redeploying labor in coordination with land allocation in each district and city in particular and in the entire country. We must strive in such a way that in the 1986-90 5-Year Plan, we can complete in the main labor deployment and the coordination of potentials of land, forests, and seas. Importance must be attached to the Central Highlands, the Midlands, the northern mountainous region, the southern region, and the Mekong Delta.

Water conservancy -- the foremost technical measure -- is very important for all regions. According to the Ministries of Water Conservancy and Agriculture, to reach the target of 24-25 million tons of grain by 1990, it is necessary to ensure the irrigation of 5,173,000 hectares of the total 6,550,000 hectares put under cultivation, including 2 million of more than 2 million hectares put under winter-spring rice; 965,000 of the 1,050,000 hectares put under summer-fall rice; and 3,103,000 hectares of the more than 3.5 million hectares put under 10th-month rice. We must also ensure sufficient electricity and fuel to meet irrigation requirements.

Fertilizers and insecticides are the primary materials for agriculture.

As far as insecticides are concerned, we must mainly concentrate on preventing rice pests in general; selecting pest-resistant rice strains; doing careful sanitation work in ricefields; applying advanced cultivation methods; transplanting rice plants in rationally thick rows; planting rice on schedule; fertilizing rice crops in a balanced and methodical manner; and inspecting ricefields on a permanent basis. We must make timely preparations and forecasts for fighting rice pests and coordinate manual methods with the spraying of chemicals. We must promptly expand crop protection corporations in all districts. We must also secure annually 20,000-25,000 tons of insecticides which will cost 18-20 million dollars, as well as manual and mechanical sprayers. It is suggested that the central government bear the cost and readjust prices in the signing of two-way contracts.

The prices set on 1 October 1985 were so low that it is impossible to make up for losses, but no losses have been incurred with regard to fertilizers.

Regarding draft power and agricultural mechanization, according to current calculations, the draft power of buffaloes and cattle has to help ensure cultivation of 60 percent of available croplands. We must still use 40 percent of tractors in soil preparation to ensure cultivation schedules, increase the number of cultivation cycles of lands, expand the cultivated area, and open virgin lands.

According to the Ministry of Agriculture, by 1990 the population of buffaloes and cattle will reach 3,560,000, 70 percent of which can be used as draft power. So, between now and 1990, with our available tractors, we must produce or import spare parts for replacements, repairs, and maintenance work. We must secure annually an additional 1,500-2,000 large tractors and 1,500-2,000 small tractors and pay special attention to producing spare parts.

Regarding socialist transformation and perfection of production relations in agriculture, we must formulate plans to build and improve production collectives and joint production collectives in Nam Bo. We must work out plans with specific requirements and contents and suitable steps to increase the quality of cooperatives and production collectives throughout the country.

Regarding systems and policies, on the basis of the resolutions of the central government and especially of the party Central Committee's resolution on eliminating centralism, bureaucratism, and subsidization and on switching to the socialist system of economic accounting and trade business, we must formulate plans as the central work for both collectives and households, in accordance with agricultural production requirements. We must simultaneously create conditions for production installations to exert their financial autonomy and take the initiative in production and trade activities. We must examine our policies, especially the policy on prices, in order to develop both agriculture and industry and make our peasants engage in production activities with enthusiasm and devote all their minds and strength to intensive cultivation and livestock production. We must study and promulgate a policy of granting preferential treatment to those rice-producing units, rice-growing areas, and rice producers as well as to those intensive cultivation high-yield rice-growing areas, those localities which have encountered many difficulties in production, and those regions which have produced large amounts of food products.

In particular, we must examine and perfect the two-way economic contract system so that signatories can bear the same responsibility and enjoy the same benefits and rights. We must strive to encourage production development while controlling the largest amount of grain and goods, carrying out distribution operations with a spirit of economization, adopting a policy of strictly banning the use of rice in alcohol distillery, and applying strict and severe punitive measures.

On the other hand, we must apply a more appropriate policy and uniform measures to make everyone implement family planning work conscientiously. We must improve the people's diet on the basis of each region's conditions and each nationality's traditions. We must strive to strengthen the district level as clearly instructed by the Fifth Party Congress and adequately specified by the Seventh Plenum of the Fifth Party Central Committee. A plan must be formulated to implement these instructions.

I want to stress the need to urgently and accurately reexamine and supplement the general projects, sectorial projects, and installations' projects; boldly achieve division of labor and decentralization in the districts under the guidance of the provinces and central sectors; and reexamine the districts' organizational apparatuses in order to streamline and invigorate them, distinguishing between the state's managerial function and the function of production and trade. We must adopt plans to foster and train cadres, and strengthen the skills of cadres in the districts and installations, especially in the Midlands, the northern mountainous region, the Central Highlands, and the Mekong Delta.

We must concentrate our strength on providing better guidance on the agricultural front and in implementing central tasks. Under the leadership of the party Central Committee, the Political Bureau, the party's Secretariat, and the Council of Ministers, we must strive to devote more strength to guidance work and matters concerning cadres, guidelines, policies, and material supplies and capital for the foremost front of agriculture and for the central task of grain and food production.

PARTY, STATE DELEGATIONS LAY WREATHS FOR WAR DEAD

[Text] Hanoi VNA July 27 -- Delegations of the Communist Party Central Committee, the National Assembly, the State Council, the Council of Ministers, the Central Committee of the Fatherland Front, the Ministry of Defence, the Hanoi party and people's committees and the Hanoi Fatherland Front Committee, today laid wreaths at the Mai Dich War Dead Cemetery in honour of the War Dead and Invalids' Day (July 27).

The party and state delegations included Dong Si Nguyen, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and vice-chairman of the Council of Ministers; Tran Xuan Bach, secretary of the party Central Committee; Nghiem Xuan Yem, vice-chairman of the National Assembly; and Hoang Quoc Viet, honourable chairman of the Fatherland Front Central Committee.

After the wreath-laying ceremony, the delegations called on the war invalids being treated at the army hospital 108 in Hanoi.

Vice-Chairman Dong Si Nguyen conveyed regards of Truong Chinh, general secretary of the party Central Committee and president of the State Council, and Pham Van Dong, chairman of the Council of Ministers, to the war invalids and wished them quick recovery to rejoin their units and families.

USSR EMBASSY HOLDS PRESS CONFERENCE IN CANBERRA

Supports Nuclear-Free Zone

BK310858 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] A senior Soviet diplomat has told a press conference in Canberra that Moscow might give unilateral support for the South Pacific nuclear-free zone. A charge d'affaires of the Soviet Embassy, Mr (Valeriy Zimskov), said a speech by the Soviet leader, Mr Gorbachev, in Vladivostok this week had called for unilateral or multilateral support for the zone. The Soviet official also warned that the potential militarization of the Pacific was developing at a high speed, and the region could be turned into an area of confrontation. The Canberra press conference was told that the Pacific region needed a mechanism such as the Helsinki Agreement in Europe through which comprehensive security arrangements could be negotiated. The Soviet Embassy official said Moscow would be prepared to host an Asia-Pacific conference on the subject but it did not expect any fast decisions. He added that the Soviet Union's negotiations for fishing agreements with Pacific island states were purely an economic exercise with no political conditions attached.

[Text] Canberra, July 31 (AFP) -- The Soviet Union called here on Thursday for a meeting of all Asian and Pacfic nations to form a framework for dialogue like that resulting from the 1975 European security conference in Helsinki. It suggested that the Japanese city of Hiroshima, which was atom-bombed in World War II, might provide a suitable venue for such a conference. In a statement read out to journalists, the Soviet Embassy here said there was immense potential for militarisation of the Pacific region. "Militarisation and escalation of the threat of war in this part of the world are picking up dangerous speed," the embassy said. "The Pacific is turning into an area of confrontation."

The statement came as part of an Asian initiative announced by Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Vladivostok in the eastern Soviet Union earlier this week. It said the East-West summit in Helsinki had set up a mechanism for a dialogue in Europe. "By way of an objective, no matter if it need be a remote one, we would propose a conference in the mode of Helsinki to be attended by all countries of there go. "One of the optional venues for holding such a conference could be Hiroshima."

The embassy said the Asia-Pacific region should become part of a greater "comprehensive system of international security" with prime attention given to settling regional conflicts on the basis of existing proposals to solve problems in Afghanistan, Korea and Cambodia. Second, we stand for putting abarrier in the way of the proliferation and build-up of nuclear weapons in Asia and the Pacific region. Thirdly, we propose to start talks on the reduction of activities of fleets in the Pacific." The Soviet Union also suggested a conference, which could be held at a Soviet coastal city, to formulate measures to ensure the security of sea lanes in the pacific and to prevent international terrorism.

Discusses Wheat Purchases

[Text] The Soviet Union says it is too early to say whether the United States farm subsidies will hurt Australia's share of the Soviet wheat market. Senior officials at the Soviet Embassy told Radio Australia's Canberra corespondent, Graham Dobell, that price was not the only factor in buying wheat.

[Begin recording] [Dobell] The Soviet Embassy called a briefing to talk about its proposals for security and cooperation in the Pacific, but much of the questioning was on wheat. The Soviet trade representative, Mr (Tikhonov), said that wheat was a business matter and price would play a big part in Moscow's buying policy. But he said Russia was also interested in countertrade and selling more to Australia. [Words indistinct] and look at quality as well as price.

The embassy charge d'affaires, Mr (Zimskov), welcomed comments by the trade minister, Mr Dawkins, that Australian farmers should look at buying Soviet rather than American tractors. He went on to say though that it was too early and too hypothetical to talk about future wheat deals. [Zimskov] It depends on how the (?whole situation evolves), and, of course, we shall be always there to negotiate with Australians on the best possible deal as far as wheat or any other produce is concern.

[Dobell] When asked whether Moscow would use Washington's policy to drive down the world price of wheat, the Soviet officials laughed and said it was too early for definite answers. [end recording]

HAWKE STEPS UP CRITICISM OF U.S. WHEAT POLICY

[Excerpt] The prime minister has stepped up his criticism of America over planned sales of subsidized wheat to China and the Soviet Union. Mr Hawke said if the sales go ahead Americans will be seen as monumental hypocrites. His comments come shortly before a delegation of Australian politicians is due to arrive in Washington for talks with U.S. Congressmen on the wheat subsidy issue. On his arrival at Parliament House in Canberra, Mr Hawke said American politicians should be wary of seeking short-term solutions to economic problems.

[Begin Hawke recording] You cannot spend your lives and shape your philosophy according to certain fundamentals, as American parties have, about the need to protect basic freedom and ideals of liberty the concept of freedom of market, and then repudiate them, throw them out the window and make yourself a laughing stock and a monumental hypocrite and expect to have credibilty amongst either your allies or your foes. It is time for politicians in the United States to get their priorities right. [end recording]

There has been an initial reaction to Mr Hawke's comments from the American ambassador to Australia, Mr Bill Lane. Although refusing to comment directly on the criticism, Mr Lane conceded that it was possible America could be seen as simultaneously promoting free trade and subsidizing its farmers. Mr Lane said he would not comment further until after seeing a transcript of the prime minister's remarks. [passage omitted covered by referent item]

NEW ZEALAND

LARGE DISCUSSES GORBACHEV'S PACIFIC COMMENTS

[Text] Wellington, July 31 (AFP) -- Soviet praise for the South Pacific nuclear-free zone was "no accident, but part of a big-power spotlight" on the region, New Zealand prime Minister David Lange said Wednesday night. He was commenting on the call by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev for all the nuclear powers to guarantee the status of the zone, made in his speech at the Soviet port of Vladivostok Tuesday.

Mr. Lange said Mr. Gorbachev's speech was also a signal that the Soviet Union wanted to talk about disarmament from a position of strength. "He was signalling to the world by his audio-visual spectacular that they (the Soviet Union) are a Pacific power. They are clearly a North Pacific power," said Mr. Lange. He said he "did not know" what Mr. Gorbachev meant when he pledged in his statement "to start talks on the reduction of the activities of fleets in the Pacific, above all, nuclear armed ships."

Mr. Lange also noted that the Soviet ambassador to Wellington, Vladimir Bykov, also apparently "did not know himself" what the undertaking meant. Mr. Bykov said earlier Moscow "could not say" whether it would definitely sign the protocols to the South Pacific nuclear-free zone treaty, partly because they were not in completed form. The protocols are expected to be ratified by the South Pacific Forum states when they meet in Fiji next week.

China is the only other nuclear power which has so far suggested it may be willing to accept the treaty and protocols, with the United States, Britain and France all confirming they are studying the details. Mr. Lange also said the row between the United States and small Pacific states over tuna fishing rights had seen at least two states sign fishing agreements with the Russians. He said talks aimed at resolving the problems between island states and the Americans had been inconclusive and "this posed big problems."

While the Pacific island states were naturally more aligned to the West, there was a question of whether this could continue when they had "the choice" of accepting lucrative offers from the Russians for fish when the United States till now had paid nothing. Mr. Lange said the United States regarded such Soviet deals as serious and the "inevitable outcome" would be an escalation of superpower rivalry in the Pacific. "I judge that to be not in New Zealand's interest and not in the Pacific's interest," said Mr. Lange.

GROWTH RATE DROPS 6 PERCENT FROM 1985

[Text] Wellington, July 31 (AFP) -- New Zealand's growth rate slowed to 0.9 per cent in the year to the end of March, a fall of more than six per cent on the previous year, it was announced Wednesday. The sharpest contraction came in the March quarter, when growth fell 2.5 per cent compared with the same three months a year earlier, the government statistician said. It was the third successive quarter to show a downturn.

Statistician Steve Kuzmicich said the figures showed "a significant retraction" of the economy had occurred, with manufacturing output dropping 7.3 per cent, construction output 11.4 per cent, and agricultural activity 1.5 per cent. Finance Minister Roger Douglas said the retraction was "no cause for alarm or surprise." He said government had predicted in 1984 that the level of activity at that time was "unsustainable. The only surprise has been the length of time which passed before the downturn actually occurred."

BUDGET TO HOLD SPENDING, CLOSE LOOPHOLES

[Text] Wellington, July 31 (AFP) -- The New Zealand budget to be unveiled Thursday night is expected to hold government spending and close key tax loopholes, according to analysts. Finance Minister Roger Douglas has already announced reductions of 750 million U.S. dollars in the government's projected deficit for the year and promised tough tax action on tax write-off schemes.

Reductions in direct tax levels have been announced for introduction from October first, cutting top rates from 66 cents in the dollar to a maximum 48 cents. In place of the direct tax reductions, the government plans a wide-ranging indirect goods and services tax which will apply to everything from foodstuffs to even parking fines.

Tonight's budget is expected to continue the government's economic restructing programme, while holding the deficit to no more than four percent of gross domestic product, and to also continue the government policy of internal borrowing to fully fund the deficit. The government is using tight monetary policies as a key part of its strategy to reduce inflation, now running at an annual rate of 9.6 percent -- the first time it has been in single figures for more than a decade, analysts said.

Cigarette smokers are likely to pay up to one U.S. dollar a pack for cigarettes from Thursday night, with the budget tipped to add 30 U.S. cents to their price. Alcohol is also expected to have extra taxes imposed on it, while petrol and fuel prices are tipped to drop by up to six U.S. cents a litre. Mr Douglas will deliver the budget to Parliament Thursday night, starting about 5:30 p.m. (0730 GMT).

PARTY URGED TO RENOMINATE SUHARTO FOR PRESIDENT

BK301205 Jakarta BERITA BUANA in Indonesian 26 Jul 86 pp 1, 7

[Excerpt] Jakarta -- Regional executive councils of the United Development Party [PPP] have asked the PPP Central Executive Council to request retired General Suharto to be renominated as candidate for the Indonesian presidency at the general session of the People's Consultative Assembly [MPR] in 1988. The unanimous decision was contained in a statement issued by all the PPP regional executive councils in Jakarta on 24 July 1986.

The statement also called on the PPP Central Executive Council to assign all the members of the PPP faction in the MPR to support the candidacy and election of retired General Suharto as president of the Republic of Indonesia for the 1988-93 term at the upcoming MPR general session in 1988.

The unanimous decision was made because all the Indonesian people have enjoyed the tangible results of national development being carried out by the New Order Government to implement Pancasila. This has boosted the dignity of the Indonesian people. Even the international community has praised President Suharto for Indonesia's success in achieving self-sufficiency in rice. [passage omitted]

TEMPO INTERVIEWS MOKHTAR ON ASEAN, CAMBODIA

BK300033 Jakarta TEMPO in Indonesian 26 Jul 86 pp 20, 21

[Text] [Fikri Jufri] What do you think of current Indonesian-Australian relations?

[Mokhtar] As far as relations between the two governments, I see no strain. The same is true with relations between the peoples of the two countries. We have strained relations with the Australian press only, and now they seem to be confused about the situation.

[Fikri Jufri] In what way are they confused?

[Mokhtar] In reality, Indonesia is an interesting coverage area for the Australian press. However, after we became angry with them, they realized that what they had done to us was a great disservice to them. Many people in the Australian press criticized the article published in the SYDNEY MORNING HEARLD as an unwarranted story about the Indonesian president and his family. This resulted in the ban on Australian journalists entering Indonesia.

[Fikir Jufri] It seems there is now a rather conciliatory attitude in the Australia press.

[Mokhtar] I think so, and we in turn must also adopt a similar attitude. We should be sensitive to the criticisms, especially when they involve our country's dignity. However, we should not be oversensitive, either. For the time being, we may be lucky that there are no more "attacks" from the Australian press. However, in the long term, this situation may not be beneficial to us because without the presence of their correspondents here, we may well lose our means to influence Australian public opinion.

[Fikri Jufri] What about the planned visit of President Suharto to Australia?

[Mokhtar] For the time being, we have no hope of realizing such a visit. I would not recommend the visit, either, because I may give the wrong signals if I did.

[Fikri Jufri] We have never heard of our high-ranking officials visiting Australia, while many Australian officials, including one minister, have visited Indonesia.

[Mokhtar] That is right. However, let us see about the next year. What is important is that we not be in a hurry for such visits.

[Fikri Jufri] There have been reports that Papua New Guinea wants to join ASEAN, but backs down each time due to the strong reaction of the opposition in Port Moresby. Is ASEAN itself still open for new members?

[Mokhtar] I think it is enough for ASEAN to have six members now. We have reached consensus on many issues through a long process of association. A new member will not automatically make ASEAN more effective.

[Fikri Jufri] ASEAN's history is indeed full of consensus. Some people have attributed ASEAN's unity to the existence of a common problem faced together, namely that of Cambodia, while economic cooperation is far from satisfactory because each member country prefers to look after No. 1.

[Mokhtar] Yes, some people even say that the existence of ASEAN should no longer be maintained. However, let us see which alternative is better -- working alone or together. I believe the second choice is more attractive. Just look at the movement to oppose protectionism. Thanks to coordinated action, we have become more united. In this case, even a large member country like Indonesia can benefit from what a small country like Singapore can offer.

[Fikri Jufri] For example?

[Mokhtar] As far as skills and the service industry are concerned, Indonesia can capitalize on Singapore's ability instead of looking to faraway countries.

[Fikri Jufri] Is the ASEAN formula to seek a solution to the Cambodian problem still valid? Things are quiet in the diplomatic arena, while war is continuing to rage in Cambodia.

[Mokhtar] I believe it is still valid. Some people say that ASEAN's policy on Cambodia has failed because no solution has been reached thus far. My comment is: "Do you think the criterion lies on the successful solution of the Cambodian problem?" In fact, the real objective is not to find a solution to the problem, but to prevent the use of military power by Vietnam outside Cambodia. In this case, ASEAN is successful.

[Fikri Jufri] But Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach always maintains that Vietnam has no military ambition to invade Thailand.

[Mokhtar] This is what he has said. If ASEAN had recognized the Heng Samrin government in Phnom Penh as some political observers in our country think ASEAN should, Vietnam would not have stopped in Cambodia. After facing difficulties in Cambodia, it has declared that it has no further ambition beyond Cambodia.

[Fikri Jufri] Do you think that the pragmatists in the Hanoi Politburo will gain the upper hand someday?

[Mokhtar] I think it is clearly inevitable, even though we must still consider the role played by the Soviet Union. It remains to be seen whether Moscow will reach a compromise with Beijing over Cambodia. Unfortunately, when the time comes for the pragmatists to assume power in Vietnam, that country will have lost its momentum. Ten years ago, when the country was newly united, many rich countries offered to help it. Now, faced with economic recession, these countries cannot help much. Only Japan can be expected to help Vietnam.

TOLENTINO, OTHERS GIVEN 10 DAYS TO REBUT CHARGES

[Text] Manila, July 31 (AFP) -- A state prosecutor said Thursday that he has given Arturo Tolentino and other people accused of leading a coup attempt against President Corazon Aquino 10 days to explain why they should not be charged in court with rebellion. Luis Victor, the chief state prosecutor of Manila, told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE that he sent subpoenas Wednesday to the suspects, and "they are required to submit their counter-affidavits within 10 days." In the Philippines, state prosecutors called fiscals determine whether there is enough evidence to charge a suspect in court.

The Justice Ministry earlier recommended to Mr Victor the filing of rebellion charges against Mr Tolentino and 40 other civilians and military men who led a coup attempt at the plush Manila Hotel July 6. Mr Victor said if there is "prima facie evidence" against Mr Tolentino and the 40 others, he will file a case in court. He said his office had not yet sent subpoenas to the military men involved "because we are still waiting for a letter from the Defense Ministry that they have taken their oath of allegiance and therefore, should be exempted from the charges."

Mrs Aquino earlier offered clemency to the coup leaders if they took an oath of allegiance to a temporary charter called the Freedom Constitution. Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile led the Armed Forces, including three generals and some of the 300 soldiers who joined the coup attempt, in a mass oath-taking ceremony Monday. Most of the civilian leaders were still deciding on their plan of action in a meeting at the house of a former government official Thursday, a spokeswoman for the leaders said.

ENRILE COMMENTS ON OFFICERS OATH OF ALLEGIANCE

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile cited reasons yesterday why the military officers who took part in the Manila Hotel putsch and later pledged allegiance to the Freedom Constitution will not be charged with rebellion.

Speaking before the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (Focap), Enrile said the Justice Ministry is awaiting certification from the Ministry of Defense that the "loyalist" officers indeed took their oath of allegiance.

Enrile expects them to be stricken off the list of those charged.

"My understanding is that the military personnel who came out within 24 hours (from the Manila Hotel) will not be charged. Then there was the additional requirement to pledge their oath... They did both," the defense minister said.

Enrile and Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel Ramos Monday led the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] in pledging loyalty to the Freedom Constitution and the Republic.

But, Enrile said, the government should pursue reconciliation efforts with the "loyalists" without prejudice to instituting punitive criminal measures. Some of the "loyalists" killed one man in their recent Sunday rally.

The defense minister was asked if he was going to the United States with President Corazon C. Aquino. He said, "I have not been asked by the President to go...I'm not like a little boy who likes to tag along."

When pressed for a definite answer, he said, "I'm on order of the President." He added that he does not see "increased security problem" when the President will be out of the country.

"Why are you the object of suspicion?" A journalist followed up. Enrile said, "I don't know. Maybe I'm sounding like a ghost so they are apprehensive of me. I expect unfriendly forces..."

Enrile also said there is no basis for the perception that a military coup is likely in the country.

"It is inane to think about it and do it...The church and the public will see it with disfavor. The military will not want to start such a precedent," he added.

On the issue of policy-making on defense matters, Enrile said the Defense Ministry does not write policies; it merely implements them.

He said there is no policy on what action to take regarding captured New People's Army (NPA) rebels and underground activists while the ceasefire talks are going on.

He pointed out that captured insurgents are usually charged and brought to court.

Enrile also spoke on the Guardians, a fraternal "mutual benefit" organization within the AFP.

"It is not a clandestine nor sinister organization. We scrutinized the Guardians during the Marcos regime because of his (Marcos's) apprehension. He did not understand it...It does not worry me. They have been there for a long time. There is no danger...," he said.

REPORT DETAILS GENERALS' PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

[By Joel W. Lacsamana]

[Text] Ramrod straight, their eyes fixed at some imaginary target in the distance, the loyalist generals who participated in the Manila Hotel "incident" collectively intoned their pledge of allegiance to the Freedom Constitution, together with Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos.

The generals, standing two deep directly parallel to the flagpost in front of the general headquarters building in Camp Aguinaldo, were among some 1,000 other officers and other civilians and military personel of the defense ministry and the GHQ assembled for the symbolic oath-taking.

Enrile later described it as a clear display of the military "united, not fragmented."

Curiously though, the expressions on the faces of the "loyalist" generals seemed altogether similar. Gray, forbidding visages that did not seem to register any semblance of guilt, embarrassment or even atonement for actions or deeds past. Indeed for some of them the expressions of stony silence seemed more of an effective wall thrown up against the particularly unruly gang of reporters and photographers who had instantly swooped down on them for interviews immediately after the oath taking ceremonies.

"General Echeverria,," a television reporter shoved a microphone under the nose of Gen. Jaime Echeverria, one of the officers who had rushed to the Manila Hotel at the height of former MP Arturo Tolentino's proclamation. "What can you say about this oath taking?"

"It shows the unity of the Armed Forces against one common enemy," Echeverria echoed, his brows knitted in what seemed to be a permanent frown.

"And what enemy is that, sir?"

"Why, the communists, of course," Echeverria seemed surprised.

"What about the Manila Hotel coup and your participation in it?"

"Let's not talk about the Manila Hotel incident," Echeverria seemed to be getting irritated. "That's in the past."

"By taking this pledge of allegiance, can we now assume that your loyalty is to President Cory Aquino?"

"My pledge of allegiance is to the Constitution, the Filipino people, the flag and to the commander-in-chief. That should answer your question," Echeverria harrumphed. Interview clearly over.

"General Palafox, sir, what is your political viewpoint now that you have taken your pledge to the Freedom Constitution?" (Apparently, being a reporter nowadays gives anybody a license to ask a stupid question.)

"I have no political viewpoint," said Brig. Gen. Antonio Palafox, who was also one of the generals seen at the Manila Hotel: "I support the Constitution, and whoever is President now.

The next question, however, almost wiped out the genial smile from Palafox's face. "Do you think your recent retirement from service was due to your participation in the Manila Hotel incident?"

"No," stony-face was back.

"What about Arturo Tolentino?"

"What about him?"

"Do you still believe he is the acting president of the Republic?"

"Let's not talk about the Manila Hotel. That's history," Palafox said.

Gen Jose Ma. Carlos Zumel, former superintendent of the Philippine Military Academy (PMA) was next. "Sir, do you think this oath-taking erases whatever participation you had in the Manila Hotel coup?"

"First of all, that was not a coup," Zumel smiled. "I... we merely went to the Manila Hotel to watch the Tolentino oath-taking.

"Would you join in another Manila Hotel incident in the future (it was the television reporter again)?"

"No, probably not in the Manila Hotel again," Zumel was turning out to be a pretty cool media character.

But then probably sensing the import of his statement, hastily amended, "We will support Tolentino if he is a legitimate official, Right now, we support the commander-in-chief. The people have spoken."

Some reporters spotted Lt. Col. Reynaldo Cabauatan, the officer who led some 300 soldiers belonging to Guardian organization out of Pampanga to the Manila Hotel. "Colonel, Colonel...," one tried to ask a question.

"Sorry, no comment," Cabauatan who was trying to look as inconspicuous as possible, said. The expression on his face was an answer in itself and the press hounds wisely withdrew.

Other generals present were Brig. Gen. Rolando Pattugalan and Gen. Artemio Tadiar. Though they smiled cordially to the press, their answers were the same. We support to the Constitution, flag, the people and the commander-in-chief.

The unwritten statement was that, "We took the oath. That pretty much shows where our allegiance lies, doesn't it?" The media wisely chose not to press the issue.

"Ahh, gentlemen, how are you today," Enrile, smiling as always, saved the generals from further interrogation.

He grabbed Palafox on the arm and steered him out of earshot. "General Palafox, I see you're in civilian outfit today. You know..."

The oath taking was over.

KBL CRITICIZES CHARGES AGAINST TOLENTINO, OTHERS

HK310431 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0400 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] The Kilusang Bagong Lipunan [KBL] criticized the government for vindictivness in filing rebellion charges againsts former assemblyman Arturo Tolentino and 40 others. In a declaration of the KBL Central Committee, it said that the action was in violation of the conviction and recommendation of Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile. It added that Tolentino and his followers could not be considered to have staged a rebellion because no appointments were received and no functions discharged.

[Text] MANIFESTO

SO OUR PEOPLE MAY KNOW

Whereas, despite the incessant clamor by our long-suffering people for the return of the Rule of Law and for the protection of civil, political and property rights as enshrined in the Constitution, the Aquino government has failed to heed the voice of the aggrieved and to comply with its promises and pronouncements;

Whereas, in defiance of the Filipino electorate's sovereign will as clearly expressed in the ballot, the incumbent government continues to claim authority to rule on the basis of a minor public demonstration (billed as a "revolution" to give it the appearance of a national upheaval), but up to now has failed to show authentic proof of real support by the electorate;

Whereas, without proof of the validity of its claim to legitimate authority, the present ruling power has committed the following acts againt the Filipino people and the Constitution:

A. Abolished the 1973 Constitution (which had been drafted by elected delegates and approved by the people in a proper plebiscite), instead of simply amending or abrogating it in a convention of elected representatives;

B. Dissolved the Batasang Pambansa, the peoples' parliament of duly elected representatives -- an obvious act of retaliation against the Batasan for its having proclaimed the canvassed results of the February 7, 1986 presidential and vice presidential elections -- instead of seeking recourse as provided by law to legal protest before a presidential electoral tribunal;

C. Removed duly elected local officials and replaced them with hand-picked party favorites, instead of holding elections in accordance with the law;

D. Violated the independence and integrity of the judiciary by disregarding the constitutionally guaranteed tenure of the Supreme Court justices, who were required without justification to tender resignations so that new justices could be named and selected ones retained, all of whom shall then be beholden to the new administration;

E. Despite similar constitutional guarantees of tenure, required other constitutional officers to either resign or turn over their posts to arbitrarily appointed replacements;

F. Dismissed thousands of civil servants in disregard for their security of tenure as guaranteed by the Civil Service Law;

Whereas, the Filipino people, believing in freedom and democracy, reject communism; protest the fraternization of the present government with known communists; and object to the communist demand of coalition with the government;

Therefore, be it known that we in the KBL, the political party of majority of the people, hereby:

1.. Support vice president-elect Arturo Tolentino's taking of his oath of office as vice president, then acting president in compliance with the Constitutional provision applicable when the duly elected president is unable to discharge the functions of his office;

2. Recognize Acting President Arturo Tolentino's oath-taking as a symbolic affirmation of the faith of millions of Filipinos in constitutional government and in the legal existence of the 1973 Constitution;

3. Commend Acting President Arturo Tolentino for not disturbing, by his oath taking, any lawful function of government, not having usurped any such function;

4. Consider Acting President Tolentino's acts last Sunday, July 6, as a courageous and honorable response to the many appeals and grievances of the millions represented by those who, despite brutal measures adopted by the government, have persisted in gathering at the Luneta, Manila Hotel and other places to express their adherence to the principle of constitutionalism;

We urge our fellow countrymen, in the interest of freedom, peace, and the rule of law, the respect and uphold at all times, as we do, the following indispensable elements of democracy:

1. Constitutionalism, so that, among other things, any amendment to the Constitution shall be done through the peoples' elected delegates who represent legitimate interests, and not through an arbitrarily appointed commission representing only partisan or other narrow interests;

2. Election of local executives, rejecting as undemocratic any attempt to impose on the people appointed officials or OIC's [Officers in Charge] in provincial, city or municipal governments;

3. National self-respect, to keep our sovereignty inviolate, without outside interference in our country's internal affairs;

4. Fraternal tolerance, as a unifying element to bring about genuine reconciliation and true national unity free of hypocrisy or deception.

In keeping with our commitment to constitutionalism and the Rule of Law and our desire to promote unity among our people we pledge ourselves anew to the principles of democracy; reaffirm our loyalty to the Republic and the ideals for which it stands; we reiterate our resolve to ensure for every Filipino the blessings of freedom, justice and democracy -- and progress in our country.

[Signed] THE KBL CENTRAL COMMITTEE

We request those who share in our beliefs to reproduce this MANIFESTO for distribution to as many people as possible.

Calls For New Elections

HK251511 Manila THE MANILA EVENING POST in English 24 Jul 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] Former Batasang Pambansa Speaker Nicanor Yniquez, acting Kilusang Bagong Lipunan (KBL) president, yesterday said if an election for members of legislature and local officials is held, there should also be elections for president and vice president.

Yniquez said if no presidential election is held, it will confirm doubts of ulterior motives in appointing members of the Constitutional Commission (Con-Com) and will repeat the errors in the 1935 and 1973 Constitutions.

Reacting to the recent decision of the Con-Com Committee on Amendments and Transitory Provisions giving President Corazon Aquino and vice president Salvador Laurel a six-year term starting last Feb. 25 without holding new elections, the KBL said it "is immoral and will create a political unheaval that will worsen national instability."

The KBL central committee and "President Aquino and Vice President Laurel were installed to their positions under a revolutionary government and must declare that they are willing to submit themselves to a new election."

"To extend their term without election is politically immoral and downright illegal because this is being done through Con-Com members who were appointed and not elected by the people," the KBL said.

KBL leaders said the Con-Com "was unilaterally set up by Aquino without consultation with the people who should have elected its members to insure that their true fellings and sentiments are properly reflected in the new Charter.

"The Con-com was also set up through a so-called Freedom Constitution, likewise formulated and imposed without having been ratified by the people," they added.

To Present Alternative Constitution

HK280743 Dagupan City DZDL Radio in Tagalog 0445 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] Two constitutions will fight for ratification by the Filipinos once President Aquino calls a national plebiscite this year. According to some sources in the KBL, the new opposition party will present its own version of the constitution at the plebiscite as an alternative to the new constitution drafted by the Constitutional Commission. Former member of parliament Manual Garcia said the KBL members of the defunct Batasang Pambansa are drafting an alternative constitution. According to him, the KBL constitution will be presented at the plebiscite and they will campaign for its approval by the people. If the KBL pushes through with its presentation of an alternative constitution, it will mark the first confrontation between the former ruling party and Mrs Aquino since the 7 February snap presidential elections. It is expected that the national leaders of the KBL will also submit service records of ousted governors, city and municipal mayors, as well as of KBL barangay chairmen and councilmen in their campaign for the alternative charter. Garcia also said the entire force of the KBL supports ex-MP Arturo Tolentino who has claim to the presidency of the country.

MITRA COMMENTS ON DELAY IN TALKS WITH REBELS

[By Ding Marcelo]

[Text] Government peace negotiator Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra Jr. said the other night that the delay in the ceasefire talks with communist insurgents is due to the failure of rebel negotiators to contact their government counterparts.

"As far as we are concerned," Mitra said, "we are ready anytime. If they want to start the ceasefire talks today or tomorrow, any place they want, we are ready."

Mitra said the absence of former senator Jose W. Diokno, the other member of the government panel who is now in the United States for a medical checkup, will not hinder the peace talks.

He said he has been given authority by Diokno before he left last Monday that he could negotiate with the rebels in Diokno's absence.

"And so we are waiting," he said during the weekly TV program "Meet the Press" Wednesday night.

Mitra said he could not understand why the rebels have not made contact although they have named their negotiators long ago.

The Communist Party of the Philippines and its military army, the New People's Army, will be represented in the talks by former newsmen Satur Ocampo and Antonio Zumel, leaders of the National Democratic Front or NDF.

Mitra said there actually had been no contact with the rebel emissaries since he and Diokno were named several weeks ago to comprise the government panel.

He said there had been informal contacts with persons he was sure were rebels but these people, he said, made it clear to him that they do not represent the NDF or the peace negotiators.

Mitra said he has been waiting for at least even a phone call from either Ocampo or Zumel, both of whom were his colleagues when he also worked as a journalist.

"I really want to meet them now," he said. "The government is eager to start the negotiations but the rebels don't seem to be in a hurry."

Asked what could be the reason behind the failure of the rebels to contact, Mitra said he does not know.

Diokno, meantime, gave Mitra a definition of the safe conduct passes issued to Ocampo and Zumel and their bodyguards.

Diokno said the passes mean that the negotiators and their bodyguards should be free from surveillance, harassment, molestation, or arrest. In short, Diokno said, it means freedom to go to and from places where talks are scheduled.

He also said that the security personnel accompanying Ocampo and Zumel should not be identified and should not be disarmed as long as the two rebel negotiators identify themselves.

'Willing To Go Anywhere'

HK251519 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 25 Jul 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] Agriculture Minister Ramon V. Mitra Jr., one of the government's emissaries in the forthcoming negotiations with the communists, said yesterday that he is willing to go where the rebels are even in the absence of former Senator Jose W. Diokno just to get started the much delayed ceasefire talks.

Mitra told reporters that the negotiations between the government and rebel representatives can resume anytime and anywhere. Earlier two emissaries of the communist insurgents met for preliminary talks with Mitra and Diokno. The talks took up minor details leading to the preparation for the formal peace negotiations.

"I can proceed with the negotiations myself even if Diokno is not around and if the rebels want, I'll go to their place even without a safe-conduct pass from them," Mitra said.

However, he said, he is not inclined to publishing the details of the talks so as not to jeopardize the negotiations.

Mitra stressed that Diokno's having gone to the U.S. for cancer treatment will not delay the government dialog with the rebels.

The agriculture minister said whatever the outcome of the talks he can contact Diokno on his hotline to the hospital, brief him on the developments and receive proposals from him.

Mitra also urged the political arm of the communist rebels, the National Democratic Front [NDF], to file and register with the Commission on Elections [Comelec] their group as a political party to be recognized by the government.

He said this can be done after the peace talks, adding that it will be the Comelec which will decide if the NDF will be recognized.

Mitra and Diokno were appointed by President Aquino to head the negotiations for the reconciliation with the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP] and its military arm, the New People's Army.

The government also accepted the designation of Satur Ocampo, a former newsman and member of the central comittee of the CPP as member of the CPP panel. With Ocampo is Antonio Zumel, chairman of the National Democratic Front.

Mitra also disclosed that the first thing they will request from the rebels is a stop to hostilities while the negotiations are underway. "That is at the top of our agenda," he said, "But it is only a suggestion, they might want other things, but that's what we want to accomplish if possible.

Warns NPA To Start Peace Talks

[Text] Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra called on the NPA rebel leadership to set up a definite date and place for peace talks with the government. Mitra made the call in Cagayan de Oro City where he is attending a PDP-LABAN [Filipino Democratic Party-Lakas ng Bayan] constitutional convention. He said the NPA has not contacted him and his co-negotiator, former senator Jose Diokno, since the first preliminary meeting with NPA emissaries last month. Mitra said the ball is now in the NPA side and they should now tell the government if they wish to start peace talks. He warned that President Aquino might soon unleash the full force of the Armed Forces against the NPA rebels unless they agree to start peace talks and stop their attacks.

ENRILE COMMENTS ON CEASE-FIRE NEGOTIATIONS

[Text] Manila, July 25 KYODO -- Military resources will be concentrated and redeployed in insurgency areas even with the government's commitment to hold cease-fire talks with communist-led rebels, Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said Friday. "Some perceive an apparent inconsistency in this, but it is actually part of the so-called talk-fight strategy that has been proven in several parts of the world," Enrile said in his address to sugar planters from the central Philippines at a meeting in Manila. "We cannot talk and stop fighting and we cannot fight without talking. So while we are talking with our adversaries, we must continue to apply pressure on them," he said.

Enrile said a "defensive yet visible military presence" before and during the talks is "indispensible" because it will allow the government to negotiate from a position of strength, maintain the balance of forces and prepare for a "fast-moving confrontational situation" if the talks fail. Enrile clarified the counter-insurgency policy apparently in reaction to remarks made by Presidential Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, a former human rights lawyer, who said early this week that the military cannot stamp out the 17-year insurgency unless soldiers are first "reeducated." "If I am at times assailed for my somewhat strong positions regarding the insurgency, then I say, amen to my belief for I did not come to public service to seek popularity," said Enrile, who had been defense minister for the past 16 years.

Enrile and Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel Ramos led a civilian-backed military revolt which toppled Ferdinand Marcos' 20-year rule and installed President Corazon Aquino. He was retained by Aquino in the new Cabinet, which has been described by analysts as a shaky coalition of leftist, liberals and rightists who hold clashing views on how to put an end to the 17-year insurgency.

Enrile has publicly expressed skepticism on the outcome of the negotiations and accused the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) and its military, the New People's Army (NPA), of deliberately attempting to delay the preliminary talks with government negotiators. The charge was denied by rebel negotiator Satur Ocampo, a former journalist and political detainee, who said it is Enrile who is trying to "sabotage the dialogue and to discredit the revolutionary movement," Ocampo, a negotiator for the leftwing underground coalition, National Democratic Front (NDF), said in signed statment received by KYODO news service Friday that he talked with human rights lawyer Jose Diokno, one of the government's ceasefire negotiators.

He said he "took up several matters related to the dialogue-negotiations" with Diokno last Monday before Diokno left for the United States for a medical examination.

OCAMPO REPORTEDLY MET WITH DIOKNO 21 JUL

[Text] A communist rebel leader appointed as emissary to cease-fire negotiations with the government said that he met with a government representative last Monday. Former newsman Satur Ocampo denied accusations that the rebels are deliberately delaying the talks. According to him, he held talks with lawyer Jose Diokno shortly before the latter left for a medical check up in the United States. Nonetheless, he did not reveal the contents of their talks. Meanwhile, Diokno's aides and family said that they cannot comment on Ocampo's report. Earlier, agriculture minister Ramon Mitra complained that the representatives of the rebels have not approached him.

MISUARI WILLING TO HOLD DIALOGUE WITH GOVERNMENT

[Text] A breakthrough is seen in the long drawn-out hostilities in Mindanao between the secessionist Moro National Liberation Front and the Armed Forces. The front chairman, Nur Misuari, has reportedly ordered the Bangsa Moro Army to cease all hostilities with the new Armed Forces. Philippine Defense minister Juan Ponce Enrile informed Army Chief of Staff General Ramos that Misuari had ordered all his front commanders to remove the obstacles to peace initiatives of the Aquino government in Mindanao. The defense minister said that perhaps it is time for both sides to reimpose conditions and terms of the cease-fire agreement signed on 20 January 1977, even without the presence of representatives from the ministerial commission of the Islamic Conference.

MUSLIM TRIBAL LEADERS PUSH AUTONOMY DEMAND

[By Roy C. Sinfuego]

[Text] Muslim leaders of Mindanao urged yesterday that the new charter grant autonomy to the Moro people "within the realm of the territorial integrity and sovereignty of the Republic."

The proposal was firmed up during a consultative forum held at the Asian Institute of Tourism in Quezon City by Muslim ulamas, uztads, academicians, scholars, political leaders, and other professionals representing the Maranao, Tausug, Maguindanao, and Yakan tribes.

The Muslim leaders sought autonomy as an alternative to secession or independence "because it will provide the socio-political, economic, cultural, and educational systems which will support their practice of Islam under a democratic system of government."

Sheik Ahmad Basher, conference chairman, said the Moro people will seek the grant of autonomy through a special provision to be included in the draft of the new constitution.

Basher said the Christians and other tribal groups of Mindanao will continue to be governed by existing Philippine laws and rules.

Under the proposed autonomy, the Muslim leaders said that non-Muslim inhabitants will not be prejudiced since laws will be enacted to cover both Muslims and Christians.

They stressed that the Christians will not suffer discrimination and repression in a Muslim autonomous region because "Islam does not suppress the rights and privileges of anyone, regardless of their religious belief."

The autonomy is basically similar to that being sought under the Tripoli Agreement by the moderate factions of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) headed by Hashim Salamat of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MNLF) and Dimas Pundatu.

Nur Misuari, chairman of the radical MNLF faction is insisting on a complete independent Muslim state in Southern Philippines.

The new proposal seeks the granting of Muslim the autonomy as prescribed by the new constitution instead of the Tripoli Agreement signed by the Philippine Government and Misuari in 1976 in Libya. [sentence as published]

The Muslim leaders claimed that autonomy is their "legal and historic" right, having been an independent and sovereign Bangsa (nation) Moro long before the coming of Spanish colonizers in 1521.

Dr Abdullah T. Madale, spokesman of the group, said the position of the conference delegates is an expression of the Moro people's conviction that autonomy is the "only visible alternative to separation or secession."

Madale said the Muslim leaders "repose their hope in the new Charter now being drafted as one which shall grant recognition to their historic status, inherent rights, and aspirations."

Minister Candu Muarif of the Muslim affairs and cultural communities expressed support to the proposal.

"This is the time that we can achieve our objective all of us must pray, all of us must fight and we will move forward as one until our goal is achieved," Muarif said.

Former senator and now Constitutional Commissioner Domocao Alonto said the "struggle of the Moro people for autonomy did not start just now it has started from the very beginning that foreign invaders set foot on our shores."

Among those who attended the conference were ex-senator and now Foreign Affairs Deputy Minister Manintal A. Tamano, Agrarian Reform Deputy Minister Jiamel Dianalan, Con-Com Commissioners Lugun Uka and Ponciano Bennagon, Princess Tarhata Alonto Lucman, ex-MPs Potri Pacasum and Omar Dianalan, Justic Mam Busran, Mindanao State University Vice President Manaros Boransing, and Hadja Zorayda Abbas Tamano.

SPOKESMAN DENIES CPP SPLIT OVER CEASE-FIRE TALKS

HK231129 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 17 Jul 86 p 3

[By Staff Member Jun Lopez]

[Text] The Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP] is not split over the forthcoming cease-fire negotiations with the government as claimed by military intelligence reports, an underground spokesman said yesterday.

At the same time, the CPP accused the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the defense ministry of "begging for more U.S. military aid while screaming anti-government hysteria."

The CPP, a member of the National Democratic Front (NDF) whose emissaries will face government peace negotiations soon, said the NDF is studying proposals from different sectors and regions nationwide for the proposed cease-fire.

Earlier, top military intelligence officers claimed the regional and central committees of the CPP are split on the cease-fire.

"We have submitted to the national NDF our proposals for considerations in the cease-fire talks," Ka [Comrade] Julio, the spokesman for NDF-Cagayan, said in an interview.

He said the NPA regional operational commands (ROCs) have dismissed regional cease-fire talks because the issue on arms truce is of national concern.

ROCs, he said, are optimistic the negotiations would lead to a "lasting peace based on justice and democracy."

According to the military, the CPP's regional organizations have felt that the central committee is "becoming soft" by entering the peace talks. ROC spokesmen, however, reiterated their willingness to honor the truce.

"The propaganda barrage of the reactionary Armed Forces of the Philippines and the MND [Ministry of National Defense] only proves their unwillingness to enter into cease-fire negotiations," he said.

He asked, "Is the military capable to abide by and implement what would be reached in the cease-fire talk?"

Ka Julio also accused the military of strengthening their armed presence in practically all areas in he countryside where "the national democratic revolution of the NDF/CPP/NPA is gaining."

In those regions, a de facto revolutionary government is recognized and supported by the people, mostly peasants, he claimed.

The source, one of the high-ranking members of an underground group, is in his late '20's. He is a veteran of the First Quarter Storm and currently the sectoral representative to the NDF.

He is fair skinned and talks fluent English and Tagalog.

The interview was conducted somewhere in Manila.

NPA ACCUSES MILITARY OF 'TWISTING FACTS'

HK290515 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 27 Jul 86 pp 1, 6

[By Rhony Laigo]

[Text] The New People's Army has accused the military of twisting facts in media reports to give the impression that the insurgents' tactical offensive is continuing despite the government's call for peace talks.

In an interview in LIBERATION, the rebels' official organ, Ka Ronnie, of the NPA general staff, cited published reports during the first week of May about encounters which according to him took place many months ago. He pointed out that the clash in Cotabato where 10 NPA's and nine Civilian Home Defense Forces (CHDF) members were reportedly killed was made to appear to have taken place in May when in fact it happened in January and that only three communist fighters were killed while the CHDF soldiers were merely disarmed.

Although raids and ambuscades do occur and continue, he said that this is because military terrorism and counter-insurgency against the NPA and the masses also continue without letup. (Defense Minister Enrile said the other day that redeployment and concentration of military resources in rebel-affected areas will continue even as the military pursues reconciliation efforts of the government).

Ronnie also said that incomplete reports show that there has been no significant, marked or perceptible decrease in the number of incidents between the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] and the NPA. He added that although there are some areas or regions where hostilities have apparently abated, there are also some areas -- notably Cagayan, Bicol, Mindanao, and some visayas islands -- where encounters have been more frequent. These, he revealed, are areas where the AFP has continued intense military operations even after the February uprising.

On the other hand, he stressed that the NPA, upon instructions from the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), has become more selective with targets, concentrating on confiscation of crony properties, punishment of notorious elements and "enemies of the people" and disarming private armies of warlords and CHDF's.

He explained that the NPA's actions are mainly defensive in nature. He further said that the NPA has assumed an active defense posture policy which is based on four assumptions. These are first, that the enemy is strategically superior or is on the offensive, second, that the NPA can achieve local superiority in some areas within the region by concentrating there a relatively large force having the element of surprise, mass support (for example in legisties and intelligence) and greater mastery of terrain, third, that although the NPA may not have local superiority, it can launch tactical defensive actions whose purpose is not to annihiliate the enemy but to frustrate or disrupt its plans through sniping, sabotage and harassment operations, and fourth, that the NPA can stage tactical counter-offensives where the initiative in a certain military action may be wrested from the enemy.

He added from the beginning, the NPA has always been on the defensive i.e. frustrating enemy's plans and maneuvers.

He said that since the formation of the NPA, there have been some comrades who left the army to lie low for various reasons, such as poor health, or the desire to live with their families or simply because they cannot take the hard life of a guerilla anymore.

But he denied the AFP's claim that the Red fighters are coming down from the hills in droves because the CPP erred in its boycott stand and caused the demoralization of many of its members.

He added that there has been no significant increase in the annual rate of guerillas leaving the NPA every year. He denied that many are now prepared to surrender and that there are no more NPA members in Cebu and in Davao.

TAMURA ANNOUNCES SEMICONDUCTOR ACCORD WITH U.S.

OW311445 Tokyo KYODO in English 1440 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] Tokyo, July 31 KYODO -- International Trade and Industry Minister Hajime Tamura announced Thursday night Japan and the United States have agreed on bilateral semiconductor trade after more than a year of negotiations in both capitals.

The agreement calls for both governments to establish a price monitoring system to prevent Japanese microchips from being dumped in the U.S. market.

It also requires the Japanese government to make efforts to give American microchips wider access to the Japanese market, ministry officials said.

Tamura said in a statement the agreement is extremely significant in promoting the sound development of Japanese and U.S. semiconductor industries and affecting favorably the overall relations between the two countries.

He said full consideration has been paid to avoid damaging the interests of other countries.

Tamura expressed hope that the related industries of both countries will understand and cooperate in realizing the objectives of the agreement.

MITI Official on Accord

OW301646 Tokyo KYODO in English 1537 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] Tokyo, July 31 KYODO -- Japan and the United States have reached a final agreement on bilateral semiconductor trade with an expectation that U.S. firms would expand their share in the Japanese semiconductor market, a senior official of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) said Thursday night.

The agreement is expected to be initialed Thursday afternoon (Washington time) and signed later, MITI officials said.

Yukiharu Kodama, director-general of MITI's Machinery and Information Industries Bureau, said the U.S. administration suspended dumping investigations into two Japanese-made microchips -- erasable, programmable read-only memory (EPROM) and 256-kilobit dynamic random access memory (DRAM) chips -- in the American market.

The overall agreement covers eight products: EPROMS, 256k DRAMS, static-rams, emitter-coupled logic rams, 8- and 16-bit microprocessors, 8-bit microcontrollers and other custom-designed chips, Kodama said.

The Japanese-U.S. overall agreement marks the first governmental accord in high-technology trade.

The U.S. Demanded that Japan "guarantee" the doubling of U.S. share in the estimated 6 billion dollar Japanese semiconductor market to about 20 percent in five years, Kodama said.

But the final agreement did not "guarantee" the expansion of U.S. share, saying only the Japanese Government will provide further support for expanded sales by foreign firms in Japan, he said.

The agreement called upon major Japanese chipmakers of EPROM and 256k DRAM chips to submit quarterly cost-accounting data and sales prices on the basis of which the U.S. Department of Commerce will monitor prices to prevent Japanese chipmakers from selling their products at less than fair market value.

The accord came in last-ditch subcabinet-level negotiations between Makoto Kuroda, MITI vice minister for international affairs, and Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Michael B. Smith in Washington.

Japan is obliged to monitor "company-specific costs and export prices," reported by Japanese chipmakers, to prevent dumping of Japanese-made microchips in "third party markets" including European Community (EC) and Asian nations, Kodama said.

MITI will establish an organization to assist U.S. firms to increase their sales in Japan and to promote "long-term relationships" between microchip users and U.S. semiconductor manufacturers, he said.

Both countries stressed that the agreement would not hamper interests of any third parties and provisions of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

Summary of Accord

OW311640 Tokyo KYODO in English 1446 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] Tokyo, July 31 KYODO -- The following is the summary of Japan-U.S. agreement on bilateral semiconductor trade released Thursday by the Ministry of Internatonal Trade and Industry.

1. Market access

(1) Both governments hope to expand free trade in semiconductors based upon market forces and competition.

The Japanese Government will encourage semiconductor users in Japan to use foreign-made semiconductors.

The U.S. Government will encourage U.S. semiconductor makers to step up sales efforts.

(2) Both governments expect steady expansion of access to the Japanese market of foreign-made semiconductors.

(3) The Japanese Government will implement the following measures and the U.S. Government will support them as much as possible.

a. Japan will establish an organization for the promotion of sales of foreign semiconductors in Japan, the quality assessment of foreign products and the promotion of exchange of researchers.

b. Japan will promote long-term cooperation between Japanese users and foreign makers.

(4) Both governments will refrain from taking measures that would lead to excessive capacity for producing semiconductors.

2. Prevention of dumping

(1) Suspension of dumping investigation

The U.S. Government will suspend dumping investigation intc EPROM (erasable, programmable read-only memory) chips and 256-kilobit DRAM (dynamic random access memory) chips or larger drams.

(2) Monitoring system for U.S. market

a. The Japanese Government will monitor costs and prices on specified products exported from Japan to the U.S. in view of the importance of eliminating dumping.

b. These products will be identified by aagreement of the two governments from among those semiconductors which Japanese companies produce in substantial volume, are increasingly exported to the U.S. and meet either of the following criteria: They are standard and general-use semiconductors or there is evidence or a threat of sales at less than fair value.

c. Cost and export price data on monitored products will be submitted to the MITI in accordance with procedures established by MITI. Japanese exporters will be advised to provide MITI with the data concerning the sales prices to third parties in the U.S.

d. Both governments will conduct negotiations on request by the U.S. Government that Japanese industries submit information on their semiconductor sales if they are sold at below fair value.

e. Based upon the negotiations, the Japanese Government will advise industries to refrain from exporting and selling semiconductors at below fair value.

f. The U.S. Government reserves the right to initiate dumping investigations. The U.S. Administration will undertake consultations before it begins voluntary investigation.

g. The U.S. Government will encourage Japanese semiconductor exporters to submit required data at an early stage.

(3) Monitoring sytem for third market

The Japanese government will conduct appropriate monitoring of costs and export prices regarding exports to third countries in view of the importance of eliminating dumping.

3. General rules

(1) The agreement takes effect provided that two suspension agreements between the U.S. Department of Commerce and Japanese exporters concerning dumping investigation on EPROM and DRAMS with a memory capacity of 256 kilobits and above are realized.

(2) Both governments will hold talks to review the implementation of the agreed measures.

(3) The agreement could be abrogated if the base of the agreement changes substantially.

(4) Any provisions of this agreement should not hamper interest of third countries and affect rights and obligations of the general agreement on tariffs and trade.

(5) The term of the agreement is five years.

Industry Leader Views Accord

OW010313 Tokyo KYODO in English 0255 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 1 KYODO -- A Japanese semiconductor industry leader Thursday pledged faithful observance of a bilateral semiconductor trade agreement reached between Japan and the United States the same day.

Shoichi Saba, president of the Electronic Industries Association of Japan, said the agreement places heavy burdens on Japanese semiconductor manufacturers. "But we are determined to faithfully abide by and implement the agreement," he said.

Saba, who is chairman of Toshiba Corp., said he will also do his best to contribute to healthy development of the semiconductor industries of both Japan and the United States.

Japan and the United States Thrusday reached a final agreement on a bilateral semiconductor trade dispute. The agreement calls on Japan to take measures to expand the share of U.S.-made semiconductors in its domestic market and prevent "dumping" of Japanese-made chips in the U.S. market.

The U.S. Government, in exchange will suspend investigatins into alleged "dumping" of Japanese-made chips in the U.S. market by Japanese makers.

Meanwhile, Hajime Tamura, Minister of International Trade and Industry, said the agreement is significant in that it will have a good effect on overall Japan-U.S. economic relations as well as on the healthy development of semiconductor industries in both Japan and the United States.

He said he expects the agreement to go a long way toward improving overall economic ties between the two countries, which are now faced with difficult problems such as trade friction.

U.S. INCREASING DANGER OF NUCLEAR WAR IN KOREA

Military Aid to ROK Stepped Up

[NODONG SINMUN 31 July commentary: "Growing Restless With War Zeal"]

[Text] Having flatly refused to accept our peace proposal for holding talks between military authorities, the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets have recently stressed increasing their military capability and completing an offensive posture for northward invasion.

Saying that the Korean peninsula is a key zone of U.S. interests, the U.S. imperialists have requested of the U.S. Congress military aid worth $232.2 million, an increase of 41 percent over that of the present fiscal year, for the next fiscal year. Following this, they have further strengthened the forward deployment of U.S. forces in South Korea and military aid to the puppets.

While accelerating implementation of a plan to modernize the equipment of the U.S. forces occupying South Korea, the U.S. imperialists have reorganized the organizational and command systems of troops, and have strengthened the firepower and mobility of the U.S. 2d Infantry Division according to a U.S. -South Korea joint defense plan, so they can mobilize their overall military capabilities for hostile activities at any moment. In particular, the U.S. imperialists have built a space tracking observation station in Taegu as part of the star wars plan. They have begun building a nuclear weapons storehouse on Mt Kyeryong. At the same time, they are positively forging ahead with a plan to build 36 nuclear weapons storehouses, called WS-3's, in Kunsan.

What we cannot overlook is that in connection with this, U.S. Defense Department spokesman professed that information on the storage of nuclear weapons and on conserving these weapons is not secret. This directly shows what a grave phase the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists to provoke a nuclear war have reached.

While boisterously babbling everyday about the quick establishment of a wartime system and about the stockpiling of wartime materials, the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique, under the instigation of the U.S. imperialists, has intensified an atmosphere of war throughout South Korea by staging an exercise for all-out wartime mobilization called the "Ulchi-86" exercise. The exercise began 14 July.

The U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets' act of increasing military capabilities and their war commotion are criminal acts that run counter to peace, that cannot be compatible with dialogue, and that are a challenge to our sincere efforts to alleviate tension on the Korean peninsula and resolve problems through dialogue and negotiations.

The maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets to increase military capabilities and provoke a nuclear war will only make military confrontation on the Korean peninsula acute, will only heighten tension, and will only promote confrontation with strength. This is the situation. Nevertheless, while clamorously babbling about a nonexistent threat from someone, the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets are using tricks to wear the cap of peace themselves. However, this will convince no one.

Saying that the few years prior to 1988 are a critical time, [kobi], the U.S. imperialists have transferred missiles, destroyers, and helicopters to the South Korean puppets. They have recently transferred F-16 fighter bombers to the South Korean puppets for deployment and operation. This is necessary not for defense, but for an invasion of our republic.

According to an agreement reached at the annual security consultative meeting held in April this year, the U.S. imperialists are trying to deploy in South Korea new types of military hardware, such as Stinger and Red-Eye missiles, tanks, armored cars, rockets, and helicopters for offensive use, and even notorious binary chemical weapons, which have been unanimously rejected by the people of the world. Where is clearer evidence concerning the attempt of the U.S. imperialists and puppets to seek a war of northward invasion?

Because the U.S. imperialists and puppets have traversed the road of confrontation and war by refusing to accept our peace proposal, the situation in our country has developed on the verge of war, and multilateral dialogue, which is in a state of suspension, has faced the danger of rupture [kyolyol].

The U.S. imperialists and Chon Tu-hwan ring should carefully consider what consequence their reckless acts running counter to the alleviation of tension and to dialogue will produce, and should act discreetly.

Reagan 'Bellicose, Nuclear Maniac'

[Text] Pyongyang July 29 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today denounces the U.S. imperialists for increasing the danger of nuclear war in South Korea under the cloak of "peace". Referring to the fact that the United States is now stepping up its plan to build 36 special nuclear depots in Kunsan, South Korea, a signed article of the paper says:

Owing to the adventurous nuclear policy of U.S. imperialism, the Korean peninsula has turned into a place where the danger of nuclear war is greatest in the world. Over 1,000 pieces of nuclear weapons of different kinds including nuclear bombs and shells and neutron weapons are deployed in South Korea, a major nuclear frontline base of U.S. imperialism.

The nuclear weapons shipped into South Korea by the U.S. imperialists are means of war to deliver a forestalling attack on our republic and other socialist countries. The U.S. imperialists have long prepared to use nuclear weapons in Korea. They worked out plans to drop nuclear bombs on our republic three times between 1950 and 1969.

Reagan, the most bellicose nuclear-maniac of the successive rulers of the United States, is getting over-heated to ignite a nuclear war in Korea, chosing the Korean peninsula for a breakthrough in it. South Korea where more than half of the U.S. nuclear weapons deployed in the whole of the Far East region are amassed has been turned into the biggest nuclear base in the Far East, no 1 nuclear base in the world, which is four times NATO in the density of nuclear deployment.

The U.S. imperialists are attempting to dominate the Korean peninsula, control the Asian Continent and, furthermore, realize their dream of world supremacy by igniting a nuclear war, a new war of aggression with South Korea as a forefront base. They snould withdraw their troops and nuclear weapons from South Korea and give up nuclear war maneouvres.

S. KOREAN 'HELL' UNFIT FOR ASIAN, OLYMPIC GAMES

[Text] Pyongyang July 31 (KCNA) -- South Korea is unfit for any international sports games as it is always threatened with death and disaster. "Going to South Korea means going to hell", "Why should people go to the brothel to die?" and "One should refrain from such foolhardy acts as jumping into fire, carrying brushwood on one's back." This is what the world public says. This shows the horrible sight of South Korea where the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique tries to host the Asian Games and the Olympiad for a sinister political purpose.

South Korea is a terrible land where AIDS called "worst satanic disease" and "disease of death" is prevalent. As of the end of last year South Korea recorded 4,400 sufferers of AIDS whose death rate is 100 percent. Their number explosively increased to 11,000 as of February this year.

In his survey data contributed to the South Korean paper CHOSON ILBO, a university professor in Seoul estimated the number of people infected with AIDS at over 600,000. AIDS sufferers are wandering about the streets in South Korea, spreading the disease. The Peruvian paper EL NUEVO DIARIO said the number of AIDS sufferers would increase in South Korea till 1988. "If the 24th Olympiad is held in South Korea, many sportsmen and tourists of the world can hardly escape death from AIDS", warned the paper.

Further, even smallpox whose disappearance the World Health Organization officially announced in the world is reported in South Korea where prevalent are Susukamushi disease which casues terror in Japan, Southeast Asia, Australia and other regions, epidemic hemorrhagic fever which the U.s. imperialist aggression forces spread through germ weapon tests, hepatitis and other diseases.

Pollution also endangers the lives of people in South Korea. The Pusan swimming bay set by the puppet clique for the site of the yacht race in the Asian Games is seriously contaminated by the daily inflow of 28 tons of waste water containing harmful heavy metals. The air above the marathon route is too seriously polluted for runners to have breathing during their training. The air pollution in Seoul is 3-4 times the international tolerance limits and pollution by solder and cadmium which cause general paralysis of the whole body is over 10 times that in Tokyo. The water pollution of the River Han, the source of service water in Seoul, is over 15 times the tolerance limits. It contains injurious materials which cause nerve centre paralysis, break down bones and endanger even the lives of people.

Worse still, the puppet clique and wicked manufacturers produce various kinds of canned goods containing caustic soda and hydrochloric acid, rejected foodstuff articles made of cowbones, soy containing chemical materials which may cause cancer and other harmful foodstuffs.

All these will be or sale as "luxury goods" for the international games. In South Korea there are more than 20,000 kinds of such foodstuffs. They cause various kinds of diseases among people, claming even human lives.

OLYMPIC COHOSTING PLAN FAVORED BY WORLD OPINION

SK301145 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 21[illegible]9 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Text] In connection with the 24th Olympic Games, a broad range of public opinion from the world's political, social, and sports circles actively support our proposal for North-South cohosting of the games. Public opinion stresses that only this cohosting proposal can guarantee smooth functioning of the 24th Olympic Games, highly appraising our cohosting proposal as the most just and realistic proposal worthy of being viewed as important -- a proposal reflecting the unanimous aspirations and desire of the Korean people and conforming to the lofty ideals of the Olympic movement. Also, public opinion demands that the Olympic Games never be used as a camouflage for maneuvers to divide the nation and provoke a new war, and demands that our cohosting proposal be certainly realized to save the Olympic movement from crises and create a favorable atmosphere for the peaceful reunification of Korea.

The fact that our cohosting proposal connected with the 24th Olympic Games enjoys support from a wide range of world opinion proves the justness, reasonableness, and fairness of our proposal. This can be said to be the outcry of the world's conscience and reason, wishing to save the Olympic movement from crises, promote its normal development, and prevent the Olympic Games from being reduced to the prey of political intrigues. This support, about all, reflects a principled stand toward the question of the venue for the 24th Olympic Games.

Basically, due to incessant instability and disturbances from political, social, and military viewpoints dominating Seoul and the danger of war constantly prevailing there, Seoul is not a place that deserves to host the Olympic Games. This notwithstanding, the imperialists have mobilized all kinds of dirty means and methods to hold the Olympic Games in Seoul. This is because they seek the wicked political purpose of realizing their scheme to cook up two Koreas by embellishing South Korea, their colony, as an independent state and by inciting confrontation and enmity between the North and South.

It is obvious that participating in the Olympic Games to be held in South Korea, as sought by the imperialists, is tantamount to agreement with the U.S. occupation of South Korea and a boost to the U.S. policy of two Koreas. For this reason, many countries and sports organizations in the world are strongly opposed to holding the Olympic Games in Seoul. This means that the danger of a schism is being created in the Olympic movement.

The reason world opinion actively supports and sympathizes with our cohosting proposal is that the proposal has become the best way to save the Olympic movement from crises. As unanimously acknowledged by world opinion, our cohosting proposal will make it possible to help hold the Olympic Games smoothly and, at the same time, to create a favorable atmosphere for peacefully realizing the reunification of our country. The support of world public opinion for our cohosting proposal complies with this principled demand.

A document adopted at the second conference of ministers and high officials of physical education and sports of the nonaligned countries recently held in Pyongyang stated resolute and firm support for the proposal to cohost the 24th Olympic Games in Pyongyang and Seoul.

Andrey Gromyko, chairman of the Presidium of the USSR Supreme Soviet, stated that the Soviet Union supports the DPRK's proposal to host the 24th Olympic Games in North and South Korea.

The spokesman for the Chinese Olympic Committee stated that realization of the cohosting proposal would contribe to the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea.

A meeting of the liaison committee, -- which works to bring together American political parties supporting the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea, -- recently held in Cuba resolutely stated that holding the Olympic Games only in the South will not add to the just and legitimate aspirations of the Korean people for the independent and peaceful reunification of the Korean people for the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

In their joint statement, Indian parliamentarians stressed that the cohosting proposal must be realized to save the Olympic movement from crisis and create a favorable phase for the peaceful reunification of Korea. Many countries have clarified that unless the cohosting proposal is realized, they will not attend the games, and they have demanded that, though it is late, the venue for the games must be moved elsewhere now.

This strong support of world public opinion for the proposal to cohost the Olympic Games is a grave warning against the unjust attempt of the imperialists and their lackeys to seize the 24th Olympic Games as prey in their dirty political intrigues.

Our cohosting proposal connected with the 24th Olympic Games must be realized without fail. If our cohosting proposal is realized, all countries in the world -- including those countries who have so far rejected holding the Olympic Games in Seoul -- will participate in the 24th Olympic Games, and the Olympic movement will be saved from shism.

Also, it is obvious that if North and South Korea cohost the Olympic Games, distrust and misunderstanding between the North and South will be removed, national rapproachement and unity will be achieved, and favorable results will be achieved in pressing ahead with North-South dialogue.

We have already made clear that, in case North and South Korea cohost the 24th Olympic Games, we will provide excellent soprts facilities for all kinds of games to be held in Pyongyang, we will warmly welcome all guests, including the players, staff members, reporters, and tourists who will come to Pyongyang, and we will extend all conveniences to them.

If the imperialists and their lackeys opt for not cohosting, but for creating a certain state of subordination [chongsok sangtae] by inflicting these or those limits on our fair proposal while slandering it, they will be plunged into a grave predicament and the international Olympic movement will be confronted by a serious and irretrievable crisis.

We expect that the governments and peoples of all peace-loving countries in the world will make active efforts to realize our proposal to cohost the Olympic Games.

CHANGSONG SETS GOOD EXAMPLE FOR LOCAL ECONOMIES

[NODONG SINMUN 30 July editorial: "Let Us Develop the Local Economy as in Changsong County"]

[Text] Twenty-five years have passed since the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught the conference of guidance functionaries of Changsong County and its livestock farming functionarires how to epochally improve the people's living standards in mountainous areas. On 30 July 1961 at the Changsong County conference of guidance functionaries and livestock farming functionaries, the great leader elucidated the specific tasks and ways to develop the local economy, including how to actively develop livestock farming, and how to develop the local economy with raw materials produced in the mountainous areas, and thus increase the production of foodstuffs and people's consumer goods by Changsong County, which is located in the mountainous areas. After providing a firm guiding principle for improving the people's living standards in the mountainous areas, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song gave much on-the-spot guidance in various parts of Changsong County and wisely led the development of agriculture and livestock farming and consolidation of the local industrial bases as well as properly managing the county seat as a base to link the urban and rural areas.

Thanks to the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the active guidance of the party, over the past 25 years Changsong County has set excellent examples in developing the local economy and improving the people's living standards and epochal changes have been effected in the living of the people in the country.

In the county, several dozen local industrial plants, including food processing, chemical, and furniture plants, have been built, thus properly meeting the people's demands for foodstuffs and people's consumer goods and supplying some people's consumer goods, including paper and chemical industry products, to other areas. The county has rapidly developed livestock farming for such plant-eating domestic animals as cattle, sheep, goat, and rabbits. As a result, livestock production has increased and, with these products as raw materials, a local industrial base has been firmly established. At the same time, sterile land has become fertile, thus increasing grain production.

In the past, Changsong County depended on other counties to solve its food problems. But it is now producing some surplus foodstuffs for other areas after supporting itself with its own foodstuff production. Thus, Changsong County, which was once known as the place where people could not live, has now become a people's paradise which has no envy toward the villages in the urban and plains areas. In particular, in recent years Changsong County, by highly displaying the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle, has won proud successes in further developing local industry and epochally improving the people's standard of living. Local industrial plants have stabilized production at a high level by guaranteeing full operation, and the appearance of the county seat has remarkably changed through vigorous construction. All these successes that Changsong County has won in developing the local economy and improving the people's living standards are excellent examples that should be followed by all other counties.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught that by relying on the existing foundations, all counties should develop local industry to an even higher stage.

Our party's unchanging demand is to develop local economy and improve the people's living standards by exploiting the mountains in the mountainous areas and exploiting the seas in the coastal areas. The people of Changsong County have actively utilized the resources produced in the mountain areas, thus developing the local economy and epochally improving the people's living standards. The functionaries of all other counties should follow the examples set by Changsong County and develop the local economy by exploiting the mountains in the mountainous areas and the seas in the coastal areas.

The key is that Changsong County has stabilized production of the local industrial plants at a high level by properly utilizing the geographical conditins of the mountainous areas and increased local industrial production through the independent solution of raw materials. All counties should develop local industries by independently solving the problems of raw materials and strengthening the raw material production bases. By so doing, they should independently meet the demands of the people in the counties for foodstuffs and people's consumer goods.

The important experience of Changsong County is that it has fully mobilized and utilized all hidden potentials and possibilities in the county, thus ceaselessly expanding its local industrial bases and vigorously struggling to modernize them.

Over the past period, Changsong County has built numerous local industrial plants. In particular, recently it newly built a caustic soda production base, glass bottle production base, beer and soft drinks production base, and lumber processing base, thus further modernizing its local industry and establishing foundations to increase the variety of goods. In so doing, Changsong County has received no support from other areas or large plants and enterprises. It has only actively mobilized and utilized its own hidden potentials and depended on its own technology.

The functionaries responsible for development of the local economy as well as for the people's livelihood should follow the examples set by Changsong County. They should possess the firm fighting spirit to accomplish their task independently, work out specific measures to increase the variety of people's consumer goods, and implement them one-by-one. By so doing, they should continue to place great emphasis on developing the local economy.

For development of the local economy as well as for improvment of the people's living standards, it is important to properly organize the county seats. The experience of Changsong County shows that the county seats can be independently and properly organized if a cement production base is independently established and if modern construction equipment and building materials are independently provided. All counties in the country should follow the examples of Changsong County and highly display the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle, thus strengthening the building material production bases in accordance with their situations and accelerating the modernization of construction work. By so doing, they should organize the county seats as the bases of politics, economy, and culture.

In developing the local economy and improving the people's standard of living epochally, it is important to ennance the function and roles of the county party committees. In developing local industry, the functionaries of the Changsong County party committee have taken the lead. They have actively mobilized party organizations and the broad masses by highly arousing their self-conscious enthusiasm and creativities. Functionaries of the ocunty party committees should realize that they are responsible for developing local industry as well as for increasing the production of people's consumer goods by following the examples of Changsong County.

By so doing, they should further intensify party guidance over economic construction in the local areas. The functionaries of all counties should ensure full operation of the local industrial plants, further strengthen the local industrial foundations in conformity with the growing demand of the people, and place even greater efforts on the struggle to increase production of people's consumer goods. By so doing, they should develop local industry to an even higher stage. At the same time, they should even more properly meet the growing demand of the people for people's consumer goods and foodstuffs by the independent efforts of their counties. In so doing, they should thoroughly respond to the party's call to improve the people's standard of living epochally.

[Text] The KPA naval flotilla which made a goodwill visit to the Soviet port of Vladivostok to mark the 25th anniversary of the signing of the Korean-Soviet Treaty of Friendship, Cooperation, and Mutual Assistance, left Vladivostok yesterday after the successful completion of the visit.

Admiral Vladimir Sidorov, commander of the Soviet Red Banner Pacific Fleet; functionaries concerned, including the chairman of the Executive Committee of the People's Soviet of Primorskiy Kray and the first secretary of the Vladivostok CPSU City Committee; and many other citizens and soldiers saw off the KPA naval flotilla.

Earlier, on 28 July members of the KPA naval flotilla inspected naval ships of the Soviet Red Banner Pacific Fleet and visited a Soviet marine unit. On the same day, Vice Admiral Kim Il-chol attended a function to confer the medal of Lenin on Vladivostok and visited the Pacific Navy University named after (Nakalov).

Yesterday, members of the KPA naval flotilla toured the juvenile palace and other plants and enterprises in the city.

The art propaganda troupe of the KPA Navy gave art performances at Soviet naval units on 27 and 28 July.

[Text] Pyongyang July 31 (KCNA) -- The flotilla of the Navy of the Korean People's Army led by Senior Vice Admiral Kim Il-chol, commander of the KPA Navy, returned home Wednesday after paying a goodwill visit to the Soviet Union on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the signing of the Korean-Soviet Treaty of Friendship, Cooperation and Mutual Assistance. The KPA Navy art propaganda group also returned home together with the flotilla.

U.S. PRESSURE TO INCREASE VALUE OF WON REBUFFED

ROK: No 'Artificial Adjustments'

SK010134 Seoul YONHAP in English 0113 GMT 1 Aut 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 1 (YONHAP) -- The South Korean Government will not make any "artificial adjustments" in the current exchange rate between the Korean won and the U.S. dollar, a government source said Friday. The government has not yet received an official offer from Washington to open negotiations concerning the appreciation of the won against the greenback, the source said. There will be no "artificial change" in the current floating rate multi-currency basket system, even if Washington makes an official proposal to hold currency talks, the source added.

Under the present system, the value of the won fluctuates in accordance with the weights of the five major international currencies -- the U.S. dollar, the British pound, the West German Mark, the Japanese yen and the French franc. Kim Kyong-won, Korean ambassador to Washington, met earlier in the week with U.S. Treasury Department officials to discuss the matter. He reportedly explained in detail Korea's current floating exchange rate system to the U.S. officials, according to the source. Without making a special adjustments, the won will rise gradually in value against the dollar in the second half of the year, to the point where the real strength of the won is fully reflected, and Washington will have to understand this, the source said.

KNP Urges U.S. To Withdraw Plan

SK010406 Seoul YONHAP in English 0319 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 1 (YONHAP) -- The Korea National Party (KNP) Friday urged the U.S. Government to revoke its official proposal for the appreciation of won currency. In a statement, the minor opposition party said that U.S. Government's request that Korea raise the value of the won against the U.S. dollar is "open pressure." Applying the pressure on Korea, the United States did not consider the difficult economic situation facing Korea, it said. In an effort to reduce its huge trade deficit, the United States recently began negotiating with Korean and Taiwanese officials to explore the possibility of letting their respective currencies appreciate against the greenback. The U.S. move met strong opposition in Korea from political parties, business circles, and the media, but the government has kept mum on the issue.

ROK TO IGNORE U.S. PRESSURE FOR BEEF IMPORTS

[Text] Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries Hwang In-song said yesterday that the government will not comply with the U.S. pressure to import beef until the domestic beef price stabilizes.

Hwang said that he predicts the United States will put pressure on the nation regarding beef importation in the face of the 1988 Olympics in Seoul.

Hwang was discussing the current trade issue between Korea and the United States with lawmakers of the ruling Democratic Justice Party in a policy coordination session at the party headquarters.

Minister of Finance Chong In-yong and Vice Minister of Economic Planning Board Mun Hui-kab were present at the meeting.

Also on hand from the party were Change Sung-man, chairman of the policy committee, and Na U-pae, director of the Policy Coordination Committee.

In addition to the beef, Hwang said the government made it clear to the U.S. Government that Korea will not import orange and frozen potatoes, whose purchase the United States is demanding.

Meanwhile, Vice EPB Minister Mun said the government is preparing measures to counter additional U.S. pressure for market opening which is expected during the U.S. election period.

He said there has so far been no "formal" U.S. request that Korea appreciate its own currency or take more market-opening measures.

Some reports have said Washington would soon begin talks with the Seoul Government to seek the appreciation of the Korean currency in an effort to reduce growing U.S. trade deficit with Korea.

In the meantime, Finance Minister Chong said the government is not considering allowing foreign cigarette manufacturers to produce cigarette here in future joint ventures.

CULTURE MINISTER ON OLYMPICS, JAPANESE TEXT BOOK

SK310114 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 31 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] Tokyo (YONHAP) -- Korean Minister of Culture and Information Yi Won-hong Tuesday urged Japan to show sincerity in correcting distorted description of facts in a Japanese history textbook.

"Korea and Japan alike should have a regard for each other's self-respect," Yi said, referring to recent abusive remarks by the Japanese educaton minister on its invasions of Asian nations.

Japanese Education Minister Masayuki Fujio reportedly told a news conference Friday that "the guys who complain of Japan's history textbook should first look back if they had not committed such a thing (invasions) in their history."

Minister Yi made the points in an interview with Rayzo Utakawa, managing editor of the Japanese MAINICHI SHIMBUN, at his office Monday. The story was carried in the daily Tuesday.

Yi also made clear that in hosting the 1988 Seoul Olympics, Seoul would not make further concessions to Pyongyang beyond an arbitration proposal made by the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

IOC President Juan Samaranch proposed June 11 that table tennis, archery, one group in the soccer competition and the start of the 100km cycle road race be given to Pyongyang.

Touching on the Pyongyang's recent proposal for three-way military talks of defense ministers, Yi termed it as part of its well-disguised peace offensive.

Military issues constitute highly sophisticated political ones and should be taken up in a meeting between top authorities of Seoul and Pyongyang which Seoul has consistently called for, he said.

REGIME TO WITHDRAW INDICTMENTS OF NKDP LAWMAKERS

[Text] The government will withdraw the indictments of seven opposition lawmakers charged with acts of violence at the National Assembly last year, a leading official of the ruling party said yesterday.

Rep. Chong Sun-tok, secretary general of the Democratic Justice Party, said that the prosecution is expected to drop the indictments against the lawmakers of the New Korea Democratic Party next week to solve one of the major political issues of today.

He told reporters that the NKDP lawmakers' case should be settled "clearly" at this time when the ruling and opposition parties are trying to seek a "grand compromise" for constitutional amendment.

"There may be an opposition against the withdrawal of the indictments among prosecutors, but it will be possible on the premise of a political solution," he said.

Earlier in the day, Assembly Speaker Yi Chae-hyong asked the government to drop legal actions against the NKDP lawmakers, who were prosecuted for their acts in the course of protesting the DJP's unilateral passage of this year's budget bill.

The head of legislature made the request in a luncheon meeting with Prime Minister No Sin-yong, which he hosted at the Lotte Hotel.

The indicted NKDP lawmakers are Kim Yong-pae, Chang Ki-u, Yi Chol, Kim Chong-kil, Kim Tae-yong, Kim Tong-chu and Sin Sun-pom. The first five are members of the special House Committee on Constitutional Amendment.

The DJP secretary general also said that political detainees would be released on a gradual basis as it is impossible for the government to free everyone at once due to legal procedures.

"Prisoners detained in connection with the political situation number about 800. At present, 230 of them have been convicted and others are in various stages of prosecution," he revealed.

"Some 90 of the convicts, who have served more than half of their prison terms, are expected to be paroled on the Aug. 15 Liberation Day," he said.

He further said he expected that the government would speed up on-going investigations of political detainees and their trials as it may help the work of parties in rewriting the basic law.

CONSTITUTION COMMITTEE BEGINS WORK 30 JUL

SK310135 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 31 Jul 86 p 1

[Text] The National Assembly embarked on the hitorical work of rewriting the Constitution on the basis of partisan agreement by formally inaugurating its Special Committee on Constitutional Amendment yesterday.

The projected amendment, if realized, will be the ninth since the establishment of the Republic. The current basic law was revised in October, 1980 on the eve of the inauguration of the present Fifth Republic.

But, the rival members of the ad hoc panel are expected to confront with each other from the very beginning of their work as they are at odds over the panel's operational matters as well as the question of power structure.

The House panel, composed of 45 members evenly shared by the ruling and opposition camps excluding the chairman, held its first meeting at a conference room of the Assembly, and elected Rep. Chae Mun-sik of the Democratic Justice Party chairman. The panel members also elected without a vote five assistant chairmen as designated by each party. They are Reps. Yun Kil-chung and Yi Chi-ho from the DJP, Yi-Chung-chae and Kim Su-han from the New Korea Democratic Party and Sin Chol-kyun from the second opposition Korea National Party.

Following the first session, Chairman Chae and the five assistant chairmen held a meeting to discuss panel procedures. They agreed to hold the next full sessions of the panel tomorrow, Aug. 7 and 8, and to operate the body under a unanimous system. They also decided to set up three sub-committees on basic rights, power structure and economy and social affairs. They decided to discuss later the schedules for the public hearings the panel plans to hold to hear public opinions on the revision in major cities.

The panel set sail 36 days after the parties unanimously resolved to create it on June 24 after a series of negotiations among party leaders. The formation of the panel was first demanded by the NDP, which presented a resolution calling for its formation in May last year. The ad hoc panel has set a goal of achieving a compromised version by settling the crucial question of how to choose the form of government for the new Constitution by Sept. 20, the initial deadline for its activity. But, the activity of the panel is sure to be loose until after Aug. 20 by which time the DJP promises to present its own draft amendment.

The opposition NDP and KNP have already confirmed their respective draft revision bills featuring the presidential government system based on the direct election of the president as the form of the government. The two parties will submit their bills shortly to the panel. Against the opposition bloc's choice of the presidential system, the ruling party has virtually selected the parliamentary cabinet system, heralding rough sailing for the panel. Therefore, signs are that rival parties will seek compromise through behind-the-scenes negotiations among their leading figures in the long run rather than in the panel. They have already agreed, in principle, to hold diverse talks among their leading officials such as secretaries general, floor leaders, and chief policy-makers who are not members of the panel, when the panel faces a deadlock. Currently, no party has the floor force to pass an amendment alone. None of the three parties has two-thirds of the total House seats (276) required for the passage of a constitutional amendment.

Chairman of the panel, Rep. Chae said, "Now, we have assumed the most difficult work at the most difficult time. We should achieve, without fail, the amendment through agreement, the great task given to us, through dialogues, patience and negotiations." He asked the panel members "to meet the people's wish to see no no more political confusion." He said that there is no way but resort to a vote showdown when the parties fail to reach an accord. "But, I am convinced that seeking a compromised version on the basis of mutual concessions is more democratic way then a vote showdown," he stressed.

SPK HAILS GORBACHEV'S VLADIVOSTOK SPEECH

OW010113 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1140 GMT 31 Jul 86

On the question of Kampuchea, the Soviet leader pointed out that the Kampuchean people have suffered enormous losses; that this country as well as its cities and villages were repeatedly subjected to U.S. bombings. After untold sufferings, he added, Kampuchea has regained its right to choose friends and allies for itself. Kampuchea cannot be allowed to return to the tragic past; and the fate and future of this country cannot be decided at any remote capital or even at the United Nations. M. Gorbachev also declared the Soviet Union's determination to further strengthen its friendship with Kampuchea.

As clearly expressed at the foreign ministers' 10th semi-annual conference the three Indochinese countries are willing to foster the relation of good neighbourliness with Thailand, thus turning the Kampuchean-Thai and Lao-Thai borders into borders of peace and friendship, and solving the problems concerning their relations with Thailand through negotiations. The 11th Indochinese foreign ministerial conference pointed to the three Indochinese countries' principled and well-meaning position in regard to their relations with the People's Republic of China, saying that the time has come for the resumption of the China-Vietnam talks on the normalization of the relations between the two countries as time and again proposed by the Vietnamese side. The restoration of the relations of friendship and cooperation between Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea on the one hand, and China on the other, would constitute an exemplary important factor to ensure peace and stability in Southeast Asia and in Asia as a whole.

The Kampuchean people sincerely thank the Soviet Union for its unswerving support and wholehearted assistance and will do their best to join the Soviet Union in her noble efforts to ensure stability, peace, friendship and cooperation in Asia, Pacific and the world over.

GRENADE ATTACK ON SRV OFFICERS IN PHNOM PENH

BK010032 (Clandestine) Voice of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2315 GMT 31 Jul 86

[From the "Report From Various Battelfields" feature]

[Excerpt] Phnom Penh battlefield: At 2000 [1300 GMT] on 15 July, our guerrillas in Phnom Penh, in cooperation with the Cambodian security force's men who have been forced to serve the Vietnamese enemies and our people in Phnom Penh, lobbed hand grenades at a group of Vietnamese commanders in an area west of Kirirom movie theater in Phnom Penh, killing 12 Vietnamese -- including 1 captain and 2 lieutenants -- and seriously wounding 4 Vietnamese experts attached to Phnom Penh.

Following our grenade attack, the situation in Phnom Penh became chaotic. The Vietnamese enemies were in great panic and imposed a state of emergency, banning traffic from that night until 18 July. [passage omitted]

VODK CLAIMS INCREASED PENETRATION OF PHNOM PENH

BK311300 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2330 GMT 29 Jul 86

[Text] At the beginning of July 1986, the sound of gunfire by our Democratic Kampuchean National Army broke out loudly and simultaneously in the southern part of Phnom Penh city.

On 10 July, our National Army liberated and took control of Chhung Leap township, 9 km south of Ta Khmau town. We killed 20 Vietnamese enemies on the spot, and wounded 10 others; destroyed 21 assorted weapons and 24 motorboats; and seized a large quantity of weapons and materiel. On 14 July, our National Army attacked and destroyed a Vietnamese platoon position at Prek Ho along route 2, 2 km south of Ta Khmau town. We killed or wounded 14 Vietnamese enemies, destroyed 7 assorted weapons, and seized a quantity of ammunition and war materiel. On 15 July, our National Army attacked and destroyed a Vietnamese platoon position at Boeng Toek Chou, 7 km south of Ta Khmau town, on the west bank of the Basak River, in S'ang District [Kandal Province]. We killed 8 Vietnamese enemies and wounded 13 others; destroyed 8 weapons; and seized 4 weapons, 9 motor boats, and some ammunition and war materiel.

These are new brilliant victories we won in this rainy season. They constitute a new development in the military situation on the Cambodian battlefield.

The battlefield around Phnom Penh has now been widely expanded. Since the 1984-85 dry season, our compulsory forces have launched their activities systematically in Muk Kampul, Ponhea Loe, Udong, Ang Snuol, and Kandal Stoeng districts, which are adjacent to Phnom Penh's northern, northwestern, and southwestern parts. Later, our National Army crossed the Mekong River to launch activities in Kaoh Sotin and Sithor Kandal Districts in the northeastern and eastern parts of Phnom Penh. In July, the gunfire of our National Army began to explode in S'ang and Kandal Stoeng districts in the southern part of Phnom Penh. Thus, by the beginning of this eighth rainy season, the battlefields around Phnom Penh had been expanded widely. The fact that the areas around Phnom Penh have become battlefields is favorable to our struggle in both the political and military fields. This is because:

1. The Vietnamese aggressors' administration in Phnom Penh and other areas throughout the country have been shaken and become more chaotic and desperate. This is because the Vietnamese aggressors' administrators have realized that the Hanoi authorities' war of aggression in Cambodia will certainly be lost.

2. Our people and National Army throughout the country have been greatly encouraged by this. All of them have thus fought more vigorously against the Vietnamese aggressors. This will speed up our struggle more progressively. Our friends in the world and the peace- and justice-loving forces in the world which support our struggle have been satisfied with and applauded this progress and jointly support us even more enthusiastically.

3. This development has laid bare the true nature of the Vietnamese propaganda and deceitful maneuvers about their taking full control of Cambodia and the irreversibility of the Cambodian situation.

4. Our regular and widespread activities in the areas around Phnom Penh will draw more Vietnamese troops from elsewhere to protect Phnom Penh, thus leaving their weak points in other areas for our National Army to attack easily.

For this reason, the battlefields around Phnom Penh are of great significance militarily and politically. This is why our people and the National Army throughout the country are very happy to hear the recent gunfire in the southern part of Phnom Penh.

Our National Army and people throughout the country wish our National Army units on the battlefields south of Phnom Penh as well as all our National Army units on all battlefields around Phnom Penh new and greater victories and good health in continuing their noble mission more effectively to help quickly liberate our beloved fatherland from the Vietnamese aggressors.

VONADK CLAIMS GRENADE ATTACKS IN BATTAMBANG TOWN

BK300200 (Clandestine) Voice of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2315 GMT 29 Jul 86

[From the "Report From Various Battlefields" feature]

[Excerpt] Battambang battlefield: On the night of 22 July, our National Army lobbed grenades into the 7 January movie hall in Battambang town, killing 6 and wounding 20 Vietnamese soldiers. On the same night, our National Army lobbed grenades into the 13 January movie hall at the end of the old stone bridge in Battambang town, killing two and wounding some other Vietnamese soldiers. On the night of 23 July, we again lobbed grenades into the same movie hall at the end of the old stone bridge, killing two -- a provincial official and a policeman -- and wounding seven Vietnamese soldiers. In sum, during the three incidents, we killed 10 and wounded 27 Vietnamese enemy sodiers for a total of 37 casualties. [passage omitted]

SIHANOUK INTERVIEWED BY XINHUA 27 JUL

[Text] Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of Democratic Kampuchea, made a written statement and granted an executive interview to a XINHUA correspondent in Beijing on 27 July. On that occasion, the samdech said that it is and will be the duty of the CGDK to continue to strengthen national unity and determination to fight against the Vietnamese aggressors until the end, without thought of retreat. Intensifying combat activities on the battlefield will be the only way of forcing Vietnam to agree to resolve the Cambodian problem in accordance with the just resolutions of the United Nations on Cambodia and with the 8-point proposal of the CGDK.

Concerning the CGDK's 8-point proposal for a political settlement of the Cambodian problem, the samdech said that a large number of heads of state, heads of government, and foreign ministers of friendly countries have applauded it. They realized that the proposal attests to our CGDK's good will and great wisdom and regarded it as being a realistic base for settling the Cambodian problem.

Concerning the situation inside the country, the samdech said it has become more favorable to the armed forces of the tripartite coalition government. More soldiers of the Heng Samrin puppet army have deserted their ranks and fled to join the CGDK's resistance forces.

Concerning the cooperation among the three factions of the CGDK, the samdech said the armed forces of the three factions have had greater trust in each other, increased military cooperation more effectively, and helped each other as blood brothers. For example, when the samdech's army was short of ammunition or had a wounded soldier, the DK forces would help by giving it ammunition and medically treating the wounded soldier.

KHIEU SAMPHAN ENDS VISIT TO ZAMBIA 24 JUL

BK291013 (Clandestine) Voice of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2315 GMT 28 Jul 86

On 23 July, his Excellency Sianga organized a cordial party on behalf of the Zambian Government in honor of the vice president and his delegation.

During its stay in Zambia, the delegation visited the residence where President Kenneth Kaunda lived from 1960 to 1962 when he led the Zambian people in the struggle for national emancipation. It also visited other places. Wherever Vice President Khieu Samphan and his delegation went, they were warmly welcomed by the people there.

During the farewell at Lusaka airport, his Excellency Sianga reaffirmed Zambia's opposition to outside interference in another country and demanded that foreign troops withdraw from Cambodia to allow the Cambodian people to determine their own destiny.

Vice President Khieu Samphan expressed deep thanks to the Zambian people and government for their profound feeling of friendship and solidarity. He wished the Zambian people more successes in national defense and construction under his Excellency President Kenneth Kaunda's leadership.

VARIOUS GROUPS STUDY DRAFT POLITICAL REPORT

Government Offices, Localities

[Text] So far, many ministries, departments, and localities have completed the important political life campaigns to contribute views to the party Central Committee's draft political report, which will be presented to the forthcoming Fourth Party Congress. In the meantime, several other services are still studying this report in earnest, for example the Ministry of Public Health, the State Planning Committee, Paklai District in Sayaboury Province, Na Le District in Luang Namtha Province, Soukhouma District in Champassak Province, and several localities in Savannakhet Province.

In engaging in these political life campaigns, cadres, state employees, and people of all tribes have come to understand the victories and achievements scored in many fields by our entire party and people over the past 10 years. They have also come to realize and acknowledge certain weaknesses, remaining problems, and experiences drawn from their work in the past and turned them into important lessons for fulfilling the tasks in the near future. During the study sessions, all participants have profoundly appreciated and unanimously approved the draft political report. As a result, they have become more determined to raise the standard of their knowledge and capabilities, to consolidate their attitudes, to heighten a sense of vigilance, and to clearly identify friends and foes in order to help fulfill the tasks of defending and building our socialist country.

Mass Debates

BK311420 Vientiane KPL in English 0912 GMT 25 Jul 86

[Text] Vientiane, July 25 (KPL) -- Mass debates over the draft of the political report to be released at the forthcoming 4th Party Congress are being carried out throughout the country. In accordance with the instructions issued earlier by the Secretariat of the LPRP CC, the whole party, Army and people were recommended to give their opinion on the strategic poolitical line of the party, to deeply study and formulate propositions to the draft of the party's political report. Many state institutions and mass organizations had already poositively responded to the party Secretariat's instructions. At present, debates over the draft are being in action at the Ministry of Public Health, the State Planning Committee, as well as in remote provinces. Debates were organized by the authoritative bodies of various institutions and organs concerned.

Air Force Units

[Text] To promote a political life campaign among all members of all units, on 27 and 28 June 1986, many offices and units under the Air Force command organized sessions to study the draft political report of the party Central Committee. The sessions were successfully concluded. After studying the contents of the political report, the participants profoundly appreciated the achievements scored by our people in the past 10 years, the immediate and long-term economic construction policy of our party, the direction of the national defense and public security tasks among the masses, the changing developments in the world at present and in the future, and the orientation of building the party in the new period of the revolution.

They came to understand new phenomena on the reality of the socialist transformation and construction in our country and pledged to resolutely fulfill the plans outlined in the draft political report of the party Central Committee.

Army Schools

[Text] On the morning of 11 July, the ideological training school of the Army General Political Department organized a session to study the documents on the draft political report of the party Central Committee. Attending were the directors of the ideological training school, the language training school, the specialized subjects training school, and all cadres, teachers, and students of these schools.

The study session lasted 5 days. After engaging in the study, the cadres and combatants at these schools came to understand the outstanding achievements scored by our people in the past 10 years in defending the building the country and helping to implement the first 5-year state plan. At the same time, they also came to more clearly understand the immediate orientation and tasks of the second 5-year state plan. On the closing day of the study session, the schools also launched an emulation campaign among themselves to profoundly study politics; to clearly identify friends and foes; to strive to carry out specialized work in a brilliant manner; to forge unity within the unit, among all units, and between the army and people; to forge solidarity with the international community; to especially raise the role of leading and consolidating cadres; and to build the schools in all fields to score great achievements to welcome the forthcoming fourth party congress.

Military School Womens Union

[Text] According to a report, on 2 July the committee of the women's union of the intermediate and advanced combined army officers training school, led by its chairwoman, organized a session to study the documents on the contents of the "3-Good and 2-Duty Campaign." The regulations of the Federation of Lao Women's Unions, the speech of Comrade General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan delivered at the first national congress of Lao women, and the draft political report of the party Central Committee, aimed at allowing its members to thoroughly appreciate the party's policies and political line.

The study session was divided into two parts with each part taking 4 full days and with more than 170 members attending. After engaging in the study, each member reviewed her own fundamental good and weak points in order to outline new determination to assume the new tasks entrusted by the party and state and to translate into reality the second 5-year state plan.

UKRIT ANNOUNCES 6 PARTIES TO SUPPORT PREM

BK010211 Bangkok THE NATION in English 1 Aug 86 pp 1, 2

[Text] Six political parties commanding a total of 266 newly-elected MPs have submitted in writing their decisions to back Gen Prem Tinsulanon to head a new coalition government, Parliament President Ukrit Monkhonnawin announced last night.

The six parties were the Democrats, Chat Thai, Social Action [SAP], Ratsadon, Ruam Thai and Community Action [CAP] parties.

Ukrit said since the six parties command an overwhelming majority in the House, he will seek royal approval for the appointment of Gen Prem as prime minister.

The parties described Gen Prem as being "neutral and the most suitable person" to head the new coalition goverment under the present circumstances. They pledged their cooperation with Gen Prem in forming the new coalition government.

Informed sources said that although six parties have submitted their supportive decisions for Gen Prem, the coalition may not include all of them. So far, four parties (without Ruam Thai and Community Action) have agreed to form the new coaliton.

Ruam Thai is under Narong Wongwan while CAP is headed by Bunchu Rotchanasathian.

The announcement coincided with he return of Gen Prem from his Khorat retreat last night amidst speculations that a royal command to convene the new House is forthcoming.

Political observers also expected the official appointment of Gen Prem to come about soon after the House opening.

The support for Gen Prem was not a surprise so far as Democrat, Chat Thai, SAP and Ratsadon are concerned. Political strategists have mapped out the new coalition formula which comprises the four parties.

The MPs under the Democrat banner total 100 while those for Chat Thai, SAP and Ratsadon amount to 63, 51 and 18 respectively. Ruam Thai has 19 MPs under control while 15 others were elected under the ticket of the Community Action Party.

The decision submitted by the Democrat Party said that with 100 MPS under its control, the party would serve as the core to form the new coalition and after having consulted with SAP and Chat Thai, the party agreed that Gen Prem was the most suitable, and neutral man to lead the new coalition.

Earlier, the Democrat Party resolved in a party meeting to back Gen Prem and sent an official note to Ukrit, spelling out its support for the premier.

The note, however, reiterated that the Democrat Party with 100 MPs under its control should be the core of the new coalition government in the making. Chat Thai and Social Action had earlier nominated in writing Gen Prem as prime minister in their notes to Ukrit.

The resolution came after about two hours and a half of heated debate on the question.

Former Ubon Ratchathani MP of the Democrat Party Suthat Ngoenmun told THE NATION the date for the first session of the House is expected to fall on Monday.

Political observers dismissed speculations that Gen Prem would be officially appointed very soon before the first session of the House because it would go against the traditional practice.

HM the King has to preside over the ceremony to open the new House.

"But I think, that it is possible that the royal command to set the date for the first session of the new House is forthcoming since it appears to me that all is ready for the appointment of Gen Prem, a step that should follow the House opening," one well-informed observer commented.

Democrat, Chat Thai, Social Action and Ratsadon have agreed to form a coalition government on the condition that Gen Prem will be at its helm.

The Democrats were apparently the most reluctant party to go along with the terms but decided to follow suiit after a meeting of party executives at party leader Phichai Rattakun's Yaowarat office Wednesday night and the party meeting yesterday.

Informed sources said that during the heated party debate on the premiership question, Bangkon MP Chalat Worachat, Buriram MP Karun Saingam and former Ubon Ratchathani MP Suthat Ngoemun were the most vocal opponents to the party's backing for Gen Prem. They insisted that the party should back Phichai as prime minister.

Party Secretary General Wira Musikaphong however argued that the party must be realistic enough to back Gen Prem.

After the bitter debate, 89 MPs voted for the resolution to back Gen Prem while Chalat votes against it.

Informed sources said that the Democrat leadership had been told to give a reply on the question Wednesday night or yesterday before noon at the latest -- or else it could be forced out into the opposition corner.

In such a case, Chat Thai and SAP will serve as the core of a new coalition line-up comprising Prachakon Thai of Samak Suntharawet, Ruam Thai of Narong Wongwan and Ratsadon of Gen Thianchai Sirisamphan. Community Action led by former deputy prime minister Bunchu Rotchanasathian could also be brought in.

Party spokeswoman Suphatra Masadit and other Democrat leaders told a news conference that a five-member working group led by Phichai yesterday reported the outcome of talks with Chat Thai and SAP to the meeting.

The two parties stood firm that a non-partisan figure must be prime minister because none of the political parties had swept the majority seats in the house. As a result, the party voted 89-1 for a proposal to back Gen Prem as prime minsiter, they said.

Deputy party leader Banyat Banthatthan, one of the five working group members, said that the talks to farm out cabinet portfolios were still inconclusive and that the new prime minister would consult with the prospective coalitin partners on the matter.

But he reaffirmed that such a big party as the Democrat should be allowed control over economic-related ministries in accordance with the party's platform to bring the economy out of the doldrums and further reinforce democracy.

He also said that it was normal that the Democrat Party would set its sights on the position of the house speaker.

Informed Democrat sources said that deputy party leader Kraisorn Tantipong had been approached by a party leader to be the party's candidate for the post and that he had agreed to the offer.

Democrat sources said that with the exception of Phichai, the other four members on the working goup had held exploratory talks with SAP and Chat Thai over the Democrat's demand for the coalition to adopt the party's economic platform as the basis of the government policy and for certain portfolios, including agriculture, commerce, industry and interior.

However, the other two parties countered that the portfolios could not be farmed out without the knowledge and consent of Gen Prem.

Gen Prem should have a say on the matter because he is going to head the government, the two parties argued. Serious negotiations to allocate the cabinet portfolios are expected after the appointment of Gen Prem as prime minister.

Sitthi on New Government

BK010814 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, acting leader of the Social Action Party, made a statement about the news on the formation of a government at the Foreign Ministry's Information Service Center in Saranrom Palace.

[Begin Sitthi recording] I want to make a brief statement. First, because no political party won more than half the total seats in the House of Representatives, unofficial meetings and negotiations have been held among four parties to form a government. As no party has more than half of the votes in the house, it is deemed that the prime miniter should be neutral. All four parties unanimously agreed that General Prem Tinsulanon is the most suitable person do take the premiership and form the next government.

Second, a meeting between Prime Minister General Prem Tinsulanon, and party leaders and secretary generals of the four parties was held at the Sisao Thewet residence this morning. The four parties are the Democrat Party, the Chat Thai Party, the Social Action Party, and the Ratsadon Party. The meeting agreed that the new government will include only these four parties. The prime minister's quota of appointments will not be allocated by party.

Third, the Social Action Party has only 51 seats, the third largest in the house. So, it has to follow the bigger parties.

Four, regarding reports that I will become prime minister, this is impossible becasue our party has only 51 seats. During the election campaign, I never mentioned becoming prime minister. I only said that, if my party gets sufficient seats and support from other political parties and other factors, I will not deny the responsibility in my capacity as a party leader. But now, my party has fewer seats, so, I will not be bold, and have never been bold, to offer myself to be prime minster. [end recording]

Khukrit on Prem Premiership

[Text] The former leader of the Social Action Party (SAP), M.R. Khukrit Pramot, yesterday lashed out at the announcement naming Gen Prem Tinsulanon as the next prime minister.

He said such an announcement before the House sits is unconventional even though it is not against the Constitution.

"Nothing has been done in accordance with the tradition so far. But I don't care any more," he said.

Asked if the selection of Gen Prem as premier for another four-year term meant that political parties had commitment to an elected head of the country, M.R. Khukrit said he didn't know anything because he was in hospital during the campaign period.

"However, those who made such promises must be responsible for their words. There will be another election. Just guess the result of breaking a promise," he warned.

Phichai Declines Money

[Text] Democrat Party leader Phichai Rattakun was offered 200 million baht to lead a coalition without Gen Prem Tinsulanon but with a general as deputy premier and defence minister, the BANGKOK POST was told yesterday.

The offer was turned down by the Democrat leader, who favours a coalition with the Social Action, Chat Thai and Ratsadon parties and with General Prem as prime minster.

A senior party member said three emissaries approached Mr Phichai this week to form a coalition with small parties including the United Democratic, Chat Thai and Muan Chon, which oppose Gen Prem's continued tenure as prime minister.

The Democrat Member said Mr Phichai was asked to head the new coalition with a general getting the defense portfolio and the deputy premiership.

Anti-Prem Protest Movements

[Text] The anti-Prem move intensified yesterday with more than 200 university students and labour unions representatives rallying at Parliament to voice their strong opposition to the attempt to invite Prem Tinsulanon back as head of the new Government.

The students, mostly from Ramkhamhaeng University, turned up at Parliament in the afternoon to submit a letter, supporting the nomination of an elected MP as prime minister, to the president of the Parliament, Ukrit Monkhonnawin.

The letter, which the students claimed, was signed by all Ramkhamhaeng lecturers with the exception of Rector Sukhum Nuansakun and the dean of the Science Faculty, said the nomination of an outsider as premier will destroy the democratic system and the practice is against the wish of King Rama VII who sacrificed his power in order to give the mandate to the people.

"Any person who is not elected by the public has no right to reap political gains by using loopholes in the Constitution and the democratic system," the letter said.

The letter, which was later handed over to Secretary General of Parliament Bang-on Im-ocha, was attached with a list of names of over 20,000 people opposing the would-be nomination of an outsider to the premiership.

The students also urged politicians to keep their promise, made during election campaigns, that they would support the parliamentary system by backing an elected MP to lead the nation.

The students said they will return to the Parliament again after the name of the next prime minister is announced. Another group of students yesterday evening rallied at the Democracy Monument for the same purpose.

Meanwhile, United Democratic MP Waranchai Chokchana yesterday morning led a group of representatives from labour organizations to lay a wreath in front of the statue of King Rama VII at the Parliament. A black ribbon on the wreath said "Please send us a premier who comes from election."

The group also carried banners attacking Gen Prem Tinsulanon and reminding newly-elected MPs of their promise to pick a party leader for the premier post.

Some of the Banners said: "Please go home, Pa [Prem's nickname] Prem," and "The economy will get worse if the administrator doesn't come from election."

Without naming names, the group said political parties which cannot keep their words should dissolve themselves and admit that they were formed to cheat the people.

The demonstrators also said that labour groups had issued a communique to announce its stand against a non-elected prime minister.

Bombing Under Investigation

[Text] The Police Department has ordered an urgent investigation after a bomb exploded in front of the Democrat Party headquarters early yesterday morning and a time-bomb was found in a Bangkok cinema less than 13 hours later.

Metropolitan Police Commissioner Pol Lt-Gen Samnao Withitworakan said police were trying to establish if the two incidents, which coincided with hectic negotiations between political parties on the formation of a new coalition government, were politically-motivated.

An ex-cavalry officer wanted in connection with the September 9 abortive coup was killed and another sergeant was wounded in the explosion at 1.20 a.m. yesterday. Police said it was believed the man killed was carrying the bomb when it went off.

Special Branch Police Commander Maj-Gen Kasem Saeng-mit said the dead officer, identified later as Kamphon Fungakson formerly attached to the Saraburi-based Fourth Cavalry Battalion, was one of the key suspects who had played an important role in last year's coup attempt. Police found a picture of fugitive coup leader Col Manun Rupkhachon and two forged military ID cards on his body. He died about two hours after being admitted to Phra Mongkutklao Hospital where Cavalry Master-Sgt Pirom Bunmasem, who is in critical condition, was also taken.

Pol Maj-Gen Kasem said police yesterday were also trying to establish if the discovery of a time-bomb in the Lido Cinema on Rama I Road was politically motivated.

The bomb, made from one pound of TNT wired to a battery and an alarm clock, was discovered by a ticket attendant just before the start of an afternoon show.

Police said the attendant, Khlaeo Chanchaona, 34, found the bomb under a seat. It is thought it was left by a woman who attended the noon show.

The bomb which was found at 2 p.m. was defused 40 minutes later. Bomb disposal experts said they could not tell when the bomb was set to explode because the alarm clock to activate the device was not set on normal time.

They said the size of the bomb, which was placed in the middle of the theatre, was enough to cause devasting damage and injury.

Police Chief Gen Narong Mahanon said after an urgent meeting with senior police officers that investigators found an extortion note demanding 200,000 baht in cash from the theatre management at the ticket counter which indictated a non-political motive.

But Pol Major-Gen Kasem said police have been told not to rule out the possibility that the bombing attempt was a political act.

He said several political groups were trying to disrupt attempts by political parties to form a new government and were opposed to the return of Gen Prem Tinsulanon as premier. These groups have brought in students and have been trying to persuade labourers to join them, he said, adding that students should be warned not to become the political tools of these groups.

Pol Lt-Gen Samnao said he believed the person who planted the bomb inside the cinema did not intend to kill anyone but only to attract publicity.

ASIA, PACIFIC SEMINAR TO FOCUS ON SOVIET THREAT

BK311035 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] Thailand and the United States will jointly organize a seminar late this year to seek ways to improve the efficiency and cooperation of armies of countries in Asia and Pacific region. A memorandum of understanding was signed on Tuesday by Assistant Army Chief of Staff for Operations Lieutenant General Suchinda Khraprayun and U.S. Western Commander Lieutenant General Charles Bagnal. About 130 army officers from about 25 counties in the region will participate in the seminar entitled The Army of the Future: Improving Effectiveness. The seminar will be held from 27 November to 9 December.

Lt Gen Suchinda said that apart from discussion on resources and training, the seminar will focus on the Soviet threat in the region. He said the participants wil exchange ideas which will enable the Thai Army to learn from the experiences of the armies of advanced nations. At the same time, the foreign delegates will learn from the Thai Army about its role in national development and communist suppression.

FURTHER ON NHAN DAN ON GORBACHEV SPEECH

OW010253 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Report on 30 July NHAN DAN editorial: "A Noble example in Striving for the Cause of International Peace, Security, and Cooperation"]

[Text] The paper NHAN DAN says: Comrade Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, made an extremely important speech on 29 July in Vladivostok on the Pacific coast, which has evoked the biggest repercussions in [words indistinct] and world opinion. This speech reflects the Soviet Union's just stand and noble sense of responsibility on major international issues.

In the continuing tense international situation created by the United States, Comrade Gorbachev once again appealed for checking the arms race, [words indistinct] destroying nuclear weapons, and making unremitting efforts to seek political solutions to regional conflicts. These are major issues now before mankind, urgent matters of life and death for Europe, Africa, America, and Asia.

The editorial points out: In his speech in Vladivostok, Comrade Gorbachev put forward his clear ideas and important peace intitiatives for the Asia-Pacific region, including such big countries as the Soviet Union, the United States, India, China, Japan, Vietnam, Mexico, and Indonesia.

To realize its new globalism, U.S. imperialism has put forward its extremely reactionary doctrine for Asia and the Pacific. In so doing, the United States is attempting to maintain its imperialist position in this important -- increasinggly important — region, to develop its hegemonism, and to impede and oppose revolutionary movements and the ongoing process of new changes.

In appraising the victory won by the Vietnamese people in resisting imperialism in this region, Comrade Gorbachev said: This has once again displayed the (?inexhaustible) strength of freedom and socialist ideology. We are deeply touched by this.

The editorial says: In his speech in Vladivostok, Comrade Gorbachev once again expounded the Soviet policy, propositions and peace initiatives for the Asia-Pacific region. This embodies a principled stand on the peaceful coexistence of countries with different social systems and the Leninist foreign policy adopted by the 27th CPSU Congress.

The Vietnamese people warmly welcome and fully support Comrade Gorbachev's 28 July statement and fully support the Soviet Union's correct position and series of new and important proposals for establishing new fair relations and creating an atmosphere of peace and stability in the Asia-Pacific region and satisfying the aspirations and interests of various nations in this region.

The editorial says: After reaching agreement with Afghanistan, the Soviet Union announced that it would withdraw some of its troops from that nation. This has reflected the peaceful, sincere, and constructive attitude of the Soviet Union. As everyone knows, the U.S. imperialists and reactionaries pursue an international terrorist policy toward various nations and are waging an undeclared war in Afghanistan in an attempt to dominate the world and [word indistinct]. Such acts violate international law and cause the international situation to become more tense and dangerous.

With generous, disinterested Soviet support and assistance, the Afghan revolution is continuously developing. Afghanistan has made certain economic achievements, and the social basis for the people's revolutionary policy power is being consolidated and strengthened with each passing day. This has provided conditions for withdrawing some of the Soviet troops and for seeking a political solution. However, if interference in the Democratic Republic continues, then the Soviet Union will resolutely help the Afghan people defend the achievements of their revolution.

General Secretary Gorbachev also discussed the situation in Southeast Asia and the relations between the three Indochinese and other countries in this region. He hoped that a relationship conducive to common security would be established in Southeast Asia and other Asian areas. Vietnam has also repeatedly expressed its sincerity and sense of responsibility in this regard.

In the current complicated situation in the Asia-Pacific region, where the people of various countries desire to live in an atmosphere of peace, stability, good-neighborliness, and friendship, Vietnam, the Soviet Union, and other fraternal socialist countries have repeatedly reiterated their stance for maintaining and promoting political dialogues and continuing to seek the possibilities for limiting arms, improving the international situation, and promoting constructive cooperation among various countries.

Vietnam has clearly pointed out on many occasions that the Vientamese people, as always, cherish the traditional friendship between the people of Vietnam and China. The responsibility for the worsening relations between the two countries and the continuing tension along the Vietnamese-Chinese border rests completely with China. If China genuinely and sincerely wants peace and better relations with its neighboring countries, it should immediately give up its policy of hostility to Vietnam and the other countries of Indochina and hold consultations [cuo shang] with Vietnam to solve outstanding problems in their bilateral relations, and as an intial step, stabilize the situation along the common border and create favorable conditions for the normalization of relations between the two countries, thereby contributing to making Southeast Asia and Asia as a whole a region of peace, stability, and cooperation.

Firmly allying themselves with the fraternal people of Laos and Cambodia and closely uniting and cooperating in all fields with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, the Vietnamese people are determined to contribute to the common struggle for the consolidation of peace and security and the promotion of mutual understanding and cooperation among various nations.

HANOI MANDARIN ON SOLVING CAMBODIAN ISSUE

OW010945 Hanoi International Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 30 Jul 86

["Rambling Talk with Listeners" program: On Solutions to the Cambodian Issue"]

[Text] The Beijing authorities have always made a big fuss over the Cambodian issue and attacked Vietnam for lacking sincerity in seeking a solution to this issue. What is the crux of the matter?

First, it should be pointed out that on Cambodian territory there exists a legal government headed by Chairman Heng Samrin, and that the Cambodian people are vigorously engaged in overcoming the grave consequences caused by the Pol Pot clique from 1975 to 1979. The Cambodian people have made gratifying achievements in restoring and developing agriculture, public health, education, and other undertakings. If the remnants of the Pol Pot clique, supported by international reactionary forces, had not sabotaged the Cambodian people's undertakings, the Cambodian people would have made quicker progress. This is the crux of the Cambodian issue.

Specifically, the international reactionary forces are trying their utmost to restore the rule of the remnants of the Pool Pot forces and other Khmer reactionaries over Cambodia. For this purpose, they have set out from Thai border areas to harass the Cambodian people who are rebuilding their motherland.

Practice over the past several years proves, however, that Pol Pot and his ilk cannot change the situation in Cambodia by resorting to force. The final statement issued by the conference of foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries, held on 15-16 August 1985, fully reflected the three Indochinese countries' stand on seeking a political solution to the Cambodian issue. The statement said: The three Indochinese countries hold that the Heng Samrin government may consider the proposal to negotiate indirectly with the various sides of Democratic Kampuchea [min jian] through a third party. Provided the Pol Pot clique is removed as a political and military entity, the PRK Government would be willing to hold a dialogue with the Khmer clique or with Khmer individuals.

The statement also said: All Vietnamese volunteers stationed in Cambodia will be withdrawn from the country by 1990. Thus, the cards are laid on the table -- either the international reactionary forces stop their support and assistance to the Pol Pot clique, the main political and military force in the so-called tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, or, by having the Pol Pot clique removed as a political and military entity, the PRK Government, headed by Chairman Heng Samrin, holds a dialogue with the other Khmer forces.

The Pol Pot clique is a bunch of major criminals who pushed Cambodia back into the Middle Ages by undermining Cambodia socially and economically. This clique has been strongly condemned by world opinion; it is not qualified to hold a dialogue with the true representative of the Cambodian peole. It is the Cambodian people who overthrew Pol Pot's brutal rule.

While evading the crux of the Cambodian issue, the Beijing authorities have kept using the Pol Pot clique as a tool for carrying hostile activities against Cambodia. On the other hand, the Beijing authorities have made a big fuss over the Vietnamese volunteers stationed in Cambodia, alleging that the Vietnamese volunteers are the key to settling the Cambodian issue.

However, anyone with any understanding of the realities of life can clearly discern the Beijing authorities' trick aimed at deceiving public opinion. Did Beijing notrant time and again that the Taiwan issue was the biggest obstacle to the development of relations between China and the United States? Yet, when the Reagan administration deliberately continued to sell extra quantities of arms to Taiwan in violation of the guidelines of the second Shanghai Communique and strengthened its official ties with Taiwan, Beijing kept on expanding its relations with the United States in all fields. Meanwhile, frequent visits are still being exchanged by high-ranking officials of the two countries.

At present, this so-called biggest obstacle has long been ignored and forgotten. As a matter of fact, the obstacle that Beijing ranted about time and again is nothing but a handkerchief used for playing magic tricks. Sometimes it appears before the eyes of the spectators; at other times it suddenly disappears. But the people of the world all have eyes. How can they be hoodwinked for long? As the saying goes, one deceives people in order to slip past. The Beijing authorities are, indeed, deceiving public opinion.

CADRE CONFERENCE STUDIES DRAFT POLITICAL REPORT

[Text] The Secretariat of the party Central Committee recently held a conference for leading cadres of central offices and localities to study and thoroughly understand the draft documents to be presented at the Sixth Party Congress: The party Central Committee's draft political report and the draft report on the proposed amendments and revisions of some points of the party statutes.

Attending were the comrades in charge of the various committees, sectors, ministries, and general departments of the party, the state, the army, and the mass organizations at the center, together with the key leading cadres of 40 provinces, cities, and special zones, and high-ranking cadres of the armed forces.

Comrades Truong Chinh and Le Duc Tho addressed the conference.

After hearing Comrade Vo Chi Cong, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, present the basic contents of the draft political report, the conference devoted much time to studying and discussing so as to thoroughly understand the viewpoints stated in the various documents. The participants also made many suggestions to these documents.

Summing up the conference, Comrade Nguyen Van Linh, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the party Central Committee, clarified many issues raised in the draft political report and gave guidance to the organization and leading of party congresses at all levels. He advised all delegates, cadres, and party members to consider various issues objectly, have a historical viewpoint in evaluating the situation, and clearly see the great successes and new factors of the revolution. Each cadre and party member in each locality and sector and at each level must have a sense of serious, truthful, and frank self-criticism and criticism.

He also reminded the leading cadres to guide party congresses at all levels in studying the important addresses delivered by Comrades Truong Chinh and Le Duc Tho at this conference.

Truong Chinh Speech

OW311331 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 26 Jul 86

["Text" of speech by Truong Chinh, chairman of the SRV State Council at the 7-10 July cadre conference to study the draft political report to be presented at the Sixth National CPV Congress; place not given -- read by announcer]

[Text] Dear comrades: Over the past several days, working hard, imbued with a high sense of responsibility and resolved to gain thorough understanding, you comrades have studied and animatedly discussed the basic contents of the draft political report, and have contributed many good ideas to this report. On behalf of the party Central Committee and the Political Bureau, I warmly acclaim the results of the conference.

Over the past 56 years, with its rich experience in revolutionary struggle, our party has led our people in overcoming countless difficulties and trials and in scoring extremely glorious victories. With the total liberation of the south and national reunification, our entire country entered the period of transition to socialism. In the light of the resolutions of the Fourth and Fifth Congresses, in a situation in which our country still faces many difficulties, our party has led our people in continuously scoring great successes in socialist construction, in defending the socialist fatherland, and in discharging their national tasks and internationalist obligations.

Apart from those great achievements, we have committed a number of serious blunders and mistakes in economic construction and mangement. Those achievements and successes, those blunders and mistakes, as well as the guidelines, objectives, and tasks of the party and people in forthcoming years, are reflected in the draft political report to be presented at the coming congress.

Comrade Vo Chi Cong has introduced the basic contents of the draft political report to enaable you comrades to study and discuss them over the past several days. I will not repeat these basic contents. I would like, on this occasion, to add some ideas of my own so as to further clarify the party's strategic guiding concepts.

As you comrades already know, the Fourth and Fifth National CPV Congresses have pointed out very correctly our country's outstanding characteristics in the period of transition to socialism and in the first phase of that period, that is, that we are advancing directly to socialism, bypassing the stage of capitalist development, from a situation of small-scale production, with a multisectoral economy, a very low commodity production ratio, and continued natural-economy autarky in a number of regions.

A number of established material-technical bases have been seriously ravaged in the 30 years of war. Imbalances in grain, foodstuffs, energy, raw and other materials, and infrastructure have been severe and serious. Freshly emerging from a long war, our people have had to cope with a land-grabbing border war and a multifaceted war of sabotage waged by the Chinese expansionist-hegemonists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and international reactionaries, making it impossible for us to devote our efforts to economic construction. These outstanding characteristics prove on the one hand that we started our advance to socialism at a very low level; on the other hand they prove the extremely complex nature of the situation. Our shortcomings and subjective mistakes have rendered the already very difficult situation even more difficult and complicated.

The weighty task facing the Sixth National CPV Congress is that it must make a realistic review of the situation and draw profound lessons from experience, thereby further concretizing the policy line set forth earlier at the Fourth and Fifth Congresses. Keeping in mind its momentous significance, we are resolved to do a good job in making preparations for the congress, to ensure its success, and to meet the aspirations of our entire army and people.

To further concretize the policy line and strategic guidelines for our country's development set forth earlier at the Fourth and Fifth Congresses, our party will lead our people in persisting in their struggle, in remaining valiant in their work and in the defense of the fatherland, in surmounting all difficulties and trials, and in steadily advancing toward socialism.

To carry out the party's line set forth earlier at the Fourth and Fifth Congresses, we must, in the course of carrying out the socialist revolution in our country, make renovations in many respects: renovations in concepts, expecially in economic concepts; renovations in work style; and renovations in organization and cadres. Our Sixth Party Congress must meet these requirements. These renovations must be reflected in the contents of party documents, primarily in the political report, and in the guidelines for personnel assignments issued by the central level and by all party committee echelons at the all-echelon congresses and the coming National Party Congress.

We must base these renovations on the lessons learned from past successes and from the shortcomings and mistakes we have committed in the past 11 years, now that our entire country is entering the period of transition to socialism. At this point, I would like to bring up some important lessons from experience.

First, the strength of a country, of a revolution, lies in the people. In order to truly promote the working people's right to collective mastery, we must have confidence in the people, we must consider the people as the basis in all policies. That was how our forefathers thought and acted in ancient times. In modern times, from prerevolutionary days to the August Revolution, and to the wars of resistance against France, the United States, and the Beijing expansionists, our party has invariably applied this same policy. In our current advance to socialism, we must all the more persist in applying this same policy.

Party policies must stem from the interests, aspirations, and level of knowledge of the people. The assessment of our policies — whether they are correct, wrong, good, or bad — depends on whether or not the majority of the masses are enthusiastic, supportive, and eager to carry them out; whether or not production is promoted, the economy is improving, the people's lives are stabilized and gradually improved; and whether or not national defense and security are strong and stable.

Who carries out policies? The people, no one else. Even if policies are correct, unless the people understand and support them, they cannot be carried out. In that case, efforts must be made to educate the people and explain things to them; we must know how to wait for them.

Occasionally we must readjust policies to realities and the level of knowledge of the masses. We must educate the people, make them understand and have confidence in the party, and create a seething large-scale revolutionary movement among the working people to make them voluntarily and eagerly endeavor to build socialism.

Since our country entered the period of transition, quite a large number of cadres and party members have detached themselves from the people, forgetting the years and months of sacrifice and hardship during which they shared the sweet and the bitter with them and thinking that popular support is needed only when they carry out a clandestine revolution and wage a liberation war and that, when we build socialism, the people must obey them.

Lenin said: The risk of a ruling party lies in that it may sever its relations with the popular masses. Our peasants have a tendency toward private ownership. This is correct. To advance to socialism, the tendency toward private ownership must be eliminated. That is also correct. But, the question is how to eliminate it. It must be eliminated by carrying out the three revolutions and gradually raising the level of production socialization while educating our peasants consistently, positively, and persistently to help them gradually change their way of thinking in the direction of progress, and not by giving orders and applying administrative and coercive measures to eliminate the tendency overnight. We may say that thinking of private ownership means a lack of patriotism, but our people will not agree with us and we will, as a result, be further distanced from them.

During the past several resistance wars, some families did not send their members to sacrifice for the fatherland's independence and freedom. Our peasants in particular and our people in general love their country and socialism very much. But they will object if we impose on them what is against their legitimate interests, if we force them to yield to our subjective will. The lesson for us is that our revolution, and undertaking of our people regarded as very important in the past, has now become even more important. This is a very valuable historical lesson from our country's revolution.

Second, it is necessary in leadership work to abide by the law of objectiveness and to apply it to reality. Comrade General Secretary Le Duan said: To be masters is to grasp the law and to act in accordance with it. He was right. Failure to abide by the law cannot help us to exert mastery; on the contrary, the law may strike back at us.

Over the past more than 10 years, it has been obvious that when we want to change the socioeconomic situation, we must first change our thinking, especially our thinking on economic matters. Marxism-Leninism has its universal, general principles, but how to apply them to the situation in Vietnam is our business, because no one else can do it for us. The application of these principles must be based on the actual situation in Vietnam, with its specific people and with the specific developmental conditions of our country's history, economy, social requirements, and traditions.

The system of objective laws is expanding its impact. These laws influence and supplement each other; they combine into a single whole, with the special socialist laws playing the leading role. We must apply these laws properly and, through practical trials, readjust our policies so that we will apply not just a certain law, but the entire legal system, and do so more ingeniously and correctly. The criteria for evaluating the level and capability of properly applying the legal system through implementing our policies lie in production; maintaining circulation operations; stabilizing and gradually improving the people's material and cultural life; building a healthy, civilized society; heightening all ethical and spiritual values; and consolidating our national defense and security. Any policy that dampens the masses' enthusiasm, creates obstacles, lowers production, obstructs circulation operations, causes livelihood problems, develops negativeness, and disturbs society, must be abandoned or remedied because it reflects an incorrect application of objective laws.

Over the past years, because we have made mistakes, developed subjectiveness and impatience, disregarded and even violated objective laws, and remained backward and sluggish, we have held on too long to the system of centralism, bureaucratism, and subsidization. As a result, production development has been restrained; our laboring people have been unable to actually develop their mastery; nonproducers have exceeded producers in number; productivity, quality, efficiency have constantly decreased; and no products, or only very small quantities of goods, have been available for society. Circulation operations have been obstructed due to the partitioning of markets; the economic crisis has continued; inflation has not ceased; prices have been unstable; life has turned insecure; ethic and spiritual values have been eroded; and negativism has developed.

The Sixth Plenum of the First Party Central Committee and especially the Eighth Party Central Committee Plenum have deeply analyzed these shortcomings and mistakes and pointed out the serious harm which has been caused in several aspects. On the basis of this analysis, the party Central Committee has decided to abolish centralism, bureaucratism, and subsidization and switch economic activities to the socialist system of accounting and business transactions, according to plan.

The resolution of the Eighth Plenum of the Party Central Committee, followed by resolutions Nos 28, 31, and 306, the Political Bureaus's draft resolution, and the conclusion of the 10th Plenum of the Party Central Committee on prices, wages, and money mark our party's maturity in leadership work in general and in economic leadership in the awareness and correct application of laws, in shifting from directing economic operations through administrative orders, regarded as indispensable, to directing them by correctly applying the system of objective laws. This is the essence and profound revolutionary significance of the resolution of the Eighth Plenum of the Party Central Committee.

Regrettably, because of a lack of understanding and thorough grasp of the spirit and basic contents of these resolutions, we have, while providing guidance for implementation, made a number of blunders and mistakes in currency exchange and in the recent general readjustment of prices and wages, thus causing serious consequences which we must now seek all measures to overcome.

It should be added that in the background of today's era, when the socialist community has become an international system and an increasingly powerful and stable force, there are many favorable objective conditions; we must necessarily seek, and are fully capable of seeking, the extremely valuable assistance of fraternal countries, primarily the Soviet Union. However, no matter how advantageous the objective conditions are, our subjectivity must always play the main role.

Obviously, we have missed out on a valuable opportunity. The Soviet Union has, in the past 10 years, provided us with aid worth tens of billions of rubles. Yet, with the bureaucratic, centralized subsidization mechanism, we have failed in our undertakings. We have had to dip into the aid for several hundred million rubles annually in social consumption, subsidization, and loss compensation. Several hundred million rubles have been spent on many construction projects. This has been a big mistake.

Regrettably, a number of comrades still fail to fully recognize the profound, multifaceted harmful effects of that mechanism. They are still afraid that thinking and doing things in a way different to the bureaucratic, centralized mechanism is departure from socialism.

Some comrades worry that if we boldy utilize and develop the potentials of different sectors of the economy, promulgate policies for production expansion, and coordinate state -- and people-created jobs, the situation will become more chaotic because raw materials , materials, and energy, being in limited quantities, will then be channeled from state-run installations to the collective and private sectors. Do they mean, as evinced by their fears, that we must limit production and, in so doing, not provide jobs to everyone in order to do the right thing and avoid chaos? Moreover, such concern proves that we are still not confident of the people's strength; we still do not clearly understand the application of rules.

In fact, when we adopt a policy of expanding production and creating conditions to provide more jobs, because of the division of labor in society, some workers, in carrying out their occupations, will create more raw materials and materials for production in order to meet social needs; the working people will bring into full play their creativity in overcoming difficulties and developing production.

The problem is, we must adopt correct policies to create conditions for workers, production and business installations, and localities to produce raw materials, materials, and consumer goods. If our policies -- especially investment, pricing, circulation, and distribution policies -- are rational, peasants will certainly not give up tilling, will not pull up tobacco plants, will not cut off and destroy sugarcane; and will not give up hog raising. On the contrary, they will be more enthusiastic and will produce more; we will have more raw materials and materials for industrial production and more grain and foodstuffs for consumption. If investment policies are correct and if we have suitable policies, mine workers will certainly eagerly overcome difficulties in producing more coal, and scientists and technicians will devote their intelligence and talent to creativity and search for sources of energy, raw materials, and materials that can be tapped locally, thus helping economize large amounts of foreign exchage.

Correct policies not only help promote production but also make important contributions to consolidating the worker-peasant alliance and making it more steadfast; they arouse enthusiasm and confidence among the peasants in their steady advance to socialism, along the path already charted by the party. Erroneous, unpopular policies that go against rules not only cause production decline but also hurt the worker-peasant alliance and drive peasants into the hands of speculative private traders.

As far as socialist transformation is concerned, we must also step it up on a permanent, continuous basis by adopting practical forms and steps for each locality and the entire country and by properly implementing the guideline for conducting transformation by making use of it, by making use of it to better conduct transformation. We must make production relations consistently conform with the nature and capability of production forces, determined not to quickly give up transformation due to a sense of impatience, thereby causing production to decrease and the market to decline. The best way to implement this guideline is to broadly apply proper forms of economic cooperation among economic components on the basis of developing the key role of socialist economic components. Of course, we must punish speculators, smugglers, makers of fake goods who intend to deceive consumers, thieves; those who are corrupt, deviant, and depraved; and those who siphon state goods from warehouses.

We must strengthen managerial work to control the market by properly combining economic, administrative, educational, and judicial measures. But this market must be a prosperous one with an abundance, not a scarcity, of goods so as to meet social needs. If we should have to manage a poor market, how could we satisfactorily apply the basic socialist economic law which seeks to satisfy the laboring people's growing material and cultural needs.

We can simply say that failure to correctly comply with this law will not lead us to socialism, and that failure to correctly understand this law will prolong and not shorten the path toward socialism. We should not assume that we could advance to socialism more quickly by skipping a stage or implementing this law incorrectly. On the contrary, we would then move forward very slowly.

In sum, the most correct and quickest way to advance to socialism is to respect the objective laws, to apply them correctly, and to act in accordance with them. There is no other way. This is the second lesson for us.

Third, we must maintain and strengthen our party's leading role to ensure the mobilization of all our people's capabilities toward the realization of socialism, to ensure the conscientious application of law, and to create favorable conditions for developing the positive effects of these laws. The leading party must grasp the laws that affect society in each historic stage. By properly grasping this system, the party's leadership will help the people in vigorously developing their socialist collective mastery and guide them in conscientiously acting in accordance with these laws.

The might of these laws is invincible. Whether the powerful force of proletarian dictatorship and the laboring people's great capabilities can be fully developed or not depends on whether or not this force and these capabilities act in accordance with these laws. To comply with these laws is to observe the people's will and to follow the progress of the country and the era. For this reason, correct compliance with these laws will help us develop production, carry out smooth circulation operation, and gradually stabilize and improve the situation.

Our party's experienced leadership over the revolution over the past 56 years has proved its correctness and creativeness in combining the national and international factors, the traditional and contemporary factors, as well as the objective factor regarding the people's strength and the objective factor regarding the application of the system of laws. It is for this reason that our country's revolution has advanced from one success to another over the past years.

Over the past 10 years we have been entering the period of transition to socialism, that is, entering a revolutionary course that is still new to us. For thousands of years our people have fought their enemies and brought into full play their forefathers' heroic tradition of nation-building and national defense. This is the first time in our nation's history that we are building socialism.

In the course of our efforts to advance, apart from the successes we have scored, we have committed quite a few blunders and mistakes. Through the difficulties they have encountered and the blunders they have made, our party and people have further matured by another step. We can firmly be confident that, with our party's correct leadership, with the creative application of the principles of Marxism-Leninism, and with our positive acts performed according to rules, the great strength of the system of dictatorship of the proletariat and the right to collective mastery of our country's working people will be highly enhanced in the coming years.

To ensure the party's leadership, we must strengthen intra-party unity on the basis of Marxism-Leninism and the party's policy line. In the face of a difficult and complex situation, it is not unusual that opinions differ. We must be sincere and frank and adopt a constructive attitude in discussions in order to find out the truth and reach a high level of unanimity; we must try our best to avoid rashness and undue haste.

The present situation requires that our party renovate its work style in accordance with uncle Ho's work style, and that it renovate organizational and cadre work as well. We must firmly maintain democratic centralism in party life as well as in leadership over economic and social activities.

Some people have offered the idea that, between centralism and democracy, we should at present accord priority to centralism. That claim is erroneous both in theory and in practice. Democratic centralism is a principle that reflects very strict unity. Unless we promote democracy and ensure the right to autonomy of basic units, and the legitimate interests of the worker both in agriculture and industry, both in producton and goods circulation, there will be no, or only very few, commodity products, and commodities will not be in normal circulation. In such a situation, can we ensure centralism?

If centralism is stressed to the point that we lack commodities and goods circulation is stalemated, what is the purpose of centralism? That is the bureaucratic centralism we have been guilty of for a long time, and which the resolution of the Sixth CPV Central Committee Plenum has analyzed, criticized, and rejected.

Centralism must be based on adequate promotion of democracy. Promoting democracy must be aimed at ensuring the right to centalized management. These two aspects are of a common nature; they interact and complement each other.

Under the present circumstances, we must counter the bureaucratic-centralist subsidization mechanism. Meanwhile, we must counter liberalism, disorganization, indiscipline, and the practice of catering only to local and parochial interests, which weaken the state's centralized and unified management.

In view of the current situation, in order to correctly implement the resolutions of the Eighth CPV Central Committee Plenum and the subsequent resolutions of the Political Bureau, we must assign cadres correcly, suiting the requirements of renovation in economic leadership and management.

Cadres' capabilities and qualities must be reflected in the renovation of concepts, of thinking, and of ways of doing things, especially in the renovation of thinking and doing things economic, consistent with the requirement of shifting economic activities to socialist economic accounting and business transactions, with planning as the basis.

We are facing a specific situation. Apart from the advantages, there are a great many difficulties to be overcome. To ensure that the dual strategic tasks are accomplished well in the new situation, the consolidation and strengthening of party leadership is of decisive importance. That is our third lesson.

The aforementioned great lessons from experience help us further grasp the basic contents of the draft political report, correctly assess the situation in years past, and define the guidelines, objectives, and tasks for coming years. That is also the basis for forming a new economic concept which will also help you, comrades, draw up reports on the situation and tasks of your respective party organizations.

Meanwhile, according to plan, and under the guidance of the Secretariat, you comrades should organize well the gathering of ideas from all-echelon congresses, of our entire party and people to be incorporated into the political report which will be presented to the coming Sixth National Party Congress.

We should make every cadre and party member keenly understand his tasks, promote democracy, organize serious and frank study and discussion in the party, and contribute many precise ideas to the draft political report and the draft suggestions for amendments to the party statute.

The Secretariat should guide all party committee echelons in organizing well the gathering, classification, and systematization of opinions contributed by party organizations at all levels, and should help correctly integrate important ideas into documents, in order to perfect, and raise the level of, the political report to suit the Sixth National Party Congress.

The all-echelon party organization congresses must apply ideas, viewpoints, and policies mentioned in the political report to the specific conditions in each party organization and locality; devise the guidelines, tasks, and realistic programs of action for their respective localities and units; do a good job in carrying out the elections to the executive committees of party organizations at all levels; and elect worthy delegates to the national party congress in accordance with the central level's guidance.

To ensure the strengthening of the party's leadership and raise its effectiveness, we must attach utmost importance to party-building tasks, to making the party clean, strong, and stable, and must carry out self-criticism and criticism drives well. By so doing, we will create unity in will and action in the party and among people, and be able to overcome future difficulties and advance further.

Along with making urgent preparations for the national party congress and the all-echelon party organization congresses, we must regularly and firmly grasp, and direct well, urgent upcoming tasks; positively and timely resolve difficulties in materials and energy, and meet other conditions, in order to accelerate agricultural and industrial production; carry out measures to correctly implement the resolution of the Eighth Plenum of the Party Central Committee, resolutions No 28 and 31, and the conclusion of the 10th Plenum of the Party Central Committee on prices, wages, and money; and quickly carry out draft resolution No 306 of the Political Bureau on guaranteeing the right to autonomy in production and business transfactions of basic economic units. Meanwhile, we must heighten vigilance, stand ready to cope with the enemy's land-grabbing and sabotage schemes and acts; and firmly maintain national defense and security.

We must strive to overcome all difficulties to ensure high productivity and output for the 10th-month rice crop, accelerate the production of consumer goods, and further improve the distribution-circulation link in order to make the market, prices, and the people's lives move in the right direction and to create an enthusiastic atmosphere among the people at the time of the congress. This is at once an economic, political, and ideological problem; it is also aimed at achieving further stabilization in the people's lives and their outlook and at ensuring success for the congress. Meanwhile, it will create favorable preconditions for the implementation of post-congress work.

This is realistic work for developing the working people's right to socialist collective mastery. It motivates the entire party and people to eagerly emulate one another in fulfilling the 1986 state plan, and crates an enthusiastic spirit in scoring realistic achievements in honor of the all-echelon party organization congresses and the National Party Congress.

Dear comrades, with great determination and firm confidence in the success of the party congress, I wish you good health and many new achievements. Please, comrades, convey the kind regards of the party Central Committee and the Political Bureau to all cadres, party members, compatriots, and combatants throughout the country.

May the all-echelon party organization congresses be crowned with success.

Thank you, comrades.

HANOI PARTY COMMITTEE REVIEWS CRITICISM DRIVE

[Text] The Hanoi Municipal Party Committee recently reviewed the first phase of its criticism drive and discussed plans to improve criticism and self-criticism within party organizations. To date, the municipal party organization has basically completed the first phase of its criticism and self-criticism drive.

Generally speaking, party organizations have been consolidated and further improved through the criticism and self-criticism drive. The spirit of striving to strengthen unity within the party, the sense of observing organizational discipline, and the implementation of principles and activities of party organizations and chapters have been consistently maintained and effectively carried out. Party members have shown sympathy and understanding toward one another, while party committees understand more profoundly various party cadres and members. Such negative phenomena as taking advantage of privileges, corruption, violating public property, feasting, and bribery are being eliminated, thus developing the people's right to collective mastery and encouraging them to participate more in the criticism drive to strengthen the party.

To overcome shortcomings drawn from the first phase and to accelerate the second phase of criticism and self-criticism, the Hanoi Municipal Party Committee has urged various echelons of party committees, sectors, branches, districts, and cities to complete their criticism drives during July, integrate ideas on criticism to contribute to completing reports of party committees for the coming district and city party organizations congresses; and to survey, inspect, and solve various problems raised by party members and the people. They must accelerate the second phase of the criticism and self-criticism drive, while preparing for party organization congresses at various levels.

EMULATION DRIVE TO GREET PARTY CONGRESS UNDERWAY

[Text] An emulation drive in production to greet the forthcoming Sixth Party Congress is under way in Vietnam. Working people in the central province of Binh Tri Thien are striving to fulfill or overfulfill the 1986 state plan. This includes planting of some 60,000 hectares of summer-autumn rice and good preparation for the next crop. Special attention is given to antistorm and flood work to protect people's lives and property and rice crop. Every office and enterprise in the province has registered to carry out projects in honor of the Sixth Party Congress.

HAYDEN TO DISCUSS DEFENSE DURING U.S. VISIT

[Text] The minister for foreign affairs, Mr Hayden, is traveling to the United States for the ANZUS ministerial council. ANZUS links Australia, New Zealand, and the United States in a defense alliance. However, a rift has developed between the United States and New Zealand over that country's refusal to provide porting facilities for nuclear-powered or -armed ships. As a result, the ministerial council meeting will be a bilateral affair between the United States and Australia.

Mr Hayden said the relationship between the two countries was good despite the serious differences on America's farm subsidy policies.

The foreign affairs minister will visit Canada before going on to San Francisco for talks with the secretary of state, Mr Shultz, and the defense secretary, Mr Caspar Weinberger.

MAHATHIR PREDICTS LANDSLIDE ELECTION WIN

BK300815 Hong Kong AFP in English 0651 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, July 30 (AFP) -- Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammed forecast Wednesday that his 13-party national front coalition would score a landslide in a general election scheduled for the weekend. "The people's support for the Barisan Nasional (National Front) is now clear and it looks like it will get more than a two-third majority," BERNAMA NEWS AGENCY quoted Dr. Mahathir as saying in Kuching, capital of the east Malaysian State of Sarawak. Malaysia's almost seven million voters go to the polls on Saturday and Sunday to pick members for the 177-seat lower house of parliament and 11 of the country's 13 state assemblies. Front nominees were returned unopposed to six parliamentary and eight state seats when nominations closed last Thursday but candidates from nine political parties and more than 50 independents are fighting front nominees for the other seats.

Dr. Mahathir accused the front's principal opponents, the Chinese-based Democratic Action Party (DAP) and the Parti Islam Sa-Malaysia (PAS) of entering into a secret pact to deny victory to some candidates from his coalition. But the pact was unlikely to work because leaders of the two parties seldom kept their word, he claimed. DAP leader Lim Kit Siang last week announced that his party was not joining a PAS-led, five-party electoral pact because of the conservative Moslem party's commitment to the establishment of an Islamic state.

Diplomats said that Dr Mahathir's front was likely to retain its two-thirds majority in parliament barring a last-minute swing to the opposition. PAS is expected to make inroads into areas held by Dr. Mahathir's United Malays National Organization(UMNO) in the northeastern states of Kelantan and Trengganu. The DAP, on the other hand, is expected to make substantial gains in urban constituencies with large numbers of Chinese voters, analysts said.

MAHATHIR PREDICTS CHAOS IF PAS COMES TO POWER

[Text] The prime minister, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir, says any Islamic country needs industralization in its development to help generate more job opportunities. The present National Front government is fully aware of this and will step up efforts to diversify the country's economy so as to bring more benefits to the people.

He was speaking at a ceremony to lay the foundation stone of a silk-weaving factory at the Chendering industrial site in Kuala Ibai, Terengganu. Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir also expressed the fear that chaos would erupt and the true understanding of Islam vanished, if the Pan Malaysian Islamic Party -- PAS -- came to power in the country after the general elections on Saturday and Sunday [2-3 August]. He pointed out that the actions of PAS so far indicated that the opposition party was not working toward the setting up of a true Islamic nation as claimed in its Constitution, but was merely fishing for votes. He said one of the claims by PAS which was found to be contradictory was branding Malays who cooperate with non-Muslims as kafir or infidels, but PAS is now cooperating with parties which are set up by non-Muslims, and he asked whether this means that PAS is also kafir.

The prime minister also hit out at PAS for coming out with a manifesto which did not back up its so-called claim to set up an Islamic government. In the manifesto, he said, PAS spoke of what it claimed was its struggle for fairness, peace, and harmony but the actions of PAS, for example in the Memali incident, where several people were killed, contradicted with its manifesto.

PARTIES' ELECTION PROSPECTS, ISSUES VIEWED

[By Mervin Nambiar]

[Text] Kuala Lumpur, July 31 (AFP) -- Some seven million voters go to the polls this weekend in a general election which has been characterised by probably the dirtiest electoral campaign in Malaysian history, analysts say here.

Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad called the snap polls for Saturday and Sunday, some 11 months before his governments's five-year term expires, "so that we can get on with the business of government." But the nine political parties battling the ruling 13-member National Front Coalition have accused Dr Mahathir's administration of denying them sufficient time to campaign, blatantly abusing the local media and exploiting government machinery, in addition to alleging corruption and nepotism.

"This is without doubt the dirtiest campaign since 1969," Chandra Muzaffar, president of the non-political Aliran, a social reform movement, said, adding "I have not seen any campaign reach such low levels of crudity." "The government seems quite desperate by saying it will deny development funds to those voting opposition candidates and frequently referring to the May 13 riots" after a general election in 1969, when hundreds of people died, Mr Muzafafar said. [quotation marks as received]

While the front is in no danger of losing power, at least two of the nine opposition parties could cut into its overwhelming majorities in the just-expanded 177-member Parliament and the 351 seats up for grabs in 11 state assemblies, analysts say. The biggest challenge to the front, a grouping of largely ethnically based parties headed by Dr Mahathir's United Malays National Organisation (UMNO), comes from the fundamentalist Parti Islam Sa-Malaysia (PAS). While the front is contesting all seats, the PAS, the only party offering itself as an alternative government, is vying for 99 parliamentary and 265 state seats. Its leaders say they will set up an Islamic state, replacing Malaysia's secular laws with Islamic legislation, if returned. Diplomats say that the PAS, protraying itself as "god's party," is likely to make gains among conservtaive Moslem voters in the Malay belt states of Kelantan, Trengganu, Kedah and Perlis.

The largely Chinese-based Democratic Action Party (DAP), declaring that "enough is enough" has meanwhile urged voters to deny Dr Mahathir a two-thirds majority in Parliament to check alleged corruption, arrogance and nepotism." DAP leaders, concentrating on urban constituencies with large numbers of Chinese voters, say the government could be made more accountable without the two-thirds majority and the automatic right to amend the constitution. The party has also said it will work to dismantle the government's pro-Malay policies in education, business and employment if returned in strength. The DAP, going into the polls with 10 of the 18 opposition seats in the just dissolved Lower House, could score in Penang, Perak, Selangor and the Federal Territory where the majority of peninsular Malaysia's 2.2 million Chinese and 487,000 Indian voters are concentrated, analysts say.

Dr Mahathir has said that while the front would not resort to extra-parliamentary means to cling to power if rejected, voters should not forget the trauma of the 1969 polls. Hundreds died after the DAP, PAS, the Parti Gerakan Rakyat Malaysia (Peoples Movement) and the Peoples' Progressive Party [PPP] picked up 37 of the 103 parliamentary seats contested in penisular Malaysia. The Gerakan, which controls the Penang State Government, and the PPP are now members of Dr Mahathir's coalition. Opposition leaders have described Dr Mahathir's remarks and similar statements by other front campaigners as blatant intimidation, but say references to the riots will not affect voter sentiment. The government has refused to lift a ban on public rallies in force since the 1969 riots to stop racial sentiments from being whipped up, election commission officials said. Apart from the stabbing of a campaign worker in Kedah, Dr Mahathir's home state and brawls between party supporters elsewhere no major violence has been reported so far, officials said.

VOPM CONTINUES UNITED ISLAMIC FRONT MANIFESTO

[Second Conclusion of "9 June 1986 Manifesto" of the Malaysian United Islamic Front: "To Expose all the evil deeds done by the UMNO ruling clique, and to put establish priorities for protecting the interests of the Muslims"]

[Text] We should unite very closely to overthrow the treacherous government and totally eliminate the roots of poverty and suffering. For the moment our priorities are as follows:

1. We must oppose the treacherous government that disobeys God's command through various means -- such as through thoughts, through words, or through physical violence. In Sura Nisaa, verse 59, God says: "O ye who believe! Obey God, and obey the Apostle, and those charged with authority among you." According to what God says all Muslims should obey God, the Prophet, and the government. To all Muslims, obeying God and the Prophet is absolute. However, it is not essential to obey the government because in his hadith, Prophet Muhammad says all Muslims should know that the government loved most by God, the most gracious, the merciful, is the government that is fair, just, that does not discriminate against the people, and does not deviate from the right path guided by God in its thoughts, words, and deeds. Therefore we should pledge our absolute obedience and support only to this kind of government. On the other hand, if the government is cruel to human beings created by God, particularly to Muslims, creates a wide socioeconomic gap among the people, and makes empty promises, we do not have to obey it. Instead, we should strongly oppose it. In our country now, there exists the UMNO [United Malays National Organization] ruling group which is hypocritical. This group is a traitor to Muslims and God will definitely condemn it. It constantly changes its policies and has done many evil deeds contrary to the teachings of Islam -- such as being cruel to the people, corrupt and fraudulent, corrupting Islamic morality, and so on. It is then mandatory for us Muslims to follow the Prophet's words -- telling us to oppose the treacherous UMNO ruling group that disobeys God's command -- by various means, either by thoughts, words, or physical violence.

2. We must uphold Islamic values and be active in spreading the nucleus of Islamic philosophy and preserve Islamic morality. We must fight against oppression and exploitation. We must oppose all nonsensical acts and regulations. We must expose and oppose all evil deeds of the ruling group which outrage Islamic values. Prophet Muhammad bravely fought the Quraish aristocratic group in Mecca and led all Muslims in their struggle against oppression and insults for the sake of spreading the Islamic religion and to save the miserable people. In the end, with God's blessing, they won.

Prophet Muhammad never sought wealth and personal comfort after he became a prophet -- a position graced by God. Instead, he showed concern for the development of social welfare and paid attention to the plight of the miserable people. He always visited those who were suffering and extended material help to them. He also guided them in searching for the clue to the cause of misery and led his followers to fight bravely to uphold Islamic values. We should follow the examples set by Prophet Muhammad in our struggle against oppression and exploitation. We should pay attention to the miseries suffered by the people, assist the people [words indistinct], expose the ill doings of the ruling group that only protects the interests of its government by making use of the name of Islam, and oppose corrupt practices, gambling, drug addiction, prostitution, decadent culture, and other practises contradictory to the teachings of Islam. We must oppose all acts and regulations which support [passage indistinct].

3. We must protect the solidarity among Muslims. We must also promote and strengthen friendship between the Muslim and other races that practise other religions. To unite and be friends are the characteristics of the Muslims. Sura [word indistinct] verse 10 in the Koran says: "All things on earth are related to one another". Prophet Muhammad says: "There is no profound faith in you if you do not love your brothers as much as you love yourself." Malays who practise the Islamic religion in this country are able to unite closely and sincerely cooperate with one another and live in peace under the banner of a common religion and common culture. Very often we hear Muslims saying that all Muslims are brothers and we live like one family. As brothers, we [words indistinct] assist each other, as the proverb says: "Together we climb up the hill and together we come down to the valley." The Muslims in our country should adhere to Islamic teachings on the need for solidarity, [words indistinct] to forgive each other, and to unite closely under the banner of Islam while fighting the common enemy. Our objective is to protect the interests of our race, religion, and country, and to struggle for the sake of justice, freedom, and democracy.

Ours is a multiracial and multireligious nation. All the races in the country must unite and cooperate in the struggle as they are being oppressed by the ruling group. Unity and cooperation among the people of various races in the struggle against the treacherous ruling group [passage indistinct]. The Muslims in the country also give priority to unity. They are carrying out with a sense of comradeship a common struggle together with other races and religious believers. For example, when the Japanese imperialists and British colonialists occupied our fatherland, the Muslim Malays -- along with their Chinese, Indian, and other fellow-countrymen -- took up arms in a bloody struggle to defend national interests and independence. Many facts prove that the people of various races are genuine comrades-in-arms in their struggle against the common enemies. [passage indistinct] We believe that the Muslims in the country must set a good example in uniting the people of various races, cooperating with other races and religious believers, and forming a gigantic force to create a happy life.

4. We must sympathize with and support the just struggle consented to by God and launched by the people of various races. At present, the people are inreasingly dissatisfied with the UMMO ruling group. They are actively fighting to defend freedom, democracy, and national interests throughout the country. The ruling group will definitely respond to the struggle with even more cruel oppression. This being the case, in addition to opposing the treacherous rule of the ruling group, the Muslims must sympathize with and support the just struggle of the people of various races to deal a more serious blow to the ruling group. Allah commands in the Koran: Fight in the cause of God those who fight you, but do not transgress limits; for God loveth not transgressors. Allal consents to the just struggle of the people in our country. Accordingly, we must sympathize with and support the struggle. On the occasion of the establishment of the Malaysian United Islamic Front, let us thank God for his grace, strengthen unity among fellow Muslims, emulate the spirit of the (?Great Prophet) in defending Medina from enemy attacks, and fight courageously to achieve the ideals of Islam! [passage indistinct]

ENVOY TO U.S. SPEAKS AT CON-COM, STIRS CONTROVERSY

[Text] Discussions on the removal of the American military bases in the Philippines could prejudice the country's economic recovery plans, Ambassador to the United States Emmanuel Pelaez told the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] yesterday.

"This is not the time to take up the U.S. military bases. Our number one problem is economic recovery," Pelaez emphasized.

Pelaez said both the American and the Philippine Government appear to rank economic recovery and political stability as the "highest priority" in mutual cooperation.

The time to take up the bases issue has not yet come, he added.

Peleaz appearance before the Con-Com stirred heated controversies among some members. Nationalist members termed the Pelaez presence as "meddling in the Con-Com and the working of some insidious and subservient groups."

Pelaez said he was invited by Commissioner Gregorio Tingson, a vocal supporter of the extension of the military bases and some other commissioners to inform them about the American perspective on the development in the Philippines. He added that he was here for home consultation on the visit of President Corazon C. Aquino in the U.S. in September.

At the start, Commissioner Jose Suarez, chairman of the Committee on Transitory Provisions, was in a quandary over Pelaez's presence at the Con-Com.

Commissioner Lino Brocka, a member of a cause-oriented bloc, stood up and said he is "bothered" by Pelaez's appearance. He considered Pelaez's presence as "meddling and interference in the workings of the Con-Com.

Brocka questioned the propriety of Pelaez's appearance. He said this will be a bad precedent, because others like Senators Lorenzo Tanada and Jose Diokno may ask for the same privilege.

"What would stop others to seek the same? It makes us look like idiots." Brocka then accused Tingson of "insidious manipulation."

At this juncture, Commissioner Wilfrido Villacorta, a proponent of the prohibition of foreign bases in the country, stood up and proposed that the Con-Com hold an executive or closed-door meeting, excluding the public. This precipitated the walkout of the members of the press.

Of late, the Con-Com proceedings have been getting poor public attention.

Before the confusion occurred, Pelaez told the Con-Com that "it is not unrealistic to say that our getting favorable assistance would depend upon the sympathy in the U.S."

Pelaez said President Aquino's state visit to the U.S. is to gain sympathy for the restructuring of the Philippine $27-billion foreign debts.

"Unless we have restructuring of these debts, the foundation of the country's economic recovery will not be in place. Without it, the economic recovery could not proceed," Pelaez said.

The President's visit aims to attract foreign investors and seek help in the solution of our budget deficit problem. She will also work for a more favorable term on the restructuring of loans.

Pelaez then pointed out the importance of finishing the new constitution before Mrs. Aquino's visit to the U.S.

"I came to inform the Con-Com that their work is of the utmost importance, for investors are asking for the government's guidelines," Pelaez said.

He added that the U.S. military bases issue will not be taken up during the Aquino state visit. "To raise the military bases question in the state visit would complicate the priority issue," he added.

According to the former foreign minister, the priority is economic recovery of the country and attracting foreign investments.

The former vice-president maintained that the American bases issue will not be taken up during the state visit. He said the U.S. Government has relied on the earlier commitment of President Aquino that the government will honor the military bases agreement until 1991 and she will keep her options open until then.

The U.S. military bases here loom as the most emotional and controversial issue in the Con-Com.

Earlier, the Committee on National Territory presided by Commissioner Felicitas Aquino approved in a seven-to-two vote the incorporation in the new charter of a zone of neutrality and prohibition of foreign bases in the country.

However, another resolution filed by Tingson proposed the extension of the military bases by 100 years. The resolution however was claimed to have been filed by mistake.

In an interview after his Con-Com appearance, Pelaez disclosed that the U.S. Congress has proposed three economic aid packages to the Philippines amounting to $500 million.

According to Pelaez, the grants are the following -- $150-million new package proposed by the American Government, $250-million straight grant provided by a bill filed by Congressmen Stephen Solarz and Jack Kemp; and $100-million straight grant approved by the American Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs headed by Sen. Richard Lugar.

Pelaez told newsmen that the delay in the economic aid from the U.S. is caused by the finalization of a shopping list consisting of economic and military aids needed by the Philippine Government.

Retention of U.S. Bases Urged

HK310642 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 30 Jul 86 pp 1, 2

[Except] Economic benefits and national security remain the key factors in the clamor of some sectors of Philippine society to retain the U.S. military facilities in the country.

In Cebu City, some 500 leaders and members who met over the weekend approved a resolution seeking the retention of the military facilities in Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base.

They said this will not only benefit the counry economically. But will also deter possible invasion of the Philippines by other countries.

The same sentiment was shared by some 20,000 people who held a rally in Olongapo City yesterday.

The rallyists, who came from all walks of life, asked the Constitutional Commission to exclude from the new Constitution Resolution No. 402 which bans foreign bases in the Philippines after the expiration of the RP-US Military Bases Agreement in 1991.

Former Members of Parliament Rafael Palmares and Rene Cayetano, NP [Nacionalista Party] president and secretary general, respectively, charged that the people strongly advocating the removal of the U.S. military bases are "leftist."

The NP resolution disputed claims that the operation of U.S. military facilties in the Philippines would invite foreign invasion. It pointed out that it is the weak country without protection which has been "attacked and swallowed by their strong neighbors."

It also cited the millions of dollars the country has received form the U.S. for the operation of its military bases as well as the jobs these facilities have provided directly and indirectly to thousands of Filipinos.

Acting Olongapo Mayor Teddy C. Macapagal said that while the city's economy depends entirely upon the Subic Naval Base, it is more than the economic benefits derived frm the presence of the base that is at stake but the security interest not only of the Philippines but the entire Southeast Asia.

"It is not true that the presence of the U.S. bases is an open invitation to nuclear attack because there has never been a country in the world with a U.S. base that has been attacked while countries without U.S. bases like Cambodia and Afghanistan are the best examples of countries without U.S. bases which were attacked and occupied by Russia," Macapagal said.

Macapagal said that U.S. military presence in the Philippines does not only contribute directly to the defense of the country but also preserves the balance of power in Southeast Asia.

Roberto A. Flores, president of the 22,000-members Federation of Filipino Civilian Employes Associations in the U.S. bases in the Philippines, said the real issue on U.S. bases question is "whether we want to remain a democratic country by allowing the continued presence of these bases or we prefer communism by dismantling them and allow the Russians to take over."

"Without the US bases in the Philippines, our country will be an easy prey to foreign aggressors", Flores said. [passage omitted]

COLUMNIST COMMENTS ON AQUINO U.S. VISIT

HK310716 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 30 Jul 86 p 6

[Column by Jesus Bigornia: "A Closer Look at President's Washington Visit"]

[Text] No head of state has ever gone to Washington with as little clout as President Aquino would have in her bag when she visits the American capital in mid-September. By then, her own creation, the Constitutional Commission (Con-Com), would have reduced her to a state of mendicancy. That is, if the Con-Com should now adopt a committee-approved resolution declaring neutrality as a national policy. President Aquino would have been denied her only bargaining level in talks with the Reagan administration -- retention of United States military bases on Philippines territory even after 1991.

Incorporation of the neutrality clause in the draft constitution now being forged by the Con-Com calls for the dismantling of Clark Air Base in Pampanga and the Subic Naval facility in Zambales. Whether the Philippine Government likes it or not, the President will be asked for a commitment on the extension of the RP-U.S. Military Bases Agreement beyond its expiry date in 1991. A security-conscious Reagan administration and an American public alarmed over Soviet expansionism in the Pacific and Indian Oceans are certain to keep the military bases issue very much alive during Mrs Aquino's Washington visit.

Stonewalling the Americans in prospective discussions with the U.S. State Department and the Pentagon with the excuse that she is not prepared to discuss the issue would never be accepted by the American public. Adherence to the line that she is there to seek assistance for an economy ravaged by a previous administration with nothing more than professions of friendship to offer in return is hardly sufficient to convince a penny-pinching Congress to loosen America's purse strings. References to historic cultural and political ties "cemented in blood" are nice to hear. They mean nothing at negotiating tables where only national self-interest is paramount.

Of course, the Reagan administration will not allow President Aquino to return to Manila empty-handed. But her visit would have turned sour. And the assistance would not be as substantial as expected. All because left-leaning elements in the Con-Com, abetted by ultranationalists, would have spelled the doom of the American bases. The situation may not, however, be as desperate as spelled out in this space. Malacanang can always exert pressure on the conservative elements of the Con-Com to repudiate the crucial resolution. A precedent was set with the rejection of a committee-approved resolution callling for the creation of a unicameral legislative body.

AQUINO, GONZALES COMMENT ON TOLENTINO, RALLIES

[By Wing Marcelo]

[Text] The Aquino government is keeping the door open for a possible granting of clemency for former Senator Arturo Tolentino and 40 others accused of rebellion on condition that they show sincere and concrete efforts that they feel sorry for the Manila Hotel incident.

Otherwise, Mrs Aquino said, the government will proceed, as it is now doing, with the prosecution of Tolentino and the others for inciting to sedition and rebellion which carries the penalty of death for those found guilty.

Speaking in her biweekly television program, Mrs Aquino said her government had waited very long for Tolentino and his group to comply with the government requirement that they take an oath of allegiance.

But even this simple matter, she said, had been ignored by the accused, prompting the government to file charges of rebellion last Monday.

Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales, who was also guest in the program, with Orly Mercado as interviewer, said the decision was made as early as Friday and the death of an Aquino follower during the antigovernment rally last Sunday at the Rizal Park had nothing to do with the filing of charges.

Minister Gonzales said Mrs. Aquino is keeping an open mind on the matter of granting clemency for Tolentino and company.

"But there must be some showing of good faith on their part," Gonzales said.

He said that at the moment there is no turning back. The charges have been filed and it is difficult for the government to back down from that path, Gonzales said. "If we change our mind now, they will say that we are indecisive, that we are weak," he said. "But we have given them enough time to comply with our requirement and there had been no positive response from their side."

Mrs. Aquino said that she had been informed that Tolentino had promised to abide by the government requirement.

"I hoped to see concrete proof that they are sorry, but there was none of this," she said. "It looked as if they were fooling us."

Minister Gonzales said it took some time to file the charges because they wanted all information checked first.

"We don't want to go back to the time of former President Marcos when just about anyone who disagrees with the government are arrested and thrown into jail with no charges filed against him," Gonzales said.

Mrs. Aquino recalled that this was what happended to her husband, former Senator Benigno Aquino Jr., who was imprisoned for seven years, and to former Senator Jose Diokno who was jailed for two years and then released with no charges filed against him.

"We are being careful and we want the rule of law to prevail," Gonzales said.

Asked whether the ban on demonstration is an infringement on citizen rights to free assembly, Gonzales said that if there is clear and present danger to the country, the government has the right to stop these rallies.

Mrs. Aquino said the government will allow rallies only if they are peaceful. But she said the rallies have been violent and the government must move in to assure the safety of citizens.

"We used to have one million people in our rallies but there never was a single violent incident and no one got hurt," she said.

RAMOS SAYS NON-OATHTAKERS SHOULD RESIGN

HK010702 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 31 Jul 86 pp 1, 6

[By Ben Gamos]

[Text] Camp Olivas, Pampanga -- Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] chief of staff, said government people who refuse to take oath of allegiance to the Freedom Constitution should resign.

The general made the statement in response to a question during the open forum of a command conference held here Tuesday.

Lt. Col. Leandro Mendoza, Bulacan PC [Philippine Constabulary] commander asked Ramos what commanders should do to personnel who refused to take the oath.

Ramos said it is the obligation of everyone in government to take the oath. "Otherwise," he declared, "they should sever connections with the government."

In the case of defiant military personnel, Ramos instructed field commanders "to submit your own recommendations."

REDUCTION OF HOME DEFENSE FORCES SUGGESTED

HK300736 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 29 Jul 86 p 11

[Text] Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos has proposed a reduction in the number of full-time members of the Civilian Home Defense Forces (CHDF), instead of abolishing the paramilitary unit.

Ramos's proposal was contained in a study sent to President Corazon C. Aquino and endorsed earlier by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile.

The disbandment of CHDF will "surely weaken the territorial defense system," Ramos said, citing operational and social costs of dismantling CHDF.

During her visit to Davao last May, the President instructed Ramos to look into CHDF because of mounting reports on abuses committed by the militiamen. She urged the Armed Forces to renew efforts to reform CHDF.

The country has 70,000 CHDF members, including part-time and reserve members classified respectively as categories two and one. Of the 70,000 some 53,000 are full-time "duly appointed," issued firearms and entitled to allowances; they are classified as category three.

Ramos has proposed to cut the number of fulltime militiamen from 53,698 to 45,000 with their distribution as follows: Region 1 -- 1,560; Region 2 -- 1,600; Region 3 -- 2,850; Region 4 -- 1,100; Western Command -- 150; Region 5 -- 1,500; Region 6 -- 1,090; Region 7 -- 710; Region 8 -- 3,840; Region 9 -- 10,775; Region 10 -- 3,425; Region 11 -- 6,800; and Region 12 -- 9,600.

He also recommended steps to reform CHDF:

-- Better recruitment procedures through intensified screening and selection.
-- Control through a permanent cadre of regular soldiers.
-- Employment for static defense operations in their respective communities and not for law enforcement operations.
-- Integration with the political, social, and economic fabric of the barangays through active participation in community activities.
-- Judicious implementation of awards and punishment.

Ramos cited difficulties in disbanding CHDF and replacing its members with an equal number of soldiers or policemen.

He said the national budget will be strained since total cost per year of maintaining 70,000 soldiers is P860 million and P1.19 billion for 70,000 policemen.

Maintaining 70,000 CHDF members will cost only P190 million, Ramos said.

Apart from the operational cost of disbandment, Ramos said the social costs are just as weighty factors to consider:

-- The personal security of militiamen after they are disarmed will be a government problem.
-- Muslim rebel returnees who became CHDF militamen are not likely to allow themselves to be disarmed; they would prefer to return to the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF).

"Targets of insurgent liquidation, several CHDF militiamen may either run to the mountains with their weapons and become lawless elements or may accept their fate in the hope that they will not be harmed by the insurgents in return for their support of the insurgent cause," Ramos wrote the President.

Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, in a letter to the President last July 14 supported the Ramos study. Enrile wrote, "Disbandment of CHDF will favor the insurgent cause" and tie down the AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] operating forces to static defense, thus limiting AFP capability for offensive action against the dissidents.

Ramos explained that a decision to disband CHDF will leave the Integrated National Police (INP) as the first line of defense of populated areas.

"With a strength of some 50,000 men, the INP will be hard-pressed to perform both police work and static defense...If the AFP will be employed to fill the vacuum created by the CHDF, the task of neutralizing the armed insurgents...will be seriously impaired; tying down the AFP in static defense will be tantamount to giving the insurgents freedom of action in the field," he said.

Ramos argued that the insurgents will conveniently take over" the protection of the people in the barangays should CHDF, if disbanded, not be replaced.

He said unless reversed, insurgency is expected to reach 9,000 barangays by end of the year, or 22 percent of the total barangays.

LAUREL SAYS GOVERNMENT-MUSLIM TALKS GOING ON

HK310529 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 30 Jul 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] Crucial negotiations between government and Muslim rebel representatives on the Mindanao question are going on.

Vice President Salvador H. Laurel said, however, that he was not free to identify the participants and the site of the secret talks.

Other sources said that the parleys centered on the Tripoli Agreement which was reached between the late former Deputy Defense Minister Carmelo Z. Barbero and Nur Misuari, Chairman of the Moro National Liberation Front in Libya in the late seventies.

The Tripoli Agreement provided for the establishment of an autonomous government in Regions 9 and 12 which are dominantly Muslim areas in Mindanao.

It also presribed for a Muslim educational system, Shariah courts, a legislative assembly and security force.

On the latter condition, the armed forces had objected since security is already being furnished by the military, it was said.

Even as Laurel disclosed that the negotiations were in progress, leaders of the Bangsa Moro which is supporting Muslim autonomy within the framework of Philippine territorial integrity disputed the veracity of Laurel's information.

In a television interview conducted by former MP Orly Mercado Monday night, these leaders lamented that while President Aquino had sent peace emissaries to the NPA's, none has yet been dispatched to the MNLF.

The Bangsa Moro is behind the leadership of Misuari having been "anointed" by the Islamic Conference, composed of Muslim countries, to lead the talks.

A rival MNLF faction is headed by Hashim Salamat. The latter had reportedly left his Middle East Base to join his followers in the south.

The Muslim community has long felt aggrieved by the reported neglect of the national government which, at present has not even a Muslim member in the cabinet, it was pointed out.

Although the multi-national corporations operating in Mindanao have been paying millions in taxes not a centavo has been used to develop Mindanao since these taxes were all turned over to the central government.

Bangsa Moro leaders are agitating for federalization not only of the south but the entire country. Under this system, autonomous functions include the power to levy taxes and dispose of them for local improvement.

On the proposed security force, it was pointed out that this will be more of a police militia rather than a military outfit. These policemen will be more familiar with local conditions as well as customs instead of these recruited from the north.

GOVERNMENT, IMF DRAFT LETTER OF INTENT

[Text] The government and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) yesterday started working on the final draft of a letter of intent which is expected to be signed by the Philippine negotiating team this week. The IMF team is scheduled to leave on Saturday with the completed letter of intent. Thereafter, the letter of intent will be submitted to the Fund's executive board after consultations with the IMF managing director who will endorse the Philippine program. It will take the Fund's executive board four to six weeks to act on the Philippine's letter of intent. Favorable action of the board would pave the way for the signing of a new 18-month standby credit agreement -- "the seal of good housekeeping" -- which commercial banks are awaiting before talks for a new multiyear restructuring agreement (MYRA) can start, covering the Philippines' commercial debts from 1987 to 1990, estimated to amount to $6 to $7 billion. The agreements reached so far are:

-- Gross national product growth of 1.4 percent this year;
-- Government expenditures to reach P114.3 billion with a budget deficit of P27 billion;
-- Reserve money ceiling of P45 billion;
-- Inflation level at 6 percent to 8 percent;
-- The implementation of a general expansionary program for this year and the next;
-- Restructuring of government financial institutions, primarily the Philippine National Bank (PNB) and the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP);
-- Adoption of a floating rate policy for the peso;
-- Privatization of government-controlled or -acquired corporations, including government-acquired commercial banks;
-- Implementation of tax reform measures, including the 29 recently approved measures to streamline and improve government revenue collection;
-- Preliminary agreements on sugar and coconut reforms, principally the dismantling of monopolies in these two sectors; and
-- Partial agreement on the import liberalization program.

AQUINO WARNS IMF AGAINST 'STRICT CONDITIONS'

HK310211 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] Philippine President Corazon Aquino yesterday [30 Jul] warned the International Monetary Fund against imposing strict conditions on her government. She said the Philippines cannot accept the same treatment the IMF gave the Marcos government. President Aquino took this tough stance against the IMF, when informed about certain instructions the IMF gave the Development Bank of the Philippines [DBP], during the meeting of her cabinet yesterday at the Presidential Palace in Manila. Deputy Executive Secretary Vicente Paterno said the instructions by the IMF will restrict the oeprational flexibility of the DBP, which is the major Philippine bank engaged in developmental activity. Meanwhile, the IMF is asking the government to further reduce its projected budgetary deficit of P11.4 billion next year. This move is aimed to deflect the impact of the restructuring of government corporations. Economic Planning Minister Solita Monsod told newsmen that the impact of the restructuring of government corporations was probably not included in the projected deficit for 1987 because the restructuring may not be put in place by the whole of next year.

'Worried' About IMF Treatment

[Text] Manila, July 30 (AFP) -- President Corazon Aquino is worried about the treatment the Philippines is getting from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank, a government spokesman said Wednesday. "The president remarked that perhaps, we cannot also accept the same treatment from the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank as they did with the Marcos government", Presidential Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo told a news conference here following a cabinet meeting. The IMF had imposed an austerity programme as a condition for granting loans to the regime of strongman Ferdinand Marcos, whom Mrs. Aquino replaced as president following a popular revolt in February.

IMF officials are now negotiating with the government on conditions for new loans. Mrs Aquino, who inherited a crippled economy and a 26 billion U.S. dollar foreign debt, had earlier asked the country's creditors for easier repayment terms. Press reports said the focus of the closed talks was the country's import liberalization program, which has met opposition from local big business. "Questions were raised in the cabinet meeting as to whether the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank are treating the Aquino government in the same manner that it treated the Marcos government," Mr. Arroyo said.

Central Bank governor Jose Fernandez had said the IMF and the World Bank were "rather liberal" on budgetary questions, Mr. Arroyo said. But chairman of the state-owned Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) Jesus Estanislao has maintained that the international creditors were "taking a heavy hand" on government financial institutions, Mr. Arroyo said, adding that the government would resist such pressure.

Vicente Paterno, a deputy minister for energy, told the news conference, "The DBP reported that the IMF was asking for certain specific changes in the bank's charter which would unduly restrict the bank's operational flexibility." He described the IMF's demands as, "undue interference," and added "I think the heaviness of hand is demonstrated by that." On the IMF and the World Bank's relationships with the Philippines, he said: "When an institution does not trust the entity with whom they are dealing, they are likely to impose more onerous and severe conditions than if they are dealing with someone in whom they have confidence."

In a memorandum to Mrs. Aquino, Trade and Industry Minister Jose Concepcion also expressed "serious reservations" about IMF demands, saying that "The private sector stands firmly against the wholesale and immediate import liberalization program envisioned by the IMF." Businessmen have identified labour unrest and import liberalization as their main problems. Mr. Concepcion said tariff duties on 68.9 per cent of the 1,232 products named in the IMF's stabilization programme, had been lifted. He said the private sector had asked for more time to study the "critical few items" which may create a "negative impact" once they are liberalized.

The private sector had cited the "shrunken domestic market", which may led to collapse of remaining industries and factory shutdowns once the liberalized imports arrive, as reasons against import liberalization, Mr. Concepcion said. The cabinet has set a 90-day period for public hearings on the issue, after which they will decide on what measures to adopt.

NODONG SINMUN VIEWS GORBACHEV'S FAR EAST SPEECH

[NODONG SINMUN 3 August article: "A Peace-Loving Initiative"]

[Text] According to TASS, Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, recently delivered a speech in Valdivostok. In the speech he mentioned the Soviet domestic situation and the current international situation, the Asia-Pacific regions situation in particular. Thus, he has made clear the Soviet stand.

The speech was timed to coincide with the provocation of the U.S. imperialists' military buildup and war maneuvers in the Asia-Pacific region. The U.S. imperialists, conducting an Asian strategy as an important component of their world strategy, have given greater significance to Asian strategy in recent years and have pursued the so-called policy of attaching importance to Asia.

From the beginning, the policy of attaching importance to Asia has been an aggressive concept and a war policy designed to place the Asia-Pacific region under the U.S. sphere of military influence and to turn this region into a most important theater of military confrontation in executing the U.S. world strategy.

Proceeding from this, the United States has increased its Army, Navy, Air Force and nuclear forces in particular in the Asia and Pacific region; has maneuvered to fabricate an aggressive, collective military bloc akin to NATO in the Asia and Pacific region while reinforcing and strengthening the U.S. - Security Treaty and the U.S. - South Korean agreement on mutual defense, and is now running amok in a scheme to fabricate a tripartite military alliance among the United States, Japan, and South Korea as an important component of this. This aggressive military alliance is in motion in practice and its brunt is directed at Korea. The "Team-Spirit" joint military exercise and the "Rimpac" exercise demonstrate how enthusiastic the United States has become in its attempt to light the torch of a new war in this region.

Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev's speech on Soviet policy towards Asia and the Pacific in Vladivostok at this time has attracted attention from the Asian public and world. In his speech, Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev put forward various ideas and proposals to stop the military buildup and the increase of nuclear forces in particular, to make efforts to guarantee security in this region, and to take measures for peace.

This shows the Soviet Union's peace-loving stand to prevent thermonuclear war and to promote peaceful cooperation among countries by checking and frustrating the military buildup and maneuvers of the imperialists, including the U.S. imperialists, to prepare for war in this region, by defending peace and security in the region, and, going one step further, by preserving and consolidating peace in the world as a whole, and by positive Soviet efforts to put this stance into practice.

The Soviet Union has recently offered many proposals to eliminate the danger of nuclear war and preserve and consolidate peace in the world. This year alone, the Soviet Union has announced a comprehensive plan to completely dismantle nuclear weapons araound the globe and ensure international security. Quite recently, it presented, together with other countries participating in the Warsaw Pact, initiatives to drastically reduce military forces, conventional weapons, and nuclear weapons in Europe.

The Soviet Union has even taken measures to unilaterally end nuclear testing.

The Soviet Union's new Peace initiatives and ideas contained in the speech of the general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee in Vladivostok are another clear expression ofthe peace-loving foreign policy the Soviet Union has consistently pursued.

In his speech, Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev showed awareness of the situation on the Korean peninsula and the Korean question. Also — noting the maneuvers to fabricate a trippartite military alliance among the United States, Japan, South Korea and the attempt to turn South Korea into a nuclear forward base in his speech — he praised the Korean people's just struggle to relax tension on the Korean peninsula and to achieve a peaceful reunification of their country and then supported our Republic's proposal for creating a nuclear-free zone of peace on the Korean peninsula. This greatly encourages our people.

The aggressive U.S. strategy for Korea and its maneuvers to fabricate a tripartite military alliance are leading the situation in Korea to the worst phase and creating a grave obstacle to peaceful settlement of the Korean question.

In compliance with the U.S. strategic plan to convert South Korea into a base from which to launch a nuclear strike against our republic and other socialist countries, South Korea has now been turned into the place where nuclear weapons of various kinds are more densely deployed than in anywhere else in the world and are a potential source of a most dangerous nuclear war. The Korean peninsula is engulfed in a tense situation capable of triggering a nuclear war at any moment.

If a new war, a nuclear war, breaks out on the Korean peninsula, it will easily escalate into a global thermonuclear war.

Peace in Korea is closely linked to peace in the world. The Korean people's struggle for peace on the Korean peninsula and peaceful reunification of their country is one of the most important parts of the world's progressive peoples' struggle for peace in the world.

Not long ago, our republic put forward an important proposal to create a nuclear-free zone of peace on the Korean peninsula with a view to preventing a nuclear war and achieving lasting peace on the Korean peninsula. This proposal reflects the urgent demands of the situation on the Korean peninsula where the danger of a nuclear war is growing. It is also part of the movement to create nuclear-free zones of peace in various parts of the world. By ignoring our proposal for a nuclear-free zone of peace, the U.S. imperialists have laid bare more clearly their nature as nuclear warmaniacs bent on provoking a nuclear war on the Korean peninsula.

The United States should immediately abandon its maneuvers to prepare for a new war, a nuclear war, remove weapons of mass destruction, including U.S. troops and nuclear weapons, from South Korea, and take its interfering hands off Korea.

The stand taken by the Soviet Union, which has once again sincerely supported our proposal for the creation of a nuclear-free zone of peace on the Korean peninsula, is an expression of the Soviet foreign policy that values the national interest of the Korean peninsula as a (?single) interest. We believe the Soviet people will achieve greater success in implementing their peace-loving foreign policy.

U.S. CONCERN FOR ROK HUMAN RIGHTS HYPOCRITICAL

[NODONG SINMUN 3 August Commentary: "After Smacking Someone in The Back, Rubbing His Stomach To Appease Him"]

[Text] In a press conference, the U.S. State Department issued a so-called statement expressing concern over the human rights situation in South Korea. The statement was composed of conscience-stricken words, to the effect that the United States deplores and regrets the excessive torture and abuse of prisoners in South Korea, and that those responsible should be punished.

It is a laughable joke of unspeakable proportions that the U.S. imperialists — who have covered up the puppets' barbarous acts of suppression in every possible way, arguing that no human rights issues have arisen in South Korean — are now babbling about human rights. An apparently impure motive lies behind this deception of public opinion concerning the human rights issue at home and abroad. Everyone knows that the U.S. imperialists are at the bottom of and control behind the scenes all suppression of human rights in South Korea.

The whole world remembers the barbarous acts of the U.S. imperialists, who had the fascist clique submerge Kwangju in a sea of blood and ruthlessly massacred thousands of people there by supplying the clique with tens of thousands of troops — acts that infuriated God and men together. It also knows that the U.S. ambassador to South Korea issued a secret order to the puppets to punish with an iron fist the youths and students who, after occupying the USIS center in Seoul in May 1985, demanded an apology from the United States for the Kwangju massacre, and that a U.S. consul stationed in Pusan commanded on the spot the barbarous suppression of those participating in the occupation of the American Cultural Center in Pusan last May.

It is none other than the U.S. imperialists who are breathing life into their running dogs — who are dying after being forsaken by the times and people — to maintain their appetite for blood, while thrusting instruments of suppression and torture into their hands without interruption.

U.S. Secretary of State Shultz, who sneaked into South Korea in May, praised the Chon Tu-hwan ring, running riot in manhunts, on the grounds that South Korea is continuously advancing toward democratization and that it is exemplary in maintaining public order, pledging unsparing U.S. cooperation and assistance to the ring in these fields.

How is this different from providing a manslaughterer with a knife, or of beckoning him to a slaughterhouse of men? This is what the U.S. imperialists are doing behind their billboard advocating human rights. It is nothing but hypocrisy to let the manslaughterer Chon Tu-hwan mangle the South Korean people's human rights on the one hand and show concern for the people, the victims, on the other.

This is precisely an act of smacking someone in the back and then rubbing his stomach to appease him. Not once in nearly 40 years — not even for a moment — have the U.S. imperialists stood on the side of the South Korean people. They have backed the fascist clique by force, which rules the South Korean people by ruthlessly wielding bayonets, and have controlled the puppets' policy of obliterating human rights from behind the scenes to effect their aggressive ambitions and ensure their fascist colonial rule.

Through their blood-soaked lives and the experiences they have undergone because of the harsh colonial rule of the U.S. imperialists -- which has continued for nearly 40 years now -- the South Korean people have come to clearly realize that the U.S. imperialists are indeed their enemies and it is impossible to live together with them under the same skies. In fact, it is impossible for them to retain their lives, to say nothing of their human rights, as long as the U.S. imperialists are allowed to remain in South Korea.

If the U.S. imperialists do not mind still greater curses and denunciations from the South Korean people and the conscience of the world's mankind, being held responsible for aggression and the suppression of human rights, they should stop encouraging the puppets to suppress human rights and should leave South Korea.

STUDENTS, CATHOLICS DEMONSTRATE AGAINST REGIME

HK011230 Hong Kong AFP in English 1223 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 1 (AFP) -- Some 1,000 South Korean students clashed with riot police for over two hours during a campus demonstration here Friday, eyewitnesses said. The students were calling for the withdrawal of U.S. military forces from South Korea and demanding that North Korea be allowed to co-host the 1986 Asian Games and the 1988 Olympics with South Korea, they said. The protestors threw stones and Molotov cocktails at police at the entrance of Korea University in eastern Seoul, the eyewitnesses said. Police responded with a barrage of tear gas bombs.

The students, shouting slogans such as "Down with the dictatorship" and "Let's fight to prevent the 1986 Asian Games and the 1988 Olympics," also burned a makeshift U.S. flag. Leaflets scattered by the students said: "Let's advance national unification by ousting U.S. imperialists" and "Let's drive out U.S. military forces hindering national unification." The document also demanded that the 1986 Asian Games and the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympics be co-hosted by the two Koreas as a step toward national reconciliation. It denounced holding separate sports events as a "scheme to solidify the division" by the "military dictatorship."

The demonstrators, who came from nine major universities in Seoul, also urged students to fight U.S. pressure being put on South Korea to open its markets. South Korea recently bowed to U.S. pressure and agreed to import U.S. cigarettes.

The students also called for the break up of the just-inaugurated Special Parliamentary Committee on Constitutional Revision. The parliamentary committee agreed to by South Korea's ruling and opposition camps has been charged with drafting a compromise version of a new constitution designed to bring greater democracy to the country. Dissidents and military students, however, have called on the opposition not to compromise with the government.

Rallies Held at Universities

[Text] More than 300 students of Korea University staged a rally on the campus Wednesday afternoon, denouncing the constitutional revision committee of the National Assembly as a cunning bid by the current regime to prolong its power.

During the demonstration, they launched what they called a student committee for a democratic constitution.

In leaflets titled "Subjugation or Liberation," the students criticized the Korea-U.S. trade accord as an economic encroachment by the U.S. They contended that U.S. imperialists, imposing market-opening pressure on Korea, be outsted and a national self-reliant regime replace the current pro-U.S. coalition.

The protesters also charged that those responsible for the alleged sexual harassment of a female labor activist and for inhumane treatment against dissident be punished.

Meanwhile, some 200 students of Seoul National University and Sookmyung Women's University also held an antigovernment rally on the campus of SNU Wednesday in protest of the formation of the special committee on the revision of the Constitution.

Catholic Prayer Rally Held

[Text] More than 300 Catholic dissidents and other oppositionists held a prayer meeting at a Catholic church in Puchon, a western suburban city of Seoul, Wednesday evening, denouncing the government for the alleged sexual molestation of a former SNU female student activist by a policeman.

The gathering, the latest in a series of protests to attack the "government's connivance" at the alleged sexual harassment, coincided with a demonstration outside the church by some 70 dissident youths protesting their obstruction by police from joining the mass. Riot police led away 36 protestors after breaking up the demonstration. They were released yesterday morning.

Among the participants in the prayer meeting were Reps. Myong Hwa-sop and Ahn Tong-son of the opposition New Korea Democratic Party.

Over 1,500 riot policemen, surrounding the church and adjacent areas, checked participants and prohibited youths from entering the church.

KIM IL-SONG MAY TRANSFER POWER TO SON 'NEXT YEAR'

SK040241 Seoul YONHAP in English 0105 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 4 (YONHAP) -- A Politburo member of North Korea's ruling Workers Party has suggested that North Korean leader Kim Il-song will transfer his power to his son heir-apparent Kim Chong-il next year, KYODO NEWS AGENCY reported Sunday. KYODO said a prefectural parliamentary delegation from the opposition Japan Socialist Party, which visited Pyongyang July 22 to Aug. 2, made the remarks in a press conference here after their return. Asked about the power transfer of the elder Kim to his son, Kim Hwan, a Politburo member of the North Korean ruling party, told the visiting Japanese Socialists that is called "the biggest ceremonial event in the history that will occur next year," pointing out that Kim Il-song will be 75 years old next year and the younger Kim 45 years old.

REACTION TO U.S. PRESSURE FOR WON REVALUATION

Businessmen 'Strongly' Opposed

SK020035 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in Endlish 2 Aug 86 p 1

[Text] Economic circles urged the government to strongly reject the American pressure to appreciate the Korean won against the greenback, a U.S. move to narrow its trade deficit with Korea.

Four major economic circles including the Korean Traders Association (KTA) insisted: "If the government bows to the American request, the Korean economy will probably collapse." Echoing their argument, the Bank of Korea disclosed a projection that a 5 percent rise in the Korean won value will cause a 0.27 percent drop in the GNP (gross national product) four years later.

The 5 percent revaluation will cost about $200 million annually in the current account, according to the central bank.

Some affiliated businessmen said the government should consider scrapping out the Seoul-Washington accord on Korea's opening of insurance and cigarette markets and protection of the intellectual property rights.

They said: "To our deepest regret, the United States has launched another round of market pressure against Seoul even before the ink of their bilateral accord has dried up."

In their bilateral accord signed between Korea Amb. Kim Kyong-won and Clayton Yeutter, the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR), in Washington July 21, the two sides reached an understanding that the United States would not raise harsh trade disputes in return for Korean concessions.

Government officials said they were also caught by surprise with the American pressure over the exchange rate issue.

A policymaker, who was deeply engaged in the July 21 Korea-U.S. accord, said: "It is high time for Korea to have a second thought over the nation's one-sided concession to the United States."

He, who asked not to be identified, said: "The principle of give and take should be the common rule in the trade game. The United States, however, wants to take all, refusing to give nothing us in return."

Government sources said a Korean fact-finding mission will visit Washington in the near future.

Finance Minister Chong In-yong will hold a press conference this morning to clarify official government position over the U.S. pressure over the won value.

He is expected to say that Korean won value would rise by around 5 percent due to the weakening dollar. Chong has consistently said that the Korean won's value is duly reflected under the present multi-basket system.

Thus far this year the Korean won value has already risen by 1 percent.

The high ranking official also said Washington might have made the request because of its misunderstanding of Korea's "basket system," under which value of the won is floated against a number of foreign currencies, including the U.S. dollar, British pound, Deutsch mark and French franc.

Regime Will Talk With U.S.

[Editorial: "Unnatural Won Revaluation"]

[Text] It is more than natural that Finance Minister Chong In-yong yesterday clarified that the government does not intend to consider an "artificial" appreciation of the won value against the U.S. dollar though the U.S. administration has proposed talks with Korea over the American request for revaluating the won value upwardly.

Notable were the minister's remarks that the current "basket system" would remain unchanged to float the value of the won against a number of foreign currencies including the U.S. dollar.

But then, inviting particular public concern is his indication that the government will agree with the U.S. call for talks even though the exchange rate between the local and foreign currencies will not be a matter to be negotiated.

It was only 10 days ago that the Korean Government announced a sweeping market-opening package, including the controversial import of cigarettes and the protection of intellectual property rights, virtually bowing to U.S. pressure.

In fact, U.S. officials earlier expressed the hope that the won value be appreciated by 15-20 percent so as to reduce Korea's trade surplus with the United States by between $1 billion and $2 billion a year.

However, under the basket system, in link with major foreign currencies, the won value was never devalued in spite of the enduring impact of a large-scale trade deficit over the past several years.

As a matter of fact, the U.S. trade deficit increased by more than 21 percent over one year before to nearly $84 billion during the first half of this year. Notwithstanding the Japanese yen's sustained rally by about 50 percent in a year, the U.S. trade deficit with Japan has been on a steady rise.

Thus, the growing U.S. trade deficit is not attributable merely to the dollar's excessive appreciation against other currencies of trade partners enjoying trade surpluses but rather to the structural weakness of U.S. industries.

Korea's international balance of payments would surely be aggravated seriously if the won were appreciated artificially, as her exports would lose their international competitiveness in pricing.

Korea as a developing country still is burdened with heavy foreign debts amounting to some $50 billion, ranking fourth among the world countries owing much to foreign financing. In light of this fact, it is far from understandable that the United States is pressing Korea to appreciate its currency value, patterned after Japan, West Germany and Taiwan, which are all enjoying an outstanding trade surplus and external credit.

The won's current exchange rate with the U.S. dollar and other major foreign currencies has been assessed as "optimum" also by the highly credible International Monetary Fund (IMF) mission in its latest annual report. It must be stressed that the won's exchange rate should not be negotiated, nor subjected to foreign pressure.

Rejection Explained to U.S. Envoy

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 4 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Finance Minister Chong In-yong Monday called Richard L. Walker, U.S. ambassador to Korea, to his office and explained to him the government's official position on the U.S. proposal for talks to appreciate the value of the Korean won against the U.S. dollar. In a 40-minute meeting, Chong told Walker that the Korean Government has no intention of making any "artificial adjustments" in the won-dollar conversion rate, ministry officials said.

Chong explained to Walker the floating rate multi-currency basket system to which Korea adheres, and said that the present won-dollar exchange rate is at an "appropriate level." Chong also expressed regret over the "inappropriateness" of the U.S. Government's request for talks on the appreciation of the won and reports appearing in the U.S. media before the request was officially made.

The request came Thursday in a meeting between David Mulford, an assistant secretary at the U.S. Treasury Department, and South Korean Ambassador to Washington Kim Kyong-won.

Walker said that he fully understands the Korean Government's position on the issue and promised to convey Seoul's position to his government.

PRIME MINISTER DISCUSSES U.S., USSR, PRC, DPRK

SK040840 Seoul YONHAP in English 0825 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 4 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Prime Minister No Sin-yong Monday denied that Korean domestic affairs are influenced by foreign intervention and said that the development of democracy and other political issues are matters that should be resolved by Koreans themselves. "Any government or political power of a foreign country cannot and should not intervene in our domestic affairs," No said in response to a written questionnaire sent to him last month by a group of opposition lawmakers.

In the questionnaire, Rep. Huh Kyong-ku and 22 other lawmakers of the leading opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP) inquired about Korean-U.S. relations, the U.S. role in the democratization of Korea, the causes of the growing anti-American sentiment in Korea and issues related to the stationing of U.S. forces in Korea.

"The United States also hopes for the democratic development of Korea and maintains the position that the details of democratization should be decided by Koreans themselves," No said.

Asked about the lands being used by U.S. forces in Korea, No said that the government does not find it necessary to reduce them at the present stage because the close military cooperation between the two countries plays "an extremely important" role in deterrring North Korean aggression. "However, the government will readjust problems through consultations with the U.S. Government if the situation changes in the future," No added.

Regarding the international situation surrounding the Korean peninsula, No said that the United States, Japan, and China maintain a close relationship in response to Soviet expansionism, but the countries cannot be said to have formed a triangular cooperation system because no military ties have been set up between Washington and Peking or between Tokyo and Beijing. He was referring to a possible triangular cooperation system involving the three countries, which the lawmakers said would isolate the Soviet Union and heighten the possibility that Moscow and Pyongyang will strengthen ties, thereby setting the scene for the recurrence of war on the divided Korean peninsula.

Touching on the strengthening of ties between North Korea and the Soviet Union, No said that the South Korean Government is making continuous efforts to create an environment conducive to the improvement of relations with Moscow. Seoul has called on the Soviet Union to exercise its influence over Pyongyang to bring about a resumption in the inter-Korean dialogue and to maintain peace on the divided Korean peninsula, No added.

KIM TAE-CHUNG, YI MIN-U QUARREL AT 1 AUG MEETING

SK020045 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 2 Aug 86 p 4

[From the "Out and About" column]

[Text] NKDP president Yi Mun-u and one of his two "godfathers," Kim Tae-chung, unusually traded angry shouts during their exclusive breakfast meeting at the Plaza Hotel in Seoul yesterday.

Emerging from the get-together, Yi was so furious that he hurried out of the hotel without even looking back.

Kim was also so sullen that he even forgot to take his cane with him.

Sources said Kim expressed great displeasure with the current manner of operating the Special Constitution Revision Committee.

They also quoted him as saying to Yi, "When you meet with ruling DJP officials again, do not bring up the issue of restoring my civic rights. They always stress the need for me to show signs of repentance. However, I am their victim, and have nothing to repent."

NKDP REWORDS CONSTITUTION REVISION DRAFT

[Text] The New Korea Democratic Party yesterday rephrased its draft for constitutional revision to the effect that presidential and parliamentary elections will be held within six months before the expiration of the incumbent presidential tenure. The current president's term ends Feb. 25, 1988.

According to the original text, the first presidential election shall take place within three months after the basic law is implemented.

It also provided that the first parliamentary elections will be held sometime during the fourth month after the promulgation of the constitution.

REGIME DECIDES AGAINST SPECIAL 15 AUG AMNESTY

[Text] The government will not grant a special amnesty to the so-called political detainees on the Liberation Day of Aug. 15, a government source said yesterday.

The source, who wanted to be unnamed, said the government decided not to grant "a comprehensive and political amnesty" to all the detainees on the national holiday, which he said would "violate legal procedures."

But the government plans to free on parole some 40 of those already sentenced on the Liberation Day, he said.

The opposition New Korea Democratic Party has demanded an overall release of the political detainees by the Liberation Day.

PREM MEETS PARTIES TO FORM GOVERNMENT

BK010802 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Some 266 house representatives, or over three-fourths of the entire number of MP's have agreed in backing the present prime minister, General Prem Tinsulanon, to continue as prime minister called at the residence of Gen. Prem Tinsulanon to offer him their congratulations and to hold consultations on the formation of the government.

According to a reporter of the Domestic News Division, Public Relations Department, a crowd of reporters had waited since early morning today in front of Gen. Prem's Sisao Thewet residence for news. At about 0855 today, Marut Bunnak, deputy leader of the Social Action Party, which is the core in forming the government, arrived first. At 0900, General Thianchai Sirisamphan, leader of the Ratsadon Party; Major General Chatchai Chunhawan, deputy leader [as heard] of the Chat Thai Party, arrived separately. About 10 minutes later, Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, leader of the Social Action Party, and Phichai Rattakun, leader of the Democrat Party, arrived at the prime minister's house.

At about 0955, Maj. Gen. Chatchai Chunhawan, Banhan Sinlapa-acha, Gen Thianchai Sirisamphan, and Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila left the prime minister's house. Marut Bunnak, who arrived first at the prime minister's house, left the house together with Phichai Rattakun at about 1000.

Secretary to the Cabinet Anan Anantakun reported this morning that a royal decree convening the Parliament had been issued. The king will inaugurate the Parliament session at 1530 on 4 August, which will be the first session called within 30 days after the general election in accordance with the Constitution of the kingdom.

The 266 representatives who support Gen. Prem Tinsulanon as prime minister belong to the six political parties: Chat Thai, Social Action, Ratsadon, Democrat, Ruam Thai, and Community Action parties.

President of Parliament Ukrit Mohgkhonnawin said this morning the Parliament Secretariat had received a letter from the Prachakon Thai Party supporting Gen. Prem Tinsulanon as prime minister. This has brought the number of political parties supporting Gen. Prem to seven and the number of representatives backing him to 290, or 24 more. Ukrit said other parties can submit letters supporting Gen Prem as prime minister as long as the matter still has not been brought up for approval and signature by the king giving his consent to the appointment. Anyway, he said that does not mean all of the parties would be in the coalition government. It is up to Gen. Prem Tinsulanon to make up his mind which political parties should be in the coalition. The president of the Parliament expected that the royal appointment of the prime minister would be made next week. He said it is likely that there will be no opposition leader in the present House of Representatives as fewer than one-fifth of the elected MP's belong to parties that have not signed up support for Gen. Prem whereas 290 have supported Gen. Prem as prime minister.

Secretary of the Parliament Bang-on Im-ocha said that, following the inauguration ceremony at 1530 on 4 August, the House of Representatives will hold its first ordinary session of 1986 at 1630 the same day. The session will elect the house speaker and deputy speakers.

Deputy Leader of the Democrat Party Banyat Banthatthan said at the Parliament building this morning that it is likely that the quotas of cabinet ministers for political parties in the coalition will be based on the ratio of one cabinet minister per six or seven MP's. Anyway, the allocation of cabinet posts among political parties will be possible only when it is known how many the prime minister wants as ministers under his quota. It is still not known which ministries Gen. Prem has his mind on. Gen. Prem's quota will be the smallest. Banyat said he believed there would be no problem among parties in the coalition concerning allocation of the cabinet ministerial posts as those parties have worked together once. The allocation will be based on the same principle used in 1980. Big political parties will get the deputy prime minister portfolios as well as major ministries. Each ministry will be represented by ministers picked from various political parties. Not one political party will be given sole responsibility over a certain ministry. The speaker of the House of Representatives will go to the Democrat Party. The Chat Thai and Social Action parties will be the 1st and 2d deputy house speakers respectively.

Leader of the Democrat Party Phichai Rattakun said before noon today that Gen. Prem Tinsulanon had invited for a meeting the leaders of the Democrat, Chat Thai, Social Action, and Ratsadon Parties to offer them his congratulations over the victory in the election. Gen. Prem thanked the four political parties for supporting him to continue as prime minister. He said Gen. Prem Tinsulanon asked the four political parties to consolidate their efforts to solve the various problems of the country, especially the economic problem and welfare of the prople. The prime minister expressed hope that the four parties that will form a coalition government will cooperate and unite in their efforts to solve national problems.

Accepts Nomination; at Retreat

BK030122 Bangkok THE NATION in English 3 Aug 86 pp 1, 2

In a related development, his secretary Lt. Gen. Chantharakhup Sirisut told THE NATION that the premier had instructed him to write to Parliament President Ukrit Mongkhonnawin, accepting the offer to take up the post.

Lt. Gen. Chantharakhup said that he sent the official note to Ukrit Friday afternoon in response to the latter's letter, sent to the premier in the morning.

He said that Gen. Prem's flight to his Rai Kangwon residence in Khorat was normal because the premier had earlier told his subordinates of the programme to take an overnight rest in the northeastern capital.

The premier is scheduled to return to Bangkok tonight.

But other sources close to him said that the premier wanted to have a full rest without "harassment" from politicians.

The premier's Avro flight landed at the First Airwing airbase in Nakhon Ratchasima at about 11 am and was received by Second Army Region Commander Lt. Gen. Phsit Hemabut, Zone Two Police Commissioner Pol. Lt. Samit Phunsawat and Deputy Governor Pramun Sangkhamani.

Security was unusually tight at the airport when the premier was whisked away in a convoy to his retreat.

Informed sources in Bangkok said that the talks between Gen. Chawalit and Gen. Prem yesterday morning were believed to be about the formation of the four-party coalition government.

The would-be coalition partners have urged the premier to minimize his quota, said to be in the neighbourhood of five to seven.

The premier has to set his quota so the other partners could farm out Cabinet portfolios among themselves before nominating politicians to the slots for the premier's approval.

The prime minister yesterday afternoon left his residence for a round of golf at the course in Suranari Army Barracks in Muang District.

Reporters and cameramen who tried to follow the premier's motorcade were barred from entering the barracks.

Meawhile, Chat Thai Party Leader Maj. Gen. Chatchai Chunhawan arrived in Nakhon Ratchasima by plane at about 3:35 pm with another provincial MP of Ratsadon Party, Bunthung Phonphanit.

Chatchai denied that he came to town to discuss with Gen. Prem the formation of the new coalition government. He said he was invited together with the other 14 MP's of the province by the provinical chamber of commerce to a congratulations party.

Commenting on the statement by Sra Buri MP Maj. Gen. Praman Adireksan who is chairman of Chat Thai Party's advisory board about the party's stance on the new prime minister, Chatchai said the meeting of party executives to which Praman was not invited decided to support Gen. Prem as the head of the post-election government.

Chat Thai Party is among seven political parties which sent letters to President of Parliament Dr. Ukrit Mongkhonnawin to pledge their support for Prem.

Praman, who is the former Chat Thai Party leader, said on Friday that his party never adopted a resolution to back Prem as the next prime minister.

He added that neither Chatchai nor party secretary general Banhan Sinlapa-acha had been authorized to make such an announcement.

MP Opposes Prem, Meets Chawalit

BK040107 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 4 Aug 86 p 3

[Text] Bangkok Member of Parliament Col. Prachak Sawangchit was yesterday summoned by Army Commander-in-Chief Gen. Chawalit Yongchaiyut for a meeting at the latter's residence.

He said later that he had asked Gen. Chawalit about choosing a prime minister from among elected MPs.

The former Young Turk officer told reporters that during the "brotherly" talks, he had asked Gen. Chawalit to take into consideration the wish of the people and the pledge given to them by politicians during the campaign.

He said that politicians had pledged that the prime minister should be an elected MP.

"The prime minister can be anybody who is an elected MP," said the Chat Thai MP who then warned that if the politicians do not do the right thing by keeping their pledge, the democratic system would be jeopardised.

The former Young Turk officer mentioned his involvement in the April Fool's Day abortive coup in 1981, maintaining that his role in it "was for the benefit of the people". He also cited a spate of protests as an indication of public disfavour for the return of Gen. Prem Tinsulanon as prime minister.

He said he asked Gen. Chawalit about his position on the premiership controversy, and was told that he was neutral on the question and that the matter should be settled among political parties.

Paper Wants Elected MP as PM

BK021004 Bangkok SIAM RAT in Thai 1 Aug 86 p 8

[Editorial: "Democratic Prime Minister"]

[Text] We must write about the nomination of the new prime minister who will become the 17th prime minister of Thailand. The present prime minister is only a caretaker prime minister who headed the former government which dissolved the Houses of Representatives and called a general election after its bill was defeated in the parliament.

Under the democratic system, the prime minister whould represent the people, that is, he must be an elected representative of the Thai people.

This is the democratic principle followed by all countries governed by democracy -- with the sole exception of Thailand where the constitution provides for a non-elected person to become prime minister.

We disagree with this contradiction to the principle of democracy, and we believe that those who cherish democracy in Thailand also disagree with it. It runs against the will and aspiration of the people. Without support from the people, it is difficult to expect the non-elected prime minister to run the country smoothly. He may have to face oppositon form the people one day.

It is deplorable that all the political parties and candidates who promised during their election campaigns that they would back an elected MP to become prime minister have changed their stand. They have forsaken their promise and betrayed the principle of democracy they pledged to the people before the July general election.

Thailand has already had many prime ministers who were not elected representatives of the people, and one fact which we must accept is that those prime ministers achieved office through a certain kind of secret power. The people know what that secret power is and from where it comes. They realize that the method is not correct, but they have to accept it.

Now that the country has attained democracy, what we should do is promote the growth of democracy. We are of the opinion that there should be no more secret powers in Thailand because we are also a democracy.

Police Official on Violence

BK011426 Bangkok NAEO NA in Thai 1 Aug 86 pp 1, 5

[Text] Special Branch Police Commander Police Major General Asem Saengmit warned trouble-makers to stop using violence. He called them sick people who wish to see the country in trouble. He did not rule out the possibility of the group opposing General Prem Tinsulanon as prime minister of being responsible for creating the trouble. He warned those elements at work to stop causing confusion.

The policeman noted the presence of underground activities carried out by those opposing Gen. Prem's return as prime minister. He said the dead soldier who carried the bomb which exploded and killed him [near the Democrat Party Headquarters on 31 July] was a suspect wanted in connection with the 9 September coup and must have intended to create trouble. His name is Second Lieutenant Kamphon Fuangakson; his arrest warrant was issued by the Dusit Police Station. The Special Branch commander said there had been campaigns going on to mobilize workers and students to oppose Gen. Prem. Money is being used to hire students and workers to organize activities. Police are investigating whether the campaigns are just to intimidate or whether they are politically motivated. "The police know about the group responsible for the mobilization and are trying to get the leaders; otherwise they will continue with their activities without realizing the serious effect they are having on the country," the police official said.

On 31 July at 0120 a bomb went off on Setsiri road, about 50 meters from the Democrat Party Headquarters, resulting in one man killed and another seriously wounded. The woulded man was admitted to the Phra Mongkut Military Hospital; he is still unable to speak. Police found three ID cards on the dead body identifying him as Sergeant Major Kamphon Fuangakson of the 4th Cavalry Battalion in Saraburi, as Sergeant Major Phirom Bunmaloet of the 4th Cavalry Battalion, Commissary's Office, and as Second Lieutenant Kamphon Fuangakson of the Adjutant General's Department. The wounded soldier's identity is Sergeant Major Ekkachai Suknoi of the 16th Cavalry Battalion in Pattani Province.

Police Lieutenant Colonel Somchai Sutthiwaikit, chief of Bang Su Police Station, confirmed to reporters tht the dead soldier is Sergeant Major [as published] Kamphon Fuangakson of the Fourth Cavalry Battalion in Saraburi, and the wounded is Sergeant Major Ekkachai Suknoi. The two are both charged with involvement in the 9 September coup. Police Captain Keyun Chaocharoen of the Police Quartermaster Division said the bomb which went off was a plastic bomb made of phosphorus. It has destructive power, but was not powerful enough to destroy buildings. He said police believed the dead soldier was the one carrying the bomb when it went off. The picture of Colonel Manun Rupkhachon found on the body of the dead soldier is believed to be his former commander. Pol. Lt. Col. Somchai said no superiors of the two soldiers had contacted the police on the incident, and the wounded is still unable to be interrogated. Police therefore could not conduct any investigation.

On 31 July at 1400, Pathumwan Police Station Chief Police Lieutenant Colonel Dutsadi Thiraphan was informed of the discovery of an explosive device in the Lido Cinema. The matter was reported to his senior officers. Police Captain Wanchai Premrudi, a bomb disposal expert, was sent there and he was able to defuse the bomb in 40 minutes. The time-bomb found was made from one pound of TNT wired to a 9-volt battery. The alarm clock showed the time of 1300 when it was defused; it was not known at what time the alarm clock was set to activate the device. The bomb which was placed in the middle of the theatre could have destroyed the two side walls of the cinema if it had detonated.

A 34 year old cinema attendant, Khlaeo Chanchaona, said he found the cardboard box containing the bomb when he was cleaning the hall after the midday show. He immediately alerted the manager. He said the seat where he found the bomb had been occupied by a woman, about 25 years old, who had left the seat to talk to a man for a while.

Metropolitan Police Commissioner Police Lieutenant General Samnao Withitworakan said he still could not tell whether the explosion near the Democrat Party Headquarters and the bomb planted at the Lido Theatre are related incidents or whether they are politically motivated. He said police are conducting investigations to establish the cause of the incidents.

Commenting on the incidents, Police Director General Police General Narong Mahanon said on 31 July he believed the dead and wounded soldiers in the bomb explosion near the Democrat Party Headquarters were carrying the bomb themselves. He said the Special Branch Police, the Crime Suppression Police, and the district police are conducting investigation. Concerning the bomb found at the Lido Theatre, he said the police will investigate whether the letter sent to Lido's owner, Mr. Nongnut Tansatcha, extorting 200,000 baht from her, has anything to do with the time-bomb. Concerning the students protesting the return of Gen. Prem as prime minister, the police director said the police are paying close attention to the matter and are confident of their ability to maintain law and order.

Students Cancel Anti-Prem March

[Text] Students have cancelled today's march to Parliament to deny a "third hand" the chance to start an incident, Student Federation of Thailand secretary-general Phusit Prakongsai said yesterday.

The students originally planned to rally at Parliament in protest at parties which have gone against their election pledges to support an elected MP for the premiership.

They planned to invite some MPs, including Col. Prachak Sawangchit and Uthai Phimchaichon to express their views on the issue of a non-elected premier.

Mr. Phusit said the planned rally was not inspired by outside groups, and the students did not intend to turn the protest into an attack on Gen. Prem Tinsulanon. He said a group of student activists would instead rally at Ramkhamhaeng University.

About 700 students yesterday went into the second day of their protest at Sanam Luang and demanded the constitution be amended to require that the premier be an elected person.

Khukrit Resigns from SAP

[Text] Former Prime Minister M.R. Khukrit Pramot said yesterday he had tendered his resignation from the Social Action Party (SAP) "because I feel like staying neutral, like some others."

Apparently referring to Gen. Prem Tinsulanon, M.R. Khukrit said that as a neutral man he can fly to Chiang Mai whenever he likes, the same way somebody else has flown to Khorat.

He handed in his resignation Friday and said that it cannot be withheld. The move by the "Guru of Suan Phlu" came on the heels of an announcement that seven political parties had extended their support for Prem's continued premiership. But he declined to link the two events.

M.R. Khukrit said he will fly to Chiang Mai when the wound on his arm has healed and that this time around, he would stay at his northern retreat for a long time.

He added that his wound had improved quite a lot.

The former SAP leader said that he was not angry with anybody in submitting the resignation and that SAP leader ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Sitthi Sawetsila had not met him or talked with him since the latter called on him right after the general election.

That ACM Sitthi has not contacted him over the resignation reflects that he is not an important figure, a point which he stressed throughout the interview given yesterday evening at his residence.

But as the reporters wound up the question-and-answer session, deputy SAP leader Dr. Kasem Sirisamphan showed up at the residence and was amicably greeted by the occupant of the Thai-style residence.

ACM Sitthi had learned of the resignation, according to M.R. Khukrit.

Asked about his assessment of the stability of the new coalition government in the making, M.R. Khukrit said that it is unpredictable because the government must count on support from the House of Representatives.

"It could last only three months or complete its four-year term. Nobody, even the people who back Gen. Prem, knows in advance," he said.

M.R. Khukrit reaffirmed his view that the prime minister should be an elected representative. "Thailand," he said, "has been at the turning point of democracy for more than 50 years and the country should have already passed the so-called crucial phase," he said.

Informed sources told THE NATION that M.R. Khukrit was apparently upset with SAP's move to back Gen. Prem as prime minister, which he learned from a telecast press conference given by Parliament President Ukrit Mongkhonnawin. Dr. Kasem is known to be a link between SAP and the former SAP leader.

King Opens National Assembly

[Speech by King Phumiphon Adunyadet at Opening of National Assembly -- live]

[Text] Now that the general election of members of the House of Representatives has been completed and that the national assembly for 1986 has been summoned in accordance with the constitutional stipulation, I therefore declare open the national assembly so that it can carry out its legislative work. Members of the national assembly must be mindful of their responsibility and duty which will have a direct effect on the country's stability and the people's well-being. Each of them must try to their utmost mentally and physically, be honest, faithful, and sincerely united, and use their wisdom based on rationality to achieve the best results and goals in administering the nation's affairs. I hope that the national assembly will function smoothly and in an orderly manner and will record achievements which will bring long-lasting prosperity and well-being to the people and the country. I wish everyone at this meeting peace and happiness.

ROYAL DECREE ON APPOINTMENT OF SENATORS

BK290738 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Royal Decree Appointing Thai Senators]

[Text] Royal Signature: Phumiphon Adunyadet

His Majesty King Phumiphom Adunyadet has ordered that it be decreed that whereas he issued a decree dated 19 April 1983 appointing new senators due to the end of terms and due to an increase in the number of members of parliament, it now appears that some senatorial posts have been vacated and that the general election on 27 July 1986 has increased the number of members of parliament to 347. Thus it is deemed appropriate that appointment of senators be made to equal three-fourths of the total number of members of parliament. He thus graciously appoints the following senators by virtue of articles 84 and 88 of the constitution.

1. Lieutenant General Charat Wongsayan
2. Lt Gen Sirichai Laksaniyanawin
3. Lt Gen Ngamphong Nutsathit
4. Lt Gen Suchinda Khraprayun
5. Lt Gen Kasem Sanguanchatsorakrai

7. Maj Gen Kitti Rattanachaya
8. Maj Gen Phairot Chanurai
9. Maj Gen Watthana Sanphanit
10. Admiral Surathin Chantharaphakdi
11. Vice Admiral Thalang Chanthanaprayun
12. Vice Admiral Yongsuk Sunthonnak
13. Vice Admiral Kasem Mekloi
14. Air Chief Marshal Phisut Ritthakhani
15. Air Marshal Phisit Sikalasin
16. Air Marshal Nimon Bunyanurak
17. Police Lt Gen Pranet Ritruchai
18. Sirichai Bunkun
19. Somphon Trisukhi
20. Acting Lieutenant Samoechai Phumphuang

21. Kasem Chatikawanit
22. Atthasit Wetchachiwa
23. Wira Khiriwat
24. Admiral Sonthi Bunyachai
25. Arun Phanuphong

Senators numbers 18 to 20 are replacements for vacant posts per the announcement dated 25 April 1981, numbers 21 to 23 are replacements for vacant posts per announcement dated 19 April 1983, and numbers 24 and 25 replacements for vacant posts per announcement dated 15 April 1985.

This is to become effective from 28 July 1986.

Announced on 28 July 1986, being the 41st year in the reign of the present king.

FOREIGN MINISTRY SPOKESMAN ON GORBACHEV SPEECH

BK030905 Bangkok Domestic Service in English 0000 GMT 3 Aug 86

[Text] Foreign Ministry spokesman Sawanit Khongsiri said the Soviet troop withdrawal from Afghanistan could serve as an example for Vietnam to pull out its troops from Kampuchea. Mr. Sawanit made the statement on Friday on the latest Soviet overture to withdraw its troops from Afghanistan. He commented that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's statement has aroused interest as it has demonstrated a substantial Soviet initiative. He said the Soviet leader's speech also mentioned that the country wants good relations with Thailand and other Asian countries.

Mr. Sawanit said the obstacle to establish good relations between the Soviet Union and Thailand has always been Moscow support for Vietnam which enables Vietnam to continue its military occupation of Kampuchea. He said that although the assistance is a bilateral matter of the two countries, the negative results are being felt by Thai villagers who had been killed and wounded by Soviet booby traps planted by Vietnamese troops along the Thai-Kampuchea border.

LE DUC THO WRITES ON UPCOMING CPV CONGRESS

BK310500 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 29-30 Jul 86

[Article by CPV Central Committee Political Bureau member Le Duc Tho in the 28 July issue of NHAN DAN: "Satisfactorily Carry Out Ideological Work in Preparation for the CPV Congress"]

[Text] We are moving toward the Sixth CPV Congress at a time when the domestic and international situation is, though enjoying some basic advantages, revealing many difficulties. The greatest and most pressing difficulty is that the socioeconomic situation in our country has yet to be stabilized and there are some aspects which are still complicated and chaotic. Negative phenomena in the party and society are still numerous and are, in some cases, relatively serious. We are also faced with the demand to sum up our work experience over the years, set forth tasks for the period ahead, and redistribute cadres, striving to achieve a transition of cadres that will ensure continuity and succession in party leadership.

The enemy is seeking ways to undermine our country's revolution day and night. Now they are taking advantage of our difficulties by stepping up their psychological warfare activities -- spreading false and incendiary rumors -- in order to sow division within our ranks. These difficulties have created feelings of embarrassment and apprehension among many party cadres and members and among the masses. Meanwhile, our ideological work has not yet been given adequate attention as there still exist rightist tendencies, and a lack of enthusiasm, dynamism, and sharpness.

To prepare for the party congress and to create a new atmosphere in the party and among the people, together with the organizational and other tasks, ideological work holds a very important role and there will be many things to do to enhance political and ideological singlemindedness, make contributions to strengthening party organizations, and do away with incorrect conceptions and negative phenomena in the party and society while struggling to oppose the enemy's distorting propaganda allegations.

If we think that difficulties will make the carrying out of the ideological work hard and if this leads to relaxing ideological work, we will make a mistake as we will destroy a sharp weapon for the struggle of the party. The more difficult the situation, the more satisfactorily we will have to carry out ideological work. In doing ideological work, we must successfully grasp and correctly analyze the actual ideological situation of party cadres and members and the masses.

It is true that among party cadres and members and the masses, along with correct and healthy thoughts, there are also indications of perplexity and concern. Even worse, some have shown skepticism, pessimism, and misgivings in the face of difficulties arising in the country's socioeconomic life. Affected by this uneasiness, they have reached conflicting conclusions in assessing the situation and adopted different ways of thinking, understanding, and doing things regarding a number of issues. Realities show that whenever the revolution is faced with difficulties, conflicting opinions will invariably surface regarding the assessment of the situation. Due to subjective and superficial thinking, some fail to develop an overall view of the situation and place too heavy an emphasis on one aspect or another. Others, shrinking from personal responsibility, fail to be objective in their assessment, speaking guardedly of shortcomings and difficulties while highlighting achievements and strong points.

Meanwhile, out of pessimism, some only see difficulties and shortcomings and are driven by their bleak outlook of the situation into disregarding achievements.

Correctly assessing the situation is extremely important in leadership and ideological work. If an assessment is made subjectively, unwisely, and carelessly, correct ideological orientations cannot be established. We mention both strong points and shortcomings not for the purpose of achieving a balance but in the scientific spirit of correctly observing facts and accurately describing strong points and shortcomings. Neither do we neglect to mention achievements and strong points, nor fail to look squarely at shortcomings and difficulties. We point out our shortcomings and difficulties in order to correctly evaluate the actual situation, analyze it, and try to overcome it rather than to evaluate the situation incorrectly or to create panic and pessimism.

In the past, due to the many complicated problems presented by the objective actual situation and to the limitations of our knowledge and perception, divergent opinions have existed. This is quite normal and easily understandable. In ideological work, we must create an open-minded and frank atmosphere for discussion so as to eventually achieve an identity of view and unity in action. To correctly assess the situation and unify opinions we must have correct ideological methods and base ourselves on realities. Reality always remains the criteria of truth. Theories must be compared with reality while, on the other hand, reality must be used to verify concepts.

Take the assessment of the CPV Central Committee's Eighth Plenum resolution for example. Different opinions do exist, but we must examine it on the basis of realities. Reality clearly shows that although there remain several points to be supplemented and perfected, the CPV Central Committee's Eighth Plenum resolution is basically sound as it points out the way to eliminate bureaucratism and state subsidies and completely shift to the practice of economic accounting and socialist business. This is a major shift in the mechanism of management. To bring about this shift we must simultaneously enforce a host of measures according to different plans in which numerous influencing factors are taken into account instead of being dismissed; and this must be carried out in a process involving specific steps and without haste.

In directing the settlement of the issue involving prices, wages, and money, however, we have failed to take all of these aspects into consideration and have made serious mistakes. In the various localities, while making preparations for party congresses, party committee echelons should fully and correctly evaluate the situation of their own localities and party organizations. It is necessary to adopt an objective attitude and look squarely at reality frankly. Those who are heavily influenced by departmentalistic, parochialistic, and individualistic thoughts will assess the situation superficially and inaccurately. Only by accurately assessing the situation will we be able to develop correct viewpoints and orientations for work and create the basis for achieving ideological unity throughout the party.

Our party is approaching its Sixth Congress. Every party cadre and member as well as every caring citizen feels responsible toward the party, and the country is concerned about party activities. The greatest concern of everyone is whether the forthcoming congress will be able to set forth appropriate viewpoints and objectives as well as truly effective measures in order to gradually remove the difficulties and bottlenecks that are currently plaguing the socioeconomic situation; who will be elected to the party's leadership organs at the central, local, and grass-roots levels; and whether the party will be able to consolidate its contingent of cadres and make it fully capable of resolving the momentous and difficult problems facing the nation and steadily pushing the country forward.

We must admit the reality that there exist at various echelons and in the various sectors many leading cadres who, though having undergone training and trials and although credited with certain meritorious services, are now at an advanced age and physically weak, thereby making it hard for them to discharge their duties.

The aspiration of the majority of party members and people is to renovate the cadre-related work and assign the right cadres to the right places so as to create a new strength and unite and lead the masses in developing strengths, overcoming difficulties, and successfully fulfilling the revolutionary objectives and tasks devised by the party. Not only will this have an effect on the future of the country and the revolution, but it is also related to the life of each family and each individual citizen and the future of our children. For this reason, party members and cadres and people throughout the country are extensively discussing various issues regarding policies and personnel of the all-level party congresses. This is a reflection of the sense of responsibility and political awareness of party cadres and members and our people.

We should encourage party cadres and members to contribute their views to party organizations and welcome the people's views on developing the party. At the same time, we must struggle against slanderous or ill-intentioned allegations of dissatisfied or opportunist elements and even of the enemy.

Ideological work should consist of intensively educating and guiding party cadres and members and people in entertaining correct thoughts and suggesting to the central level practical policies and measures aimed at overcoming difficulties. Moreover, it is necessary to make party cadres and members and people understand that although the country is facing temporary difficulties and although there still are shortcomings in party leadership and state management, we are in a good position to overcome difficulties, improve the situation, and take the country to new steps forward.

There are many things to be done in the current ideological task. One of them is to review the criticism and self-criticism tasks and make preparations for and satisfactorily conduct the congresses of all-level party organizations. The satisfactory fulfillment of these tasks will be instrumental in promoting high unanimity of views, devising correct solutions, and forming a body of core leading cadres capable of implementing party lines and continuously pushing the revolution forward.

Reviewing past work is a very important measure for unifying views and policies because all major policies of the party originated from facts and met the latter's demands. To be creative, the revolution must be based on a review of facts. The many innovations that we displayed during the struggles against the French, the Americans, and the Beijing hegemonist expansionists was due to our reviews of facts.

Reviewing facts will help us develop our dialectical ability and our awareness. It is also a very good method of educating party members and people. Only by going deep into, analyzing, and reviewing facts will we have a basis to achieve unanimity of views in evaluating the situation and to set forth policies, measures, and tasks. The forthcoming party congress must be able to do this.

Over the past 10 years, our people's revolutionary movement has produced many models. To review models will help us find correct solutions. Product contracts in agriculture were the result of a review of agricultural models.

In southern Vietnam, the task of grouping peasants into production collectives has been basically completed. How are these collectives to be consolidated? How do they advance? To answer these questions, there is no other way but to resort to reviewing the models of these collectives.

In northern Vietnam, the product contract system has been achieved, but in many places people are engaging in a nonspecific contract practice. What must be done to perfect the contract system and the cooperative managerial system? What must be done to continue to take the northern rural areas forward?

Does southern Vietnam have any characteristics that are different from those of northern Vietnam in advancing agriculture to large-scale socialist production? In the industrial and communication and transportation sectors, there have been many experiences in the areas of management, organization, and development of production, as well as experiences in joint ventures and business associations. These experiences need to be reviewed as soon as possible.

In distribution and circulation, the model initiated by Ba Thi has been admired by many people and the press. What was her experience? Can that experience be applied only to the conditions of Ho Chi Minh City or also to other localities as well? The Binh Tay market, various fruit-selling corporations, and some establishments in Ho Chi Minh City have recently carried out temporary joint business with bourgeois traders. Is this a correct practice? What is our solution for the days ahead since many places and localities have applied different models?

If we do not review these problems we cannot find correct solutions to them. To review tasks is necessary, but the method is not easy. In reviewing reality, we must search out principled problems, correct conclusions, and popular experiences. We must not draw on vague experiences from some models and then disseminate them to other places as some localities do.

Recently, many ministries, sectors, organizations, and enterprises claimed that they have reviewed their tasks. However, in reading their recapitulative reports we found that only their achieved tasks, pending tasks, and strong and weak points were mentioned while no useful conclusions were presented. In some places, they vociferiously called for a conference at the end of each year to review tasks. However, conducting a review is not as simple as letting the head of a unit make a resounding report or encouraging some conferees to present their general viewpoints admiring one another while barely mentioning shortcomings to please the unit head. They usually hold a feast at the end of the conference to distribute gifts and make news in newspapers or on television, some even received commendations and awards. Such a review brings no results, just waste and negative effects.

In the coming party congress, we must realistically carry out a review with more attention and care. In conducting a review, we must be able to correctly analyze the implementation of the party's positions and resolutions, closely evaluate the real situation, distinguish between correct and wrong conclusions regarding various positions and measures, and draw on lively and correct experiences and lessons. We must carry out this task with specific aims and must proceed from the lower to higher levels in order to obtain a perfect result. Practically, at places where unanimous ideas have not been achieved they must pay special attention to reviewing reality. They must determine the proposed ideas based on reality, because no consensus will be reached through arguments.

They must use collective minds to analyze reality with correct methods and thinking. In doing so collective members can integrate their intelligence and reach a correct conclusion even though their backgrounds are limited. One man, though capable in many aspects, cannot see all angles of a problem. This is a requirement in conducting a review. In a letter to various organizations during the preparation for the Ninth CPSU Congress in 1920, Lenin wrote: Only by carrying out a profound review can we be able to contribute to the party congress a realistic experience drawn from deliberated thinking, collective labor, and the efforts of the entire party membership through their economic building tasks.

Along with reviewing work, we must carry out self-criticism and criticism satisfactorily. Each ministry, each sector, and each party committee echelon should, through the reviewing process, assert strong points, point out shortcomings, clearly distinguish right from wrong, and draw upon lessons of experience; and, on this basis, request individuals to make self-criticism and criticism, including criticism of both higher and lower echelons. Self-criticism and criticism must be conducted comprehensively, specifically, and profoundly; and it is necessary to avoid a superficial and general approach. Self-criticism and criticism is the law governing the progress of the party. Recently, with a high sense of responsibility and in the interest of the revolutionary cause of the people and the party, the Political Bureau and the Secretariat have strictly made self-criticism and criticism before the party Central Committee, clearly pointing out strong points; deeply analyzing mistakes and shortcomings regarding leadership, guidance and supervision; and decided on effective remedial measures.

Self-criticism and criticism has also been conducted in a relatively satisfactory manner by the various echelons and sectors. However, it cannot be finished in just one single phase, nor can it solve every problem. To speed up work activities and consolidate the masses' confidence, all echelons and sectors must actively develop strong points, correct shortcomings, and introduce self-criticism and criticism as a regular feature of party activities.

At present, there still remain some people who are very afraid to make self-criticism and criticism. These very same comrades feared neither imprisonment while carrying out clandestine missions nor sacrifices while fighting on the battlefield. Nevertheless, they have now developed an aversion to self-criticism and criticism. When asked to make criticism, they shrink back into a defensive position and try to avoid the issue in an effort not to offend others. Some people have been driven by personal motives in making self-criticism and criticism, thus depriving this activity of its positive effect. Each of us should sternly examine ourselves to see if we have been influenced by personal motives. With objectivism and impartiality, we will have peace in our hearts. We must base our real lives on testifying to realities without complaining -- strong trees never die easily.

Some comrades worry about criticizing others, especially higher echelon comrades for fear of being persecuted, transferred, or blocked in promotions. For some reasons, persecution is still prevalent in our party. However, being revolutionists we do not fear such practices. We must frankly and bravely continue our struggle -- the only way to overcome negative phenomena. Our party will not accept and will take disciplinary measures against anyone who persecutes those who criticize him. It will criticize those who are reluctant and indulgent, while taking strict measures against those who have ill-intentions against criticism and self-criticism, which is detrimental to unity within the party.

Correct criticism and self-criticism will not create grievances between comrades. We must base ourselves on truth and reality in order to persuade our comrades on a long-term basis. It is not easy to persuade those who have made mistakes. We should not turn our backs on these comrades, but must realistically show our love and sympathy to them in order to strengthen unity and advance together.

We must conduct criticism and self-criticism more satisfactorily. Reality shows that satisfactory criticism and self-criticism is an important measure for reaching unanimity in evaluating the situation, determining position and method of work, gradually overcoming negative phenomena in the party, solving worries and concerns of party cadres and members, enhancing the party's strength, and consolidating the people's confidence.

In light of the Fifth Party Central Committee's 10th Plenum resolution, ideological work in general, and self-criticism and criticism in particular, must contribute actively to improving the class character and militancy of the party and the leading and exemplary role of party members and firmly maintaining the principle of democratic centralism within the party. Only on the basis of democracy can we achieve centralized leadership, and democracy must be placed under centralized leadership. In the party, one has the right to cling to his views. However, one must implement the resolution of a collective. Clinging to one's views does not mean opposing the resolution of a collective.

The strength of our party lies in its sense of organization and discipline. All cadres and party members as well as all echelons and sectors must uphold the sense of organization and discipline to scrupulously implement all party directives and resolutions and must submit to party discipline. They must implement correctly the principle that when a resolution is issued by the party organization, individuals must submit to the collective, the lower echelon must submit to the higher echelon, and the entire party must submit to the party Central Committee.

It is necessary to severely criticize all undemocratic manifestations or manifesations of formalistic democracy while resolutely overcoming such manifestations as doing whatever one likes whenever one pleases, fragmentation, distraction, localism, and the failure to firmly preserve democratic centralism in the party. We must realize that it is the lack of democracy and laxity of leadership and discipline that have devitalized the party's militancy.

To satisfactorily prepare for and hold party organization congresses at various levels in anticipation of the National Party Congress, all party committee echelons must do their best to prepare reports on the activities of their sectors and localities. At the same time, they must ensure unanimity of views on the disposition of cadres in compliance with the direction of the party Central Committee Secretariat.

In the past, certain localities resorted to the practice of modifying the party Central Committee's draft political report with the annexation of some details on their situation to present to the local party organization congresses as work reports prepared by the local party committee echelons themselves.

This time, all party organizations are asked to review the actual situation in their localities themselves and, on that basis, prepare reports on their work to present to their congresses. They must review the political, economic, cultural, and social situation in their localities in every aspect. They must also review the task of simultaneously carrying out the three revolutions in detail and not in general.

We must do the same with self-criticism and criticism. What is the substance of the self-criticism and criticism drive in all provinces, districts, villages, enterprises, and organs? This drive must be conducted by all those concerned in a highly specific and clear manner and in accordance with the requirements applied to each sector and echelon.

We must, on the basis of reviewing work and conducting self-criticism and criticism, satisfactorily prepare reports on the work of localities and contribute views to the party Central Committee's draft political report. While studying the party Central Committee's draft political report, we should make suggestions for replenishing whatever we deem necessary.

In electing party committee echelons, we must ensure the criteria of cadres, especially the criteria concerning their political and ethical quality, work style and capabilities, and ability to unite everybody. At the same time, we must pay attention to the composition of the structure aimed at building a strong collective of leadership that can ensure unanimity in terms of views and policies and can display a good work style.

If we elect an organ of leadership whose members do not work in harmony with each other, the cadres of that collective cannot sustain leadership no matter how competent they are.

While holding party congresses at various levels, the higher echelon must send cadres to attend party congresses at the lower level, the party Central Committee must send cadres to attend party congresses at the provincial level, and provinces and districts must send cadres to attend party congresses at the grass-roots level.

While attending party congresses at the lower level, representatives from the higher level must not play the role of an important person but must successfully grasp the actual situation in the localities concerned. They must also think about and contribute interesting views to these localities. Only in this way can they help the lower echelons satisfactorily hold their congresses while enabling the higher echelons to grasp the situation at the lower level.

We must select representatives to attend various party congresses carefully and in such a way as to ensure that they have the necessary quality to contribute many practical views to these congresses.

This time, party congresses at various levels must change their work methods and avoid ostentatiousness, formalism and waste. They must also concentrate on realistically solving the problems arising from realities in their localities.

In the entire process of the party's ideological work, propaganda and training retain a particualrly important position. All propaganda and training organs should manage their activities even more closely in every aspect, especially those related to press and publication.

In the past, there has been a relatively large number of well-written books of memoirs on the revolution which can be used to educate the masses, especially youths and teenagers. But there have also been certain books of memoirs on the revolution which have not been written accurately, thus creating a bad impact in many respects.

The first requirements for writers of history and memoirs are to reflect the truth precisely and objectively, to be able to analyze the application of party policies in actual revolutionary activities, to respect the role of the masses, to be absolutely objective, and to prevent individualism from interfering.

The masses are the creators of history. Therefore, the contents of memoirs must provide an impressive description of various heroic collectives and individuals and of the mothers of the many heroes and combatants who have scored great achievements for us, a heroic nation. Of course, this does not mean that we will not speak and write of leadership comrades individually. The questions are when and how the memoirs should be written so they can produce good effects. We must respect the truth of history and must realize the equality of history. We can resort to fiction only when we compose a poem or write a story. But how can we do so when writing history and memoirs? We should especially not resort to fiction under the influence of individualism. When writing history, we may come up with different views. The view of each person is only a personal view. Only through the general view of the collective can we ensure accuracy.

The press should write more of the progressive models in the masses -- workers, peasants, revolutionary intellectuals, ordinary laborers, and those who are fighting for national defense -- and should cut down on unnecessary news reports on ceremonious functions -- send-off and welcoming ceremonies and receptions.

The press should renovate its operational attitude by refraining from spreading unidirectional propaganda and by telling accurately about those things already done, about strong points, and about good models. Simultaneously, it should also mention those things which have not been done, shortcomings, and weaknesses and should analyze clearly the reasons for these and recommend corrective measures. Only by doing so can the press truly produce good effects and be the worthy propagandist, promoter, and organizer of the collective as called by Lenin.

At present there are many negative phenomena. We must criticize and openly publicize in the press a number of typical cases. We must combine conducting self-criticism and criticism in the internal ranks with conducting open self-criticism and criticism in the press. Of course, we must not publish everything in the press at will. Instead, we must ensure careful selection, must weigh the pros and cons carefully, and must boldly make public important cases for educational purposes.

We may expand scientific discussions on matters concerning theory and facts. We must encourage scientists to enthusiastically study science, including natural science and social science, and must truly attach importance to those scientific research projects which are useful, are well and meticulously planned, and are complete with appropriate suggestions. However, such discussions must have realistic purposes and their conduct must be guided closely. We should not take advantage of discussions to propagate erroneous personal views as this will only further complicate the situation and cause harm to the unity of views.

Some comrades have held that in various localities, there is no story about rightist tendencies developing in the course of carrying out ideological work because everything handed down from higher echelons has been done scrupulously. Is that right? To see if there are any rightist tendencies, we must check to see how self-criticism and criticism, ideological management, and cultural and artistic activities have been carried out; whether localities have taken the initiative to bring out shortcomings and weaknesses in order to draw on experience for better implementation or if they have left this to be desired: whether they have struggled positively to prevent and overcome erroneous thoughts and actions among party cadres and members and the masses; and how they have struggled against enemy sabotage propaganda allegations.

To be a sharp and effective weapon, ideological work must be active, realistic, and combative and must closely combine theory with practice. The deep penetration of realities is the fundamental question of ideological and political education. Especially in the current situation, ideological work must be directed at those realistic and hot problems arising from the reality of life, must meet the needs and aspirations of the masses, and must contribute to resolving those problems regarding the welfare of the masses. To attain good results, ideological work must be carried out in accordance with the motto: One's words must match one's deeds. It is necessary to refrain from talking only about empty theories or from talking one way and acting another.

From now to the coming CPV Congress, the miscreants and the enemy will seek ways to sabotage us ideologically and organizationally. Even worse, they have falsely used other persons' names to create fake documents containing distortions and fabrications in order to serve their incendiary sabotage propaganda purposes.

We must, on the one hand, heighten our vigilance, promptly detect, and resolutely frustrate all the enemy's distorting propaganda allegations, the spreading of false rumors, and other enemy psychological warfare activities; must do away with tendencies to aloofness, to let things drift unnoticed, and to relax efforts in the struggle against the sabotage propaganda of the miscreants and the enemy; and must, on the other hand, comply scrupulously with all the regulations governing the circulation and storing of party documents with a determination not to allow the miscreants and the enemy to exploit them.

Looking back over our ideological work of the past few decades, we have attained many good results successfully improving the theoretical skills and knowledge of party cadres and members in each revolutionary stage; teaching patriotism and proletarian internationalism; and motivating millions of party cadres and members to volunteer to go for combat and public missions, to perform satisfactorily the national and democratic revolution, to build socialism, and to defend the fatherland.

We have also, however, noted that ideological work has at times been derailed in one aspect or another. When carrying out reeducation, we have committed a mistake by carrying out individual criticism without linking this with the implementation of the political tasks. Later on, we at times relaxed self-criticism and criticism, failed to link criticism for the implementation of political tasks with criticism for qualities and lifestyle, or criticized perfunctorily and generally. At one time we tended to regard ideology as the leading work of Maoist style and at another time regarded technology as a decisive factors, belittling ideological and spiritual factors.

When it comes to dealing with the matter of qualities and competency, we at one time emphasized competency without paying adequate attention to qualities and at another time, emphasized qualities without paying adequate attention to competency. In the three interests, at one time we emphasized the interests of the state and the collective without paying adequate attention to individual interests and at another time emphasized individual interests while belittling the interests of the state and the collective, and so forth.

We must, depending on each stage, examine the ideological development of party cadres and members and the masses so we can pay attention to combining and tackling satisfactorily various aspects of the work in question, trying to ensure that ideological work is increasingly correct and scientifically-oriented.

To obtain results from ideological work, we must carry out this work in close combination with organizational work and inspection work. The propaganda and training department, the organization department, and the control committee must coordinate with each other so as to contribute actively to party building work.

The entire party must engage in ideological work. However, it must ensure a clear division of work and responsibilities in which party chapters play a highly important role. Party chapters must actively and promptly solve all problems arising among their ranks. Through the implementation of various party policies, they must examine the thoughts of cadres, party members, and the masses to find out whether there is any change; what is right and what is wrong; what is rightist and what is leftist. They must also find out the aspirations of the masses and think of what they should do to satisfy these aspirations.

In the face of the present situation, all party committee echelons must pay special attention to ideological work under the slogan that the entire party engages in ideological work. They must also ensure that the ideological front remains always firm before any ordeal.

Our party is marvelously great and its achievements are immeasurably great. It has led our people in successfully waging two wars of resistance against the French and Americans and is now leading our people in the struggle against the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists. Our party cadres always play the leading role and have endured untold hardship and sacrifice.

We take great pride in the great achievements of our party. However, we cannot help feeling sad when there remains in our party a number of cadres and members whose fighting will has declined and who have violated party discipline and the criteria of a communist, thus adversely affecting the party's reputation and prestige and weakening the masses' confidence in the party.

Realities in the world revolutionary movement as well as in our revolution show that difficulties encountered by a revolution usually gives rise to the lack or deterioration of confidence. Our people confide in Marxism-Leninism and in our party. However, when faced with a number of our shortcomings and various manifestations of negativism in the party, many persons have shrunk in misgivings and their confidence has declined.

Our cadres and party members must undertake full responsibility in this matter and must strive to overcome difficulties in correcting shortcomings and surge forward to satisfy the needs of our revolution and the legitimate aspirations of our people.

As the knowledge of the masses has now been improved in various aspects, they demand that our cadres and party members be fully endowed with quality and ability and be worthy of being both leaders and faithful servants of the people.

Let our entire party strive to make its Sixth Congress a great success. With a high degree of unanimity in terms of ideology and organization, it is certain that we will be able to gradually overcome the present difficulties, thus advancing our revolution to new, more beautiful and glorious stages of development.

VO CHI CONG ARTICLE ON AUTONOMY IN PRODUCTION

BK291540 Hanoi TAP CHI CONG SAN in Vietnamese Jun 86 pp 8-18

[Vo Chi Cong article: "The Autonomy and Responsibility of Basic Economic Units in Production and Business" -- passages within slantlines published in italics]

[Text] Recently, we have taken the first steps in revising a number of economic policies, and this has had a salutary effect on production and circulation. However, to this day, the managerial system based on bureaucratic centralism and state subsidies has not yet been radically abolished and the new managerial system has not yet taken shape.

The state of bureaucratic centralism and subsidization, which is closely linked with dependence, passivity, disjointedness, and localism in economic guidance and management has existed for a long time. The organization of production is irrational in many respects; planning work has not been renovated and is unrealistic: and the organization of the managerial apparatus is bulky, cumbersome, inefficient, and incapable of distinguishing between the function of administrative management and that of production and business management.

These shortcomings have hampered the development of the basic economic units' collective mastery and autonomy in production and business; at the same time, they have made it impossible to ensure the state's centralized and unified leadership and management.

To change the present socioeconomic situation of the country, /renovating economic management/ is a task of utmost importance.

This time around, management renovation is a major movement of profound economic, political, and social significance, especially for the consoldiation and strengthening of socialist production relations and for the promotion of the scientific and technological revolution aimed at the developing the production forces to suit the actual objective situation of our country, which is still in the initial stage of the period of transition to socialism.

Renovation of the managerial system must be carried out in conjunction with the reorganization of production and the rearrangement of the economic structure. This is a complex task, a long and continuous process requiring the renovation of the entire managerial system of the national economy and society; but it must be done step by step and in a well coordinated and steady manner. In the immediate future, we will choose the task of /ensuring the basic economic units' right to autonomy in production and business as the first link to be renovated simultaneously with the renovation of the general managerial system./ This is aimed at bringing into full play the working people's mastery as a moving force and increasing the powers and responsibilities of various establishments, sectors, and levels to develop the economy with ever higher productivity, quality, and efficiency. [paragraph continues]

Satisfactorily carrying out this task will help create conditions for stabilizing and gradually improving the living standard of the working people, increasing the sources of capital accumulation for the cause of socialist industrialization, consolidating and perfecting new production relations, frustrating all enemy schemes and tricks of sabotage, effectively struggling against negative phenomena, satisfactorily safeguarding socialist property, and strengthening national defense and security.

Renovation of management in basic economic units is particularly important because these basic units are the foundation of the socioeconomic organziations, the places where all society's material wealth is created, and the source of accumulation originating from surplus products. It is in the basic economic units that the working people directly exercise their right to collective mastery under the party leadership and the state management. For this reason, the basic economic units must be assured of full powers and interests; at the same time they must fully discharge their responsibilities and obligations toward the entire country.

The decades-long practice of bureaucratic centralism and state subsidies has led to passivism and a tendency to rely on others, thereby making it impossible to develop a sense of autonomy and responsibility among the laboring people in various state enterprises. The means of production and the products of the state-run economic sector are under the ownership of the entire people. The collective working people in state enterprises are granted by the state /the right to use directly and manage part of the means of production/ under the ownership of the entire people to carry out production for the benefit of society. The successes or failures of enterprises -- whether their economic efficiency is high or low, whether they are making profits, operating at a loss, or going bankrupt -- will be mainly decided by the laboring people in these enterprises themselves. Therefore, the collective laboring people in each enterprise, ranging from the director and managerial cadres to the workers, must be fully aware of their rights, duties, benefits, and obligations in production and business. But for a long time now, the old-fashioned management mechanism that features passivism and a tendency to rely on the state has eroded and paralyzed all the initiatives of the laboring people. The laboring people have at times become indifferent to the production and business results of their enterprises because the state takes care of everything and because the responsibility for all the enterprises' production results, good or bad, rests with the state and is not directly linked with the laboring people's realistic benefits and duties. Now if we wish to arouse the sense of mastery, creativity, responsibility, and obligations of the laboring people as well as their sense of organization and discipline to develop satisfactorily the production and business activities of enterprises, we must resolve to discard our centralized, bureaucratic, and subsidy-based management mechanism, establish the right to autonomy in production and business for basic economic units, and make enterprises truly shift to economic accounting and socialist business.

Renovating the management of basic economic units and the general economic management mechanism must be based on various basic socioeconomic management principles. The following are a number of basic principles to be firmly grasped in renovating the economic management mechanism.

/Guarantee basic economic units' right to autonomy in production and business on the principle of the socialist economic management system./

In socialist economic management, the state at the central level will constantly enhance its centralized and unified leadership and management over all main fields of activity, devise plans for national economic development and for the management of the country's natural resources, firmly secure control over important commodities and essential means of production, make major decisions on balancing the national economy, provide direct and effective management for those sectors playing an important role in the national economy, establish economic-financial policies and national economic-technical norms, satisfactorily carry out planning for cadre training, provide guidance for the cooperation of various sectors and economic units, and conduct controls and inspections to uphold the law and discipline regarding management and to ensure correct enforcement of various policies and the state law.

All economic units must have their right to autonomy in production and business fully guaranteed under centralized and unified state control. Every enterprise must be placed under the direct jurisdiction of a responsible organ at the higher echelon and under the supervision and control of other authoritative organs concerned so it can exercise correctly its rights and responsibilities as follow:

/First,/ maintain, handle, and develop its fixed assets and state-allocated liquid funds in accordance with state policies and law while creating more funds by itself to carry out expanded production.

/Second,/ strengthen the production-business structure in accordance with the orientations, tasks, and targets of the state plan; the requirements of society; and the production-business capability of units.

/Third,/ establish production-business relations with other economic units at home and abroad in accordance with state regulations on economic contracts.

/Fourth,/ encourage the application of scientific and technological advances and invent and develop technology to contribute to accelerating the scientific and technological revolution.

/Fifth,/ units must fulfill their obligation in consuming products according to contracts, especially in supplying goods to state-run business establishments for distribution according to the set plan to meet the common requirements of society and to procure funds for the state budget.

/Sixth,/ satisfactorily solve social problems within economic units.

/Seventh,/ strengthen the organizational structure of training, forging, and using workers and cadres in accordance with state policy.

During the past years, due to the application of bureaucratic centralism and state subsidies, economic units had no autonomy in production and business. Moreover, due to Such phenomena as scattering, departmentalism, arbitrariness, disorganization, and undiscipline, the higher echelons could not implement the effective integration of economic management. Integration and democracy are the two factors that must be firmly grasped in economic management. We must unanimously ensure the implementation of basic economic units' autonomy in production and business, while accelerating the effective leadership and unified integrated management of the state at the central level. We must eliminate such phenomena as conservatism, sluggishness, rejecting changes, clinging to bureaucratic centralism, and inefficiency, which are in reality a loose integration. [paragraph continues]

On the contrary, we must criticize and promptly adjust such democratic trends that demand too many rights and interests for basic units, while the neglecting rights, interests, obligations, and responsibilities of enterprises toward the state and attempting to turn each enterprise into a separate "kingdom" thus freeing it from the correct integrated management of the state. Only by guaranteeing the autonomy of basic economic units, accelerating the development and improvement of the unified integrated management of the state at the central level, and maintaining a rational division of responsibility between the central and local levels can we ensure effective production and business in enterprises in accordance with the socialist orbit and bring about desired results, meeting the socioeconomic development requirements of the whole nation, thereby ensuring long-term interests of enterprises and the workers.

/The renovation of management for basic economic units as well as the general renovation of economic management must be carried out on the basis of relying chiefly on planning, while correctly utilizing the relations of goods and money to enable enterprises to shift realistically to the socialist accounting and business system./

The socialist economy is a planned economy aimed at satisfying the growing needs of all members of society on the basis of an increasingly developed material and technical basis and the regime of socialist collective mastery. However, production under socialism still has the character of goods production, although this character has changed somewhat. For this reason, the law of value, the common law of all goods production systems, still exists and remains in effect. The only difference is that, under the socialist system, the characteristic laws of socialism play the leading role and act as the main regulator of the social production system, whereas the law of value no longer fully retains its role as a spontaneous regulator of all economic activities as it did under the previous production systems. However, as long as goods production exists, even in the form of a planned socialist production system, economic activities will inevitably continue to be affected by the law of value. We must be really active and correctly apply in a really voluntary manner the characteristic economic laws of socialism as well as the law of value and the goods-money and market relations in managerial and planning work to achieve high productivity, quality, and efficiency for the socialist economic system while effectively curbing the negative socioeconomic aspects spawned by the effect of the spontaneous law of value.

The material premise of the planned and balanced development of the national economy as well as the development of production and business in each economic unit is the nature and level of socialization of the work force. However, socialization of the work force alone is not enough to result in a planned and balanced economic development in the entire society, a task that can be achieved only under the system of socialist ownership of the means of production and in the condition that the political force representing this system is the dictatorship of the working class.

There is a thesis that a socialized production system is the factor deciding planned economic development, that planned economic development is not a particular product of socialism, that capitalism has practiced it for a long time, and that, with an increasingly higher character and level of socialization of its production force, capitalism has applied planned production even in the multinational and international corporations, a feat that socialism will not be able to achieve for some time. This is an erroneous thesis. We all know that capitalism has reached a very high standard of organization and management within the limits of each enterprise (including multinational and international corporations), which even the communists themselves must study to do a good job of organizing and managing socialist enterprises. But capitalism is incapable of guiding planned economic development throughout society because a capitalist economy is based on the system of capitalist private ownership of the means of production. As such, a capitalist economy must develop according to the law of competition. [paragraph continues]

Even in the stage wherein a capitalist monopoly has reached a very high level, the effects of this law cannot be negated. We must clearly perceive the difference in nature between capitalism and socialism, between the so-called "capitalist planning" and socialist planning.

On the basis of the system of socialist ownership of the means of production, various laws of socialist economy appear, activate, and exert ever greater effects to ensure the planned development of the economy. The law of planned and balanced development is one of the economic laws characteristic of socialism. Voluntary and correct application of this law will guarantee that production, distribution, exchange, and consumption in the national economic system develop in a balanced and harmonious fashion and ceaselessly forge ahead without being interrupted by economic crises as they often are under capitalism. Naturally, the nature and level of socialization of the production forces is directly related to the level of planning of the national economy. We must take this factor into account when applying the law of planned and balanced development in the initial stage of the period of transition from small-scale to large-scale socialist production in our country and must guard against subjectivism, hastiness, and bureaucratic and formalist planning.

/The key problem in renovating the economic managerial system is renovating planning work/ in both content and method. All sluggishness in production and business in the past stemmed from incorrect planning work. The production, technical, financial, and social welfare plans of the entire country and of each locality and unit are a whole reflecting the application of the entire system of economic law characteristic of socialism and other economic laws that continue to exist and operate under socialism, including the laws of the commodity-based economy such as the law of value, the law of supply and demand, and the law of monetary circulation. These plans encompass various aspects such as production, distribution, circulation, and consumption and are formulated on the basis of a system of well-balanced norms, uniform and suitable eocnomic measures, and economic contracts. Each economic unit is placed under the direct management of a higher managerial organ and is authorized to take the initiative in formulating optimal production and business plans in conformity with the guidelines, tasks, and targets of the state plan and the needs of society. The enterprise must bear full responsibility for losses or profits and must strive to make production and business operations profitable in the interest of the entire society and, at the same time, in the interest of the enterprise itself and of the worker. Basic economic units must satisfactorily fulfill the norms of goods and value and must achieve practical and ever higher economic efficiency.

We cannot accept the viewpoint contending that all production and business activities of basic economic units must proceed from market demands; that the enterprise must be allowed to choose to produce whatever can earn more profits, to be free to buy and sell state-controlled supplies, and to sell its products at market prices; that "all kinds of products must be commercialized;" and that the state itself, if it wants to gain control of products turned out by state-operated enterprises, must also procure them through economic contracts and at agreed-upon prices. This viewpoint is totally erroneous. To meet the demands of production and life of the entire society, we must always pay attention to both the use-value and value of goods. All production and business activities of the enterprise must, first of all, be conducted in accordance with the guidelines, tasks, and targets of the state plans to satisfy the needs of production and life for the entire society; at the same time, they must achieve high economic efficiency and make a profit to ensure incessantly expanded production.

Concerning products essential for the production and life of society, the main task of the enterprise is to produce according to the demands of the state plan, which has taken into account the demands of the market so as to satisfy the needs of society and to meet the requirements of the basic economic law of socialism. [paragraph continues]

The enterprise has the right to rely on the requirements of the state plan, the demands of the market, the capability of various sources to provide supplies, and the projected consumption of products through economic contracts to work out its own production and business plan so as to make the best use of the enterprise's machine capacity and production potential. However, all production and business activities of the enterprise, regardless of the different sources from which it receives supplies, must be reflected in its 5-year and annual production, technical, financial, and social welfare plans. The enterprise is absolutely not allowed to set up a production component outside the set plan to increase its own income from price differentials or through other illegitimate activities in order to establish a private fund for distribution within the enterprise.

We must improve planning work and the system of economic contracts in the supply of materials so that enterprises can receive essential materials on schedule at the most convenient places and with minimum transport expenses without going through various unnecessary intermediary links. On that basis, enterprises and material supply organizations, as well as raw material production units, must sign economic contracts with each other, correctly implement what they have signed in the contracts, and take equal responsibility before the law for the implementation of economic contracts. Economic contracts will play an increasingly leading role in the formulation and implementation of plans. To implement satisfactorily all economic contracts, it is extremely important to enhance the economic legal system and fully develop the role of the economic arbitration organs at various levels and provide them with a function similar to an economic court.

The labor-wage plan for the entire production-business volume of an enterprise must be formulated in accordance with the norms for the extent of waste of labor and the norms for the payment of wages for each type of product. Wages must be paid in combination with the results of production and business and the level of work completion of the enterprise.

With regard to production costs, it is necessary to formualte plans in accordance with the norms for economic and technical progress and trim all unreasonable and improper expenses. Materials for production, if supplied by the state, must be included in production costs in accordance with state-prescribed prices. Materials for production, if proportioned by enterprises themselves, must be included in production costs in accordance with actual purchase prices within a state-prescribed price bracket. Except for some essential products used as main raw materials by many important production sectors in the country, the state will assign mandatory norms for reduction of waste or the reduction of production costs of a number of products that are liable to unusually large profits or are still subject to state-subsidy prices due to social policies. This is necessary in establishing a basis for enterprises to estimate their wholesale prices and ensure their legitimate profits. In general, the state will not assign mandatory norms for production costs as it did in past management practices. When enterprises are responsible for their own losses and profits in production and business transactions as well as for their own interests, it is necessary for them to pay adequate attention to carefully estimating production costs on the basis of various norms and price lists. At the same time, they must actively enforce various economic and technical measures and constantly strive to lower production costs in order to ensure ever larger profits. This also requires that all responsible sectors effect a new change in work related to finance, planning, labor, wages, statistics, and accounting as well as in the manner of approach so as to manage various enterprises in a more effective manner.

Enterprises must take the initiative in formulating their financial plans. With regard to funds, apart from the funds allocated to them only once at the beginning and part of the annual revenues left to them by the state, enterprises must work out plans to create their own funds or replenish self-acquired funds by striving to develop production, increasing labor productivity, improving the quality of products, and lowering production costs. Enterprises are allowed to seek loans from banks to use as funds or borrow idle money temporarily from their workers and employees when banks still do not have enough money to extend loans to them. It is necessary to formulate plans for profits from all production and business activities regardless of the sources of supply.

Depending on the specific production and business situation and conditions of various enterprises, managerial organs at the higher level are authorized to directly assign to each of them one to three mandatory norms. These norms are: the value of goods produced (with the value of goods for export clearly indicated); the amount of key products, the specifications and quality of which must be defined and must be consumed according to set plans and contracts (with the amounts slated for national defense and export, if any, clearly indicated); and the sums to be contributed to the budget (including profits and other kinds of revenue).

For products essential to production, life, national defense, and export, the state must necessarily assign legal norms to cover the products to be distributed according to plans and contracts. For enterprises that produce items not listed in the nomenclature of essential goods and have to procure by themselves virtually all or a large part of the key supplies needed for production -- hence, their production is unstable -- the state may assign only a single legal norm to cover revenue contributions to the budget.

Along the aforesaid line, the state shall further concretize the legal norms to suit each type of state-run enterprises belonging to the industrial, agricultural, building, transportation, circulation -- including home trade, export-import, and supply business -- and other sectors.

In the renovation of the content and methods of planning at every basic economic unit as well as at each level, in each sector, and on a national scale, there are many issues that need to be studied and concretized further in order to ensure that the state plan is formulated in a truly democratic and scientific manner to combine the formulation and integration of plans from the bottom up with the firm and scientifically-based balanced calculations made by state planning organs. The content of planning should also encompass the application of scientific-technological innovations, the use of science and technology as a direct production force, and the enforcement of economic incentive policies involving prices, wages, profits, finances, taxation, and credit to create truly strong driving forces for guaranteeing successful implementation of the plan.

/It is necessary to harmoniously reconcile the three interests -- the interests of the entire society, the interest of the collective, and the interest of the laboring people -- at basic economic units./

A very strong driving force that encourages production development and increases the productivity of enterprises lies in the correct resolution of /economic interests./ Lenin taught: "Even the loftiest ideals are not worth a penny unless we know how to closely combine these ideals with the interests of the very participants in the economic struggle" (footnote: V.I. Lenin: Complete Works, Progress Publishing House, Moscow, 1978, Volume 1, pages 510-511).

Economic interests belong to an objective economic category, but they also provide the motive for man's activities. Therefore, they become a strong driving force that encourages economic development. Once economic interests are consciously triggered, they will vigorously encourage individual efforts, thereby making the economic policies of the party and state win true response from the masses and shaking the entire mass movement for productive labor to build socialism. The movement for productive labor in agriculture and industry has been given a vigorous boost with the resolution of the relations between the state and agricultural cooperatives and between the state and cooperatives and cooperative member peasants in line with the various directives issued by the party and state, including the system of product contracts for labor groups and laborers (according to Directive No. 100 of the party Central Committee Secretariat) as well as with the resolution of the relations between the state and enterprises and between the state and enterprises and the workers (according to Decisions No. 25-CP, No. 26-CP, and No. 156-HDBT of the state), including the broadening of various forms of contract wages and bonuses. In the past 5 years, although the material-technical bases for production were generally not larger than before and the volume of imported supplies and raw material needed for production only amounted to two-thirds of that in the preceding 5-year period, agricultural and industrial production surmounted the difficulties, stagnation, and recession characteristic of the 1979-80 period and has, since 1982, developed at considerable speed. In particular, agricultural production has developed at a fairly rapid rate. This is possible thanks to the gradual changes effected in economic management to ensure the harmonious reconciliation of the three interests and guarantee the direct interests of the laboring people.

However, we have, until now, not been able to resolve this issue satisfactorily. In the state-run and collectivized economies, the immediate interests of enterprises are in basic agreement with the direct interests of individual laboring people, but contradictions do exist. This is an objective problem. We must make enterprises and the laboring people clearly realize that the interest of the entire society which is represented by the state is the basic interest, and that only when this interest is met in full will we have the conditions for ensuring the stability and constant enrichment of the interests of enterprises and the laboring people. At the same time, it is also necessary to make the comprehensive management organs and higher-level managerial cadres of the state deeply realize that only by paying sufficient attention to the immediate interest of the enterprises and the direct interest of the laboring people will society be able to steadily accumulate capital at each basic economic unit and, on this basis, to round up ever more revenues for the state budget with the aim of perpetuating the process of expanded reproduction on a societywide basis. By paying attention to the daily direct interest of the laboring people and the limited interest of the enterprises while neglecting the interest of society as a whole, we can, for a short period of time, stimulate production immediately; but, in the long run, society will be unable to create the material-technical bases necessary for continual expanded reproduction by the enterprises, thus hurting the enterprises themselves as well as the laboring people. On the contrary, if adequate attention is focussed not on rapidly accumulating capital from the grass-roots level, especially in our country where we are advancing from small-scale production, and on appropriately meeting the daily direct interest of the laboring people but on increasing the sources of revenues for the state budget, we will be unable to stimulate the development of production and, consequently, have no bases for increasing budget revenues. Therefore, all echelons, sectors, and basic units, as well as all laboring people must clearly realize this. At the same time, it is necessary to make managerial cadres and everyone deeply understand that rights and interests are always closely linked with responsibilities and obligations; for rights never go without obligations and vice versa. We must correctly ensure the interests of the state and the enterprises as well as of the laboring people. [paragraph continues]

The laboring people must be made to understand that whenever and wherever the interests of the state and the collective are not protected, the legitimate interest of the laboring people will not be fully honored so they will become clearly conscious of their responsibility toward the enterprises's production activities, fulfill their obligations toward the state, and actively and selflessly work for the interests of the entire society, the enterprise, and themselves.

It is necessary to criticize the departmentalistic and egoistic tendency of reducing the interest of the state to increase the enterprise's income even though this is not permitted by the enterprise's production conditions and economic efficiency. Not a few enterprises have taken the liberty of retaining a sizable part of its products for internal distribution under one form or another; for barter with other production units for consumer goods, for inclusion to their own consumer funds; for increasing the actual income of their workers, employees, and cadres; or for increasing their own income or covering their own losses due to poor management through out-of-the-plan sales and barter transactions concluded at free market prices to deprive other economic units of part of their surplus products and rob other laboring people through the collection of illegitimate price differentials. Such practices have disrupted the economic accounting system and given rise to numerous negative phenomena not only in the economic but also social fields. Therefore, they must be promptly and resolutely prevented and controlled by every means possible.

In renovating economic management, we must /use and combine more satisfactorily three kinds of measures -- economic, administrative-organizational, and educational./

Of the three, economic measures are fundamental. There must be correct economic management policies and procedures to link interests with responsibilities, to ensure worthy material compensation for good workers and capable producers, and at the same time to compel inefficient workers and incompetent producers to shoulder material responsibility. There must be a better understanding of the principle of distribution according to labor in the wage and bonus system and correct implementation of the material penalty system in production and business.

Administrative-organizational and educational measures are very important to the enhancement of economic management efficiency. These measures have taken on a particularly important significance now that our country is engaged in a struggle against the enemy's border-nibbling war and multifaceted war of sabotage and another arduous and complex struggle between the two roads -- socialist and capitalist -- to settle the question "Who will beat whom?" We must really uphold the law and strengthen discipline in economic management and strictly control and supervise all production and business activities and all product and income distribution in each enterprise and throughout society. We must severely and fairly deal with all breaches of law, promptly punish degenerate and deviant elements, and replace those cadres lacking political quality and economic management capability. We must satisfactorily carry out the task of political and ideological indoctrination and the task of motivating workers and civil servants, bringing into full play the working people's collective mastery, building stable and strong mass organizations, and stirring up a vigorous mass movement for revolutionary action in all establishments. We must step up the emulation movement for carrying out technical innovations, rationally organizing production, and improving economic management in order to achieve high productivity, quality, and efficiency and to effectively struggle against all negative phenomena and enemy sabotage activities.

/We must correctly implement the mechanism of "party leadership, people's collective mastery, and state management" and the one-chief system in economic management in basic units./ Enterprise party committees are responsible for satisfactorily carrying out ideological work, building basic party organizations, doing cadre work, building mass organizations, developing emulation movements in various units, and correctly performing their supervisory functions so as to ensure correct implementation of party lines and policies and state management systems and laws in enterprises.

Under the leadership of party committees and the guidance of trade organizations, workers and civil servants in an enterprise are responsible for building their own unit into a good working collective capable of fulfilling any task.

The director, who directly manages the production and business activities of an enterprise, must be a person really endowed with political quality, capabilities, and experience in production and business management. He must be responsive to new ideas and must respect and develop the role of the party and mass organizations in order to fully and outstandingly fulfill the plan for his enterprise.

The task of guaranteeing the basic economic units' autonomy in production and business must be carried out simultaneously with the task of restructuring and reorganizing production throughout the country in each area and locality to create favorable conditions for promoting economic development and implementing the new managerial system.

Renovating management at basic economic units and renovating general economic management in accordance with economic accounting and socialist business are renovations of a highly revolutionary nature vis-a-vis the entire socioeconomic life and are inseparable from the simultaneous carrying out of the three revolutions. Therefore, we must regard this as an undertaking of the masses. We must motivate and organize a large number of the masses to participate in and implement this constantly. We must change our old-fashioned way of thinking including the mass psychology and must shape a methodology complete with logical and dialectical thinking in conformity with the objective evolutionary law of society and production.

We must attach specific importance to ideological work, especially within leading party and state organs at various echelons and within the contingent of key leadership and management cadres of various economic units. We must urgently cultivate and improve the ideological knowledge of all the people, making them thoroughly aware of and fully agree with those viewpoints and policies outlined in the Political Bureau's (draft) resolution on "Guaranteeing basic economic unites' right to autonomy in production and business," and determined to overcome erroneous and outdated conceptions created by the old-fashioned mode of management and business.

Simultaneously, we must link our organizational work with our ideological work and must, in a resolute and timely manner, replace those leadership and management cadres who are unqualified and incompetent and who are incapable of acquiring and doing new things. Replacing cadres and strengthening the management mechanism at all levels, especially at various economic units, are of great importance for guaranteeing enterprises' right to autonomy in production and business. Through efforts to do ideological and organizational work satisfactorily, we must truly create a high degree of singlemindedness and then generate the strength of the unity of minds and actions of the entire party and people to shift to the new management mechanism.

The Political Bureau's resolution on "guaranteeing basic economic units' right to autonomy in production and business" must first be thoroughly studied and discussed by those sectors and echelons affected if we are to effect a change in their thoughts. We must then use this as a basis for reexamining old regulations, systems, and professional methods and establishing new policies, systems, and regulations. We must urgently and promptly train leadership and management cadres in this renovation of management mechanism.

The gurananteeing of economic units' right to autonomy in production and business must be exercised in urgently and resolutely but uniformly and steadily. All echelons and sectors, from the central down to the local levels, must provide leadership to pilot areas and must involve themselves more deeply in reality to study, inspect, and promptly detect problems if they are to maintain their initiative and creativity while correcting in time those irregularities committed at the grass-roots level.

We must uphold a sense of discipline, and scrupulously comply with party resolutions and the state law. All party and government echelons, party organs, ministries, and economic sectors must correctly maintain discipline governing the submission of reports, the asking for instructions, and the making of suggestions on problems to be presented to the Political Bureau in order to resolve correctly and promptly possible complex developments of the situation as well as those problems which have just arisen in the process of implementation.

All sectors and echelons must frequently review and round up their experience in order to further enrich the providing of guidance for renovation of economic management for basic economic units.

Economic management is an extremely difficult and complex task, especially at a time when we are in the process of moving from small production to large-scale socialist production. We must work boldly and must have the courage to take responsibility. We must organize leadership activities carefully and must work while studying and drawing from experience in order to ensure that our work is well done. We must not show any procrastination or hesitation and must, at the same time, not be subjective, nervous, and hasty such as demanding that every job be done quickly and perfectly. Lenin said: No one is born with the art of management; one must experiment with this art before mastering it. In the initial stage of the transition to socialism, the working class cannot but explore and experiment with this art so it can select new methods that meet the needs of the new objective situation. And we may have to pay for the cost of our new lesson.

BARISAN NASIONAL SCORES LANDSLIDE VICTORY

Details of Sabah, Sarawak Voting

BK021045 Kuala Lumpur RTM Television Service in English 1000 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Voting in the general election got off to a smooth start today with voters in the rural constituencies in Sabah and Sarawak going to the polls. Voters in the urban constituencies in Sabah and Sarawak will cast their votes tomorrow together with the people of peninsular Malaysia and the Federal Territory of Labuan. At stake in Sabah are 18 parliamentary seats -- 2 seats were won unopposed by Barisan Nasional on nomination day. We now cross over to our newsroom in Kota Kinabalu where our correspondent (Iskandar Syam) is standing by with his report on the polling in Sabah.

[Begin (Iskandar Syam) recording] Polling begins at eight parliamentary constituencies in Sabah today -- the first day of the staggered 2-day polling. One hundred fifty five polling centers are open, most of which are in the rural areas. The turnout of voters up to 1600 [0800 GMT] this evening was 62 percent. [end recording]

In Sarawak, 22 seats are being contested with the remaining 2 going to Barisan Nasional on nomination day. Now we cross over to our corrspondent in Kuching (Rafael Kath Abeng)

[Begin recording] In Sarawak, the first day of polling ended at 1600 today without any untoward incident and the overall turnout has been very encouraging. Latest reports said that the turnout was exceptionally good at four polling stations, which recorded an average of 100 voters per hour. These [word indistinct] stations, which were located in what is considered as highly contested constituencies, are Samarahan, Batang Lupar, Betong, and Sarikei. The fine weather reported in most of the areas in Sarawak this morning also contributed to the good turnout.

Polling in the state is staggered over a period of 2 days because of communications problems in the rural areas. Seven hundred eighty seven polling centers were operating from 0800 to 1600 today, almost all of them in the rural areas. They were meant to cater for about 198,000 voters in 20 constituencies. For tomorrow, 766 centers will be operating from 0800 to 1800 in all the 22 contested constituencies. These centers will cater for more than 350,00 voters mostly in suburban and urban areas. [end recording]

Voting Begins Smoothly in Peninsula

BK030418 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in Malay 0330 GMT 3 Aug 86

[Text] As many as 6 million voters in peninsular Malaysia this morning began casting their votes in the country's seventh general elections. More than 6,000 polling stations are open from 0800 to 1830 [0000 to 1030 GMT]. In Sabah and Sarawak, today is the 2d day of balloting.

Voters will vote for 171 parliamentary seats nationwide and 343 state assembly seats in the peninsula. Six parliamentary seats and eight state assembly seats were returned unopposed to the Barisan Nasional on nomination day on 24 July.

Prime Minister Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir, accompanied by his wife Datin Paduka Dr Siti Hasmah, this morning cast his vote at the (Titi Gajah) school polling station in the Kota Setar parliamentary constituency in Kedah. In Melaka, voting was slow in the rural areas but brisk in the urban areas. Deputy Prime Minister Encik Ghafar Baba is scheduled to cast his vote at the [name indistinct] school. As many as 154 polling stations with 388 substations are open throughout Melaka.

In Sabah, 354 polling stations are open for the 2d day of voting. Last night, 80 percent of 158,751 registered voters cast their votes in that state. In Johor, 674 polling stations are open throughout the state. The turnout at most polling stations is satisfactory. Johor Chief Minister Datuk Abdul Ajib Ahmad cast his vote at the [name indistinct] school in Johor Baharu. Vice Chairman of United Malays National Organization Datuk Musa Hitam was among those early voters at the [name indistinct] school.

General Election Results

BK032350 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in Malay 2330 GMT 3 Aug 86

[Text] The Barisan Nasional has won more than two-thirds of the 177 parliamentary seats. Up to now, they had won 134 seats, including 6 seats uncontested on nomination day on 24 July. Barisan Nasional also made a clean sweep of 14 Perlis State Assembly seats, won 35 out of 36 Johor state assembly seats, and obtained more than two-thirds majority in Melaka, Negeri Sembilan, Pahang, Kelantan, Terengganu, Selangor, and Penang.

Prime Minister Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir and Deputy Prime Minister Encik Ghafar Baba won a comfortable majority in their own constituencies. The prime minister won the Kuban Pasu Constituency, while Encik Ghafar won the Jasin Constituency in Melaka.

Up to now, the Democratic Action Party, DAP, has won 21 parliamentary seats, while Malaysian Islamic Party, PAS, won only 1 parliamentary seat, namely in the Pengkalan Chepa Constituency. Independent parties got 4 parliamentary seats.

Mahathir Views Election

BK040026 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in Malay 2330 GMT 3 Aug 86

[Text] Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir says the Barisan Nasional's success in capturing more than a two-thirds majority of parliamentary seats reflects the people's confidence in the government. He added that with the landslide victory, the government hopes to continue carrying out its earlier policies. The prime minister was relieved to see that the general election had proceeded peacefully and smoothly. He was speaking in an interview with Radio Television Malaysia, RTM, a while ago. Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir went on to say:

[Begin recording] I am proud to say that we can hold a general election in the country in a peaceful and perfect manner. This is because our country's people have matured and understand democracy.

I would like to thank all quarters -- the people, opposition parties, police and other security personnel, civil servants, and election commission officials who performed their jobs well. They also prevented any untoward incidents which we feared might happen. I would like to say that the Barisan Nasional's achievement is very satisfying. This is something that we expected earlier. There were some surprise victories in several constituencies, but in terms of the number of seats we have won so far, I thought we would win more or less by such a margin. [end recording]

More on Mahathir Remarks

[Text] [passage indistinct] government policies. The prime minister said because of this he had not given thought to changing any of the policies. He said the victory also showed that the government had always been true to its word, that its policies were proper, and had proved wrong the rumours and allegations about the country's capabilities and integrity of its leaders. He told reporters at the press centre after the ruling National Front's victory that he was satisfied that the prediction of a Front two-third majority win had been realised.

Dr Mahathir said even though there were some "surprise" results, the number of seats (the Front had secured 121 at the time of the interview) the coalition won was satisfactory. He also said it was too early for him to determine new objectives he might pursue, as such an important matter had to be first discussed with his colleagues in the cabinet and with leaders of the component parties in the Front. What was important after winning the election was to ensure the continuation of what was being implemented without anymore interference from quarters wishing to undermine the stability of the government, he said.

On his new cabinet, Dr Mahathir said he would try to make an announcement as soon as possible. He said there was a possibility of some reshuffling, adding that those appointed would be the most suitable for the respective portfolios.

On the general election, he said he was glad it had proceeded peacefully and orderly. Dr Mahathir said this was because the people had realised the importance of practising democracy in a developing and multiracial country like Malaysia. He also said he was glad that the feeling of concern by the government and the authorities that something untoward might occur during the period before the announcement of the election and during the campaigning and polling had not come true. He believed this was because the short campaigning period had not allowed feelings to run beyond an undesirable level. He said that during the period, all parties contesting had been able to impart their message to the people without problems.

The National Front coalition had contested all 177 parliamentary seats and at 0100 GMT Monday the party had garnered 145 seats to continue to maintain a more than two-thirds majority position in the lower house of parliament. The opposition Democratic Action Party (DAP) had won 23 seats, the Party Islam Sa-Malaysia (PAS) one and Independents four. The DAP had used the theme of denying the Front a two-thirds majority as one of its main campaign strategies.

Front Wins 148 of 177 in Parliament

BK040218 Kuala Lumpur RTM Television Network 1 in Malay 0200 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] The following is the latest up-to-the-minute results of the vote counting in Malaysia's general election: Barisan Nasional won 148 parliamentary seats, Pan Malaysian Islamic Party 1 seat, Democratic Action Party 24 seats, and Independent parties 4 seats. The vote counting for the 177 parliamentary seats has been completed with the above tally, while vote counting for the 351 state assembly seats continues.

Front Wins Majority in State Assemblies

[Excerpts] The Barisan Nasional has scored a landslide victory in the 1986 general elections. [passage omitted]

The Barisan Nasional also won a comfortable majority in the state legislative assembly elections. It won 299 state assembly seats, the Democratic Action Party [DAP] won 37 seats and the Pan Malaysian Islamic Party [PAS] won 15 seats. The Barisan Nasional won 14 state assembly seats in Perlis, 35 seats in Johor, 17 in Melaka, 24 in Negeri Sembilan, 37 in Selangor, 33 in Perak, 23 in Penang, 25 in Kedah, 29 in Kelantan, 30 in Terengganu, and 32 in Pahang, for a total of 299 seats.

The DAP won 1 state assembly seat in Johor, 3 in Melaka, 4 in Negeri Sembilan, 5 in Selangor, 13 in Perak, 10 in Penang, and 1 in Pahang. The PAS won 3 seats in Kedah, 10 in Kelantan, and 2 in Terengganu. State assembly elections were not held in Sabah and Sarawak.

An independent candidate won the only parliamentary seat in the Labuan federal territory. Three Barisan Nasional candidates and four DAP candidates captured the parliamentary seats in the Kuala Lumpur Federal Territory. [passage omitted]

Mahathir on Chinese Voting, UK Talks

[Excerpts] Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir says Barisan Nasional's landslide victory in last night's general elections has proved that its policies are proper and all rumors and allegations about the government's performance and its leaders's integrity are nothing but lies. [passage omitted]

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir also said that the Barisan Nasional will carefully study the defeats suffered by two of its component parties in this election. At the same time, both the Malaysian Chinese Association [MCA] and the Gerakan Party must do some soul searching as to why each suffered serious setbacks. The prime minister said it was obvious that the opposition Democratic Action Party, DAP, had captured votes which should have gone to Barisan Nasional component parties. He attributed the defeat of the Pan Malaysian Islamic Party [PAS] to the arrogant attitude of the opposition party, saying that PAS misjudged the feelings of the people and voters because what the people want is the country's stability and peace. [passage omitted]

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir also told newsmen that Malaysia will not raise the issue of economic sanctions against South Africa in a meeting with Britain. Malaysia has stated its posture clearly and will not repeat it. He added that the impact of apartheid had to be borne by the black people in that country, not Britain.

Meanwhile, political observers in the federal capital pointed out that the outcome of the elections indicated the success of the United Malays National Organization in influencing Malay voters to vote for it. At the same time, many Chinese voters decided to vote for the DAP, instead of MCA or Gerakan Party. The outcome also showed that the majority of voters were not interested in voting for smaller political parties.

USSR ENVOY SUMMONED ON GORBACHEV SPEECH

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 1 KYODO -- Japan reminded the Soviet Union anew Friday that its policy of concluding a bilateral peace treaty after a settlement of the northern territorial issue remains unchanged. Takehiko Nishiyama, director general of the ministry's European and Oceanic Affairs Bureau, summoned Soviet Ambassador to Japan Nikolay Solovyev and relayed the Tokyo government's views on a speech Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev made at Vladivostok Monday.

In the speech, Gorbachev announced that six Soviet regiments will be pulled out of Afghanistan before the end of the year. He also said Japan and the Soviet Union should deepen their relations on a sound and realistic footing in a quiet atmosphere free from the past problems.

Foreign Ministry officials quoted Washington as telling Solovyev that Japan's unchanged policy is to settle the northern territorial issue first and then conclude a peace treaty. Japan has been trying to regain the four small islands off Hokkaido that have been under Soviet occupation since the end of World War II in 1945. Nishiyama also reportedly told the envoy that Japan's view differs from that of the Soviet Union which appears to be interested in promoting bilateral relations in the economic field.

The director general was quoted as saying that Gorbachev lacked in proper understanding of the present situation in Japan, as the Soviet leader claimed Japan was reducing its policy of not introducing, manufacturing and possessing nuclear weapons to a mere form and without any substance and that Japan was forming military alliance with South Korea and the United States. However, Nishiyama reportedly said that Japan welcomed Gorbachev stance of attaching importance to Japan. He also relayed Japan's favorable reaction to Gorbachev's desire to visit Japan. Nishiyama said it would be desirable for Gorbachev to visit Japan at an early date so that he will have correct perception of Japan.

The Soviet ambassador was reported to have replied that Japan's rebuttals to the Gorbachev statement were based on speculation and asked that the Tokyo government make judgment from the actual remarks the Soviet Communist Party chief made.

USSR ENVOY PAYS COURTESY CALL ON KURANARI

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 5 KYODO -- Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari suggested to Soviet ambassador to Tokyo Nikolay Solovyev Tuesday that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev should visit Japan this year or by the end of next January, a Foreign Ministry official said. Kuranari also told Solovyev that he would like to meet with his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze, in New York when he attends a United Nations General Assembly meeting in September, the official said. Solovyev, making a courtesy call on Kuranari, said he would convey the requests to his home government.

During the 40-minute meeting, Kuranari said Japan has hopes a Gorbachev visit will be the beginning of reciprocal visits by top leaders of Japan and the Soviet Union, as referred to in Gorbachev's June 16 letter to Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and in his recent speech in Vladivostok, the official said. Kuranari told Solovyev Gorbachev should visit Japan first, before Nakasone goes to Moscow, the official said.

Solovyev told Kuranari it is important to realize reciprocal visits and produce results although the question of whether the first visit is made by Gorbachev or Nakasone is also important.

The foreign minsiter said Japan hopes to improve relations with the Soviet Union but there are "problems" hindering bilateral ties, alluding to the territorial dispute over four Soviet-held islands off northern Japan. Kuranari called for efforts on both sides to solve these problems as early as possible, the official said.

Solovyev said the Japan-Soviet relations have been improving since Nakasone visited Moscow in March last year and Kremlin now attaches importance to ties with Japan, the official said. Better relations between Japan and the Soviet Union, the Soviet envoy said, will also improve relations among Asia and Pacific nations.

1986 Gorbachev Visit Unlikely

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 5 KYODO -- Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is not likely to visit Japan this year, a senior government official said Tuesday. The official, who was speaking on condition of anonymity, was commenting on a proposal made by Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari earlier in the day that Gorbachev come to Japan either by this year end or next January.

The official said Gorbachev is unlikely to make his Japan trip this year as there are strong indications that the United States and the Soviet Union may hold a summit meeting before the end of the year. If Gorbachev is to come to Japan, the earliest possible date would be January, the official said. He also said he believes Moscow is aware that the next summit meeting between Japan and the Soviet Union should take place in Japan.

SOURCES SAY PRC TO HOST SPACE STUDIES FORUM

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 2 KYODO -- China, Japan and the United States will hold a joint meeting on space studies in Beijing June 7-10 next year, according to a government source. This is the first time that China has invited a large group of foreign experts on space development, which is closely linked with the military, the sources said.

China will arrange for forum participants to inspect the Xichang rocket launching site in Sichuan Province and the Xian satellite tracking control center in Shaanxi Province, both closed so far to foreigners. Politicians will hold parallel discussions while the space scientists meet, the sources said. Australia, Canada and Indonesia, which are also doing space development research, will be invited to the Beijing space study forum too, the sources said.

The forum will be backed by the Chinese State Scientific and Technological Commission. But it will be jointly sponsored by private organizations of the three countries -- the Japan Rocket Society, the American Aeronautics Society and the China Space Association -- in consideration of the possible impact on the European Space Agency and the Soviet Union, the sources said.

Tatsuo Yamanaka, vice president of the Japan Rocket Society, visited Beijing in mid-July to discuss plans for the meeting and decide seven agenda items, including (1) satellite telecommunications and development of remote sensing technology in the Pacific area (2) space station research in the Pacific area and (3) development of the next generation rockets for launching satellites.

The Beijing space forum is expected to be attended by Chinese Vice Premier Li Peng and Song Jian, minister of the state scientific and technological commission, the source said. Influential U.S. congressmen on space development policy are also expected to join the forum, and Japan should therefore send senior political figures to it, the source said.

SEMICONDUCTOR MAKERS SIGN TRADE ACCORD WITH U.S.

OW020337 Tokyo KYODO in English 0328 GMT 2 Jul 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 2 KYODO -- Seven major Japanese semiconductor makers and one Japanese subsidiary of a U.S. firm signed a formal agreement Friday (Washington time) with the U.S. Department of Commerce under which the U.S. will suspend its investigation into alleged dumping by the companies of dynamic random access memory (DRAM) chips with a memory capacity of 256 kilobits and above, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said Saturday. The signing of the accord followed a final agreement on semiconductor trade reached Thursday between the two governments.

The seven Japanese manufacturers are NEC Corp., Toshiba Corp., Hitachi Ltd., Mitsubishi Electric Corp., Fujitsu Ltd., Oki Electric Industry Co., and Matsushita Electronics Corp. the U.S. subsidiary is Texas Instruments Japan Corp.

Thursday's Japan-U.S. agreement, aimed at expanding the share of U.S. chipmakers in the Japanese market, called for formal signing of two agreements between Japanese chipmakers and the U.S. Commerce Department as a major condition for the validation of the bilateral accord. On Thursday, the eight Japanese producers and the U.S. department signed a similar agreement involving erasable-programmable read-only memory (EPROM) chips. In exchange for the suspension of the dumping investigations, the chipmakers are required to submit cost-accounting data to the U.S. Commerce Department quarterly.

FUJIO BLAMES U.S. POLICY FOR 'YASUKUNI ALLERGY'

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 5 KYODO -- Education Minister Masayuki Fujio Tuesday slammed policies imposed by the occupation authorities in Japan after World War II, which he said were responsible for the "Yasukuni allergy" among the Japanese today. Fujio said that education policies laid down during the U.S. occupation of Japan, which lasted until 1952, "has given the Japanese people the impression that official visits (by cabinet ministers) to the Yasukuni shrine would be wrong." The shrine is dedicated to Japanese war dead.

The newly installed education minister, addressing an education conference organized by religious groups in Tokyo, said that Japanese education had been twisted or distorted by occupation policies. "It's wrong to think that prewar Japan was all bad and occupation period policies were perfect," Fujio said. He stated that the number of government officials who are critical of occupation period policy is declining. "This is clearly a political problem."

Referring to the Tokyo war crimes trials, held from 1946-48, the education minister asked, "Who gave the victors the right to judge the losers?" He added, "the time has arrived to review the facts in light of international moral principles."

Fujio's remark on the Yasukuni shrine comes only 10 days before the annual ceremony at the shrine on August 15 marking the anniversary of the end of the Pacific war. Official visits by government leaders to the shrine, where besides Japan's war dead those convicted as war criminals during the Tokyo trials are enshrined, have drawn criticism from Japan's Asian neighbors, particularly China and South Korea.

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, who visited the shrine in his official capacity on last year's anniversary as the first postwar government leader to do so, is debating whether or not to attend this year, according to political sources. A number of cabinet ministers are expected to make official visits to the shrine to pay their respects to the war dead.

Shortly after he assumed his cabinet post in July, Fujio was at the center of a controversy over a remark he made concerning a new Japanese history textbook, which had been criticized by China and South Korea as an attempt to gloss over or omit negative aspects of Japan's military actions in Asia before and during the war.

Although he later maintained that he had not been referring to China and South Korea in his remark, the education minister was quoted as having said July 25, "those who complain (about the textbook) should look at themselves to see if they didn't commit similar acts in world history."

DAILY URGES TALKS BETWEEN MILITARY AUTHORITIES

[NODONG SINMUN 2 August commentary: "Talks Between Military Authorities Must Be Held"]

[Text] As is already known, the KPA Supreme Command proposed that talks be held between military authorities of our side, the United States, and South Korea to ease tension in Korea. In this regard, the Minister of People's Armed Forces on 17 June sent letters to the United States and the South Korean side respectively.

In the letters we proposed that talks be held in July and that preliminary contact between working-level representatives of the two sides be held 27 June at Panmunjom to realize the talks. However, the United States and the South Korean side rejected our proposal without giving any convincing reasons [naptukhalmanhan kungo].

In this connection, on 11 July we sent the letter calling for talks at Panmunjom, the place we promised, stressing again the need to hold talks between military authorities. However, the other side refused to receive the letter by cooking up an unjust excuse. Thus, we could only send the letter by broadcasting it. In the second letter, we again called for holding the talks between military authorities during July without fail as we proposed. We then left the date and place for preliminary contact for holding talks to the other side's discretion.

We expected an affirmative response from the other side after we sent the second letter. However, July has now passed and the United States and South Korean side have given no affirmative response to our proposals. We can only say that this is a strange thing [koeihan il] beyond our understanding.

Today nothing is more urgent on the Korean peninsula than to prevent the danger of war and ease tension. The armed forces confronting each other across the Military Demarcation Line have reached the highest number since the war, and an acute situation in which a war could break out because of a minor incident is being created in frontline areas where the armed forces of both sides face each other tensely. No one can deny the danger of war which is near at hand [paktuhan chonhaengui wihom], and the people of the world express deep concern.

We put forth various political measures to relax tension in the past. Even this year, we offered proposals to suspend large-scale military exercises and stop all military exercises while the North-South dialogue is underway. We then requested the United States and South Korean side to respond to our proposals. However, our efforts did not receive the deserved response. The alarming situation [simsangchi anun satae] in which the number of armed forces in South Korea has grown, their equipment has expanded, and military exercises have been staged against us is repeatedly taking place.

If realistic measures are not worked out to ease tension, the Korean peninsula may become a battlefield at any moment. The talks between authorities proposed by us will be the national salvation measures to prevent such a situation from developing and will maintain and consolidate peace. The United States and the South Korean side also say they want to east tension and preserve peace on the Korean peninsula. If this is true, they have no reason to ignore our proposal.

In their reply letters of 21 and 24 June, the United States and the South Korean side said easing tension can be discussed in the MAC, noting that our proposal is related to North-South relations. However, this cannot serve as an excuse for avoiding the talks between military authorities. The MAC is an organization supervising implementation of the Armistice Agreement, as its name implies. Because the functions and authority of the MAC are so tightly limited, it cannot discuss and resolve overall issues to ease tension on the Korean peninsula. At present, the MAC cannot discuss and resolve questions within its own functions related to implementation of the armistice Agreement, to say nothing of issues outside its authority. The fact that the United States and the South Korean side held that easing tension should be discussed at the MAC is nothing but a last resort to escape responsibility for avoiding talks between military authorities and to mislead world public opinion by pretending to be interested in easing tension.

The South Korean side, which avoided military talks to ease tension and for peace and even refused to receive our second letter calling for talks, is raving about resuming dialogue while babbling about peace. This is indeed ridiculous and preposterous.

As for the suspension of North-South dialogue in many domains, which the South Korean puppets claim should be resumed, the responsibility for this rests entirely with the United States and the South Korean side, which suddently broke [choajol] the dialogue by staging the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise against its dialogue partner. The dialogue has not been resumed because the South Korean side is daily staging large-scale war exercises while raving that it will continuously strengthen such joint U.S.-S. Korean military exercises as "Team Spirit" in the future and because it is aggravating tension. The South Korean puppets staged a noisy war exercise racket called "Ulchi-86" throughout South Korean the very next day after raving about the resumption of dialogue, inciting an atmosphere of confrontation and war. Does it make any sense that one can want dialogue while aiming one's rifle at the heart of one's dialogue partner?

The entire course of North-South dialogue up to now shows that the military authorities should sit together to take measures to end military exercises and ease tension before any other talks are held in our country. It is preposterous and nonsensical to rave about the resumption of dialogue while spoiling the atmosphere of dialogue with constant anticommunist confrontation and war maneuvers and while ignoring our peace proposal to take practical measures for easing tension.

Easing tension, consolidating peace, and achieving national reunification peacefully through dialogue and negotiations are the consistent position and policy of our party and the government of the republic. At the same time, this is the unanimous aspiration of all fellow countrymen and the demand of the peace-loving people of the world.

The United States and the South Korean authorities should again ponder the proposal for talks by military authorities made by the KPA Supreme Command and should immediately repsond to this proposal, instead of continuously opposing the aspirations and demands of the people at home and abroad.

If they advance along the path of confrontation and war while continuously refusing to hold talks between military authorities in defiance of our repeated calls, they will be held totally responsible for the consequences arising therefrom. We will continuously watch in the future the attitude of the U.S. and South Korean authorities.

U.S. LURING SOUTH INTO SDI RESEARCH PROGRAM

SK010524 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0506 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 1 (KCNA) -- The aide to the U.S. president in charge of disarmament who showed up in South Korea recently spoke at what they called international scientific forum on the space defense research program, urging South Korea and other "friendly nations" to actively join in the "space defense program" of the United States. This comes under fire in NODONG SINMUN and MINJU CHOSON today. A signed commentary of NODONG SINMUN says:

He flew to South Korea and preached even a space nuclear war program at a time when the voices within the without calling for the conversion of the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free, peace zone are ringing louder than every before. This can never be tolerated.

The U.S. imperialists built in Taegu, South Korea, an aerial electronic observation centre which will command and watch a nuclear war, as part of their "Strategic Defense Initiative." This means that the U.S. imperialists are automatically inveigling South Korea into their "star wars program" as soon as they put it forward. The commentary continues:

In case South Korea joins in the program, it will only suffer an irretrievable sacrifice, making itself a target of a nuclear war. The criminal nature of U.S. imperialism lies in that it is trying to realise its criminal global strategy at the expense of the Korean people by converting South Korea into a theatre of proxy nuclear war and the treacherous nature of the Chon Tu-hwan group lies in their scheme to impose a nuclear scourge upon the territory and the nation by serving U.S. imperialism as its servant for a nuclear war.

CPRF DENOUNCES U.S., ROK CHEMICAL WAR PREPARATIONS

[Information No. 350 by the CPRF Secretariat, issued on 31 July in Pyongyang]

[Text] Recently, instigated by the U.S. imperialists, the South Korean puppets have become even more feverish in making preparations for a chemical war. According to foreign news reports, the traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique has produced some 4.5 million tons of chemical weapons which can be launched through surface-to-surface missiles, 8-inch and 155-millimeter guns, and all kinds of artillery, and has deployed them in areas close to the Military Demarcation LIne. In addition, at air bases in Kwangwon and Kyonggi provinces in South Korea, the clique has deployed germ weapons produced through the cultivation of various bacteria such as cholera, pest, and typhus. By doing so, it is now hatching a criminal plot to hurl them into the northern half of the republic in time of contingency, thus disturbing the rear area of the republic and killing people.

Furthermore, the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique are using chemical weapons in the provocative war exercises to attack our republic. During the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise, they staged a large-scale chemical war exercise in the area of Mt Taebaek in Kangwon Province, South Korea. At the same time, during the "Ulchi-86" war exercise, a chemical, biological, and radiological war exercise was staged and even civilians were forced to put on gas masks and were driven forward in the war exercise commotion.

All these facts show that the chemical war preparation maneuvers sought against our people by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique are reaching a very dangerous stage.

The CPRF sternly denounces the chemical war preparation rackets, which the Chon Tu-hwan ring is staging feverishly under the U.S. imperialists' direction, and brands them as a vicious challenge to all Korean people's wish for alleviation, dialogue, and peace on the Korean peninsula add as an intolerable criminal act against the nation aimed at imposing the catastrophe of nuclear and chemical war on our nation.

At present, all Korean people and the peace-loving peoples of the world are actively supporting our steady stand and rational proposals to achieve alleviation and peace on the Korean peninsula through dialogue and negotiation.

Nonetheless, the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppet clique are refusing our repeated peace initiatives and running amok in making preparations for nuclear and chemical war. This clearly shows that they are actually seeking confrontation and war, while they talk about dialogue and peace.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring's lunatic war preparations -- in which it is attempting to turn the land of the fatherland into a land of nuclear and chemical war and to turn compatriots into miserable victims by introducing the chemical weapons being rejected by other countries and by producing germ and chemical weapons in large quantities -- are a criminal act against the nation that can never be pardoned.

By following the U.S. imperialists' policy of war, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is trying to find a way out of its serious political crisis. However, this will only accelerate its self-destruction. Neither nuclear nor chemical weapons can rescue those who turn their backs on the people. The U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique must turn to the road of alleviation and peace and respond to our proposal for talks between military authorities, instead of trying to find a way out through their adventurous policy of war.

KCNA DENOUNCES 29 JUL MILITARY DRILL IN SOUTH

[Text] Pyongyang August 2 (KCNA) -- The South Korean military fascist clique held the "general contests of night tactical technology" on July 29 with the mobilization of a puppet marine corps, according to a radio report from Seoul.

Letting out bellicose utterances that the "issue of battle is decided at night", the fascist clique incited a war fever with rifle and gun firing.

What cannot be overlooked is that the military racket was staged on the plea of "spiritual arming on the eve of the Asian Games" slated for the coming fall. It reveals that the puppets try to use the international sports games for a sinister political purpose to abuse even sports games in justifying their aggressive war exercise and this gives rise to unanimous resentment among the world's peaceloving people.

ROK REGIME SELLING NATION TO JAPAN, U.S. QUERY

[NODONG SINMUN 4 August commentary: "Chain of Tripartite Alliance Is Being Strengthened"]

[Text] The 24th joint congress of the South Korea-Japan Cooperative Committee was held recently in Tokyo. In a so-called message to the congress, traitor Chon Tu-hwan described it as one giving priority to the trade imbalance and so forth.

However, the puppets and the Japanese reactionaries in actuality played some other games on this pretext. This is shown by the remarks of the two sides at the congress and the joint statement issued after it on the results of the meeting.

The South Korean puppets raved that South Korea and Japan are a common body sharing the same destiny and playing the leading role for security in East Asia, and are also the common strategic body. Thus, they begged for joint action between South Korea and Japan in regional security and intensification of the regional defense posture between the United States, Japan, and South Korea. The Japanese reactionaries also echoed the words of the puppets while raving about reconfirmation and so forth.

The joint action between South Korea and Japan in regional security raved about by them is none other than military collusion, and the strengthening of the U.S.-Japan-South Korea regional defense posture is the strengthening of a tripartite military alliance.

All facts prove that the congress focused on strengthening the part of South Korea and Japan in the U.S.-Japan-South Korea tripartite military alliance, following the U.S. imperialists' strategy of aggression against Asia.

Preventing war and easing tension on the Korean peninsula are one of the actue political issues of the world. At this very time, the South Korean puppets and Japanese reactionaries are conspiring to strengthen military collusion. This is another challenge to our republic and to the peace-loving countries of the world.

What we should not overlook is the pro-Japanese nature of the South Korean puppets and the Japanese reactionaries' ambition to reinvade South Korea ambitions that were more nakedly revealed during the recent congress. The South Korean puppets begged for Japan's assistance in the Asian Games and the Olympics. Thus, they could neither protest against the absurd remarks of the Japanese education minister when he preposterously distorted the history of Korea-Japan relations nor against the issue of the Japanese history textbook.

Rather, they agreed to promote joint academic research on the history of South Korea-Japan relations. This is a ridiculous act designed to conceal the history of the brigandish Japanese aggression against Korea not only at present but also in the future on the pretext of joint research and to extend their humiliating attitude toward Japan.

Even Prime Minister Nakasone, not to mention the Japanese reactionaries, promised assistance to the international games to be held in Seoul and advanced along the path of antagonism against us, while backing the puppets by ignoring the reality on the Korean peninsula. The fact that they said they express their support for the South Korean puppets' efforts to resume dialogue is a good example.

Are the Japanese reactionaries so blind as to have failed to see that North-South dialogue was suspended due to the war exercise rackets of the U.S. imperialists and the puppets and that it is in a crisis because they have continuously aggravated tension, ignoring our peace proposals?

The Japanese reactionaries used a cunning trick to resuscitate the puppets, who were driven to the corner by the people at home and abroad, and to open a road to reinvasion of South Korea by using them as a guide.

From the beginning, the South Korea-Japan Cooperative Committee has been a negotiation table for nation-selling and aggression. During the recent congress, the puppets and Japanese reactionaries have more blatantly challenged the Korean people's cause of peace and reunification.

The Korean people will never tolerate the crimes of the mean nation sellers and the cunning aggressors. The puppets and Japanese reactionaries who are dancing to the tune of the U.S. imperialists' strategy of war will not be safe.

JAPAN HARBORS 'WILD AMBITION' TO REINVADE KOREA

[Text] Pyongyang August 3 (KCNA) -- MINJU CHOSON today denounces the evermore undisguised scheme of the Japanese reactionaries to stage a comeback to Korea. Noting that they are now zealously stepping up the moves to restore the "Monument to Japan-Korea Annexation" in Tokyo to its original state, the commentary says:

The "monument" was a product of the Japanese imperialists' policy of Korean aggression which was built in Tokyo upon the lapse of 25 years since their occupation of Korea. The scheme to restore it fully proves that the Japanese reactionaries who are battened beyond measure militarily and economically mean to realise their wild ambition to reinvade Korea at any cost. Their moves in crying again the slogan of "Korea-Japan annexation" are all the more dangerous because they coincide with their overseas expansion scheme.

Hirobumi Ito, the mastermind of "Korea-Japan annexation", met his miserable end in a foreign land and Tojo, the chieftain of aggression, was brought to stern judgement by history. This must be a serious lesson to Japan. To forget this is tantamount to following in their footsteps. The Japanese reactionaries would better act with discretion, drawing a proper lesson from their bitter defeat in the past.

NODONG SINMUN ON INCREASING 3 AUG CONSUMER GOODS

[NODONG SINMUN 2 August editorial: "Let Us Constantly Increase Production of the 3 August People's Consumer Goods"]

[Text] It has been 2 years since our party began the struggle to produce the 3 August people's consumer goods. Great success has been achieved in producing the 3 August people's consumer goods during this period, thus giving much help to the people's living.

Over the 2 years since the party's measure to drastically increase production of the people's consumer goods in a popular manner was taken, production of 3 August people's consumer goods has increased several times and variety has further increased by tens of thousands of kinds in Pyongyang alone. As a result, 3 August people's consumer goods accounted for 23.1 percent of industrial product sales during the first half of this year. Also, many plants and enterprises have been able to meet the living expenses of their employees with the money earned by producing 3 August people's consumer goods.

The fact that this succes was achieved only by mobilizing reserves without state investment is a fact worthy of genuine pride. This shows how just and greatly vital the party's measure to produce the 3 August people's consumer goods in a popular manner is, and confirms that when the party's policy is upheld and work is carried out as directed by the party, any miracle can be achieved.

When he gave working guidance to the work of the 3 August people's consumer goods direct-sales stores in Pyongyang, the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il recently highly appraised success atained in producing the 3 August people's consumer goods and elucidating the question of continuously expanding and developing the success. All cities, counties, and districts should effect a new turn in the work of producing 3 August people's consumer goods by making the most of success and experience which have already been attained in producing consumer goods. Comrade Kim Chong-il, member of the Political Bureau Presidium and secretary of the party Central Committee, has noted: Daily necessities should be produced not only by special plants but also by many fields of the national economy.

The people's demand for consumer goods is constantly increasing. To smoothly meet this demand, our party pays deep attention to producing 3 August people's consumer goods. By steadily waging the struggle to increase production of the 3 August people's consumer goods while upholding the party's intention, our functionaries and workers should make the party's measure display greater vitality and the people's living more affluent.

What is important in increasing production of the 3 August people's consumer goods is to mobilize the masses and help more people participate in this work with great zeal. The struggle to produce 3 August people's consumer goods is masses-oriented work in which a broad range of the masses should participate. Therefore, the cities, counties, and districts should help the people correctly recognize that this is honorable work designed to provide better living conditions for the people so they will voluntarily participate in this work with interest.

To this end, functionaries shoauld be mobilized first. In such model districts as the Pyongchon District, every functionary of the plants and enterprises, as well as the district functionaries, are mobilized with interest in producing the 3 August people's consumer goods and are vigorously leading the masses. Every city, county, and district functionary should assume responsibility for the production of 3 August people's consumer goods, directly organize this production struggle, and mobilize the functionaries of plants, enterprises, and cooperative farms.

There must be a correct methodology to mobilize the masses. The masses are not moved by just having tasks assigned them and demands made of them. Every functionary should strengthen the work of explanation and propaganda and, at the same time, properly organize diverse programs -- such as prize contests, exhibitions, and (?competitions) to produce trial products, and meetings to discuss experiences -- and have everyone take part in these programs. Thus, the masses should be awakened and mobilized along this course.

A good job must be done to stimulate the will of producers of the people's consumer goods to produce. Our party has undertaken a series of measures to get a broad range of the masses to participate in producing people's consumer goods.

Functionaries in concerned sectors should further stimulate in more people the will to produce by providing them with everything they may need by such methods as establishing reasonable regulations and correct guidance for them to agree on prices in order to induce more people to participate in producing the people's consumer goods and displaying their creativity.

The struggle for the 3 August people's consumer goods requires that everyone work with the mettle of meticulous housekeeping in a manner worthy of the master. Production of the 3 August people's consumer goods begins with finding reserves. Aside from the mettle of meticulous housekeeping, it is inconceivable to expect any success in effectively mobilizing and utilizing waste materials and facilities and various other production reserves.

Our functionaries and working people should see and treat all things as would a true, meticulous housekeeper, considering even a single item of byproduct, waste material, or equipment too precious to throw away, and should find effective ways to use it.

Party organizations at all levels encourage functionaries and working people to open their eyes to the consciousness worthy of a master and to foster consciousness by strengthening political work among the masses and make them emulate examples set by people who are trying to locate more production reserves by encouraging them.

In particular, cities, counties, and districts should see that none of the waste materials and facilities are thrown away by transferring things that are not used in their units to other units and broadly organizing cooperative production.

The problem of production of the 3 August people's consumer goods -- by which even raw materials, materials, and facilities should be solved by mobilizing reserves -- requires functionaries to use their brains and demonstrates meticulous workmanship more than in any other work.

All of the functionaries of the party, administrative, and economic institutions in all cities, counties, and district should locate more reserves of raw materials, materials, machines, and tools and effectively use them by going deep among the masses to stir them up and by coordinating economic management meticulously.

One of the important tasks in increasing production of the 3 August people's consumer goods is to push ahead with this work tenaciously. Since the goal of producing the 3 August people's consumer goods is to more smoothly meet the material and cultural demands of the people, which grow higher with each passing day, it is demanded that the struggle to increase the quantity of goods and their variety and to raise their quality be staged without interruption.

This being the case, functionaries working in this sector should have the mettle to push ahead with implementing the party's policy in a relaxed manner, while maintaining greater consistency than anyone else. Since production of the 3 August people's consumer goods is being pushed ahead with the cities and counties as units, it is important for the party organizations and functionaries in the cities and counties to adhere to this work and tenaciously press forward.

Of course, there can be differences in conditions depending on districts.

However, as has been observed in the case of functionaries of the Nangnang District who have been successful despite unfavorable circumstances, districts that accept the party's demands sincerely and tenaciously press forward have gained conspicuous successes.

All party organizations and functionaries in the cities, counties, and districts should see to it that the party's intentions continue to come to brilliant fruit by adhering to and forcefully pushing ahead with production of the 3 August people's consumer goods in line with the masters charged with implementing the party's policy.

It is important to increase the role of the responsible functionaries of the party, administrative, and economic institutions in the cities, counties, and districts. Responsible functionaries in the cities, counties, and districts bear the duty to responsibly care for the people's lives.

An examination of such advanced units as Tongdaewon, Songyo, and Mangyongdae Districts shows that responsible functionaries of the party, administrative, and economic institutions are adhering to and tenaciously pushing ahead with production of the 3 August people's consumer goods.

Our party demands that responsible functionaries of the party, administrative, and economic institutions in the cities, counties, and districts vigorously push ahead with producing the 3 August people's consumer goods and the work of the direct sales shop by paying great attention to them.

Responsible functionaries in the cities, counties, and districts should tenaciously and substantially advance in their work by deeply realizing that the amount they can increase production of the 3 August people's consumer goods translates at once into the yardstick of their loyalty to the party and their concern for the people. In this way, they should see a change in the production of the people's consumer goods.

KIM TAE-CHUNG PLACED UNDER HOUSE ARREST

[Text] Seoul, Aug 5 (AFP) -- South Korean opposition leader Kim Tae-Chung was placed under house arrest Tuesday to bar him from attending a summer-camp rally organized by his dissidient political group, his aides said. Some 300 members of his dissident organization, the Council for Promotion of Democracy, came by buses to his home in western Seoul to protest against the house arrest and stage a sit-in, witnesses said. But they left for the camp site after the 60-year-old opposition politician emerged from the house, which was surrounded by police, and urged them to end the protest.

It was the 29th time Mr Kim had been placed under house arrest since he returned home from two years of voluntary exile in the United States in February 1985 to lead a campaign for democratic reform. The authorities say such moves are designed to prevent him from breaking the law and being returned to prison. He has been forbidden to engage in politics because of his 1980 conviction and 20-year prison sentence on sedition charges.

Mr Kim was narrowly defeated for the presidency by the late Pak Chung-Hee in 1971. He makes no secret of his intention to run again if an election is held by popular vote next year under constitutional changes to be worked out by a bipartisan parliamentary committee.

STUDENT DEMONSTRATORS CLASH WITH POLICE

[Text] Violent demonstrations were staged by students launching a surprise attack at a police box and setting fire to a police escort car on streets in the outskirts of Seoul over the weekend.

According to a police report yesterday, the demonstrators hurled incendiary bottles and stones toward police forces who fired tear gas bombs.

About 20 combat policemen were reported injured, some seriously, in the clash with the demonstrators.

Noting that the wild demonstrations were staged over the weekend during the summer vacation, the Seoul Metropolitan Police Headquarters [MPH] instructed the police stations to reinforce security around foreign embassies, offices of foreign organizations and public installations.

The MPH focused its attention on the possibility of more violent demonstrations by students in the days ahead to disturb the Asian Games and to create an campus climate supporting the efforts of radical activist students.

About 300 students from Korea, Songgyungwan, Hanyang and 14 other universities waged street protests in Sanggye-dong for one hour beginning at 5 p.m., Sunday, chanting anti-goverment slogans and distributing anti-government leaflets.

Braving a strong police defense, some 150 students rushed toward the police box in Sanggye-dong and shattered windows and destroyed some interior facilities by throwing stones and incendiary bottles.

Four policemen, including Om Chae-yong, 21, were injured in the exchange of bombs and stones.

Students were learned to have gathered in Sanggye-dong after getting information about the demonstration from leaflets posted on walls in washrooms and in libraries at the universities.

Sixty-three students, including 12 Hanyang and nine Songgyungwan students, were taken by police for investigation.

A police car was burned Saturday evening when about 300 students from universities in Seoul staged demonstrations on streets in Kaebong-dong for 30 minutes.

Chong Chan-ki, 41, a policeman at Kuro Police Station, and 19 others were injured in the protests.

NO DISCUSSES PARTY POLITICAL STRATEGIES

SK050028 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 5 Aug 86 p 4

[Text] Chairman No Tae-u of the ruling DJP attached unusual importance to the month of August in political aspects, during a weekly meeting of leading party officials yesterday.

He told the party officials, "We will have to finalize our draft amendment to the Constitution within this month and should also work out programs to give shape to the results of the camping rally at Mt. Togyu."

"So, we have to keep in mind that the people's concern and expectation are concentrated on our party," he said.

No also asked them to "cope effectively with possible political offensives from the opposition camp" while the five House standing committees are in session this week.

He warned of the possibility that the panel sessions might be capitalized on as a forum for the opposition camp's "political propaganda."

The DJP chairman particularly told party officials to closely cooperate with the administration about the recent U.S. pressure to appreciate the value of Korean currency won against the U.S. dollar.

He observed that a hike of the won's value against the greenback may deal a decisive blow to the nation's exports which are now taking a favorable turn and improving the balance of international payments.

CHAWALIT DENIES HELPING FORM COALITION

[Text] Army Commander-in-Chief Gen Chawalit Yongchaiyut yesterday denied reports that he played a role in forming the coalition to be led by Premier Prem Tinsulanon.

"It's not true," he said when asked by reporters at the Parliament about the reports that he had coordinated among the parties which will form the coalition.

And when further asked whether the new coalition is taking shape, he replied: "I don't know."

Chawalit also said that there was nothing special about his meeting with Young Turk officer Col Prachak Sawangchit who called on him Sunday. "I didn't tell him to do anything. I only urged him to be a good politician," he said.

Prachak said that he had told Chawalit of the increasing opposition to Prem Tinsulanon's nomination as premier.

Chawalit has repeatedly declared that the army will not interfere in politics.

PHICHAI ON 'PLOT' TO BLOCK PREM REAPPOINTMENT

[Excerpts] Democrat leader Phichai Rattakun yesterday revealed a plot by a political party to block Prem Tinsulanon's reappointment as premier by nominating him for the post instead. But Phichai said he immediately rejected the offer.

Meanwhile, Maj Gen Praman Adireksan, the chairman of the Chat Thai Party's advisory board, yesterday backed down from his stand against Prem saying that he will comply with his party's decision on the question of the premiership.

Phichai disclosed the anti-Prem move, purportedly masterminded by the United Democratic Party [UDP] leader Buntheng Thongsawat, during a meeting of the Democrats yesterday, according to Democrat sources.

The meeting of 99 Democrat MPs at the party head office also voted 74-22 to nominate deputy leader Chaun Likphai as House speaker. [passage omitted]

The sources said that Phichai's statement on UDP leader Buntheng's plot to sound out the MPs' opinions on the next prime minister touched off criticism from some Democrats.

Informed sources said that the opponents to Gen. Prem's nomination to premiership had approached Phichai and offered to back him as prime minister during the first chairmanship of Buntheng in his capacity as the seniormost MP in the new House.

The anti-Prem MPs have also approached splinter and medium-sized parties for their support for the proposal to nominate Phichai in the first House session. [passage omitted]

LOWER HOUSE ELECTS SPEAKER DESPITE WALKOUT

BK041258 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1200 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] The first ordinary session of the House of Representatives was held at 1640 today at the National Assembly. Miss Bang-on Im-ocha, secretary general of the National Assembly, invited Buntheng Thongsawat, United Democratic Party MP from Lampang Province, as the oldest MP at the meeting, to act as temporary chairman. The chairman opened the meeting and invited the MP's to take an oath of allegiance.

A number of MP's then proposed a postponement of the selection of the house speaker and deputy speakers until tomorrow, but another group of MP's insisted that the selections be made today. The chairman disagreed with the meeting being held today and staged a walkout together with a number of MP's. Since a quorum still remained, the meeting continued, and Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, Social Action Party MP from Bangkok, who is the second oldest MP, was invited to take over as temporary chairman. The meeting then proceeded to elect the house speaker and deputy speakers.

The results are as follow: Chuan Likphai, Democrat Party MP from Trang Province, was elected house speaker; Chumphon Sinlapa-acha, Chat-Thai Party MP from Suphan Buri Province, was elected first deputy house speaker; and Mai Sirinawakun, Social Action Party MP from Kalasin Province, was elected second deputy speaker. The meeting adjourned at 1725.

MP's Want Election Nullified

BK050119 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 5 Aug 86 pp 1, 3

[Text] Parliamentary secretary general Bang-on Im-ocha was heavily criticised for her handling of the House proceedings yesterday which many MPs said should be declared null and void.

Former House Speaker and Progressive Party leader Uthai Phimchaichon said yesterday's elections of the House Speaker and deputies should be nullified because the acting chairman of the meeting, United Democratic Party [UDP] leader Buntheng Thongsawat, had already ordered it adjourned until next week.

Mr Buntheng was chosen to chair the Lower House meeting yesterday because he is the most senior MP.

Mr Uthai said he did not question Mr Buntheng's motive for ordering the adjournment and on principle Mr. Buntheng's decision should have been respected because he had full authority over the meeting.

"Mr Buntheng had exercised his authority by ordering the meeting adjourned, so on principle the meeting was terminated. The meeting (which continued under the chairmanship of Social Action Party leader ACM [Air Chief Marshal] Sitthi Sawetsila), therefore, could not be right and should be nullified," Mr Uthai said.

Suam Thai Party leader Narong Wongwan said the problem in the House yesterday was unprecedented and should be considered "irregular".

"Legal experts should interpret if it is in conformity with the law," he said.

Former Deputy House Speaker and Ruam Thai Party Secretary-General Piyanat Watcharaphon said Miss Bang-on had no authority to direct the meeting after Mr Buntheng left his seat.

He said that under the meeting Regulation No. 10 the parliamentary secretary general was in charge of setting Parliament's meeting agenda and other administrative duties. "So what right has she to direct the meeting to go on when it was already ordered closed by the chairman (Mr Buntheng)?"

Mr Piyanat said the Regulation No. 18 cited by Miss Bang-on to continue the Lower House meeting was applicable only in case the meeting had not elected a chairman.

Regulation No. 18 gives authority to the MPs to appoint the most senior member of the House of Representatives to chair the meeting in the absence of the chairman to elect the House Speaker and his deputies.

Since the chairman (Mr Buntheng) had already been appointed, the parliamentary secretary general had no more duty in the meeting, Mr Piyanat reasoned.

Community Action Party leader Bunchu Rotchanasathian also said Miss Bang-on's conduct in the meeting was not in line with the meeting regulations.

"I'm not a lawyer, but this may not be right," he said and added that by allowing the meeting to continue under the new chairmanship it might set a bad precedent for future meetings.

Mr Bunchu said he did not care what effects the adjournment might have on the election of the House Speaker, but since the order for adjournment had already been made it should have been respected.

Mr Buntheng said he did not see any possible damage in ordering the adjournment of the House meeting yesterday.

He added that his action was not a dirty political trick to create disorder.

He said that it was against tradition for the Lower House to convene right after the Royal ceremony to open Parliament.

UDP deputy secretary general Phinit Chansurin said the appointment of House Speaker and his deputies was a very important issue and all the parties should have their say in the matter instead of only the major parties expected to be in the coalition government.

Prachakon Thai Party leader Samak Sunthorawet said before the opening of Parliament that he did not agree with the procedure of electing the House Speaker and deputies before the appointment of the prime minister.

Mr Samak said the prime minister should be named first so he could form his Cabinet and then the House Speaker and his deputies could be elected.

"It happened before that the House Speaker had turned to side with the opposition. I do not know who is behind today's move and why it has to be done today," said Mr Samak.

Newly-elected House Speaker Chuan Likphai said Mr Buntheng's move had been anticipated by the Democrat Party so countermoves had been worked out to foil his tricks.

But he admitted that he was "not too happy to get elected in such a fashion."

HAN ON QUALIFICATIONS FOR INTERIOR PORTFOLIO

BK050305 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 5 Aug 86 p 1

[Text] Democrat Party deputy leader Gen Han Linanon has received some military support to take up the Interior portfolio.

Party sources said Gen Han had been convinced by a powerful Army figure to take over as interior minister, a post for which permanent secretary Phisan Munlasatsathon has also been tipped.

Gen Han said he had offered his services for the post and was confident his experience in maintaining peace in the South would be of use.

"The person who will become interior minister should have a good knowledge of the people's problems. I'm confident that I can handle their problems because I used to do it successfully in the South," said the former Fourth Army commander.

Gen Han, the architect of the "Peaceful South" project, said he did not expect any problem in the present efforts to form a coalition government. He expected Gen Prem Tinsulanon to have a say in any problem which may arise during the process.

The Democrats, he said, expected a quota of more than five ministries, with Chat Thai and the Social Action Party getting two each.

Gen Prem was likely to get the Finance, Defence and Prime Minister's Office, said Gen Han, who expected the formation of the Cabinet to be completed in a week.

TRADE OFFICIAL VIEWS NEW MULTIFIBER ARRANGEMENT

BK050209 Bangkok THE NATION in English 5 Aug 86 pp 17, 18

[Excerpt] The new five-year multifibre arrangement (MFA) gives Thai textile exports security, a senior Commerce Ministry official said yesterday, despite its stricter and controversial provisions.

Oranut Osathanon, director general of the Department of Foreign Trade, said the MFA would protect Thai exports from competition from Hong Kong, South Korea, Taiwan or China -- competiton that Thailand would not be able to withstand under a system of free trade.

Moreover, she said, the signing of the MFA would reduce the chances of the Jenkins Bill -- which would limit textile imports into the United States -- receiving enough Congressional votes tomorrow to override the U.S. president's veto.

The stricter provisions, particularly the coverage of new fibres such as ramie, linen and silk blends, which have led some countries such as India and China to consider whether they should refuse to sign the MFA, will not adversely affect Thailand, she said, because Thailand exports very little of these textiles.

Fifty-four countries signed the MFA on August 1, following ten days of final negotiations. They agreed to include the new fibres at American insistance because of increased imports into the United States. Oranut said the signatories agreed because of the threat of the Jenkins Bill, officially called the Textile and Apparel Trade Enforcement Bill. [passage omitted]

RADIO REPORTS 'EXCERPTS' OF GORBACHEV SPEECH

[Text] On 28 July, in Vladivostok in the Soviet Far East, speaking at a ceremony to present the Order of Lenin to this city, Comrade Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, dealt with many important issues concerning the situation in the Soviet Union as well as various international issues. We now present to you excerpts [trichs] from the major contents of Comrade Gorbachev's address.

Expressing his views at the order presentation ceremony, Comrade Gorbachev discussed the domestic situation since the 27th CPSU Congress. He clearly pointed out the positive changes that have begun to take place in the economy; the greater dynamism of various economic processes; the enhanced tempo of production development and labor productivity; the improved performance of the machine-building sector, of the fuel-energy, agricultural, and industrial complexes, of the ferrous metal industry, and of a number of other sectors; and the better fulfillment of social tasks. Comrade Gorbachev called on all people to guard against complacency. He pointed out that implementation of the most important economic, social, and organizational measures began only recently.

Comrade Gorbachev dealt in detail with questions of economic development in the Soviet Far East and set forth the task of turning this region into a highly developed national economic complex. He considered a fuller use of the ocean resources and the abundant mineral resources of the coastal region and the acceleration of the development of the Far Eastern region's fuel-energy complex to be the most important trends of economic activities. He clearly pinpointed the need to employ the Far Eastern region's potentials to promote economic cooperation with the Asian and Pacific countries.

Comrade Gorbachev devoted a noticeable part of his address to various international issues. He said: A perception of the necessity of peace for all people is strongly permeating the consciousness of nations, even in those places where governments still continue to regard weapons and war as a political means. This is because, for everyone, nuclear war will not be a clash between two blocks or two opposing forces but will lead to a global catastrophe, and human civilization will be threatened with annihilation.

Comrade Gorbachev clearly stated: The Soviet initiatives aimed at promoting nuclear disarmament, substantially reducing conventional weapons and armed forces, exercising control, and achieving a healthier international atmosphere have won the support of the countries in the socialist community and the developing nations. Large circles of social activists and even representatives of realistic-minded Western business circles have paid serious heed to these initiatives. Meanwhile, in many capitalist countries, forces that are blindly hostile to socialism and enrich themselves by waging war continue to reign supreme. The U.S. ruling circles and some of their allies have sought to portray the Soviet initiatives as more propaganda ploys or as beneficial only to the Soviet Union.

Comrade Gorbachev went on to stress the importance and role of the October Revolution and of socialist revolutions in various countries of the Asia-Pacific region. Socialism is a factor inseparable from the major and difficult changes in this region. As a result of the success of the great Chinese revolution and after a new social regime had been firmly established in Mongolia, in Korea -- whose people have clearly shown an extraordinarily dauntless will in the struggle for their motherland's socialist future-- and thereafter in Vietnam and Laos, socialism has occupied strong positions in Asia.

However, it is also in Asia that socialism has run up against the fiercest and most cynical resistance. Vietnam is the most shining example of this. Vietnam's heroic experience and the lessons of its victories over imperialism have once again accentuated the invincible strength of the conceptions of freedom and socialism.

However, we also note many other things in Asia and Oceania. There, the dignity of nations is outraged by colonialism, the consequences of poverty, ignorance, and backwardness, and, together with them, deeply seated prejudices are still maintained to foment mistrust and hatred among people of different nationalities, including those living together within a nation. Imperialism has taken advantage of the difficulties and vestiges of the past to provoke regional conflicts and massacres among different ethnic and religious groups and cause political instability.

Referring to the Soviet stand on establishing new, equitable relations in Asia and the Pacific, Comrade Gorbachev said:

The Soviet Union is also an Asia-Pacific country. The complex issues of this large region closely concern the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union is directly involved in these issues. This also decides the calculated and calibrated viewpoint toward this large part of the world where there are so many different countries and nations. And our way of raising the issues concerning this region is based on the recognition and understanding of the outstanding realities here. At the same time, our interests consist of neither the ambition to have certain prerogatives or special positions, nor the selfish bid to consolidate our own security at the harm of others, nor the seeking of benefits detrimental to others. We seek interests in the pooling of efforts and in cooperating on the basis of total respect for the right of each nation to live according to its own choice and to independently settle its own problems under peaceful conditions.

We adopt the stand to jointly establish new, equitable relations in Asia and the Pacific. It is necessary to admit that the process of militarization that increases the danger of war in this region of the world is starting off at a dangerous speed. The Pacific is being turned into a zone of military and political confrontation; and this is the very cause for the nations living here feeling more and more worry with each passing day. This also makes us worry in all fields, including the security aspect of the Asian part of our country.

In the Soviet Union's foreign policy, the Asia-Pacific region is an integral part of the general line of the CPSU for its international activities, which was charted at the April 1985 party Central Committee plenum and the 27th Party Congress. Nevertheless, a line is not a formula that can be applied under all circumstances. More correctly, it consists of principles and methods based on experience. Proceeding from this, we can visualize what the process of ensuring international security and coordinating actions for peace in this vast region would be like.

First, implementing the principled line of the 27th Party Congress, the Soviet Union will strive to strengthen its relations with all countries in this region without any exception. We will strive to consolidate friendship and multifaceted relations with the MPR, the DPRK, the SRV, the LPDR, and the PRK. We consider relations built on the principles of equality and solidarity with our friends an integral part of the common system of security in Asia and the Pacific. For instance, together with the leadership of the MPR, we are now looking into the question of withdrawing a considerable part of the Soviet forces from Mongolia.

Speaking in a city close to the PRC, I want to refer to the main point of our relationship with that country. This relationship is of special importance owing to a series of factors. First, it is because we are neighbors. We share the longest land border in the world; and therefore, we as well as our children will have to live next to each other forever. However, things do not stop there naturally. History has placed on the shoulders of the Soviet and Chinese peoples a very important mission. In recent years, marked improvements have been made in our relationship. I want to affirm that the Soviet Union is ready, at any time and at any level, to discuss in the most serious manner with China the problems concerning supplemental measures aimed at creating an atmosphere of good neighborliness. We hope that in a not distant future, the border separating -- I only want it to be a border joining -- us will become a border of peace and friendship.

In relations with Japan, there are signs of a change for the better; and we hope that such a change will take place.

We are clearly aware that the United States is a big country in the Pacific. Obviously, without the United States and its participation, it would be impossible to resolve the issue of security and cooperation in the Pacific region in a way acceptable to all countries in this region. It is regrettable that until now, Washington has yet to show its readiness regarding this issue; and it has not even considered serious talks on the subject of the Pacific. And even if this subject was raised, the United States would steer it toward the shopworn clamor about the Soviet menace and threaten to make war in order to further strengthen this myth.

Everyone understands our views concerning the United States. We support relations of peace, good neighborliness, equality, cooperation, and mutual interest. We have much potential for cooperation both in the Far East and the Pacific region. Touching on the United States, I would like to say more about the most important problem in the relations of the two countries at present -- the problem of stopping the arms race. After the meeting in Geneva, the Soviet Union has made many appropriate proposals for the entire issue of arms reduction and elimination as well as measures to control this process. However, we have heard no concrete response from the U.S. side thus far. In dealing with us, they use their old stand set forth by them before the Geneva conference.

We have proposed, on a long-term basis, the convening of a Pacific conference similar to the Helsinki Conference with the participation of all countries in the Pacific region.

In concluding his important speech, Comrade Gorbachev talked about the Soviet stand on solving regional issues. He said: Regarding Afghanistan, I will mention that later. Now, we will concentrate on Southeast Asia and Cambodia. The Cambodian people have faced heavy losses; their territory, cities, and villages were destroyed several times by U.S. bombing. Cambodia, after much hardship and suffering, has gained the right to choose its own friends and allies. We cannot let Cambodia face tragedy as in the past nor let people in far away capitals -- even the United Nations -- determine the fate and destiny of Cambodia. The Cambodian issue as well as other issues in Southeast Asia depend, in many respects, on the normalization of relations between China and Vietnam. A question that must be determined by governments and leaderships of these two sovereign countries.

In our views, there is no insoluble obstacle for establishing acceptable relations between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries. With their goodwill and without interference from the outside, they can solve their own problems which would also be beneficial to the mutual security of Asia. In this context, not only the dangerous tension in the Korean peninsula can be eliminated, but also the national problem of the entire Korean people can be solved. Stemming from the real interests of Korea, there should be no rational reason for rejecting the serious talks proposed by the DPRK.

Now, regarding the Afghan issue, from the forum of the 27th CPSU Congress we declared that we are ready to withdraw the Soviet troops from Afghanistan in accordance with the proposal made by the Afghan Government. As you comrades are well aware, our party has consistently maintained this principle both in words and in deeds. After evaluating the present situation and exchanging views with the Afghan Government, the Soviet leadership has adopted a decision -- the contents of which, I am officially announcing today -- that by the end of 1986 the Soviet Union will withdraw from Afghanistan six regiments of Soviet troops -- one tank regiment, two engineer regiments, and three artillery regiments together with their arms and equipment. These military units will be moved back to their former bases in the Soviet Union. All who follow this issue will recognize this development. However, those who encourage and provide money for the undeclared war against Afghanistan and carry out this war by orders from their own country should realize that if the interference to oppose the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan continues, the Soviet Union will not abandon this friendly neighbor in its misfortune. The international solidarity between the Soviet and Afghan peoples as well as the Soviet interests and security are forces that totally oppose this interference.

The Soviet nation calls on all Asian and Pacific countries to strengthen their cooperation for peace and security. All those who wish for such achievements or hope for a better and more beautiful future for their nations will find us to be goodwill negotiators and sincere friends.

RADIO CITES NHAN DAN EDITORIAL ON GORBACHEV SPEECH

[30 July NHAN DAN Editorial: "A Noble Example in Striving for the Cause of International Peace, Security, and Cooperation"]

[Text] Comrade Gorbachev, general security of the CPSU, made an extremely important speech on 28 July 1986 in Vladivostok on the Pacific coast, which has evoked the biggest repercussions in the region and the entire world. This speech reflects the Soviet Union's just stand and noble sense of responsibility regarding urgent international issues.

In the continuing tense international situation created by U.S. imperialism, Comrade Gorbachev once again appealed for checking the arms race, ending the nuclear madness, destroying nuclear weapons, and making unremitting efforts to seek political solutions to regional conflicts. These are major issues now before mankind, urgent matters of life and death for Europe, Africa, America, and Asia.

The ugly U.S.-led imperialist forces have been striving to counterattack the revolutionary forces in the most drastic manner. U.S. imperialism has publicly declared its anti-socialist crusade and frenziedly engaged in a nuclear arms race on earth. It is striving to militarize outer space and attempting to use its expeditionary corps to restart the regional war against movements for national liberation and independence, thus causing unprecedented tension in the history of international relations.

The great successes in perfecting socialism and the goodwill activities of the Soviet Union and the socialist community aimed at repelling the danger of a nuclear war for the sake of a lasting peace and man's survival, have proved the great role, noble example, and decisive impact of the Soviet Union and other socialist countries in the historical confrontation between the world's sociopolitical systems and in the struggle between peace and war and between revolution and counterrevolution.

In his speech in Vladivostok, Comrade Gorbachev put forward his clear view and important peace initiatives for the Asia-Pacific region, including such big countries as the Soviet Union, the United States, India, China, Japan, Vietnam, Mexico, and Indonesia.

The Asia-Pacific region, where the bloodiest and longest wars and the most profound changes have taken place over the past more than four decades now, has remained an area of the toughest struggle. Not being reconciled to defeat, the United States, imperialism, and other reactionary forces are now coordinating their efforts to intensify their military strength in this region.

To realize its neoglobalism U.S. imperialism has put forward its extremely reactionary doctrine for Asia and the Pacific, with the aim of maintaining its imperialist position, developing hegemonism, and impeding and opposing revolutionary movements and the ongoing new changes in this important, increasingly important, region.

We are deeply touched by Comrade Gorbachev's high appraisal of the Vietnamese people's victorious struggle against imperialism in this region. This once again displayed the invincible strength of freedom and socialist ideology.

Opposed to the reactionary strategy, Comrade Gorbachev, in his speech in Vladivostok, once again clearly demonstrated the Soviet Union's policy, propositions, and peace initiatives for the Asia-Pacific region. This embodies a principled stand on the peaceful coexistence of countries with different social systems as well as the Leninist foreign policy adopted by the 27th CPSU Congress.

Our people warmly welcome and fully support Comrade Gorbachev's 28 July statement and the Soviet Union's correct position and series of important new proposals for establishing new fair relations and creating an atmosphere of peace and stability in the Asia-Pacific region, in response to the aspirations and interests of various nations in the region.

After reaching agreement with Afghanistan, the Soviet Union announced a partial withdrawal of troops from that country, thus clearly reflecting, through concrete deeds, its goodwill for peace and its constructive attitude. As everyone knows, the U.S. imperialists and reactionaries pursue an international terrorist policy toward other nations which have chosen the path of independence and are waging an undeclared war against Afghanistan in an attempt to dominate the world and achieve social revanchism. Such acts violate international law and cause the world situation to become more strained and dangerous.

With the Soviet Union's valuable and generous assistance, the Afghan revolution has continued to develop and scored certain economic achievements. The social foundation of the people's revolutionary administration has been increasingly expanded and consolidated, thus creating conditions for the Soviet Union to partially withdraw its troops and creating a favorable atmosphere for reaching a political solution. However, if interference in and opposition to the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan continue, then the Soviet Union will resolutely help the Afghan people defend their revolutionary gains.

Comrade Gorbachev also expressed his views on the situation in Southeast Asia and Cambodia as well as on the Soviet Union's relations with our country and with the Indochinese and other countries in the region, in the hope of establishing relationships beneficial to the common security in Southeast Asia and Asia. Vietnam has also repeatedly expressed its good will and sense of responsibility in this regard.

In the current complicated situation in the Asia-Pacific region, where peoples desire to live in an atmosphere of peace, stability, good neighborliness, and friendship, Vietnam, the Soviet Union, and other fraternal socialist countries have repeatedly reiterated their stance for maintaining and promoting political dialogues and continuing to seek possibilities for limiting arms, improving the international situation, and promoting constructive cooperation among various countries.

We have also repeatedly pointed out that our people, as always, cherish the traditional friendship between the peoples of Vietnam and China. The responsibility for the worsening relations between the two countries and the continuing tension along the Vietnamese-Chinese border rests completely with China. If China genuinely and sincerely wants peace and better relations with its neighboring countries, it should immediately give up its policy of hostility toward Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries and sit down with Vietnam to discuss and settle the outstanding problems in their bilateral relations, in order, first of all, to stabilize the situation along the common border and create favorable conditions for the normalization of relations between the two countries, thereby contributing to turning Southeast Asia and Asia into a region of peace, stability, and cooperation.

Firmly allying themselves with the fraternal peoples of Laos and Cambodia and closely uniting and cooperating in all fields with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries, our people are determined to positively contribute to the common struggle for the consolidationg of peace and security and the promotion of mutual understanding and cooperation among various nations.

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 31 July article: "Just Stand, Lofty Responsibility"]

[Text] On 28 July in his extremely important speech in Vladivostok on the shores of the Pacific, Comrade Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU, once again expressed the Soviet Union's just stand full of goodwill and a high sense of responsibility toward hot international issues, especially those in Asia and the Pacific. In today's era, there currently arises an imperative demand to stop the arms race, put an end to the danger of a destructive nuclear war, eliminate mass-killing weapons, and persistently seek political solutions to regional conflicts.

It is against this very background that Comrade Gorbachev's vigorous assertion in his Vladivostok speech of the Soviet Union's viewpoints and peace initiatives, which are of global significance and closely related to the entire world as well as to all countries in different regions from Europe to Asia, has proved the Soviet Union to be a firm pillar and a shining example in the struggle against warmongering and aggressive forces and for the defense of lasting peace and the life of people on earth -- the common home of all nations.

Comrade Gorbachev's speech demonstrates the deep concern of the Soviet party, state, and people over Asia and the Pacific where there are many big countries, including the Soviet Union which is directly linked to the complicated and hot issues of this immense region that covers almost half of our planet. Asia and the Pacific are now a region with a dynamic and multiform development on the revolutionary and progressive road. Nevertheless, it is also here that the imperialists and reactionary forces are feverishly launching their counterattacks.

U.S.-led imperialism is turning this region into a place of political and military confrontation and a hostage of a destructive nuclear war. They are also capitalizing on the difficulties and vestiges left behind by the past to create local conflicts. Nurturing great ambitions, the U.S. imperialists have put forth a very dangerous and reactionary Asia-Pacific strategy in an attempt to set up a second front after Western Europe, spearheaded at socialism and the national liberation and independence movements. The dark scheme of the United States is to draw the countries in this region into a joint economic cooperation structure called the Asia-Pacific community under the complete control of the United States while gradually forming a close NATO-type military alliance. According to Washington's calculations, if such a situation could be brought about, the United States would gain military superiority in its global strategy.

It is also worth noting that in order to realize the aforementioned strategic objectives, the U.S. imperialists have cunningly raised a hue and cry about the threat of communist aggression and the danger of Soviet expansion from the Soviet Union, Vietnam, and the DPRK, thus inciting military confrontation and causing instability in each country as well as in each region. For decades now, such U.S. actions as using Pakistan to foster and abet counterrevolutionary forces against Afghanistan, colluding with the Chinese expansionists to oppose Vietnam, using Thailand as a sanctuary for the Khmer reactionary remnants in exile to wage a guerrilla war against the PRK, interfering in the internal affairs of the Philippines, and so forth have provided ample proof to lay bare the United States' odious designs.

Contrary to the reactionary strategy of the United States, the policy and peace initiatives of the Soviet Union toward the Asia-Pacific region are the manifestation of the principled policy adopted at the 27th CPSU Congress; a noble example of peaceful coexistence among nations of different social systems; and a change in the way of thinking toward the question of war and peace, the defense and security of all nations, and international security. From Vladivostok, Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev has put forth a series of new and important Soviet initiatives aimed at building new and equitable relations and an atmosphere of peace and stability beneficial to all countries in Asia and the Pacific, thereby meeting the aspirations and basic interests of the nations in the region.

Contrary to the U.S. policy of military confrontation, the Soviet Union calls on all nations in Asia and the Pacific to cooperate for peace and security. The Soviet Union has proposed the convening of a Pacific conference just like the Helsinki one with the participation of all nations touching the bank of this ocean and is committed to developing its relations with all nations in the region. It has participated in finding solutions to regional issues, such as problems concerning Southeast Asia and Cambodia, Vietnam-China relations, the dangerous tension on the Korean peninsula, the elimination of nuclear weapons, the reduction of activities of naval fleets in the Pacific, as well as reduction of armed forces and conventional arms in Asia and so forth. The Soviet Union has always showed its attitude of goodwill. The fact that the Soviet Union has agreed with the Afghan Government to withdraw six regiments of its troops and their equipment from Afghanistan by the end of 1986 demonstrates the Soviet Union's Leninist foreign policy of peace.

In his statement in Vladivostok, Comrade Gorbachev also dealt with the situation in Southeast Asia, in Vietnam, and relations between Vietnam and the other countries in Indochina and in the region. The Vietnamese people are deeply moved by and proud of the statement by Comrade Gorbachev that Vietnam's heroic experiences and its lessons of victory over imperialism once again demonstrate the invincible strength of the ideology of freedom and socialisim. Comrade Gorbachev expressed his hope that Vietnam and China as well as the Indochinese and ASEAN countries will be able to normalize their relations which would be beneficial to the mutual security of Southeast Asia and Asia as a whole.

The Vietnamese people and armed forces warmly welcome and fully support the 28 July statement by Comrade Gorbachev with the aim of consolidating peace and security and promoting broad and equitable relations among the nations of Asia and the Pacific. This statement is a great encouragement to the revolutionary and socialist forces and forces of national independence, democracy, progress, and peace in this largest region of our planet.

Closely uniting with the Soviet Union, the Vietnamese people and armed forces, together with fraternal peoples ofd Laos and Cambodia, are determined to build Southeast Asia in particular, and Asia and the Pacific in general, into a zone of peace, security, friendship, and cooperation.

VNA CARRIES PHAM VAN DONG TASS INTERVIEW

OW041600 Hanoi VNA in English 1523 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA August 4 -- "'Having made great sacrifices in the struggle for national liberation and defence, the Vietnamese people greatly cherish peace, friendship and cooperation with all countries and nations in the world, especially those in Southeast Asia, Asia and the Pacific," said Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong in an interview with a TASS correspondent in Hanoi recently.

Following are the questions and answers at the interview:

Question: In his address at Vladivostok on July 28, C.P.S.U. General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev presented a major plan for economic, social and cultural development in the Soviet Union's far east region. How do you assess this plan?

Answer: The major plan for economic, social and cultural development in the Soviet Union's far east region is an important part of the strategy adopted by the 27th C.P.S.U. Congress aimed at quickly boosting the Soviet Union's socio-economic development. This integrated and large-scaled programme is to make the Soviet Union's far east region a cluster of highly developed economy in harmony with vigorous social and cultural development. The materialization of this programme will bring into play the great potentialities of this region in the distribution of workforce in the Soviet Union and in international domain, thus contributing to successfully implementing the objectives set out by the 27th CPSU Congress to create a new turning-point in the Soviet Union's socio-economic development.

The Socialist Republic of Vietnam, like the other two Indochinese countries, has striven to accelerate its multifaceted ties with this vast and promising far east region of the Soviet Union.

Question: The Soviet Union has put forward great tasks and goodwill proposals aimed at consolidating peace and security, developing cooperation among countries in Asia and the Pacific, and incorporating this struggle into the general process of establishing an international security system. How does the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam think of this issue and of the proposal for convening a Pacific conference like the form of the Helsinki Conference?

Answer: Over the past 40 years, Asia and the Pacific has been a burning region. The successive and great victories of Asian nations in the struggle for national independence and social progress and the rapid growth of the peace-loving and revolutionary forces with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries as the mainstay have changed the situation in Asia and the Pacific, accelerating the trend toward peaceful coexistence and regional cooperation.

Today Asia and the Pacific remain a burning region due to the policy pursued by the United States and other militarist and imperialist forces of spiralling the arms race, seeking to rally their forces, straining the situation, and turning Asia and the Pacific into a region of political and military confrontation against the peace-loving and progressive forces and jeopardizing the sovereignty of nations.

Completely opposed to such a reactionary line, the Soviet Union and other socialist countries have always persisted in the struggle to make Asia and the Pacific a region of peace, security and cooperation. The new proposals advanced by Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev are a great programme embracing practical and concrete initiatives relating to all major issues in Asia and the Pacific. They demonstrate the Soviet Union's illuminating good will aimed at turning Aisa and the Pacific into a region of durable peace; free from nuclear weapons, without confrontation, and of equal cooperation and development.

The efforts to incorporate Asia and the Pacific into the general process of establishing a comprehensive international security system has spelt out all the more clearly the consistent character of the foreign policy of the Soviet Union and shed more light on the correctness and plausibility of these new proposals. The convening of a Helsinki-type Pacific conference with the participation of all countries in the region will mark a very important change of the regional situation in the interests of peace, friendship, cooperation and development of nations in Asia and the Pacific. The Socialist Republic of Vietnam fully supports the Soviet Union's initiatives and will coordinate its actions with the Soviet Union to implement those noble objectives.

Question: In his address, Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev put forward concrete initiatives and proposals aimed at solving the region issues, preventing the deployment of nuclear weapons in Asia and the Pacific, carrying out negotiations with a view to lessening activities of military fleets in the Pacific and basically reducing the armed forces and conventional weapons. What do you think as the essential things of those proposals?

Answer: The essential things of these proposals are peace, security and cooperation which have become a historical trend in Asia and the Pacific, and the world as a whole, and Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev has worked out concrete measures to turn this trend into reality. The Soviet Union's initiatives conform with the aspirations and interests of all nations in Asia and the Pacific and elsewhere in the world. It is right time for all nations in Asia and the Pacific to embark on constructive dialogue aimed at settling all regional issues on the basis of honouring each other's independence and sovereignty, shirking confrontation, limiting and reducing weapons and military activities. This provides the practical basis of ensuring peace and security for nations in Asia and the Pacific and elsewhere in the world, and opening a great possiblity to promote cooperation among regional countries to bring about mutual benefits in economy, trade, science and technology.

Question: At the request of the Afghan Government, the Soviet Union has declared its readiness to withdraw home part of its troops now performing their duty in Afghanistan. How do you assess this pracical deed of the Soviet Union?

Answer: This is an important decision demonstrating the sincere desire of the Soviet Union and the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan to ease tension in the region. The Soviet Union's declaration to withdraw home part of its troops now performing their duty in Afghanistan is a unilateral and noble deed brimming over with justice and good will. It provides a firm response to the slanderous propaganda by imperialism and other reactionary forces against the Soviet Union and socialism. The concerned parties should give proper appreciation of and appropriate response to this goodwill deed.

The Vietnamese people resolutely condemn the undeclared war launched by imperialism and other reactionary forces against the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan and fully support the principled stand and tireless efforts of the Soviet Union and Afghanistan aimed at promptly solving the Afghan issue through peaceful means, thus contributing to lessening tension in this region.

Question: What is the prospect of making the Southeast Asian situation healthier? How does Vietnam participate in the common struggle for peace in Asia and the Pacific?

Answer: Having made sacrifices in the struggle for national liberation and defence, the Vietnamese people greatly cherish peace, friendship and cooperation with all countries and nations in the world, especially those in Southeast Asia, Asia and the Pacific. The Ueitnamese people are striving to turn Southeast Asia into a region of peace, stability and cooperation, thereby contributing to consolidating peace and accelerating equal cooperation in Asia and the Pacific.

Together with Laos and Kampuchea, Vietnam has advanced many well-intentioned proposals aimed at relaxing tension, promoting dialogue between nations in the region, solving the Kampuchean issue, making Southeast Asia a region of peace, friendship and cooperation.

Vietnam has once and again put forth proposals aimed at normalising the bilateral relations between the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the Peoples's Republic of China on the basis of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, building a neighbourly ties between the two countries in conformity with the time-honoured friendship and the interests of the two peoples.

The Vietnamese people are confident that with high sense of responsibility and good will of all nations in the region, the Southeast Asian situation will change for better, a durable peace and equal cooperation will be established and constantly consolidated in this region to meet the earnest desire of all peoples in the region and in the world as a whole.

PEACE COMMITTEE HAILS NEW GORBACHEV INITIATIVE

OW011612 Hanoi VNA in English 1550 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA August 1 -- "The Vietnamese people fully support the peace initiative put forward by CPSU General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev in Vladivostok on July 28," says the Vietnam Peace Committee in a statement issued here today.

After recalling recent peace initiatives and proposals of the Soviet Union, the statement says:

"The only way to solve issues concerning Asia and the Pacific and the world as a whole is to embark on dialogue in the spirit of mutual understanding and trust, respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and interests, and cooperation with a view to ensuring peace, security and development."

The statement condemns the U.S.-led imperialism for permanently straining the world situation and worsening relations among countries, accelerating the arms race, preparing for a nuclear war, and seeking to maintain its positions in the world.

The Soviet Union's new peace initiative spells out the high cause of responsibility toward humankind. The Soviet Union has always set bright example for other countries when the world people confront with an important juncture of history. [sentence as received]

The statement says that Mikhail Gorbachev's views relating to Southeast Asia and Kampuchea and to the relations between the three Indochinese countries and other Southeast Asian countries with the hope of establishing ties conducive to peace and security in the region and Asia as a whole have fully conformed to the Vietnamese people's desire and goodwill.

The Vietnamese people firmly believe that the time-honoured friendly ties between the peoples of Vietnam and China will be surely restored, the statement says. It further notes that, together with the fraternal peoples of Laos and Kampuchea, the Vietnamese people are confident that the Indochinese actions will overcome all difficulties and obstacles to establish peaceful, friendly, cooperative and neighbourly relations with ASEAN countries in the interests of peace, security and development of Southeast Asia.

MINISTER REACTS TO U.S. WHEAT SALE DECISION

[Excerpts] Australia says that it is disappointed that America has ignored the protest of its ally and decided to sell subsidized wheat to the Soviet Union. News of the sale came as the Australian all-party delegation was preparing to resume its lobbying of American officials in a bid to halt the sales to the Soviet Union and China.

A Radio Australia correspondent in Washington, Jim Middleton, reports on the American decision: [Begin Middleton recording] The United States is going to use up to $300 million [currency not further specified] to subsidize the Soviet sales, and that will further depress the world price of wheat. However, at a news conference, the American agriculture secretary, Mr Lyng, denied that the President's decision would hurt Australia. [passage omitted quoting Lyng] But, the minister for primary industry, Mr Kerin, who is in Washington leading the all-party wheat delegation, admitted that Australian farmers would obviously suffer as a result.

[Kerin] Australia is disappointed by the decision of the Reagan administration to extend their agricultural export subsidies. The effect of this decision will be to put more pressure on the world wheat price, and it is a very tough move.

[Middleton] The opposition's primary industry spokesman, Mr Ralph Hunt, described the decision as better than either of the conditional subsidy measures and said it was obvious Australia's representation had been taken into account. [end recording]

The Australian delegation is to stay on in Washington till next week to try to convince the Americans to go no further with their wheat subsidies.

Meanwhile, wheat farmers in Australia are planning a big demonstration outside the American Embassy in Canberra to protest against the wheat sale. The executive director of the National Farmers Federation, Mr Andrew Robb, says wheat growers will lose about $20 a tonne because of the American deal. He says the eventual cost to industry and the Australian economy will be measured in hundreds of millions of dollars. Mr Robb, who will be part of a delegation of wheat grower representatives traveling to America next month, says the trip will take on added importance because of the sale.

Farmers Protest to U.S. Envoy

[Text] A farmers delegation has been unsuccessful in persuading the American ambassador in Canberra that the United States should reverse plans to sell subsidized wheat to the Soviet Union. About 50 grain growers marched from Parliament House to the American Embassy to present the Ambassador, Mr Lane, with a letter of protest.

The leader of the demonstration, president of the Grain Council of Australia, Mr (Charles), said his meeting with Mr Lane was friendly but disappointing. He said Mr Lane did not accept that the American sales were causing hardships to Australian farmers. Mr (Charles) says that attitude could ruin Australian-American relations. [Begin (Charles) recording] We have always looked upon America as a nation that we can trust, a nation that we can look to for support when we are in need. They had a 2-way trade arrangement with us that has been very satisfactory, and their action is putting all this at risk. [end recording]

HAWKE ON SOUTH AFRICAN SANCTIONS; LEAVES FOR UK

[Text] The prime minister, Mr Hawke, leaves Australia for London today to attend the meeting of seven Commonwealth heads of government on the future of sanctions against South Africa. Mr Hawke says the British prime minister, Mrs Thatcher, would not be totally insensitive to the rest of the Commonwealth on the sanctions issue. However, Mrs. Thatcher's stand opposing sanctions against South Africa is being fully endorsed by the British Cabinet. Mr Hawke says he is attending the meeting in London with the idea of achieving some progress on the South African issue.

[Begin Hawke recording] I am going there to be an involved participant in an extraordinarily important meeting and I would want to see an outcome which certainly involves the imposition of an effective increase in sanctions. If the position still is that the regime in South Africa that has indicated no change in its -- like a preparedness to negotiate -- I would prefer a situation without sanctions because sanctions have no merit intrinsically in themselves. They are a means to an end to get to negotiations. [end recording]

MINISTER SAYS URANIUM BAN ON FRANCE TO REMAIN

BK040917 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] The Office of the Minister for Resources, Senator Evans, has dismissed reports that the government was planning to lift the ban on uranium sales to France as pure speculation. Earlier, the office would not deny the accuracy of a report which appeared in the newspaper THE CANBERRA TIMES which said the decision had been taken because of the cost the ban was having on export revenue. Uranium sales to France was suspended 3 years ago in protest against continuing French nuclear weapons test at Mururoa Atoll in the South Pacific.

TALKS ON GROUND STATION FOR SRV IN FINAL STAGES

[Text] Australia will build a satellite ground station on the outskirts of Ho Chi Minh City to improve telecommunications with Vietnam. The Oversea Telecommunications Commission, OTC, is in the final stages of negotiating with Vietnam's communications authority to build the station at a cost of about $1 million.

The announcement was made by the minister for communications, Mr Michael Duffy, and the acting minister for foreign affairs, Senator Gareth Evans. Mr Duffy said the agreement would be the first of its kind between Vietnam and a Western country, and it would be made on an attractive commercial basis which was consistent with federal government's policy of improving bilateral relations. He said the satellite earth station would be ready for service some time next year and would supply world standard telephone, telex, and datalinks to Vietnam. While the station is being constructed, OTC has introduced a direct high-frequency radio telephone link with Vietnam.

NEW ZEALAND

NEW ZEALAND TO ADOPT SOUTH AFRICAN SANCTIONS

HK051014 Hong Kong AFP in English 1001 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Wellington, Aug 5 (AFP) -- New Zealand will adopt sanctions against South Africa proposed by the Commonwealth, Prime Minister David Lange said Tuesday.

Mr. Lange, who had earlier said he would seek cabinet authority to impose sanctions as soon as details of the proposals had been studied, said that the government was expected to take a decision to impose sanctions in two weeks.

The opposition, however, said it had little enthusiasm for such action.

Opposition National Party foreign affairs spokesman Sir Robert Muldoon said Commonwealth moves towards sanctions involved "a consderable element of hypocrisy," since some Commonwealth members were "equally deserving of condemnation."

His party thought that sanctions would have little effect on South Africa, he added.

"If they were not effective against Rhodesia, they certainly won't be effective against South Africa which has much more opportunity to use its own raw materials, use its own industry, import from other countries outside the Commonwealth and other black African countries for that matter."

He said however that the National Party "would adopt the sanction policy simply as a member of the Commonwealth but not with any enthusiasm."

Six of seven Commonwealth leaders meeting in London Monday agreed to adopt measures including a ban on flights to South Africa and imports of South African agrucultural products plus uranium, coal, iron, and steel.

Britain agreed only to a voluntary ban on new investment and promotion of tourism, although it would accept the ban on coal, iron and steel imports if such a decision were taken by the European Economic Community. (EEC).

MOKHTAR SAYS GORBACHEV STATEMENT 'SIGNIFICANT'

BK011329 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaastmaja, in his weekly press conference in Jakarta this morning, said that Soviet leader Gorbachev's 28 July statement in Vladivostok is significant for countries in the Asia-Pacific region. He noted that the statement by the Soviet leader suggested new proposals are being considered because the Asia-Pacific countries are important and have their own identities. In his statement, Gorbachev indicated that he is in complete control of Soviet policies without having to consult the military.

According to Mokhtar, Soviet relations with Asia-Pacific countries are facing difficulties due to the country's actions in Afghanistan, northwest Asia, and its support for Vietnam regarding the Cambodian issue. Minister Mokhtar is of the opinion that ASEAN should take an interest in the statement by Gorbachev. Minister Mokhtar expressed the hope that the Soviet leader would focus his attention on ASEAN's interest in solving the Cambodian issue and not on the PRC's and Vietnam's interests.

MAHATHIR COMMENTS ON PAS' ELECTION DEFEAT

BK041339 Kuala Lumpur Domestic Service in English 1130 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Prime Minister Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed says the defeat suffered by PAS [Pan Malaysian Islamic Party] in the general election showed that the people could not accept PAS' actions. He said the people are disappointed with the PAS leaders who seem to have no guidance. Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir said this after the Barisan Nasional secured a two-third majority in the Dewan Rakyat [House of Representatives].

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir held a press conference at the press center set up by the BN [Barisan Nasional] at the Putra World Trade Center and Emporium and the local media [word indistinct]. He said that PAS had become arrogant because the various ceramahs [lectures] they organized before the election campaign had drawn large crowds. This gave them the feeling of faith to do so as they please. Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir said the people wanted stability and peace. PAS election strategy showed that the party is still not matured. To a question, Datuk Sri Mahathir said that the party's exploitation of religion had led to party's defeat as the people were aware that PAS only thought of securing more seats and not for the sake of Islam.

COMMENTARY ON NATIONAL FRONT'S LANDSLIDE VICTORY

BK041113 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] The Malaysian general election is over and the ruling party, the Barisan Nasional or National Front, had won a sweeping victory. It reflects credibly on the government and the people that no untoward event whatsoever was reported. To the prime minister, Dr Mahathir Mohamed, the election results constitute a great victory, not only politically but from the full (?view) of democratic leadership. The country can now get down to the challenging task of achieving economic growth in an environment of a severe world recession and depressed prices for essential export commodities. The results prove that the Malaysian people are not affected by extremist groups that while promising much will not be able to achieve the productivity and prosperity.

As the main thrust of Dr Mahathir Mohamed's campaign was a call for stability and continuity of policies, the people have demonstrated that they fully understand the need to rally round an effective leader and have given the prime minister and his team of ministers a clear mandate for a further term of 5 years. The National Front has thus added a feather to its cap and the fears and misgivings that have been propagated by its enemies did not make any impact on the electorate. The two principle opposition parties were given as much opportunity to campaign and persuade the people to work with them. In the event, although the Democratic Action and PAS [Pan Malaysian Islamic Party] won some seats, they failed with their much-publicized attempt to force the National Front from obtaining a two-thirds majority. Of course, any ruling party in a parliamentary democracy needs to have only a bare majority to work effectively. But in Malaysia, the constitution stipulates a two-thirds majority vote for any proposed amendment to the constitution. Somehow, the National Front has regarded that the goal is important and this also reflects the prime minister, Dr Mahathir's, drive for high standards.

More than anything else, the landslide victory for the National Front must be viewed as a very reassuring development for Malaysia's friends in the internatonal community. All investors will now find that in addition to the promise of a continued political stability, there will also be more incentives for launching enterprises in Malaysia. The country has an excellent track record of economic growth and of cordial treatment of foreign capital with a skilled work force and achievement in the transfer of technology. There can be little doubt that Malaysia will redouble its efforts to increase its industrial and agricultural productivity.

In a few days' time, in accordance with Malaysian Constitutional practice, the prime minister will announce his new cabinet. At a later date, the new enlarged parliament consisting of 177 members of the lower house and the 58 in the upper house will meet to hear the head of state deliver the government's statement of policy. The Malaysian people will not rest on their laurels but under the leadership of their prime minister they will strive to achieve even more for their beloved Malaysia.

COMMENTARY VIEWS ELECTIONS, APARTHEID STANCE

BK050919 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Station commentary]

[Text] The reelection of the National Front coalition with a majority exceeding two-thirds of the total number of seats in the Malaysian House of Parliament has already had a remarkable impact on the Malaysian economy. After several weeks of sluggish condition, the Kuala Lumpur Stock Exchange was a scene of brisk activity and animated trading. There is every indication that this ripple effect will spread to other sectors of the Malaysian economy. The breeze moves off uncertain areas which are being overtaken by the feeling that stability has been assured with the decisive will of the people. That will has been demonstrated in their vote for a government that represents moderations and a drive for development in all spheres.

The National Front tradition of arriving at major policy decisions on the basis of consensus will continue and the prime minister, Dr Mahathir Mohamed, has confirmed that there will no major changes in the policies of the government. The factor of continuity will be also be a source of reassurance for all sections of the Malaysian people and for investors from abroad.

The Malaysian political system is not a monolithic one that discourages other political parties from flourishing. The Democratic Action Party, for example, campaigned with a slogan "No more two-thirds majority for the National Front." It managed to secure 24 seats and it will enjoy all the traditional privileges of an opposition group elected by its supporters. The PAS [Pan Malaysian Islamic Party] fared badly but it has only itself to blame for a poor show. Its categorical statement about the creation of an Islamic state in Malaysia give rise to much misgiving and anxiety. The Malaysian people have always voted for moderate and sensible political leaders rather than for those who advocate wildly impossible goals and ideals.

It is significant that the first statement relating to external affairs made by Dr Mahathir concerned the mini Commonwealth summit now taking place in London. The prime minister's position on apartheid has been clear and consistent. There is no other way to dismantle the hateful apartheid policy than by introducing economic sactions against the Republic of South Korea [as heard]. This issue has dragged on for much too long and while the British and the Americans engage in all manner of talks, discussions, and research, the carnage continues in South Africa.

The British proposal to introduce a so-called limited sanction is hardly calculated to have a realistic impact on the racist regime. Much has been made about the adverse effect of sanctions on black African employment and the general welfare of the nonwhite people. However, the black African leaders have themselves stated that this been grossly exaggerated. It would appear, therefore, that the opposition to sanctions is motivated by fears of loss of trading opportunities and profits. Malaysia stands alongside not only the majority of the Commonwealth members that have called for the immediate imposition of economic sanctions but also the Nonaligned Movement that represents a large segment of the international community.

[Text] The president of Democratic Kampuchea, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, today held talks with the foreign minister, Mr S. Dhanabalan. Mr Dhanabalan told reporters that in the meeting they discussed the Democratic Kampuchean Government's 8-point peace plan for Cambodia. It was agreed that there were important demands such as the disarming of all factions and the establishment of an international peace keeping force which ought to be added to the proposal. Prince Sihanouk said that he wuld try to get the Khmer Rouge to agree to these points so that the proposal will be more acceptable to the international community.

Later, the prince and Princess Monique paid a courtesy call on the president and first lady at the Istana [palace]. Prince Sihanouk is in Singapore for a 4-day visit as a personal guest of President Wee Kim Wee. This evening he will attend a private dinner hosted by the senior minister in the Prime Minister's Office, Mr S. Rajarathnam.

NUCLEAR WEAPONS ALLEGEDLY STORED IN U.S. BASES

HK050403 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 3 Aug 86 pp 1, 6

[By Glendu M. Gloria]

[Text] There are "at least 54 tactical nuclear weapons stored in U.S. Military facilities" in the Philippines, according to a paper about Philippine views on the U.S. bases here.

The paper, prepared by the Third World Movement Against the Exploitation of Women, the International Studies of the Philippines and the University of the Philippines, cited as its source a private U.S. think tank which undertook studies on the American bases here.

The paper quoted retired Rear Admiral Gene La Roque director of the U.S. Center for Defense Information, as saying on June 28, 1983 that the tactical nuclear weapons stored in American facilities in the Philippines serve no urgent purpose "and only make the chances of catastrophic confrontation much greater."

There was no elaboration.

But the paper said Filipino workers in the U.S. bases also apparently suspect that such weapons are being stored in the facilities and have since been demanding "nuclear risk bonus."

The Philippine government, under Ferdinand Marcos, has consistently denied reports that nuclear weapons are stored in the U.S. bases. The American government, however, remained mum on the issue, in accordance with their NCNC (neither-confirm-nor-deny) policy.

But many observers believe that the U.S. authorities have succeeded in sneaking nuclear weapons into their facilities here by virtue of a provision in the RP-U.S. Military Bases Agreement granting the Americans "unhampered use" of such facilities.

Also, it is known that the U.S. Naval Base in Subic, Zambales, is the home port of the nuclear-powered guided missile carrier Sterett.

The paper called on the Constitutional Commission to include in the proposed Constitution a ban on foreign bases in the country.

Some countries like Iran and Cuba have constitutional provisions banning such bases in their country, the study said.

It failed to mention, however, that the Cuban ban, notwithstanding, there is an Ameican base in Guantanamo, Cuba.

The authors said they will present the paper to President Aquino to help her reach "the one and only correct opinion."

"Indeed, we are reaching a point where her (Aquino's) good judgment will be put to a test. What will prevail -- RP or U.S. views?" the authors ask.

PROFESSORS REBUT U.S. EMBASSY LEAFLET ON BASES

HK041414 Quezon City NEW DAY in English 4 Aug 86 pp 6, 15

[Text] /"The State has the inherent right to self-determination, national independence and sovereignty. Subject to existing international agreements, foreign bases, troops, or facilities shall be forbidden in the Philippine National territory nor shall nuclear weapons or parts thereof allowed therein."/ [Slantlines denote italics as published]

With this provision, the Constitutional Commission's Committee on Preamble and Declaration of Principles managed to pass a resolution that seeks to remove the U.S. military bases in the country as soon as the extended agreement covering them expires in 1991.

But the final reckoning is yet to come. Being a mere committee recommendation, the bases provision will still have to pass the Con-Com, in plenum, before it gets integrated into the final draft of the Constitution.

That day of reckoning has been set for the last week of the month.

As that crucial day draws nearer, more and more impassioned debates are held on the property, as well as on the desirability, of adopting the highly controversial provision.

Literature on the bases issue has flourished, too, indicating a strong desire on either vamp to sway public opinion to their favor.

Most revealing among all pro-bases materials being circulated nowadays is a six-page mimeographed sheet being distributed by the American Embassy containing mainly rebuttals of the arguments raised by the base oppositors. Titled U.S. VIEWS, the leaflet has caused a stir in the political circle because of its categorical dismissal of almost all issues raised against the bases.

In retaliation, several professors from the University of the Philippines have come out with their own analyses of the bases problem through a 15-page document titled RP VIEWS. The paper responds, point by point, to all the issues raised and answered by U.S. VIEWS.

U.S. VIEWS premises its discussion of the issues on the contention that the bases are useful and important, "not only for U.S. interests, but also for regional security and for the external defense of the Philippines." RP VIEWS, on the other hand, proceeds on the belief that the U.S. military presence is useful and important only to U.S. interests. It alleges that Filipinos are now "awakening" to the dangers posed by the bases.

From such diverse points of view, the two documents proceeded to answer the following questions:

Q: Are these American Bases or Philippine Bases?

US VIEWS: Legally, there are no "American Bases," but rather, American facilities" located within Philippine bases. This is an important legal point, correctly reflecting Philippine ownership and sovereignty over the bases.

RP VIEWS: Notwithstanding the appointment of a Filipino base commander who is serving as chief security guard, and the Philippine flag decorated outside the tases, the U.S. maintains on our territory a state within a state which allows the U.S. to engage in activities which is completely beyond Philippine control. The phrase used is "unhampered use of facilities." Ask the Philippine base commander how much he knows about what actually goes on inside the base, and let's see how much we control them.

Q: Do the American bases in the Philippines create a magnet for nuclear attack?

US: The point at issue here is whether the bases are more likey to attract or deter an attack. The evidence seems to support deterrence. If American military installations around the world are a magnet, they are a very weak one. In the 40 years since the end of WW II no country with U.S. bases and a mutual U.S. defense treaty has been attacked. Countries without such protection, like Afghanistan and Cambodia, are the ones which have been invaded and occupied by foreign powers. Secondly, while American facilities in the Philippines play a very important role in the logistical support of regional U.S. forces and provide security against conventional military threats in Southeast Asia, they are of little significance in a nuclear exchange between the superpowers. In the unlikely event of World War III, the Soviets' highest priority targets will be American missiles based in the United States and aboard submarines under the world's oceans. Nothing at Clark or Subic threatens the Soviet homeland.

RP: The U.S. bases in the Philippines, equipped with nuclear-capable weaponry and strategic communications systems, render the Filipino people vulnerable to massive retaliation in the event of nuclear war and thus threaten the very existence of Filipino people. Because of the size and strategic importance of the bases, it is likely that five-megaton bombs will be dropped on them. What happens if a bomb of this size explodes in a city (like Manila) of four million inhabitants? More than 1.7 million people will die, and 2.8 million will be injured, maimed or incapacitated. (Nuclear War in Europe, Prof. Henry Kendall, Senate Congressional Record, S4926, May 12, 1981).

Q: Is the money paid to the Philippines aid or rent?

U.S.: The text of the Military Bases Agreement states that the bases shall be provided free of rent, "in furtherance of the mutual interest of both countries." Beyond that, the United States pays no "rent" to any of the 13 countries where it has military bases. In the Americn view, any alliance is based on mutual assistance. In the Philippines, the United States provides economic and military assistance while the Philippine government provides territorial assistance -- the base facilities. All countries allied with the United States are asked to assist with the partnership in appropriate ways. Those which can afford it contribute financially toward the cost of maintaining U.S. forces in their countries -- in the case of Japan, well over $1,000 million a year.

RP: The United States can offer nothing more than the assurance that its Executive Branch will exert its "best efforts" to obtain from the U.S. Congress, appropriations for security assistance to the Philippines. This is in return for the "rent-free" use of military bases, wherein the U.S. has the full exercise of rights to employ all public utilities, roads and highways, lakes, rivers and streams at par with the Armed Forces of the Philippines... The claim that the United States does not pay rent for bases which are utilized for mutual defense is belied by its 1963 Treaty with Cuba. The States agreed to pay rent for the use of coaling and naval stations, although these were allegedly established to enable the United States to maintain the independence of Cuba and to protect the Cuban people.

Q: What about the social and moral issues associated with the bases -- bars, prostitution, orphans?

US: These are clearly negative factors to be considered in analyzing the costs and benefits of the bases. U.S. military authorities do not condone damaging or disruptive social behavior but such problems are an unfortunate reality near any military base -- not just American bases. Until human nature changes these issues are likely to remain with us, but communities near the bases can count on sincere and continuing American cooperation with local governments and social organizations to alleviate the situation.

RP: The "sex industry" around which the economy of Olongapo and Angeles thrives is built on the law of supply and demand. If there were no demand for "hospitality girls" and prostitution, the supply will stop. Without the quick employment offered, job seekers in the sex strips would stay in their place of origin. As a Lutheran pastor put it, "There will always be an Olongapo as long as the Seventh Fleet plies the Pacific." Base-related prostitution is far worse than local prostitution which is private and small. Because there are thousands of American servicemen at any given time, thousands of Filipino women are lured into the sex industry." Here is a question of mass, transnationalized and institutionalized prostitution.

Q: Could not the Philippines make better use of the land and facilities for its own development objectives?

U.S.: As with any asset, there are always trade-offs that a person, or in this case, a government, must consider in order to decide what use brings the greatest benefit. The economy of the Philippines benefits in several ways from the bases. First, there are the substantial annual economic benefits created by U.S. military spending (some half a million direct and indirect jobs and over one billion dollars in net addition to the economy). Second, U.S. security assistance enables the Philippine government to allocate more of its budget to non-military sectors of the economy, thereby assisting in economic growth. Finally, the bases contribute to regional security, providing the Philippines and its neighbors with a peaceful environment in which to concentrate on economic development. Given the limited size and specialized nature of the U.S. facilities, it is difficult to imagine any realistic commercial alternative which could come close to matching the very large economic benefits presently obtained by the Philippines from the bases.

RP: At present, nowhere else can Americans exploit such a huge workforce for a mere pittance. Filipino workers here are paid for less than the U.S. minimum wage at approximately one seventh of U.S. wage levels. The American bases are a paymaster's dream. Much is often made of the fact that the bases employ at least 40,000 Filipinos, which is less than one per cent of the Philippine non-agricultural labor force, that the bases pump some $260 million annually into the local economy. As a political analyst, Alejandro Fernandez, said, only a small fraction of American disbursements finds its way into the Philippine economy because most of the appropriations for the bases are actually spent for maintenance and repair which do not entail contract servicing by Filipino firms and most purchases of consumption goods by base personnel are made at tax-free PX commissions. The most-often chased goods by U.S. servicemen are prostitutes and drugs, social problems most acute in the areas around the bases.

Editorial on Con-Com Debate

HK041027 Manila THE MANILA EVENING POST in English 1 Aug 86 p 4

[Editorial: "The Bases Question"]

[Text] The issue of U.S. military facilities in this country has now taken centerstage at the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] and the debate has spilled out of the hearing rooms to the public.

Apparently, the Con-Com has already been divided between the pros and the antis.

Mr Pelaez, Philippine Ambassador to Washington, had to be recalled to present his views on the matter. Some say he was trotted out by this administration like a prize specimen to endorse the bases.

It is interesting to note that some commentators are saying the Con-Com should not discuss the bases issue until after Mrs Aquino has visited the U.S. Others believe that it is necessary for this issue to be ventilated if only to make Americans know that regardless of the visit or not, Filipinos will exert their national sovereignty especially on something that means their existence as a nation.

Another group, however, insists that Mrs Aquino should use the issue as lever in her discussions with American officials because once the bases are settled, the Americans will revert to form and take Filipinos for granted.

Of all the major problems confronting Philippine-American relations, this is the most crucial and sensitive. Scholars from both countries have practically exhausted all their arguments on the matter. Political analysts have likewise advanced their views, realistic or not. Some even say the issue has been flogged to death.

Like it or not, however, it is here to stay. Involving the relations of nations, the bases question is vital to Philippine national interest. There are national economic considerations in the problem. It simply will not go away.

Whatever the final decision of our national leaders, in the Con-Com or out, this is the best time for Filipinos to take a final stand on the matter. A referendum may even be necessary to determine what the majority of our people feel.

This time let our people speak. It is their lives that are at stake.

OFFICIAL HOPEFUL OF U.S. SUGAR QUOTA RESTORATION

HK040928 THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 2 Aug 86 pp 9, 10

[By Rose de la Cruz]

[Text] The Philippines could regain its original share or 350,000 short tons of the U.S. sugar quota as a result of the scheduled state visit to the U.S. by President Aquino this September, Sugar Regulatory Administration (SRA) Chairman Arsenio Yulo said yesterday.

The SRA chairman based his optimism on the country regaining its orignal share of the U.S. sugar quota on what he described as the "general readiness of American lawmakers to help the Aquino government obtain concessions and other assistance from the U.S. government."

He said all that the Philippines is asking for is the restoration of its orignal 27-percent share of the U.S. sugar quota, which would mean an additional $400-million earnings for the Philippines.

At present, the country's share to the U.S. sugar quota is 13 percent or 203,000 tons.

Yulo also disclosed moves of the SRA to sell the assets acquired by the Philippine Sugar Commission (Philsucom), the operation of which will wind up in three years.

The assets to be sold include three sugar refineries, 14 centrals that were financed by the Philippine National Bank (PNB) and nine units of mechanical harvesters.

SRA expects to raise some P2 billion from the sale of the refineries, alone, located in Balayan, Batangas; Kalinog in Iloilo and in Bukidnon.

The refineries have a combined operating capacity of 10,000 piculs a day.

Yulo also back-pedaled on his decision to mothball this year sugar mills owned by the government. He said the matter is still being studied by an inter-agency committee, chaired by the SRA.

[Text] An American official has announced that the Philippines will receive additional money for its Economic Support Fund [ESF] from the United States next year. The ESF is payment by the Americans for their military bases in the country. According to Paul (Duster), program economist, the additional ESF money has been agreed on by the U.S. and the Philippines. However, he said he did not know if the money would go into development projects as has been done in the past. Meanwhile, the World Bank is granting the Philippines a loan of $150 million for its housing programs. The loan is separate from the $6 million already given for the pag-ibig [housing scheme] fund. Along with this, the World Bank says it would like to see the Aquino government effect reforms in its housing programs.

MANILA BULLETIN VIEWS AQUINO-GALMAN TRIAL

HK040959 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 2 Aug 86 p 4

[Editorial: "A Mistrial"]

[Text] From the beginning, sharp minds fashioned the Aquino-Galman story. The elaborate plot to kill Ninoy, the creation of the Agrava board, the hearings, the disappearance of vital witnesses, the opinions of the board, the proceedings at the Sandiganbayan, and the petition for mistrial -- in all these, sharp minds were at work.

Plain folk would say it was a fight between good and evil, and that in fact is what it all boils down to on the moral plane. The Aquino case was mostly moral and that fact shaped the kind of government the country would have in 1986.

Students of the law would argue for or against the mistrial issue and note undoubtedly that it had been quite a time since a mistrial had been declared in this jursidiction. They would argue on due process and note that it is not merely a day in court but fairness. A great criminal case breeds many such issues and incidents as men try to unravel the truth, even if the truth may just be lying there, for all the world to see.

That may, indeed, be the case. The nation must be prepared for it because when men are free to get at the truth in a court of law, unexpected incidents are bound to happen and unexpected players will be summoned to the stage.

In the event a new trial is called in the Aquino-Galman case, more witnesses than can be imagined might come up to testify for the nature of the environment determines a court proceeding. It is quite possible that a new trial, if called, will be far more dramatic than the proceedings before the Agrava board. As always, it will be for the court to weigh the evidence.

GOTODA VIEWS REPORTS ON NAKASONE VISIT TO USSR

OW060521 Tokyo KYODO in English 0513 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 6 KYODO -- Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda said Wednesday it is premature for Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone to plan a visit to the Soviet Union, responding to a report that Nakasone intends to visit that country next spring. Gotoda told reporters that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is to visit Japan and said the issue of Nakasone's Soviet visit should be discussed when Gorbachev gets here. He also said Nakasone's Soviet visit should be considered on the basis of Japan-Soviet relations and the international situation in general.

NAKASONE, SRI LANKAN PREMIER MEET; REVIEW AID

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 6 KYODO — Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone told his Sri Lankan counterpart Ranasinghe Premadasa that he will help promote Premadasa's proposed United Nations Internatonal Year of Shelter for the Homeless in 1987, a government official said. Nakasone also reconfirmed Japan's economic assistance to Sri Lanka despite that country's racial conflicts.

Premadasa has been here for a four-day unofficial visit since Sunday on his way home from Canada and the United States. He thanked Nakasone for Japan's economic assistance, including a pledge of 14.5 billion yen for fiscal 1985 for irrigation development. Premadasa also asked for Japan's understanding of a proposal recently presented by the Sri Lanka Government to the Tamil people on their movement for independence. The proposal, rated highly by U.S. President Ronald Reagan and India's Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, promises more autonomy to Tamils rather than independence.

Nakasone told Premadasa he intends to support the U.N. International Year of Shelter for the Homeless in 1987. He also told him that Japan is attempting to provide economic assistance to that country, referring to a 28 billion yen credit recently pledged for helping finance construction of a hydroelectric power plant in Sri Lanka jointly with Britain. Nakasone praised the Sri Lanka Government's proposal to solve the Tamil problem, saying that it should be solved through negotiation rather than by violence.

FORMER PHILIPPINE GUERRILLA LEADER VISITS

Discusses New Party

OW011101 Tokyo KYODO in English 1050 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 1 KYODO — Bernabe Buscayno, former commander of Philippine Communist guerrillas, briefed a group of Japanese Friday on a new peoples party to be organized in his country shortly. Buscayno, also popularly known in the Philippines as Commander Dante, attended a forum on Japan-Philippine affairs held at the office building for members of the House of Councillors. Buscayno is one of the leading figures in the formation of the Partido ng Bayan (New Peoples Party).

Buscayno said the party will hold a two-day inauguration meeting on August 30-31 and predicted that it will become the largest political party in the Philippines with 2.5 to 3 million members, including farmers, school teachers, students, and fishermen. He said the Partido ng Bayan will not have any formal relations with the banned Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP). However, he said Communist Party members may join the new party.

Buscayno said the Partido ng Bayan will be against testing, deployment and production of nuclear arms not only in the Philippines but also in the entire world. He said his party will take part in any form of movement against nuclear weapons.

Comments on Bases on Okinawa

[Text] Okinawa, Aug. 4 KYODO -- A former top leader of the Philippines' armed communist insurgency called for solidarity with the people of Okinawa Monday, stressing that the presence of U.S. military bases in Okinawa means that Japan is not an independent country yet. Bernabe Buscayno, 43, formerly the commander of the New Peoples Army (NPA) which he helped found in 1969, came to Japan to seek support for the New Peoples Party, a political organization which he plans to form in the Philippines. He arrived here in Okinawa Monday on a three-day visit.

In an interview with the press in Naha, Buscayno said that Okinawa, like the Philippines, has huge U.S. military bases and is faced with many problems. The presence in a country of foreign military bases signifies that country is not yet truly independent, he said. As for support for the New Peoples Party, Buscayno said that he would seek cooperation from socialist parties of various countries, adding that he is not thinking of establishing solidarity with any communist party at present.

Buscayno, who was released from prison by the new administration of President Corazon Aquino in March this year after 10 years' imprisonment, said on July 28 in Tokyo that the New Peoples Party will field worker and peasant candidates in an attempt to win "genuine land reform, genuine democracy and genuine independence" for the Philippines.

LDP'S NIKAIDO DEPARTS FOR 5-DAY VISIT TO PRC

OW040235 Tokyo KYODO in English 0220 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 4 KYODO -- Susumu Nikaido, former vice president of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP), left here for a five-day visit to China Monday morning. Nikaido, leader of the LDP's largest intraparty faction under former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, is to meet with Chinese Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian later in the day. He is to confer with party General Secretary Hu Yaobang and senior leader Deng Xiaoping Tuesday. Nikaido is being accompanied by Yoshiro Hayashi, another LDP lower house member and the head of the LDP international bureau.

JCP'S FUWA LEAVES FOR 4-DAY VISIT TO USSR

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 4 KYODO -- Tetsuzo Fuwa, leader of the Japan Communist Party, left Tokyo Monday for Moscow to meet Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. Hiroshi Tachiki, head of the party's Foreign Affairs Committee, is accompanying Fuwa for the four-day visit, according to a party official. Fuwa is expected to hold two rounds of meetings with Gorbachev. He will come home Friday.

FOREIGN MINISTER MEETS ROK DELEGATION

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 1 KYODO -- A South Korean delegation told Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari Friday that the Japanese school history textbook issue should be settled amicably, a Foreign Ministry official said. The delegation, headed by Yu Chang-sun, chairman of the Korea-Japan Cooperation Council, told Kuranari the textbook issue is an emotional issue, the official said.

Kuranari said the Japanese Government remains unchanged in its policy of giving full consideration to relations with Asian neighbors in checking school textbooks, the official said. The official said the foreign minister asked for the delegations' understanding by explaining that Education Minister Masayuki Fujio had not named any particular nation in his recent controversial remarks on the textbook issue adding that Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone had also expressed regret if Fujio's remarks aroused further misunderstanding and displeasure among other countries.

The delegation met Kuranari after attending a joint conference of the Korea-Japan and Japan-Korea Cooperation Council meeting. The Japanese council is headed by former Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi and is composed of parliamentarians, businessmen, academics and others. The delegation members also asked Kuranari to improve legal status of Korean residents in Japan and also resolve problems concerning them, including the fingerprinting system and employment in public sector, the official said. Kuranari promised his efforts in that direction.

The delegation also said that any efforts by Japan to relations [as received] with North Korea should be proportionate to improvement of relations with South Korea by China and the Soviet Union, the official said. The official quoted Kuranari as saying that such Japanese efforts will take into account the importance of maintaining a balance in the Korean peninsula.

BISHOP TUTU ARRIVES FOR HIROSHIMA SUMMIT

OW021227 Tokyo KYODO in English 1153 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Narita, Chiba Pref., Aug. 2 KYODO -- Bishop Desmond Tutu, who arrived at Narita airport Saturday evening for a "peace summit" in Hiroshima, said Japan as a major industrial country has a very important contribution to make in solving the issue of peace and justice in South Africa.

Tutu, the Anglican bishop of Johannesburg and a Nobel Peace Prize winner, said he intends to tell the Hiroshima meeting that it is "not possible to have peace without justice, as we have seen in South Africa."

The bishop, who was accompanied by his wife Leah, has been invited by the city authorities in Hiroshima to participate in the meeting on August 6 -- the 41st anniversary of the atomic bomb attack on the city -- which marks the International Year of Peace. He likened the state of emergency imposed in South Africa on June 12 to an aspirin which gives temporary respite from toothache. "When the effects wear off, you still have the toothache."

Tutu said the announcement by Pretoria Friday of a crackdown on 1.3 million foreigners working illegally in South Africa was an example of how "unreliable and unstable" the region will be as long as there is injustice and the system of apartheid, or racial segregation. "South Africa knows that it can hold to ransom the neighbouring countries and thereby stop the world from acting decisively on critical issues," he said.

Tutu and his wife will stay in Japan for about a week before traveling to Beijing at the invitation of the Christian Council of Churches in China.

Reveals Meeting With Miyake

OW031019 Tokyo KYODO in English 1012 GMT 3 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 3 KYODO -- South African antiapartheid leader Bishop Desmond Tutu revealed Sunday that he was taken aside for a private consultation on the South African situation by a senior government official the previous day. Tutu, who is here at the invitation of the city of Hiroshima to attend a peace conference, had earlier indicated that he did not plan to meet government officials. Tutu, the Anglican bishop of Johannesburg and a nobel Peace Prize winner, said he met Wasuke Miyake, director general of the Foreign Ministry's Middle Eastern and African Affairs Bureau after his arrival at new Tokyo international airport on Saturday.

Tutu quoted Miyake as telling him that Japan wants to have a concerted policy with other members of the international community on the issue of economic sanctions. Tutu said he expressed understanding for the position but also said that nations should take a moral stand on the issue rather than wait for others to take the lead. He said he added that Japan's significant trading volume with South Africa gave it a "critical role to play."

Tutu will attend the Hiroshima symposium on August 6 -- the 41st anniverary of the city's atomic bombing -- as part of a one-week stay in Japan prior to moving on to China.

In a telephone interview Miyake confirmed that he met with Tutu for 30 minutes at the Capital Tokyo Hotel in Tokyo Saturday evening. Miyake said he told Tutu that Japan is now taking harsher measures than other Western nations. Miyake said Tutu asked Japan to persuade the United States and Britain to take economic sanctions against South Africa.

In the phone interview Miyake said japan thinks it is necessary to have contact with the opposition in South Africa.

Miyake said this was the first time for a high-ranking official to meet with Tutu. Lower-ranking Japanese officials met with representatives of the banned African National Congress (ANC), a black liberation organization, on two occasions earlier this year and once with the chairman of the Pan-Africanist Congress, a splinter group of the ANC which is also banned.

Calls for Economic Sanctions

[Text] Hiroshima, Aug 4 KYODO -- Antiaprtheid leader Bishop Desmond Tutu called on Japan Monday to take economic sanctions against South Africa as one peaceful method to stop human rights violations there. The Anglican bishop of Johannesburg and Nobel Peace Prize winner said in a TV interview that Japan, a major trading partner for South Africa, should reduce the volume of bilateral trade.

Tutu, here to attend a peace conference in Hiroshima on the 41st anniversary of the city's atom-bomb attack Wednesday, said global economic sanctions are necessary to get the South African Government to sit down at the negotiating table. Tutu met a high-level Japanese Foreign Ministry official on his arrival in Tokyo Saturday and told him that Japan's significant trading volume with South Africa gave it a critical role to play. Japan's imports from South Africa reached 1,844 million dollars in 1985 and exports were 1,020 million dollars. Major import items included gold, iron ore and coal.

TUTU, USSR'S BOGDANOV ADDRESS NEWS CONFERENCE

[By Suvendrini Suguro]

[Text] Hiroshima, Aug 5 KYODO -- Archbishop Desmond Mpilo Tutu of Johannesburg, South Africa, and winner of 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, said Tuesday that he hopes the suffering of the atom bomb victims of August 6, 1945 will not have been in vain. "I am devastated at the nighmarish effects of the atom bomb on the people of Hiroshima and realize I must work harder for world peace," he said at a press conference on the eve of the 41st anniversary of Hiroshima's atomic bombing.

Linus Pauling, president of the Linus Pauling Institute of Science and Medicine in United States, and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1962 and for chemistry in 1954 said, "the facts about the bombing are still a powerful presentation." A future nuclear war which will use atom bombs of a far greater intensity than what was dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki would be insanity, he said.

Radimor Bogdanov, deputy director of the Institute of the U.S. and Canadian Studies of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, suggested that all world poltical leaders visit Hiroshima and listen to the experiences of the atom bomb victims. "It is only then they will know the madness they want to bring about," he said.

Seven world peace activists gave their impressions of the Hiroshima atomic bombing to the press after a tour of the city's a-bomb landmarks. They also offered flowers at the memorial cenotoph.

The other speakers were Dorothy Hodgkin, British president of the Pugwash Conference for the Prevention of Development of Nuclear Weapons in the World who won the Nobel Prize for Chemistry in 1964, Paul Crutzen, West German director of the Department of Chemical Atmosphere of the Max Planck Institute, Frank Blackaby, British director of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, and Yasushi Akashi, vice secretary general of the United Nations Public Relations section.

Pauling said there must be a comprehensive ban on all nuclear testing including the underground tests that are allowed now. World political leaders are using the excuse of nuclear threat to spend more money on armaments. "The American people who believe this and support the Reagan administration program for the development of weapons are doing so because they have been deliberately misinformed," he said.

Bogdanov declared that for the world powers, the nuclear weapons they produce are toys. They will use them therefore as children will do without thinking about the devasting effects a nuclear war will have on the world, he said.

Hodgkins said "I am pleased with the efforts the scientists have made on setting up a system for a ban on nuclear testing," she said. She cited the example of the growing cooperation between U.S. and Soviet scientists to monitor and control future nuclear tests launched by the two countries.

Speaking on apartheid in South Africa, Archbishop Tutu said, "It is my conviction that unless the international community intervenes decisively on behalf of justice and freedom nothing will change. I am heartened that British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has imposed limited economic sanctions on the government of South Africa. It shows that she can be persuaded by the people." he declared.

PRC HOPES TO FLY ATHLETES DIRECTLY TO SEOUL

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 4 KYODO -- China hopes to use direct flights to South Korea to send its athletic delegaton to the Seoul Asian Games scheduled in late September, Japanese sports sources said Monday. A high-level Chines sports official now in Japan confirmed the report. The Japanese sources, who have just returned home from a trip to China, said the plan is still subject to the approval of both Chinese and South Korean authorities. China and South Korea have no diplomatic ties. The source quoted Chinese Olympic committee officials as saying that China plans to send three flights to carry 515 athletes and sports officials who are taking part in 20 out of the 25 events.

China's state-run airline, Civil Aviation Administration of China (CAAC), plans to fly nonstop between Beijing and Seoul, they said. If North Korea refuses to allow CAAC to fly over its territory, the flights will take a roundabout route or drop in at Tokyo or Osaka on their way to South Korea, the sources said.

Wei Jizhong, a high ranking Chinese sports official now in Japan to promote sports exchanges, said China has not yet come to a conclusion because of various factors. China's Olympic committee will decide by the end of August following consultations with CAAC and then will open talks with South Korea, Wei said.

Meanwhile, in Seoul, South Korea's Transportation Ministry said it knows the Chinese flight plan. The Seoul Asian Games organizing committee also said it knows the plan but has received no official proposal from China. Committee spokesman Kwon Yong-chung said South Korea will welcome direct Chinese flights to Seoul if China undertakes formal procedures or diplomatic negotiations.

JOINT CHINESE, KOREAN TABLE TENNIS TEAMS URGED

[Text] Matsumoto, Nagano Pref., Aug. 4 KYODO -- The Asian Table-Tennis Union (ATTU) executive committee has passed a resolution calling on North and South Korea and China and Taiwan to form joint teams for the second Asia-Europe table tennis championships scheduled for December in Japan. The committee met here Sunday and decided that there should be four men's teams and three women's teams. The resolution, approved by the committee, said that North and South Korea should form joint men's and women's teams and that China and Taiwan come up with a joint men's team.

ATTU officials said if materialized, joint teams would have a very positive influence on the stalled sports talks between North and South Korea in particular. After the meeting, Yi Chong-ho of North Korea, acting president of the ATTU -- the sports' decision-making body in Asia -- said the formation of joint teams would be an effective means for unification of the Korean peninsula, a comment echoed by a South Korean table tennis official.

Meanwhile, a Chinese official responded favorably to the resolution, while Taiwan's position has not been made known since it did not send a delegate to the meeting. The first table tennis championships, held in European cities in January of this year, ended in Europe's victory. The upcoming event which will offer a total of 50,000 dollar prizes will be held at various places in Japan.

Taiwan Players Entry Assured

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 4 KYODO -- China has assured that Taiwan table tennis players will have no problem about their visit to China if they have decided to participate in the Asian table tennis championships to be held in Shenzhen in October. Officials of the Asia Table-Tennis Union (ATTU) said Monday Ichiro Ogimura of Japan, acting president of the International Table Tennis Federation (ITTF), will hand carry the official invitation to Taiwan in mid-August. Since Taiwan's entry into the ATTU will also be discussed during the competition, Taiwan officials are being asked to attend a general assembly of the ATTU. If realized, that would be the first entry into mainland China by Taiwanese officials since the Kuomintang Government fled to Taiwan in 1949.

SOUTH BLAMED FOR 5 AUG DMZ SHOOTING INCIDENT

'Premeditated' Provocation

SK060512 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0451 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 6 (KCNA) -- The South Korean puppet army, at around 20 hours August 5, committed a grave military provocation, firing more than 300 large-calibre machinegun and automatic weapon bullets at a post of our side on several occasions in the Demilitarized Zone south of Pyongyang on the central sector of the front. This military provocation perpetrated by the South Korean puppet army was a premeditated one which had been carefully prepared.

They should act with discretion, clearly conscious what consequence could be entailed by such military provocation in the Demilitarized Zone where the military personnel of the two sides stand opposed to each other.

Senior Delegate to MAC Protests

[Text] In connection with a grave armed provocation act of firing more than 300 12.7-mm large-caliber machine gun and M-16 automatic rifle rounds many times [yoro charae e kolchhyo] at the opposite guardposts in our side from the area 1,250 meters south of Military Demarcation Line [MDL] marker 0572 in the central front and from the area 1,100 meters south of MDL Marker 0579, committed by the South Korean Army from 2000 to 2005 on 5 August, our side's senior member to the MAC sent a protest message to the enemy side.

In the message, he pointed out that such an act by the enemy is an outrageous violation of the armistice agreement and premeditated and preplanned maneuvers straining the situation in the DMZ. He also stressed that an armed provocation act committed at the DMZ at the same time the enemy side is more frantically conducting new war provocation maneuvers is a dangerous act which can bring about unexpected consequences. Our side's senior member, strongly protesting the enemy's firing acts, demanded that the enemy side take responsible measures so that such an incident will not recur.

KIM IL-SONG CALL FOR EASING TENSION, TALKS CITED

[NODONG SINMUN 6 August editorial: "Let Us Open the Road of Reunification by Easing Tension and by Using the Method of Negotiations"]

[Text] We greet the 15th anniversary of the publication of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's immortal classic work: "The Joint Struggle of the Asian Revolutionary People AGainst the U.S. Imperialists Will Surely Be Victorious."

In a historic speech he delivered on 6 August 1971, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song analyzed the situation at that time at home and abroad in a scientific manner and set forth an epochal policy for holding dialogue and conducting negotiations between the North and South in an extensive manner as a new measure for improving and developing relations between the North and South and for opening a peaceful phase of the fatherland's reunification.

The Great Leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught:

We are ready to meet at any time with all political parties, social organizations, and individual figures in South Kore, including the Democratic Republican Party.

Improving relations between the North and South through dialogue and negotiations and the country's peaceful reunification are a consistent stand and policy firmly assumed and pursued by our party in resolving questions concerning the internal affairs of the people. Only through dialogue and negotiations can we settle relations between the North and South to meet the people's intent and interest, prevent a war, and preserve durable peace. The policy for negotiations is a most just policy that can realize the demands of the contemporary era and the people.

Thanks to the policy set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song to conduct negotiations, the barrier that had blocked the way for a long time was destroyed; high-level political talks were arranged for the first time between the North and South; and the historic 4 July joint statement was issued with the three-point principle for the fatherland's reunification -- independence, peaceful reunification, and grand national unity -- as its basis.

Declaring at home and abroad that having the North and South which differ from each other in ideologies and systems and which confront each other, sit together to discuss the internal affairs of the people and achieving the fatherland's reunification based on the three-point principle as the common program of the North and South, proved the great vitality of our party's policy for negotiations.

Publication of the 4 July joint statement showed that the North and South should traverse the road of dialogue and negotiations in resolving questions concerning the people and that there is no other way than this road to reunify the fatherland peacefully.

Valuing success attained by the policy for negotiations, our party and the government of the republic have repeatedly advanced practical proposals for cementing the severed ties of the people and for reunifying the country, and have exerted a sincere effort to implement these proposals. Proposals advanced by our party and the government of the republic, including five point policy for the fatherland's reunification, implementation of the three-point principle, and the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo are aimed, without exception at improving relations between the two sides through dialogue and negotiations and at opening a peaceful phase in resolving the reunification question. However, none of our sincere efforts to improve relations and achieve the fatherland's reunification have been successful; graver obstacles have been laid on the road to the country's reunification with the passage of time; and the danger of perpetual national division and war has further increased. The splittist maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges, who do not desire the reunification of our country, have caused this grave consequence.

The South Korean puppets have violated the North-South joint statement, whose basic content is the three-point principle, by issuing, under the manipulation of the U.S. imperialists, a policy for the simultaneous entry into the United Nations of the North and South; have made the work of the coordination committee -- the work of implementing the agreed provisions in the joint statement -- fail, and have made relations between the North and South retrograde to the state existing before the dialogue by instilling the consciousness of confrontation into the people through anticommunist commotion.

Since the Chon Tu-hwan ring seized power, the anticommunist confrontation rackets have become much more wicked.

While clamorously babbling about the nonexistent military supremacy of the North and about the threat of southward invasion, the puppets have extremely heightened tension by increasing their military capabilities and by repeatedly kicking up war exercise rackets with the U.S. imperialists, simulating a war of northward invasion.

The puppets have cruelly suppressed students and the patriotic people for demanding democratic rights and the fatherland's reunification. by mobilizing puppet army troops, they have slaughtered thousands of peaceful demonstrators in Kwangju. Although the Chon Tu-hwan ring has boisterously babbled about dialogue and reunification, this ia a smokescreen designed to conceal its splittist nature. North-South dialogue, including the Red Cross talks, which was arranged by our initiative proposal and in relation to which steps were taken to relieve the flood-stricken South Korean people, has been suspended once again due to the "Team Spirit" joint military exercise staged by the puppets with the U.S. imperialists.

We have advanced a proposal for holding tripartite talks to conclude a peace agreement between us and the United States and to adopt the declaration of nonaggression between us and South Korea so we can prevent the danger of war, alleviate tension in Korea, and provide a favorable condition for achieving peaceful reunification. We have also advanced a proposal for holding talks among persons in military authority to take practical measurs for alleviating tension, such as the suspension of military exercises and of the act of increasing military capabilities and the reduction of Army troops and armaments. Our proposals have proceeded from a sincere desire to improve relations through dialogue and negotiations and to open a phase for easing tension and achieving peaceful reunification. However, the U.S. imperialits and the puppets have ignored all of these proposals. By staging war exercises, they have suspended the dialogue that has already been arranged. They say that they cannot hold a dialogue designed to ease tension. Is this an attitude of desiring dialogue and reunification?

Without eliminating the state of tension, which has been further intensified in our country with the passage of time, we cannot resume the suspended dialogue and resolve the question of improving relations between the North and South, nor can we open a new phase for achieving peace and peaceful reunification. The current situation shows that without holding dialogue -- a practical measure for preventing the danger of war and for alleviating tension -- we cannot smoothly advance other dialogues. This is one of the major reasons the KPA Supreme Command has advanced a new peace proposal for holding talks between military authorities. Our proposal for holding talks between military authorities is realized, this will no doubt greatly contribute to preventing the danger of war on the Korean peninsula, to alleviating tension, to preserving peace, and to providing an atmosphere of dialogue. Nevertheless, by flatly refusing to accept our fair and just peace proposal, which is acceptable to everyone, the U.s. imperialists and South Korean puppets have willfully blocked the road to dialogue, detente, and peace; and have brazenly embarked on the road of confrontation and war.

Refusing to accept our peace proposal, the South Korean puppets have babbled about resuming dialogue. Confrontation and the commotion of war cannot be compatible with dialogue. We cannot resolve questions peacefully when the sentiments of confrontation and war are instilled in the people.

The South Korean puppets' reference to resuming dialogue while traversing the road of confrontation and war after refusing to accept the proposal to hold talks among persons in military authority to alleviate tension is an attempt to prevent the influence of our rational peace proposal.

Alleviating tension and preserving a durable peace on the Korean peninsula are the firm will of every fellow countryman and the unanimous demand of the peace-loving people of the world. Proceeding from its national duty before the Korean people and from a sense of mission before mankind, our party and the government of the republic have consistently exerted every possible effort to resolve the Korean question peacefully through dialogue and negotiations. Confrontation with strength will only result in a military clash.

Instead of running counter to the trend of the times by traversing the road of confrontation and war, the United States and the South Korean ruling clique should respond without delay to our proposal to hold talks between persons in military authority to alleviate tension and achieve peace. Preventing the danger of a nuclear war and preserving peace on the Korean peninsula today is a vital question related to the existence of the people and the urgent task to guarantee world peace and security. To provide a reliable guarantee for peace in Korea under circumstances in which great quantities of nuclear weapons are deployed in South Korea, we should turn the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free zone of peace devoid of nuclear weapons and bases, just as the government of the republic declared in a statement on 23 June. By keeping silence concerning our peace proposal, the United States and the South Korean ruling clique have taken off the mask of peace they have been wearing.

The U.S. imperialists do not desire peace in Korea. The U.S. imperialists have consistently pursued the policy of aggression and war in South Korea, and their adventurous military activities have recently reached a graver stage. Having accelerated preparations for a nuclear war by deploying in South Korea more than 40,000 aggressive troops, approximately 1 million puppet army troops, and various types of sophisticated military hardware, including more than 1,000 nuclear weapons, the U.S. imperialists are brazenly forging ahead with a plan to build 36 special-purpose nuclear weapons storehouses called WS-3's in Kunsan, South Korea.

Having formulated a U.S.-South Korea joint defense plan, the U.S. imperialists are reorganizing the organizational and command systems of army units to help U.S. and puppet army troops carry out hostile activities at any moment. According to the plan to modernize the equipment of U.S. forces occupying South Korea and of the puppet army, they have deployed in South Korea sophisticated military hardware, including Stinger and Red Eye missiles, rockets, helicopters for offensive use, and even binary chemical weapons, notorious weapons of murder. They recently transferred F-16 fighter bombers to the puppets and had them deploy these planes for operation.

Because the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets have traversed the road of confrontation and war by refusing to accept our repeated peace proposal, our country is on the verge of war, and the multilateral talks, which are in a state of suspension, face the danger of rupture.

The current grave situation that has developed in our country urgently demands that all Korean people unite and rise in a pan-national struggle to prevent the perpetual division of the people and the danger of war and to achieve peace and reunification. Without reunification and peace, there should be no patriotism among our people, who face the danger of perpetual division and war.

Those who truly love the fatherland and value the future of the people should embark along the road of saving the country -- a patriotic road to peace and to the country's peaceful reunification -- and should resolutely rise in the antiwar and antinuclear struggle to turn the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free zone of peace.

Our people will never allow the fatherland to become a nuclear war battleground for the U.S. imperialists, and we will never allow our people to be offered as a sacrifice to the aggressors' policy of confrontation. To eliminate the source of war from the Korean peninsula and guarantee a durable peace there, we should end the U.S. imperialists' fascist colonial rule over South Korea and achieve the independence and democratization of society and the country's independent and peaceful reunification.

The U.S. imperialists should abandon the bellicose stand opposing talks designed to alleviate tension and peace with us and stop maneuvers for aggression and war in South Korea. They should withdraw from South Korea without delay, taking along with them the U.S. forces and all their lethal weapons, including nuclear weapons.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring should abandon its treacherous desire to live forever in the bosom of the imperialists and should stop criminal maneuvers of confrontation and war -- maneuvers to drive its fellow countrymen into the disaster of war by subserviently following the foreign forces' policy of aggression and war.

As long as the victorious banner of saving the country and achieving reunification provided by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the wise leadership of our glorious party exist, our people's cause to achieve the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification will be victorious. Through the united effort of all the people, our people will check and thwart the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique to provoke a new war and divide the people and will achieve without fail the national cause of preserving a durable peace in Korea and reunifying the fatherland.

SOCIALIST COUNTRIES OPPOSE TWO KOREAS UN ENTRY

[Text] Pyongyang August 2 (KCNA) -- The consultative meeting of vice-ministers of foreign affairs of socialist countries held in Hungary on July 29 supported the proposals for Korean reunification and decisively rejected the criminal proposal for "simultaneous entry into the United Nations" of the North and South of Korea.

Pointing to the international situation, the delegates of the Soviet Union, Poland, the German Democratic Republic, Romania, Cuba and Hungary stressed in unison that the question of Korean reunification should be dealt with in the U.N. General Assembly this year, too.

The GDR delegate strongly denounced the proposal for the "simultaneour entry of two parts of Korea into the U.N." and stated tht the GDR would resolutely struggle against the attempt of the imperialists to deal with the Korean question like the German question.

The Cuban delegate referred to the importance of the historical meeting between the great leader Comrade Kin Il-song and Comrade Fidel Castro and stressed that Cuba would decisively oppose the enemy's proposal for "simultaneous entry into the U.N."

The Soviet delegate said that the Soviet Union would fully support the DPRK's proposal for national reunification adn her peace initiatives not only in the U.N. General Assembly but on all occasions.

The delegates of Hungary and other countries said they realized more clearly the nature of the enemy's scheme for "simultaneous entry into the U.N." and would speak against it in the U.N. General Assembly this year.

SEOUL ONLY OLYMPICS TO BRING CRISIS TO MOVEMENT

SK041025 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1013 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 4 (KCNA) -- The Olympic Games cannot be held in South Korea where fascism is on the rampage, stresses NODONG SINMUN today in a signed article. South Korea is unstable politically and is fraught with the permanent danger of war and human rights are violated institutionally there, it says, and continues:

Under the baton of the U.S. imperialists, the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique has issued such suppressive orders as "emergency mobilization order" almost every day and keeps suppressive forces over one million strong in brutally cracking down on the patriotic democratic forces of South Korea. The fascist clique arrested 151,560 people in the first five months of this year alone. A large number of people are put to medieval torture in more than 600 prisons and torture rooms in South Korea and not a day passes without seeing people shedding blood. There is no guarantee for people's safety and freedom of activity.

Participating in the Olympic Games to be held in South Korea means shutting their eyes to the brutal suppression of human rights by the Chon Tu-hwan group on the plea of the Olympiad and encouraging the fascist clique to force continued bloodshed upon the South Korean people.

It is as clear as noonday that the South Korean students and people calling for the resignation of the Chon Tu-hwan group and the overthrow of the dictatorial "regime" would not remain an onlooker to the Olympic Games which will serve as a means to prolong the dictator's days in power. If the Olympiad is held only in Seoul, the Olympic movement will meet an irrevocable, serious crisis, emphasizes the paper.

OPPOSITION IN SOUTH TO ASIAN GAMES, OLYMPICS CITED

[NODONG SINMUN 6 August commentary: "Heed Should Be Paid to the People's Voice"]

[Text] As reported on 1 August, approximately 1,000 students from nine universities in Seoul, defying the bestial suppression of the oppressive police, staged campus demonstrations and shouted such slogans as "Let us struggle to block the 1986 Asian Games and the unilateral hosting of the 1988 Olympic Games." On 3 August, college students in the eastern part of Seoul collectively rose to say that they oppose the Asian Games, which will victimize poor people. This advance is an entirely just and righteous act which reflects the unanimous demand of the South Korean people.

From the beginning, puppet traitor Chon Tu-hwan's attempt to host the Olympic Games and the Asian Games in South Korea was to present South Korea, a colony, as an independent state, to create a favorable environment for the creation of two Koreas, and to establish a foothold to lengthen his term of office. Thus, these dirty objectives are against the aspirations of the people.

The criminal maneuvers the puppets are holding on the pretext of preparing for the Asian Games are further enraging the South Korean people.

At present, the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique is using the Asian Games as an excuse to suppress the people. On the pretext of so-called security and on the pretext of maintaining order, the puppet clique has continued to issue oppressive orders, since early this year. Thus, South Korea has been placed in a de facto state of martial law and the youths, students, and others who demand independence and democratization have been arrested, imprisoned, put on trial, and punished indiscriminately each day.

Using the Asian Games as a pretext, confrontation and the war commotions have been frantically staged. The "Ulchi-86" exercise, which recently harassed people everywhere in South Korea, was also staged on the pretext of preventing a southward invasion on the eve of the Asian Games. Using the Asian Games as a pretext, the puppets have gravely encroached upon the people's lives. To realize his dirty objectives, the puppet traitor has continued to borrow money, adding to the enormous debt already incurred. Thus, the people have been placed in the trap of foreign debt and the economy has been driven more deeply into bankrupty.

Babbling about beautifying urban areas and redevelopment, they are ever expelling people from their makeshift homes. Meanwhile, by babbling about patriotism and staging the farce of collecting contributions, they are atrociously squeezing the people's purses. It is entirely natural for the South Korean people to denounce and reject the Asian Games and the 1988 Olympic Games as festivals of debt for traitor Chon Tu-hwan to stay in power.

South Korea's youths, students, and people will never allow the Asian Games -- which are creating obstacles to reunification of the nation -- to harass the democratization movement and create difficulties for the people's lives. People should lend their ears to the South Korean people's just voice of opposing the Asian Games, which will help the U.S. imperialists' rule over South Korea and the traitor Chon Tu-hwan's fascist military dictatorship and which will victimize the people.

U.S. 'MOBILE STRIKE FORCES' FOR USE IN ASIA

SKL041033 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1022 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 4 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Monday carries a signed article headlined "What Are 'Mobile Strike Forces' aimed at?" The commentary exposes that large reinforcement of the "mobile strike forces" of the U.S. imperialists is aimed to carry out the strategy of first strike and maintain their collapsing ruling system by means of armed intervention throughout the world. It says:

The U.S. imperialists formed the "joint mobile force command" in March 1980. One of the characteristics of the mobile strike forces is that the strike forces are diverse in the composition of arms. The strike forces consist of "crack units" of the ground, marine, naval and air forces and also the state defence forces as their reserves. Its another characteristic is that the military equipment of the forces is the latest one. [sentence as received]

Since Reagan took power, the U.S. imperialists have taken various measures to further strengthen the "mobile strike forces."

As one of the measures, they are reinforcing the "mobile strike forces" on different scales, taking into consideration the seriousness of the "state of contingency," balance of forces, region and distance. What draws particular attention is the sharp increase of the mobile and combat capability of the forces. In reinforcing the "mobile strike forces" the U.S. imperialists seek to prop up their puppet regimes with direct armed intervention when they are in danger in face of the people's struggle. They also try to maintain their economic "concessions" and "security" of supply routes in different parts of the world.

The spearhead of attack of the U.S. imperialists' "mobile strike forces" is now directed against Asia. The Okinawa-based U.S. Third Marine Division, Hawaii-based U.S. 25th Infantry Division and U.S. 7th Infantry Division in U.S. mainland are units of the "mobile strike forces" to be hurled first into the Korean peninsula in case of "contingency." They participate in the "Team Spirit" war exercises every year.

REAGAN MASS-PRODUCING CHEMICAL ARMS FOR NATO, ROK

[Text] Pyongyang August 4 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Monday in a commentary denounces Reagan's attempt to mass-produce binary chemical weapons as a vicious challenge to the world public opinion demanding the complete abolition of all chemical weapons. The author of the commentary headlined "In An Attempt To Brandish New Chemical Weapon" says:

Recently, Reagan formally informed the Congress that "conditions demanded by it" concerning the production of new chemical weapons were provided. This is a proclamation of his plan to start full-scale production of new chemical weapons. Approving of the production of new chemical weapons last year, U.S. Congress, apprehensive of rejection of public opinion at home and abroad, said it would allot the fund on condition of the "consent of NATO member nations." The U.S. imperialists got the "consent" by crafty means at various meetings of NATO.

Reagan takes chemical weapons as well as nuclear weapons as a basic means to achieve "military predominance" for realizing the wild ambition for world supremacy and intends to increase the number of binary chemical weapons to five million from three million within the 80s. He plans to allot ten billion dollars for this. The U.S. imperialists are going to deploy binary chemical weapons in Western Europe and South Korea. They must stop the production of new chemical weapons and abolish all chemical weapons as demanded by the world people, emphasizes the commentary.

FOUNDING OF CHINESE PLA COMMEMORATED 1 AUG

O Chin-u Greets Zhang Aiping

SK010432 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0412 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 1 (KCNA) -- Vice Marshal of the Korean People's Army O Chin-u, minister of People's Armed Forces, sent a message of greetings to Zhang Aiping, minister of national defence of the People's Republic of China, on the occasion of the 59th anniversary of the founding of the Chinese People's Liberation Army.

The message stresses that the Chinese People's Liberation Army founded as the first revolutionary armed forces of the Chinese people in the raging flames has made a tremendous contribution to the great victory of the Chinese revolution by waging the valiant struggle for class and national liberation.

Expressing the belief that the great Korea-China friendship will grow stronger and develop with each passing day, it sincerely wishes the minister of national defence great success in his future work for realizing the modernisation of national defence and increasing the combat capacity of the Chinese People's Liberation Army.

NODONG SINMUN Article

[Text] Pyongyang August 1 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today carries a signed article headlined "CPLA which has covered a road of victory" on the occasion of the 59th anniversary of the founding of the Chinese People's Liberation Army. The article says:

The Chinese People's Liberation Army which was founded in the flames of a rigorous struggle for national and class liberation is the genuine revolutionary armed forces of the Chinese people. It has discharged its honorable duty with credit. The CPLA won victory in the revolutionary war at home and the anti-Japanese war by displaying unparalleled valor and self-sacrificing spirit. After the founding of the republic it has contributed to the building of socialism, reliably defending the motherland and the gains of revolution. In those days it has grown into steel-like ranks well prepared politically, ideologically and in military technique under the correct leadership of the Communist Party of China. Today it is increasing its power in every way to successfully fulfill the mission and duty it has assumed for the motherland and people.

Under the correct leadership of the Communist Party of China the CPLA soldiers are being further tempered in ideology and will and the militancy of the units are growing day by day. The achievements made by the Chinese people in socialist construction are associated with the feats of the officers and men of the CPLA. Today its commanders and fighters are making a great contribution to the attainment of the grand targets set by the party by taking an active part in the construction for four modernizations. The CPLA enjoys love and trust of the people for its feats for the motherland and the people.

FOREIGN LITERARY MASTERPIECES TO BE TRANSLATED

[Text] Pyongyang August 2 (KCNA) -- Work is in progress for the publication of selected works of world literature in Korea.

"Selected Works of Gorkiy," "Selected Dramas of Schiller," "Shuihuzhuan" (Water Margin), "Sanguoyanyi" (Stories of Three States) and other works are shortly expected. The planned reprinted selected works of world literature will consist of 100 volumes involving different genres -- novel, poem, drama, etc. Chronologically compiled in the selected works will be those by world-known writers including Gorkiy, Lu Xun, Shakespeare and Balzac.

The publishing house of literature and art has undertaken this publication, which will be completed within 4 or 5 years.

Many works of foreign literature have been translated in Korea in the past. The Soviet novels "Mother," "How the Steel Was Tempered", "Blockade" (4 parts) and the Chinese novels "Song of Youth", "House", etc are widely known among the Korean readers.

Meanwhile, the publication of Korean editions of foreign fairy tales, fables and world folktails [as received] for children is going on briskly and the translation and publication of a 100-volume selection of world juvenile literature is in the final stage.

NODONG SINMUN URGES ECONOMIC SELF-RELIANCE

[NODONG SINMUN 5 August editorial: "Let Us Highly Demonstrate the Spirit of Standing on Our Own Feet"]

[Text] Standing on our own feet by overcoming difficulties and bottlenecks by our own strength and cherishing the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle is the revolutionary spirit and trait of struggle which our party members and workers should highly demonstrate today. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: We should do everything by our own strength instead of attempting to depend on the strength of others.

Standing on one's own feet is a demand of the chuche idea and a traditional principle of struggle consistently maintained by our party in its long and arduous revolutionary struggle. At every moment of difficulty, our party victoriously pioneered the single path of revolution by more highly upholding the slogan of self-reliance and overcoming all difficulties. Furthermore, standing on our own feet with the slogan of self-reliance is important today because we are faced with grave tasks. We should victoriously push ahead with this year's struggles while continuously waging the struggle to implement the 10 major prospective goals in socialist economic construction. To do so, we should resolve all problems by our own strength, while innovating technology and mobilizing all reserves and potential.

Thanks to our party's wise leadership, firm foundations have been realized by their own strength. For example, the Musan Mine Complex has firm material and technological foundations on which mining and transport facilities -- including large trucks, excavators and well diggers, and an ore dressing facility -- can be repaired and maintained and where its strength is its own technological innovations.

In particular, complexes have been reasonably organized by party measures so their unique and creative characteristics can be displayed more highly. Because of this we can resolve any problem of production and construction if we properly organize and mobilize our internal strenghth. Considering this, our party put forth as a more important demand that plants and enterprises must stand on their own feet. Standing on one's own feet while resolving everything by one's own strength is the revolutionary trait which should be displayed in all areas of struggle. All functionaries and workers should courageously carry out the struggle to resolve problems arising in production and construction by their own strength. To do so, they should have the firm determination and resolution to walk on their own feet.

There may be a problem and another task may be put forth after one is resolved as party policy is implemented. In particular, under circumstances in which we are accelerating the marching speed of economic construction to uphold lofty targets, everyone should possess firm political and ideological resolution. Unless one's resolution to carry out gigantic tasks by one's own strength is firm, one cannot accelerate one's march. Our functionaries and workers should handle everything with the confidence and resolution to carry out any revolutionary task by their own strength and with a spirit of unconditionality for the party's policy and should push ahead with this year's struggle by assuming such a position and trait.

Standing on one's own feet is a demonstration of awareness worthy of masters and a lofty sense of responsibility for the revolutionary mission assigned. Only when one has the lofty consciousness to implement revolutionary tasks to the end in a responsible manner can boldness and courage be displayed and can creativity and wisdom be demonstrated. All functionaries and workers should realize that the planned tasks assigned to their enterprises, units, and themselves are the party's directives and legal tasks which they should carry out to the end by assuming all responsibility, and they should accomplish these tasks in a timely manner without fail at any cost.

Dependence on others is basically opposed to carrying out assigned missions responsively and by one's own strength. If functionaries look to higher echelons without trusting their own strength, they can neither fully operate the machines and facilities, no matter how excellent an engineering base they may have, nor can they implement production plans in the end. Looking to the higher echelon with the idea that if one asks for help from the higher echelon one will naturally have it and the higher echelon will resolve one's problem has nothing to do with a position worthy of masters or with accomplishing the assigned revolutionary missions in a responsible manner.

The exploits of the 10 party members of Nagwon are so brilliant because they have fulfilled all tasks assigned by the party by their own strength by traversing the difficult path without asking for help, which they could have asked of the state.

Correctly realizing the political trust and expectations of the party and the leader, functionaries of plants and enterprises, in particular those of plants and enterprises to which the party directs its strength, should strive to resolve any task by their own strength. Pushing ahead with work in a lightning manner by overcoming all difficulties is also important in standing on one's own feet. This is an important trait of struggle which the people who carry out the revolution by upholding the banner of the chuche idea should display.

Only those who work creatively by breaking through difficulties can turn unfavorable conditions into favorable conditions by putting forth a striking idea and finding out correct methods and excellently accomplish any task, no matter how difficult it may be. No matter what the work and where they may carry it out, our functionaries and workers should break through any difficulty by their own strength with the spirit of crossing a flaming river and a rugged road and should carry out any arduous revolutionary work with more persistent spirit. Such traits should be displayed, in particular, by producers of ore, coal, power, steel, and iron, and by transportation workers. Such traits should also be highly demonstrated at the construction site of he Taechon Power Plant and the Sunchon Vinalon Complex, at land reclamation sites, at the northern railway construction site and at other construction sites of major plants.

The spirit of struggle to overcome any difficulty is a trait based on firm faith in one's assigned work and revolutionary optimism.

Without confidence in the assigned work, one will experience difficulty in the assigned mission and will be unable to be optimistic about victory. The builders of the Nampo lockgate created miracles earning the admiration of the people of the world because they broke through difficulties with revolutionary optimism and the firm belief that they could accomplish anything if they did as directed by the party at the difficult moment when they had to offer even their lives.

Our functionaries and workers should excellently carry out planned tasks assigned to their sectors and units by persistently waging the struggle with confidence in the revolutionary mission assigned them. The traits of standing on one's own feet should be more highly demonstrated among guiding functionaries. Guiding functionaries are the commanding members of the revolution who directly organize and execute the struggle to implement the party's policy in a responsible manner in their relevant unit.

If functionaries carry out their work with determination to stand on their own feet, the masses will follow suit.

The lofty revolutionary awareness of functionaries is being displayed in carrying out their revolutionary tasks assigned by the party by their own strength to the end in a sincere manner. With the idea of standing on their own feet according to the demand of the chuche idea, guidance functionaries in plants and enterprises including complexes should boldly carry out technological innovations, resolve all problems by mobilizing what can be mobilized, and accomplish the national economic plans without fail.

The role of party organizations is important in standing on one's own feet. All party organizations should further strengthen chuche idea indoctrination among functionaries and workers and encourage them to highly demonstrate the revolutionary spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle in their struggle to implement the party's policy so the entire nation overflows with the revolutionary trait of self-reliance.

KPA SOLDIERS TO HELP BUILD KUMGANGSAN POWER PLANT

[Text] According to NODONG SINMUN this afternoon, the Kumgangsan power plant, which will be the largest hydroelectric power plant in our country, is to be built. Building the Kumgangsan power plant has great significance in reaching the 100 billion kwh electricity targets which was set forth by our party as one of the 10 major prospective targets for socialist economic construction.

The KPA soldiers who will participate in building this power plant have arrived on the spot and have undertaken preparation work for construction. The KPA soldiers who will help build the power plant are full of a lofty sense of honor and pride in engaging in the struggle to realize the party's grand idea and are heightening their firm determination to demonstrate their power of one-is-a-match-for-100 again in building the largest hydroelectric power plant, a monumental edifice of the 1980's.

UNC SAYS DMZ SHOOTING INCIDENT STARTED BY NORTH

SK060856 Seoul YONHAP in English 0845 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 6 (YONHAP) -- Two North Korean guard posts in the central part of the demiliterized zone (DMZ) dividing the Korean peninsula fired more than 200 machine gun rounds at the United Nations Command (UNC) guard posts Tuesday night, the UNC announced Wednesday. According to the UNC announcement, there were no casualities in the incident, which began at around 8 p.m. (100 GMT Tuesday) and lasted about seven minutes. The gunfire prompted UNC civil police "to take appropriate self-defensive firing measures," it said.

UNC officials dismissed North Korea's claim that the UNC soldiers fired first as being "incorrect" and said that the UNC will charge the North Korean Army with violating paragraph 6 of the 1953 Armistice Agreement at the next Military Armistice Commission (MAC) meeting. "Preliminary investigation substantiates last (Tuesday) night's report from the DMZ police that the firing was initiated by the North Koreans," they said. The UNC component of MAC dispatched a multinational investigative unit to the area, which is in the central frontline, on Wednesday morning, according to the announcement.

UNC RETURNS BODY OF DROWNED NORTH

SK052233 Seoul YONHAP in English 1157 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 5 (YONHAP) -- The United Nations Command Tuesday returned to North Korea the dead body of a North Korean who had been found drowned along the Imjin River just south of the western part of the Demilitarized Zone last Wednesday.

The return of the body was made at the 478th secretariat meeting of the Korean Armistice Commission, the UNC said. At the 30-minute session of the secretariat meeting, the UNC side also delivered to the north the personal belongings of the dead person.

OFFICIAL URGES NORTH TO RESUME ECONOMIC TALKS

SK060329 Seoul YONHAP in English 0315 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 6 (YONHAP) -- South Korea Wednesday again urged North Korea to return to the conference table after Pyongyang failed to reply to its proposal to resume the inter-Korean economic talks. Seoul first made the proposal in a telephone message on July 11, suggesting that the two Koreas hold their sixth economic talks on Wednesday, Aug 6.

Mun Hui-Kap, South Korea's chief delegate to the inter-Korean economic talks, issued a statement denouncing North Korea for driving the economic talks to a point of crisis by rejecting Seoul's repeated proposals to resume the talks after unilaterally postponing the sixth talks, originally scheduled for Jan 22. He called "unreasonable" North Korea's contention that the inter-Korean talks could be resumed only after so-called "trilateral military talks" involving Washington, Seoul and Pyongyang make progress. Mun emphasized that North Korea should not set any preconditions for the resumption of dialogue or unilaterally ignore agreements already reached between the two Koreas if it is genuinely interested in economic exchanges and cooperation between South and North Korea.

The chief delegate called on Pyongyang to respond at the earliest possible date to Seoul's proposal to hold the sixth economic talks. South Korea also proposed that the preliminary meeting for arranging parliamentary talks be resumed on Aug. 13 and that the full-fledged Red Cross talks be held Aug. 28.

KIM TAE-CHUNG AGAIN UNDER HOUSE ARREST 6 AUG

[Text] Seoul, Aug 6 (AFP) -- South Korean opposition leader Kim Tae-chung was put under house arrest Wednesday and told by police that he could not attend a political meeting scheduled for later in the day, his aides said Wednesday. Mr Kim's aides told reporters that a police contingent which had pulled out Tuesday reappeared Wednesday morning around the house of the 60-year-old opposition politician. Mr Kim has been put under house arrest 30 times since he returned to South Korea in February of last year from two years of voluntary exile in the United States.

The authorities said Mr Kim risked being put back in prison for breaking laws which forbid him to engage in political activities because of a 1980 sedition conviction. South Korean president Chon Tu-hwan has refused to grant Mr Kim an amnesty despite strong demands from the opposition.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP) said Wednesday that police had forcibly stopped a Seoul printing shop from publishing a party paper that carried the full text of a "Declaration of Conscience" made by a dismissed government official. Kim Hyung-Bae [name as received] 34, a former official in the prime minister's office, released the statement at opposition party headquarters last week. In the statement, issued a week after he was dismissed for allegedly taking part in an anti-government demonstration, he denounced government violations of basic human rights.

POLICE SEIZE OPPOSITION PUBLICATIONS 6 AUG

SK052357 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 6 Aug 86 p 8

[Text] Police searched the offices of the Council for Promotion of Democracy (CPD) and the "Democratic Alpine Club" in downtown Seoul for about one hour from 1 a.m. yesterday. The council is cochaired by Kim Yong-sam and Kim Tae-chung. Kim Yong-sam also heads the Alpine Club. Equipped with search warrants, police seized about 3,500 copies of the CPD's periodical called MINJU TONGSIN (Democratic Correspondence) and the 3,000 copies of the Alpine Club's publication called CHAYUEUI CHONG (Bell of Freedom). Those publications reportedly contained stories on the controversial "Puchon sex abuse case." Meanwhile, police restricted Kim Tae-chung at his Tonggyo-dong home yesterday. He was scheduled to attend an outdoor summer camp of CPD that opened at a campsite near Yangju, Kyonggi-do, early yesterday morning.

ASSEMBLY PANEL POSTPONED; OPPOSITION STAGES SIT-IN

[Text] Rival lawmakers of the National Assembly Home Affairs Committee yesterday failed to meet and opposition lawmakers went into a sit-in protest late last night, demanding the convocation of the panel to discuss the alleged "sexual torture" by police.

The panel was stalled as the ruling Democratic Justice Party persistently called for an open apology from an opposition lawmaker for his "pro-communist" remarks he had made in a previous House session last June, as a precondition to open the committee.

Justice Minister Kim Song-ki testified the claim of Miss Kwon In-suk, a criminal suspect, that she was raped by Mun Ki-tong, a policeman, was found groundless in the recent prosecution investigation.

Upholding an earlier announcement of the results of the prosecution probe into the scandal in a session of the Legislation-Judiciary Committee, he said that Kwon was only beaten several times in the bust by Mun, who was interrogating her.

The allegation of the former student activist, suspected of having forged a resident's registration card to get a job at an industrial firm, concealing her academic career, has escalated to a major political issue, with religious circles and the opposition camp demanding the revelation of the true picture.

The panel suffered hours adjournment after its opening, as the rival members were at odds over the presence of the prosecutor-general on the panel.

Members of the ruling Democratic Justice Party and the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party were also pitted against each other over the NKDP members' demand that the prosecution present the record of its investigation of the alleged police torture

The members of the Legislation-Judiciary Committee will meet again at 2 p.m. today.

NKDP DRAFT SEEKS REDUCED POWER FOR PRESIDENT

SK050006 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 5 Aug 86 p 1

[Text] The major opposition New Korea Democratic Party yesterday presented its own draft of constitutional amendments providing for a direct popular election of the President under presidential government.

The draft, which seeks reduced presidential power, introduces vice presidency, stipulating the term of the President and the vice president be four years and that re-election be permitted for only one time.

The current Constitution provides "the President shall be elected by the presidential electoral college through a secret ballot." It also says "the term of office of the President shall be seven years and the President shall not be re-elected."

The opposition draft eliminates the presidential authority to dissolve the National Assembly (parliament) and to propose constitutional revision.

It says "the President shall be the Head of the Executive Branch and represent the State vis-a-vis foreign states," while the existing Constitution stipulates "the President shall be the Head of State and represent the State vis-a-vis foreign states."

On the other hand, the NDKP draft revives the National Assembly's authority to inspect state administration and the Supreme Court's power to review the unconstitutionality of laws.

Besides, it introduces "citizens' rights to resist," saying in its preamble that "citizens can exercise the rights to offer resistance when the Constitution is destroyed or when the fundamental rights established in the Constitution are encroached upon in a clear way."

The draft constitutional revision, passed through the party officeholders meeting, will be referred to the Executive Council today for final approval and then submitted to the National Assembly Friday.

In addition, the draft bans political intervention by the military, saying in its general provisions "the Armed Forces of the Republic of Korea shall be charged with the holy mission of defending the Republic and shall not intervene in politics under any circumstances."

It also bans the policy of permission or censorship of speech and the press, as well as the permission requested for the assembly and association.

It further calls for the direct election of heads of local governments.

The ruling Democratic Justice Party and the minor opposition Korea National Party reportedly plan to submit their own drafts of constitutional amendments to the Assembly Aug. 20 and Friday, respectively.

The Assembly Special Constitution Revision Committee is supposed to deliberate the three drafts to produce a single draft Constitution by interparty agreement as has been agreed by rival parties.

DJP, NKDP 'ATTACK' U.S. PRESSURE TO REVALUE WON

SK051253 Seoul YONHAP in English 1239 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 5 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's ruling and opposition lawmakers launched an all-out attack on U.S. pressure to appreciate the Korean won against U.S. dollar in a session of the Finance Committee of the National Assembly on Tuesday. Members of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) called for maintaining the current basket system for a floating rate, pointing out any artificial appreciation would deal a decisive blow to Korea's export industry. Lawmakers of the opposition camp also argued that the U.S. offer to open negotiations with Korea on the issue should be rejected.

The lawmakers also took the issue with the government's decision to import U.S. cigarettes from September against its earlier policy not to bring them in "for the time being." Finance Minister Chung In-yong told the lawmakers in a report that the government has worked out measures to cope effectively with the cigarette import.

The committee was one of the four assembly standing panels that were convened to handle outstanding issues. The three others were home affairs, legislative-judiciary, and trade-industry committees.

'STATEMENT' PRAISES GORBACHEV PROPOSALS

OW020634 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1658 GMT 1 Aug 86

["Statement" -- MONTSAME headline]

[Text] [Dateline indistinct] -- [Passage indistinct] military confrontation. The Mongolian People's Republic regards the concrete and well-weighted proposals put forward by the Soviet leader as a good and realistic basis for improving the entire political situation in Asia and the Pacific area. New peaceloving initiatives of the Soviet Union are aimed at uniting efforts of the Asia-Pacific states for a [word indistinct] search of ways of ensuring peace and security, at solving such urgent and vitally important questions as the settlement of situation in Korean peninsula, the cessation of the nuclear armaments' build up, the decrease of activity of the military fleets in the Pacific, the turning of the Indian Ocean into the zone of peace, the reduction of armed forces and conventional armament, the discussion of [words indistinct] measures and non-use of force in the region.

The growth of tension in the Asia-Pacific region is caused first of all by the speedy increase in military preparations of the USA and its allies. As the Soviet leader pointed out the militarization and the growth of military threat in this part of the globe can assume an especially dangerous character if the road to the arms race is not barred in time.

The MPR Government believes that large-scale proposals set forth by the general secretary of the CPSU CC, M.S. Gorbachev open a real way towards dialogue and mutual action of states in the region, towards achieving the overall Asian and Pacific security. The convening of a Pacific conference as well as the holding of a conference on confidence building measures and non-use of forces proposed by the Soviet Union would be practical steps to establishing such a security.

The existing realities of the region demand from all Asia-Pacific states a sober-minded assessment of the situation and a responsible approach to the questions of ensuring peace and stability and a display of good will, political wisdom and realism.

The Mongolian People's Republic views the decisions of the Soviet Government on bringing home some units of the Soviet military contingent which had been sent to the DRA at the invitation of its government, as an important practical step in accelerating the settlement of situation around Afghanistan. Naturally, such a settlement will depend on the complete cessation of armed intervention against the DRA and on non-admission of interference in the internal affairs of the sovereign Afghan state.

The MPR Government states that the present consideration by the Mongolian and Soviet sides on the question of the withdrawal of a considerable part of the Soviet troops from Mongolia is to promote the establishmentof the overall Asian and Pacfic security and serve the cause of strengthening trust and goodneighbourliness in Asia.

The ideas and initiatives contained in the speech of M.S. Gorbachev by their significance go far beyond the boundary of the region. They reflect the co-ordinated line of the socialist countries and concretize the conception advanced at the 27th CPSU Congress on creating the bases of an all-embracing system of international security taking into consideration the reality in the Asia-Pacific region.

The MPR Government wholely supports the new Soviet initiatives which meet vital interests of the people in our region and their aspirations to live in the conditions of peace and tranquility and will further be actively working in line with the decisions of the 19th MPRP Congress for strengthening peace and stability in Asia and the Far East.

Peace Committee on Proposals

VOPB CARRIES CONTINUATION OF BCP POLITICAL REPORT

BK031211 (Clandestine) Voice of the People of Burma in Burmese 1200 GMT 2 Aug 86

["Continuation of the Political Report of the Burma Communist Party Central Committee presented at the Third National Party Congress" -- read by announcer]

[Text] The capital exporting countries always stood to gain in the finance capitalistic epoch. For instance, creditor nations made sure the arrangements were beneficial to them. Stipulations were included in trade agreements to favor them, such as coal-delivery clauses for ships, security contracts for shipyard construction, and arms sales. A common practice was to require that part of the loan be used to purchase goods from creditor nations or to place orders for arms, or to purchase ships. Hence, capital export also became a method to promote commodity export.

First [as heard], capitalist monopoly combines, cartels, syndicates, and trusts partitioned the domestic market among themselves. Under capitalism, the domestic market is linked to overseas markets. The world market was created a long time ago by capitalism. As capital exports grew, foreign and colonial contacts as well as areas under the influence of monopoly combines also developed in many different ways, and this in turn paved the way for monopoly combines to reach international agreements and form international cartels. On a global scale this was the new phase in the (?organization of capital and production). International cartels and syndicates emerged in such a way.

While the international monopoly capitalist organizations partitioned the world economically, the big capitalist countries also partitioned the whole globe territorially into their colonies. Hence, the partitioning of the earth was completed, and only repartitioning was possible in the future. Since there were no more "free" zones remaining, only the process of transferring from one owner to the other was possible.

In the era of imperialism, the unevenness in development worsened, and as a result, the strength of one in relation to others was constantly changing. On the basis of these changes in strength, struggles intensified among imperialist countries for the repartitioning of colonies and countries under their control which were territories for the source of raw materials, marketing finished goods, investments, and cheap labor.

For this very reason, imperialist wars are inevitable under imperialism. Just as peaceful alliances create conditions for war, war in turn creates peaceful alliances. Hence, a development becomes a cause for another development. In the same manner and based on the same fundamentals of imperialist interaction and relations, the development of peaceful struggle and nonpeaceful struggle, or imperialist peace and imperialist war, alternate in global economic and political spheres.

The imperialist economy is monopoly capitalism in essence. It is decaying, moribund, parasitic, and exploitive capitalism. Imperialism brings out the height of all contradictions possible under capitalism, and just beyond this phase is revolution. Hence, imperialism is also a prelude to social revolution. All the facts stated above are a comprehensive study of Comrade Lenin's teachings.

Received by Heng Samrin

BK301357 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1124 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] Phnom Penh SPK July 30 — Heng Samrin, general secretary of the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea Central Committee, voiced full support for the just struggle waged by the Nicaraguan people under the leadership of the Sandinist National Liberation Front.

In a meeting with the visiting Nicaraguan delegation in Phnom Penh today (30 July), Heng Samrin, also president of the State Council of the People's Republic of Kampuchea, strongly condemned the Reagan administration for granting 100 millions U.S. dollars aid package to the Nicaraguan counterrevolutionaries.

The Kampuchean leader qualifies the guests' visit as a contribution to strengthening the friendship between the two countries. He informed his guests of the success recorded by the Kampuchean people in defending their revolutionary gains and national independence. Heng Samrin wished the friendship and solidarity between the two people further development.

For his part, the Nicaraguan delegation head, Henry Ruiz, expressed warm sentiments of the F.S.L.N., government, and people of Nicaragua toward the party, government, and people of Kampuchea and highly hailed the successes of the Kampuchean revolution. He reiterated Nicaragua's strong support for the efforts made by the Kampuchean people in their national construction and defense.

The delegation left Phnom Penh the same day after concluding its 2-day visit to Kampuchea.

During its stay, the delegation held talks with a Kampuchean party and state delegation led by Chea Soth, Politburo member of the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea Central Committee, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, and minister of planning.

The delegation also laid wreaths at the monument for the dead and the monument to the Vietnamese internationalist combatants. A banquet was given in its honor.

Communique on Visit

[Text] Phnom Penh, 1 Aug (SPK) -- Henry Ruiz, commander of the revolution, member of the national leadership of the Sandinist National Liberation Front, and minister of foreign cooperation of the Republic of Nicaragua, paid an official friendship visit to the PRK from 29 to 30 July. He was greeted by Say Phuthang, member of the KPRP central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the PRK Council of State.

During his stay, Henry Ruiz held talks with Chea Soth, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, and minister of planning. During the meeting, which proceeded in an atmosphere permeated with cordiality, the two sides informed each other of the situation in their respective countries, the international situation, and the bilateral relations.

The two sides stressed the importance of a firm struggle against the common enemies, namely U.S. imperialism and international reaction, for the latter continue to pursue a policy of aggression against and interference in the internal affairs of progressive countries in the world, to support the genocidal Pol Pot gang and other Cambodian reactionaries against the rebirth of the Cambodian people, and to conduct hostile acts against the Sandinist people's revolution thus threatening security in the region.

The Cambodian side expressed its total support for the struggle of the fraternal Nicaraguan people and vigorously condemned the acts of aggression and interference in the internal affairs of other countries by the North American administration, particularly its recent granting of a $100-million aid package to the counterrevolutionaries. It demanded that the U.S. Administration respect the decision of the International Court of Justice on the problem of Nicaragua.

The Nicaraguan side voiced its total support for the struggle waged by the heroic Cambodian people under the leadership of the KPRP against the war of encroachment and overthrow undertaken by the Pol Pot remnants and other Cambodian reactionaries in the pay of the U.S. imperialists working in collusion with the expansionists of the region and other reactionaries.

The Nicaraguan side demanded the legitimate right of the Cambodian people to be seated at the United Nations and other international fora be returned to the PRK.

The two sides expressed their joy at the achievements gained by the revolutions of the two countries and at the constant development of the relationship between them and their conviction that it will be consolidated with each passing day.

During their stay, Henry Ruiz and the other Nicaraguan guests were received by Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State of the PRK. The guests laid wreaths at the monument to the dead and visited various historical and cultural sites.

Bou Thang Message

BK290659 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1200 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Text] Comrade Bou Thang, minister of national defense of the PRK, has sent a message to the families of dead soldiers and disabled or wounded soldiers of the Vietnamese Volunteer Army on the occasion of the SRV's War Dead and Invalids Day. The message reads:

On the occasion of the War Dead and Invalids Day of fraternal Vietnam on 27 July, on behalf of the cadres and combatants of the KPRAF and in my own name, I would like to express deepest gratitude to all comrade war invalids, wounded combatants, families of dead soldiers, and families of all cadres and combatants of the beloved VPA for sacrificing blood and flesh for the revolutionary cause of our Cambodian fatherland.

Under the just and enlightened leadership of the CPV, the Vietnamese people and heroic VPA have handed defeats to the French colonialists, U.S. imperialists, and Beijing expansionist aggressors, fostered the bonds of special militant solidarity between Cambodia and Vietnam, and preserved the tradition of solidarity and combat cooperation with our people and army, liberating the Cambodian people and fatherland from the danger of genocide of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique on 7 January 1979. This is a model of radiant heroism and the noble spirit of proletarian internationalism of the heroic fraternal VPA.

On behalf of the entire people and KPRAF, we will engrave forever in our hearts and minds the great service full of heroism and serenity rendered by our Vietnamese fathers, mothers, sisters, and brothers whose husbands, sons, brothers, or relatives died or were disabled or wounded in Cambodia.

On this occasion, I would like to send our sincere greetings to all wounded, sick or disabled combatants of the Vietnamese Volunteer Army who are being treated at various hospitals and wish all of them a quick recovery. I also wish the families of soldiers fallen in the revolutionary cause the best of health and more and greater successes in defending and building the socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

May the Cambodia-Vietnam special solidarity last forever!

SIHANOUK WRITES MUGABE ON NONALIGNED SEAT

BK030654 (Clandestine) Voice of the Khmer in Cambodian 1100 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, president of the CGDK and the FUNICINPEC [National United Front for an Independent, Neutral, Peaceful, and Cooperative Cambodia], urged the soon-to-come summit conference of nonaligned countries to restore the Cambodian seat in the Nonaligned Movement to the coalition government, regarding the decision of the Havana summit conference as null and void. In his personal letter to His Excellency Robert Mugabe, prime minister of Zimbabwe and president of the Nonaligned Movement, the samdech said that the decision made at the summit conference of the nonaligned countries in Havana in 1979 keeping the Cambodian seat vacant should be rejected.

Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, one of the major personalities who founded the Nonaligned Movement, described the Havana Summit decision on the Cambodian seat as an arbitrary and unilateral one that public opinion can change. He said that only by declaring this decision null and void can justice and legality be preserved. He added that the Nonaligned Movement should allow parties involved in the Cambodian problem to participate so that they can express their views during the summit conference.

In his letter to His Excellency Mugabe, the samdech explained the complex 8-year-old Cambodian problem and noted the successes of the CGDK both on the battlefield in Cambodia and in the international diplomatic field. He said that at present the resistance forces of the CGDK are conducting military operations in various regions throughout the country, particularly in the densely populated Tonle Sap area and around Phnom Penh.

In the same letter, Samdech Norodom Sihanouk stressed that more and more Heng Samrin soldiers have defected to the CGDK and given it necessary support.

At the same time, a diplomatic source said that the coalition government hopes that the new leadership of the Nonaligned Movement will invite Samdech Norodom Sihanouk as Cambodia's representative to attend the summit conference of the nonaligned countries to be held in Harare soon. The same source added that this also depends on the outcome of the Samdech's consultation with the other factions of the coalition government and with the ASEAN countries.

SON SEN GREETS ZHANG AIPING ON PLA ANNIVERSARY

BK030238 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2330 GMT 2 Aug 86

[31 July greetings message from DK National Army Commander in Chief and Minister in Charge of the CCDK Coordinating Committee for National Defense Son Sen to PRC Defense Minister Zhang Aiping]

[Text] To His Excellency Zhang Aiping, defense minister of the PRC:

Esteemed Excellency: On the 59th anniversary of the birth of the glorious Chinese People's Liberation Army [PLA] I would like most gladly to express to you and, through you, to the Chinese PLA warmest congratulations and highest friendly regards on behalf of the DK National Army, the Cambodian people, the CGDK, and in my own name.

The birth of the Chinese PLA constitutes a great historic event not only to the Chinese people and nation but also to the whole world. During the past 59 years, under the enlightened leadership of the CPC, the Chinese PLA has steadfastly continued its tradition of struggle and, together with the Chinese people, has overcome all kinds of obstacle and difficulties to defend and build China with brilliant success, enabling the Chinese people gradually to enjoy greater happiness. Futhermore, following a foreign policy based on the immortal principles of justice advocated by the PRC, the Chinese PLA has always maintained wholehearted solidarity with all weak peoples and countries in the world suffering from injustice and aggression.

I firmly believe that in the not-too-distant future, the Chinese PLA will surely become a modern, powerful country to defend the happiness of the Chinese people and contribute to the defense of world peace.

Despite facing the heavy task requiring it together with the Chinese people, to build and defend the country, the Chinese PLA under the enlightened leadership of the CPC, together with the Chinese people, has always accorded to my Cambodian army and people and the CGDK in their opposition to the Hanoi aggressors unconditional and wholehearted all-round support and assistance, greatly contributing to the victories scored by my Cambodian army and people in the struggle for the survival of the Cambodian nation and the preservation of Cambodia as an independent, peaceful, neutral, and nonaligned country.

On behalf of the Cambodian army and people and the CGDK and in my own name, I take this opportunity to express once again deep and heartfelt gratitude to you and the Chinese PLA.

May the friendship between the two armies, peoples, and states -- Democratic Kampuchea and the PRC -- grow and blossom forever.

Please, excellency, accept my profound friendly salutations and highest regards.

[Dated] Democratic Kampuchea, 31 July 1986

[Signed] Son Sen, commander in chief of the DK National Army and minister in charge of the CGDK Coordinating Committee for National Defense

["Press release" on friendship visit to Laos of a delegation of Sandinista National Liberation Front and Nicaraguan Government -- date not given]

[Text] In response to the invitation of the LPDR party and government, a delegation of the Nicaraguan front and government led by Comrade Henry Ruiz, member of the leading organ of the Sandinista National Liberation Front and minister of foreign cooperation, paid an official friendly visit to the LPDR from 31 July to 1 August.

During his visit to the LPDR, Comrade Henry Ruiz paid a courtesy call on Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and chairman of the LPDR Council of Ministers. At this meeting the guest and host held talks in an atmosphere of profound friendship. The delegation also visited some economic bases and historical sites in Vientiane.

A Lao party and government delegation led by Comrade Phoumi Vongvichit, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, met and held talks with the Nicaraguan front and government delegation in an atmosphere of fraternal friendship and mutual understanding. The two sides informed one another of the situation in their respective countries and discussed matters on the strengthening and development of relations and cooperation between Laos and Nicaragua.

The Nicaraguan side hailed the achievements and victories recorded by the Lao people over the past 10 years under the leadership of the LPDR in implementing the resolutions of the Third Party Congress and in preparing for the Fourth Party Congress which will be held soon.

The Lao side hailed and praised the victories recorded by the Nicaraguan people under the leadership of the Sandinista National Liberation Front in the struggle to safeguard the gains of the July Revolution and against sabotage, encirclement, and the subversive schemes of the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys.

The two sides hailed and wholeheartedly supported the 15 January 1986 statement by Comrade Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, who set forth a complete set of new, realistic initiatives concerning the elimination of nuclear weapons by the end of the year 2000. The two sides condemned the Reagan Administrations's aggressive policy against the Nicaraguan and other peoples in Central America. They described the U.S. decision to give assistance worth $100 million to the counterrevolutionaries as a step that further aggravates tension and threatens the peace and security of various nations in this part of the world.

The two sides expressed concern over the situation in Southeast Asia and maintained that the cause of the prolonged tension in this region is the hostile policy of the imperialists colluding with other international reactionary forces to reverse the regional situation. The Lao side emphasized that the various practical and constructive proposals of the Soviet Union, aimed at consolidating peace and security in Asia, and Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev's 28 July 1986 speech at Vladivostok as well as the proposals advanced by other fraternal socialist countries and by various nonaligned countries are reasonable and aimed at reducing tension in Asia. The two sides were of the opinion that various problems in Southeast Asia can be peacefully resolved through meetings and talks between two groups of countries -- Indochina and ASEAN -- without foreign interference and on the basis of both sides' proposals in order to turn Southeast Asia into a region of peace, stability, and cooperation.

The two sides reiterated their solidarity with the struggles of various nations in Asia, Africa, and Latin America against imperialism and other reactionary forces and for peace, national independence, democracy, and social progress. They expressed the determination to do their bests to contribute to strengthening the solidarity among the nonaligned countries for their sacred ideal against imperialism, colonialism, neocolonialism, and racial discrimination and to establish a new, correct, and just international order, thus contributing to the struggle of various bastions for peace, national independence, democracy, and social progress.

The two sides expressed satisfaction with the splendid success of the Nicaraguan front and government delegation's official friendship visit which is an important factor in further developing the friendly relations and cooperation between Laos and Nicaragua.

PASASON Visit

[PASASON article: "Laos-Nicaragua Friendly Relations and Cooperation Grow and Flourish" -- date not given]

[Text] A delegation of the Nicaraguan front and government led by Comrade Henry Ruiz, member of the leading organ of the Sandinista National Liberation Front and minister of foreign cooperation, paid an official visit to the LPDR from 31 July to 1 August at the invitation of the Lao party and government.

The delegation brought along best regards from the Nicaraguan people on the forefront of Latin America to the Lao people of all ethnic minorities on the outpost of socialism in Southeast Asia.

During its visit to the LPDR, the Nicaraguan delegation paid a courtesy call on Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and chairman of the LPDR Council of Ministers and visited some economic bases and historical sites in Vientiane. It also met and held talks with a Lao delegation led by Comrade Phoumi Vongvichit, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers. During the talks the sides were unanimous on many important issues, for example, those concerning the international situation and the relations between Laos and Nicaragua. These reflect the unanimous views and attitudes of the two countries in the struggle against the common enemy -- the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen -- and in the struggle for the defense of peace and against the threat of a nuclear war -- which is the most urgent cause of the era.

In the face of the complex and dangerous development of the international situation as a result of the militarist and bellicose policy of the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen, the two sides hailed and supported Soviet peace initiatives, particularly Comrade Mikhail Gorbache's 15 January 1986 statement on his principled, complete, and realistic proposals aimed at completely and gradually eliminating nuclear weapons by the year 2000 as well as other constructive and realistic proposals of the Soviet Union and on Comrade Mikhail Gorbachev's 28 July speech at Vladivostok concerning the consolidation and ensuring of peace and security in the Asia and Pacific region.

In addition, the two sides were unanimous in making every effort to peacefully resolve various problems in Southeast Asia in order to turn this region into a zone of peace, stability, and cooperation. They also condemned the bellicose and arms race policy of the U.S. imperialists and their allies -- the policy that causes tension and war atmosphere and threatens peace and security of many nations in the world. Concerning the close bilateral relations, the two sides reached unanimity in the determination to further strengthen and develop the friendly relations and cooperation.

Thanks to the above-mentioned succes, the Nicaraguan delegation's visit was a new milestone for the further strengthening and flourishing of the traditional relations and cooperation between the Lao and Nicaraguan peoples. Sharing the same trench in the struggle against the bellicose policy of the U.S. imperialists, the Lao people of all ethnic groups always support the Nicaraguan people's struggle under the leadership of the Sandinista National Liberation Front against all schemes of intervention and aggression of the U.S. imperialists and for the defense of independence and for their national construction and development in accordance with the path chosen by them.

The Lao people are firmly convinced that with their heroic tradition and unyielding spirit and with the support of progressive and peace-loving forces throughout the world, the Nicaraguan people's just struggle will surely triumph! All acts of intervention and aggression committed by the imperialists and their henchmen will be exposed and condemned by world opinion and will inevitably be completely and shamefully defeated in the same manner they experienced during the war of aggression against Indochina.

PASASON DESCRIBES LPRP'S DECADE OF ACHIEVEMENTS

BK040530 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 30 Jul 86

[PASASON editorial: "Glorious Success in the Defending and Building of a New System" — date not given]

[Text] The seizure of power throughout the country and the establishment of the LPDR in 1975 were great and miraculous successes for our party's leadership — a beautiful milestone which has been permanently recorded in the history of our country. The wisdom, clearsightedness, creativity, and ability of our party are reflected by the fact that it led the whole Lao people to liberate the country from the foreign yoke of enslavement and resolutely, swiftly, and completely established the people's democratic administration throughout the country without any reluctance that might have caused great disasters, thus stabilizing political tranquillity and public order and normalizing the people's daily life and enabling various towns to carry on with their normal life.

Following the establishment of the LPDR the domestic and international situation developed in an extremely complex manner. Our party, however, was able to define its strategic line and persistently led the people to implement it successfully. First of all, our party immediately handed over the national administration to the working people, assigned outstanding cadres and party members to lead and manage the state, controlled the instruments of violence, managed importance economic veins, and controlled information, cultural, and educational activities. Generally speaking, our relations with foreign countries have been maintained. At the same time, we resolutely smashed and countered provocations and nibbling attacks committed by the enemy along the border, foiled reactionaries' rebellious schemes, and adopted clever methods to increase the number of friends and reduce the number of enemies, thus firmly safeguarding our sovereignty and territorial integrity.

Over the past 10 years, our forces have quickly grown in all respects; the number of party members has doubled and that of leading cadres from the district level and upward has increased fourfold. The number of specialized and technical cadres has increased fivefold. Almost all leading, managerial, and specialized cadres have received systematic and basic training in the theoretical and technical spheres. Political bases have been consolidated with each passing day; the system of proletarian dictatorship has been continuously strengthened at various levels; and the worker-peasant alliance has been solidified with each passing day. The most precious thing is that the people of all ethnic minorities, strata, and religions have united as one, are firmly confident in the party's leadership, and have jointly brought into full play their intelligence, creativity, and strength in defending and building the country.

Over the past 10 years, social output has doubled and the national income per capita has risen by 60 percent. The most outstanding achievement is reflected by the gradual change from planting a single crop a year to crop rotation, by the expansion of farming areas, and by intensive farming practices. We have basically achieved self-sufficiency in grains and food supplies, while in some areas our farmers have had a surplus. Paddy output in 1985 was twice that of 1976. On the average, output per head increased from 250 kg in 1976 to 380 kg in 1985.

Collectivization has achieved considerable results. At present, farming areas in five provinces have been collectivized. The production output of coffee has doubled, tobacco tripled, and the number of cattle increased 60 percent when compared with the preliberation period.

Regarding forestry work, we have successfully preserved valuable sources of forest products. Achievements have been recorded and basic experience gained in industrial development, communications and transportation, building of basic establishments, circulation, and distribution. During the past 10 years the production of industrial goods has increased 4.4 times, textile products 3.7 times, beer and soft drinks by 60 percent, and detergents 14.5 times. Meanwhile, many new products have been produced — gypsum, cement, porcelain, glass, and plastic products. Some goods have also been produced for export.

Regarding communications, we have repaired and built about 3,000 km of roads and 700 bridges and improved and built some airfields. Telecommunication networks have been expanded. We have built 92 post offices and 94 telephone centers facilitating long-distance contacts with 45 countries. We have completed the construction of a ground satellite station.

Regarding the cultural and social spheres, our people have now eliminated illiteracy. The number of students and schoolchildren at various levels has increased rapidly. Specifically speaking, the number of students graduating from intermediate-level and university-level institutes in 1985 is equal to that of those graduated at the same levels of education in 80 years under the old regime.

At present, one-fourth of the whole population is attending school at various levels. The number of students studying abroad is increasing. Literary and sports movements have developed considerably. Backward traditions and customs and social vices have been gradually eliminated. The material and cultural life of the people of all ethnic minorities has been normalized and has been clearly improved in some respects.

The above success is great, multilateral, and firm. Even though the past 10 years is a short period if the country's millenary history is taken into consideration, our party has succeeded in leading the entire people to resolve many great problems under very difficult and complex circumstances. Once we are clearly aware of this fact, we will be proud of the LPRP — the organizer and leader of all successes of the Lao revolution, including those unprecedented in the history of Laos.

Thanks to the achievements recorded in the past 10 years, our entire party, army, and people have been encouraged to continue advancing joyfully and happily and with firm confidence on the path toward socialism.

EDITORIAL ON SELF-CRITICISM AND CRITICISM

BK011100 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0430 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Editorial: "Pay Attention to Criticizing Yourself and Criticizing Friends in a High Spirit of Responsibility"]

[Text] At present, our entire party, Army, and people are implementing political life campaigns mobilized by the party Central Committee Secretariat in preparation for the Fourth Party Congress and the congresses of party organizations at various levels. These political life campaigns are extremely important. We must firmly grasp their objectives and expectations and adopt a correct method for correctly and effectively implementing the party Central Committee Secretariat's resolution.

In carrying out political lief campaigns, criticism and self-criticism are a political instrument and a very important spirit of our party in correctly and obviously evaluating various main plans and policies as well as our work and in correctly assessing the quality of our party organizations, cadres, and party members so that we can bring into full play our strong points, resolve weaknesses, counter various negative aspects, uphold the party's fighting strength, heighten the quality of the contingents of cadres and party members, and triumphantly carry out all revolutionary tasks.

We are making preparations for the Fourth Party Congress while the country is facing an important turning point. At the crucial, early stage of the transition toward socialism, over the past years we have gained many fundamental achievements while facing various major difficulties caused by many factors, subjective and objective. In carrying out our daily living, many important problems have been raised and must be resolved by the party. The party wants us now more than ever before urgently to step up self-criticism and criticism in a highly effective manner. The current political campaigns and the attention to self-criticism have been mobilized to evaluate and draw lessons from previous work and to evaluate cadres correctly and comprehensively. This will enable us to understand their progress and weakness; distinguish the right from the wrong in their attitude, ideology, and implementation methods; and understand the reasoning, for example the objective reasoning, and the responsibilities of party organizations and individuals with regard to their rights, duties, and assignments.

These political life campaigns, self-criticism, and criticism will contribute to heightening the strength of leadership and the implementation of the party's line, upholding the sense of organization and discipline of cadres and party members, and strengthening all relations between the party and the masses, thus clarifying the selection of delegates to the congresses of party organs at various levels. Once a fine result has been achieved from self-criticism and criticism, we will have a basis for adopting plans and methods for surmounting difficulties and achieving progress.

Normally, it is easy to talk about strong points. But it is difficult to mention one's weak points or shortcomings. For example, negative aspects are developing under the present circumstances. Therefore, it is necessary to go through the struggle between public interests and the specific interests of each sector or individual before one can see the truth. Honestly speaking, one will not find it easy to mention one's weaknesses.

Therefore, in carrying out the current political campaigns, while correctly assessing our achievements and advantages, we must concentrate on the most important thing -- that is, to do our best in honestly mentioning all our weaknesses. Even though we have carried out self-criticism and criticism on many occasions, a considerable number of cadres and party members remain inefficient in carrying out this campaign and have not yet honestly talked about their weaknesses and shortcomings. This is why they have not yet seen the new things or new changes. At the same time, some cadres and party members who have disassociated themselves from real life have failed to understand the true situation and incorrectly observed and evaluated the situation. For this reason, they always view their work and leadership as good and and are unable to see anything wrong with it.

To conduct self-criticism and criticism effectively, we must struggle against individualism under all circumstances; improve and solidify the objectives and expectations of the political life campaign; and clearly understand the responsibilities of each party organization, party member, and cadre toward the lofty interests of the party and revolution.

Any effective conduct of self-criticism and criticism will greatly benefit the revolution and enable us to continue scoring achievements. Ineffective self-criticism and criticism will only lead to difficulties and division that may not be resolved in a short time or that may cause problems in many tasks.

Self-criticism and criticism must be conducted in detail so as to award the current political life campaigns with concrete success. A generalized criticism will not clarify the performance of a person and his work. Who is to blame, then, since there is no basis on which he can change? Eventually, one will not be able to make any progress in his work. Each cadre and member of a party organization must heighten his or her sense of responsibility, perseverance, qualifications, and the interests of the party and revolution. What is important is that one must carry out self-criticism and criticism of other persons. Each sector and each individual must conduct self-criticism without waiting for instructions from the higher or lower echelons.

In a party organization, cadres and party members tend to prefer higher positions and better status. Therefore, their responsibility for serving as models in self-criticism is greater. An issue of decisive significance is that the cadres and party members holding leadership positions in each unit and at each level must truly serve as models in self-criticism, make it convenient for criticism with genuine democracy, and swiftly check all ideas and tendencies that obstruct self-criticism and criticism.

Party members are the mainstay cadres enjoying some status and power. Once they lack the courage to conduct criticism or once they fear criticism, they will not be able to create an atmosphere of democracy and their self-criticism will not be strict or clear. Everything must be aimed at fulfilling the objective of solidifying, strengthening, and purifying our party so that it can lead the revolutionary cause to surmount all difficulties and to advance vigorously. The current political life campaigns and self-criticism and criticism must be fulfilled with glorious success, thereby making an important contribution to opening up a period of great achievements prior to the opening of the Fourth Party Congress.

SONGKHON DISTRICT HOLDS FIRST PARTY CONGRESS

[Text] The first congress of the party committee of Songkhon District, Savannakhet Province, ended with fine success on 28 July after 2 days of work. It was attended by 62 full party members representing 111 party members in the district. Comrade Boun-ngang Volachit, member of the LPRP Central Committee, secretary of the provincial party committee, and chairman of the provincial administrative committee of Savannakhet, also participated in the congress.

The participants jointly studied the contents of the political report submitted by the district party committee to the congress. This report points to the advantages, weaknesses, and remaining problems experienced in the concrete implementation of the defense and economic construction tasks in the district in the past. Then they contributed views to the orientation of the immediate action plan. The participants also voted to elect 12 new members to the executive committee with Comrade Bounkeut Kethongsa being reelected as secretary of the party committee of the district.

THAI ATTACHE NOTES TRADE RESTRICTIONS EASED

[Text] Laos has eased trade restrictions by letting provinces import some goods without going through the state trading firm, according to a Thai diplomat in Vientiane.

Commercial Attache Worathep Suphadun said Laos is tending to increase its imports following the implementation of its second national development plan this year.

While the purchasing power of Laotian people is relatively low, Mr Worathep said Vientiane has some spending power through the financial assistance it receives from foreign countries, the World Bank and Asian Development Bank.

Mr Worathep said Laos plans to import machinery, gunny bags, spare parts and farm tools worth 40 million baht.

The attache said the relaxed import controls could benefit Thai businesses. About 60 percent of Laos' imports, mainly consumer products, come from Thailand.

During the first six months of this year, Thailand exported goods worth 309.8 million baht to Laos, representing an increase of 91 percent over the same period last year. Imports registered 14.23 million baht — a decrease of 22 percent.

ROYAL DECREE APPOINTS PREM PRIME MINISTER

BK051548 Bangkok Television Service in Thai 1400 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] His Majesty King Phumiphon Adunyadet has graciously ordered it to be proclaimed that as the general election of members of the House of Representatives was held and the tenure of the present cabinet has to be terminated, his majesty the king, informed by the National Assembly president that actions have been taken in accordance with the democratic system, deems it appropriate that General Prem Tinsulanon should be entrusted to serve in the post of prime minister. By virtue of Article 146 of the Constitution of the Kingdom of Thailand, his majesty the king graciously appoints General Prem Tinsulanon as the prime minister to administer the country's affairs effective immediately.

Announced on 5 August, being the 41st year of the present, reign. Countersigned by Ukrit Mongkhonnawin, National Assembly president.

Assembly President's Statement

BK051350 Bangkok Television Service in Thai 1300 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Statement by National Assembly President Ukrit Mongkhonnawin — recorded]

[Text] The public has probably now been informed about the royal command appointing Prime Minister General Prem Tinsulanon as the prime minister on the night of 5 August 1986. Now, I have completed my duty as president of the National Assembly. However, I would like to inform you that everything has been carried out in accordance with the procedure I mentioned before. In other words, the selection of the prime minister was made by opinion of the majority under the party system. Seven parties with 290 seats in the House, more than half of the seats in the House, submitted a letter to the National Assembly president suggesting that General Prem Tinsulanon be appointed prime minister and his appointment received royal approval.

Meanwhile, the opinion of the minority was also considered. Five political parties with 54 seats in the House proposed Phichai Rattakun for prime minister. This has been executed in accordance with the democratic system. Since the seven parties with 290 seats constitute the absolute majority, the above-mentioned action has been taken within a short time. Earlier, it was anticipated that about 15 days would be needed after the general election for the royal appointment of the prime minister. However, the royal command appointing the prime minister was issued on 5 August, only 9 days after the poll. I wish to reaffirm that the appointment of the prime minister has now been made. Now the Thai people have their prime minister and government to administer and bring prosperity to the country.

DEMOCRATS EYE INTERIOR, AGRICULTURE POSTS

[Text] The Democrat Party will inform Gen Prem Tinsulanon that its senior members should head the interior and agriculture portfolios, informed Democrats told THE NATION last night.

Party leader Phichai Rattakun was assigned by a party meeting yesterday to put forward the demand to Gen Prem.

For the other three ministries under the quota of the party, the meeting resolved that it would demand for the top Cabinet posts at the Industry, Science and either Education or Public Health.

Phichai was given full authority to negotiate with Gen Prem on the party's demand. The negotiation is expected today.

"We will stand firm on our demand for the posts of interior and agriculture ministers but we can be flexible in our demand for the industry portfolio which could be changed for the commerce portfolio," one Democrat said. As for the education and public health posts, the sources said that the party would accept any of them.

Deputy party leader Gen Han Linanon was nominated as candidate for the interior portfolio, according to the sources.

Up to 26 party MPs were nominated as candidates to sixteen Cabinet posts during the marathon session yesterday. The posts exclude the deputy premiership which Phichai will be given.

Of the nominees, eight were southern MPs, seven were from the Northeast, four from the North and seven others from the Central Region, including Bangkok.

22 CAMBODIAN SOLDIERS DEFECT TO THAI MILITARY

BK060310 Bangkok THE NATION in English 6 Aug 86 p 3

[Text] Surin — Twenty-two Kampuchean soldiers of the pro-Hanoi regime in Phnom Penh Sunday crossed the border here to defect to the Thai military, field military sources said yesterday.

They said the Heng Samrin troops crossed the Thai-Kampuchean frontier at Chong Chom Pass in Kap Choeng District of this northeastern province and surrendered their arms to the Thai military's Task Force 8 guarding the border.

The sources said the Kampuchean defectors belonged to the fifth battalion of the 286th division which operate in O'Samed area inside Kampuchea. The defectors were led by Lt Van Loi of the Heng Samrin forces, according to the sources.

The defectors said their battalion was suspected by the Vietnamese troops of having relation with Kampuchean resistance guerrillas, causing them to flee into Thailand.

The defectors were later taken to the Suranari military task force in the provincial seat for interrogation.

PRC SHELLINGS, INCURSIONS CONTINUE NEAR BORDER

OW051806 Hanoi VNA in English 1534 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA August 5 — In July, Chinese troops pounded with more than 27,000 artillery and mortar rounds at several places in Vietnam's northern border provinces, especially in Vi Xuyen District, Ha Tuyen Province.

At the same time, Chinese scouts and commandoes intruded deep into Vietnemese territory in the provinces of Hoang Lien Son, Lang Son and Quang Ninh.

Making use of current floods, Chinese troops have dropped floating mines into rivers flowing into Vietnam from China, causing many casualties to civilians in Xuan Hung village, Xuan Thuy District (Ha Nam Ninh Province), Phu Son and Vu Son villages, Hung Ha District, and Nam Hai village, Tien Hai District (Thai Binh Province), Le Loi village, Thuong Tin District (He Son Binh Province), Hai Boi village, Dong Anh District (Hanoi) and Nguyen Ha village, Phu Luu District, (Hai Hung Province).

Since June 26 Chinese floating mines have caused 15 casualties including one dead and 24 injuries.

Floating Mine Casualties

OW051255 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1123 GMT 5 Aug 86

["Denunciation" issued 5 August by the Vietnamese Commission for the Investigation Into War Crimes of the Chinese Expansionists and Hegemonists]

[Text] Since May 1985, the beginning of the typhoon and flood season in Vietnam, the Chinese authorities have had their troops float many plastic-covered blue mines, a large number of which bear the number 652-A, on rivers flowing from China into Vietnam, causing many explosions which killed or wounded many Vietnamese civilians.

From May to the end of December 1985, more than 100 incidents caused death to 30 people and injuries to 60 others.

Defying Vietnam's condemnations on many occasions before public opinion at home and abroad, the Chinese reactionaries have continued to commit these crimes. At the beginning of the typhoon and flood season this year, during June and July 1986 alone, there were 27 cases of mine explosions in various areas of Vinh Phu, Ha Bac, Hai Hung, Ha Son Binh, Ha Nam Ninh, and Thai Binh Provinces and Hanoi, killing 5 people and wounding 30 others, most of them children and elderly people. Many of the cases were indeed heart-rending.

On 16 July, in Phu Son Village in Hung Ha district, Thai Binh Province, a Chinese-made mine exploded, wounding 11 children from 5 to 15 years of age as they were tending buffaloes and cutting grass on the river bank. They included Hoang Thi Hoai, who was wounded in both her legs and her chest and whose two hands were crushed.

On 24 July, in Nam Hai village in Tien Hai district, Thai Binh Province, a Chinese-made mine exploded, killing on the spot Mr Ha Van Oanh, 65, and wounding his niece Pham Thi Trung, 15.

On 28 July, in Nguyen Hoa village in Phu Tien District, Hai Hung Province, a Chinese-made mine exploded, killing Nguyen Van Noi, 27, and seriously wounding four children, Nguyen Thi Thoan, 14; Ngueyn Thi Xinh, 11; Pham Thi Thuy, 6; and Pham Van Sang, 5.

On 22 June, in Tuy Phuong village in Tien Son District, Ha Bac Province, a Chinese-made mine exploded, killing three buffalo tenders; and so forth.

Obviously, the floating of Chinese-made mines by river into Vietnam has been a calculated move aimed at killing Vietnamese civilians, especially elders and children, and at threatening Vietnamese people who live and make their living on rivers and along riverbanks.

Along with other criminal acts, this move has exposed even more clearly the treacherous and deceitful claims of good will for peace and friendship the Chinese authorities have often clamored about.

The Commission for the Investigation Into War Crimes of the Chinese Expansionists and Hegemonists vehemently denounces these barbarous, inhumane crimes of the Chinese authorities and firmly demands that the Chinese side put an end to all schemes and acts of opposing and massacring Vietnamese civilians.

NHAN DAN ON 5 AUG 1964 DEFEAT OF U.S. AIR FORCE

BK051154 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] The Vietnamese national leading paper NHAN DAN on Tuesday [5 August] called on all Vietnamese people to bring into full play the tradition of the 5 August 1964 victory -- the first victory of Vietnam over the U.S. Air Force.

The paper noted: This victory was written down in history as one of the symbols of heroism of the Vietnamese revolution and the will "nothing is more precious than independence and freedom" and the determination to defeat all aggressors.

The paper said: The Vietnamese Army and people are ready to fight and fight well and fulfill two strategic tasks, that is, building and defending the socialist homeland.

ACCORD ON REMAINS OF FRENCH SOLDIERS SIGNED

OW051752 Hanoi VNA in English 1529 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA August 5 — Vietnam and France have signed an agreement on the exhumation and repatriation of the remains of French soldiers who died in Vietnam from 1939. The agreement was finalized at recent talks, held here at the request of the French Government.

The repatriation of the French soldiers' remains in Vietnam will be conducted in two years. The first exhumation will start at the Tan Son Nhat cemetery in Ho Chi Minh City and the Vung Tau cemetery, east of Ho Chi Minh City, on October 1, and conclude by the end of this year. Exhumation in other places will be completed in 1988.

The talks proceeded in the spirit of good will and mutual understanding.

PHAM VAN DONG RECEIVES NICARAGUAN DELEGATION

OW021526 Hanoi VNA in English 1518 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA August 2 — Pham Van Dong, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministers, cordially received here today the delegation of the Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN) and the Nicaraguan Government led by Henry Ruiz, commander of the revolution and member of the FSLN national leadership.

Chairman Pham Van Dong paid high tribute to the great achievements of the Nicaraguan people over the past seven years and strongly condemned the wicked policies and criminal acts of the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen against Nicaragua. He expressed Vietnam's unchangeable solidarity with and full support for the revolutionary cause of the Nicaraguan people and the firm belief that under the FSLN leadership the Nicaraguan people would overcome all difficulties and trials to defend successfully their homeland and revolutionary gains.

Henry Ruiz, for his part, expressed deep admiration for the Vietnamese people's achievements in their revolutionary struggle and wished them success in national defense and development.

While here, it was received by Chu Huy Man, Politburo member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee.

It had working sessions with a delegation of the International Department of the C.P.V. Central Committee. The two sides informed each other of the situation in their respective countries, and were unanimous in assessing the regional and international issues. They also discussed measures to further promote their bilateral cooperation in the future.

The Lao guests toured Haiphong and several production establishments there.

HOANG TUNG SPEAKS ON DRAFT POLITICAL REPORT

BK041422 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] On 30 and 31 July at the press center in Hanoi, the Vietnam Journalists Association Executive Committee held a plenary session to study various draft documents of the sixth party congress and to discuss press work in support of the Congress. Addressing the plenary session, Comrade Hoang Tung pointed out the fundamental issues of the draft political report and the primary tasks of all news and press agencies in the immediate future. He said: Those engaged in news and press work must thoroughly understand the party's lines, draw on experience from idelogical work during various historical stages in the past, and fully comprehend their heavy responsibility in the present revolutionary stage.

Comrade Hoang Tung added: Journalists must improve their theoretical standard and constantly combine their knowledge with the actual activities of the people to ensure that they can dispense information correctly and discuss various matters accurately and knowledgeably.

The plenary session expressed its confidence in the party Central Committee and its determination to fulfill satisfactorily all political tasks entrusted by the party.

At this session, the Executive Committee of the Vietnam Journalists Association reviewed the work of the association in 1985 in every aspect and determined the association's tasks for 1986 and 1987. The Executive Committee also discussed the participation of the Vietnam Journalists Association in the 10th Congress of the International Organization of Journalists, which will be held in Sofia, Bulgaria, in October this year.

NGUYEN HUU THO TOURS TAY NINH PROVINCE

[Text] Comrade Nguyen Huu Tho, vice chairman of the Council of State and chairman of the National Assembly, toured Tay Ninh Province in late July 1986. He was warmly welcomed by Comrades Dang Van Phuong, secretary of the provincial people's committee; the provincial assembly deputies; and many local leading cadres of the party, administration, and the Vietnam Fatherland Front [VFF] chapter.

During his tour of the Dau Tieng water conservancy project, Chairman Nguyen Huu Tho highly valued the great contributions of the cadres, youths, and people of Tay Ninh Province in building, together with the water conservancy service and other friendly localities, Vietnam's largest water conservancy project. He inquired about the condition of cadres and workers at the construction site and urged them to properly and constantly protect the project and satisfactorily exploit and develop it in order to promptly support agricultural production.

He also visited the cadres and combatants of the heroic Xa Mat border outpost, the Tan Bien District Party Committee, the Tay Ning Pediatrics Clinic, the Go Dau General Hospital Construction site, the 1 June Child-Care Center, the Go Dau Laboratory, the Tay Ninh Economic-Cultural Exhibition Center, and the provincial Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Group.

At the end of his tour, Chairman Nguyen Huu Tho had a cordial talk with the leading cadres of the administration, VFF, and various sectors and localities of Tay Ninh Province. He commended the province for making great efforts to overcome difficulties and obstacles to stabilize a step further the people's livelihood and to boost production. He stressed the need to fully understand Comrade Truong Chinh's important address at the recent cadre conference on studying the draft CPV political report to be presented at the sixth national party congress and the need to correctly assess, on this basis, past achievements as well as shortcomings and mistakes to be remedied in order to advance the province's revolutionary work. He urged them to constantly preserve their unity as the apple of their eyes, correctly implement President Ho's teachings and sacred testament, and ponder over Comrade General Secretary Truong Chinh's profound analysis in his address. In the face of the current difficult and complicated situation, it is normal to entertain divergent views, but it is necessary to adopt a sincere, honest, and constructive attitude during discussion of the draft political report in order to find the truth, attain a high unanimity of views, and avoid hasty, impulsive action.

Chairman Nguyen Huu Tho expressed the belief that, through the self-criticism and criticism drive, the Tay Ninh provincial party organization and administration at all levels will be able to draw profound lessons for their leadership and mass motivation work, remain attached to the people, promptly settle all urgent issues, and consolidate confidence within the party and among the people with determination to advance the revolutionary work so as to make Tay Ninh worthy of being a province with glorious revolutionary traditions.

DELEGATION DELIVERS PROTEST NOTE TO WHITE HOUSE

BK051002 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Australia's all-party wheat delegation visiting the United States has delivered a formal protest note to the White House over President Reagan's decision to sell subsidized wheat to the Soviet Union. Radio Australia's Washington correspondent, Jim Middleton, says despite the Australian protest and talk of a formal diplomatic protest to come, the White House has failed to give a commitment to oppose additional sales of subsidized wheat.

The delegation has met with a chief American advocate of subsidized agricultural exports, Senator Robert Dole, and with the U.S. secretary of agriculture, Mr Lyng. After the meeting the minister for primary industry, Mr Kerin, who is heading the delegation gave a gloomy outlook but said Australia would match falling prices.

[Begin Kerin recording] The going is going to get tougher. Now, I do not know where the limit to all this is but we have been going up. Wherever we have got wheat, wherever we are growing wheat, we ought to simply have to meet whatever the competition is. Now, I am not saying the price is going to go down automatically by some amount, but the price will be negotiated down by the buyers, and it is a buyer's market now. [end recording]

The minister for trade, Mr Dawkins, stressing [as heard] from the Philippines, echoed Mr Kerin's commitment that Australia would match falling prices. Mr Dawkins said it was yet to be seen whether the Soviet Union would buy the cheap American wheat.

OIL EXPORTS DECLINE; SUMARLIN PREDICTS UPSWING

BK051316 Hong Kong AFP in English 1051 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Jakarta, Aug 5 (AFP) -- Indonesia's crude oil exports declined steadily in the first quarter of this year, but National Development Planning Minister Sumarlin expressed optimism Tuesday that the slump would go no further. "Indonesia intends to maintain and even increase its oil export package," Mr Sumarlin said Tuesday as the Kakap offshore oil field in the South China Sea was officially inaugurated.

Official figures showed Indonesia's crude oil exports fell from 22.9 million barrels in January and 20.3 million in February to 16.8 million in March -- a slump which reflected sales problems, not policy, according to oil experts. March production stood at some 1.21 million barrels per day, excluding condensate which ran at some 141,000 barrels per day.

Japan was the largest buyer of cumulative crude exports in March, taking some 47 percent, followed by the United States which absorbed 25 per cent.

Indonesia currently earns 70 per cent of its foreign exchange from exports of crude oil, gas, condensate, and small but growing volumes of oil products.

Mr Sumarlin, filling in for Oil Minister Subroto while he attends a meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in Geneva, gave no figures or details to back up his prediction of an upswing. But he said Indonesia's development planners were working to encourage the use of alternate energy to reduce the growth of domestic oil consumption. Oil experts have warned that rises in domestic consumption could severely reduce the country's export capability in the next decade.

At a palace ceremony relayed by satellite to the Kakap field, Mr Sumarlin said crude oil production in the Asia-Pacific region was and would continue to be much lower than consumption, as reflected by the huge volume of imports. He said Indonesia's strategic location would bascially allow its oil production to be absorbed by the region.

Indonesian President Suharto, speaking at the same ceremony, said the Kakap field was proof that "oil activities in Indonesia are running well, despite a global slowdown in oil activity following unstable oil prices." The fact that Indonesia was concentrating on the non-oil sector did not mean it had lost interest in oil, Mr Suharto said. He added that political stability and the availability of manpower were advantages for foreign oil companies.

Exploration in the Kakap field, about 80 kilometers (50 miles) from a disputed sea boundary with Vietnam, was started by U.S.-based Marathon petroleum in 1970, and commerical production began in March.

A floating facility for production, storage and offloading -- Indonesia's first, as well as the most advanced among a half-dozen of its kind in the world -- has been set up in the area, with a capacity to process 25,000 barrels of oil per day and store 760,000 barrels. Initial production from the field is 12,000 barrels of oil per day, but the company expects it to peak at 22,000 barrels per day, Mr Sumarlin said.

SIHANOUK HOLDS TALKS WITH PREMIER LEE

BK051217 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] The visiting president of Democratic Kampuchea, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, held talks with the prime minister for about half an hour this afternoon. The two leaders discussed the progress made within the tripartite coalition with regards to military and other matters.

At the news conference later in the afternoon, Prince Sihanouk revealed that the Chinese leader, Mr Hu Yaobang, said that if the Vietnamese withdrew from Cambodia, the Khmer Rouge can also reduce their military effectiveness so that all Cambodian factions will be on the same level. The prince said that this shows greater flexibility on China's part about the military strength of the Khmer Rouge.

Prince Sihanouk also said he is more optimistic about the future of his country because the majority of the Cambodian people had lost all faith and enthusiasm in the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin regime. Also he said, the armed nationalist forces had become capable of hitting hard at the Vietnamese occupation movement. The prince added that [words indistinct] was the continuing and increasing desertions of Heng Samrin officers and soldiers.

SIHANOUK SAYS CHINA TO CUT KHMER ROUGE STRENGTH

BK051609 Hong Kong AFP in English 1548 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Singapore, Aug 5 (AFP) -- China has agreed to cut the numbers of a Beijing-backed Cambodian resistance group to equal the size of its two resistance allies, resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk said here Tuesday. Chinese Communist Party Secretary General Hu Yaobang gave this assurance during a meeting July 3, Prince Sihanouk told a press conference before leaving for Bangkok on the next stage in a Southeast Asian tour. He did not say how the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge, the largest of the three resistance groups forming the U.N.-recognised Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK) and the other two resistance factions would agree on matching numbers or disarming extra forces. The threat of a return to power by the Khmer Rouge, blamed for the mass killings of thousands of Cambodians during their more than three and a half year rule until overthrown by the Vietnamese Army in 1979 has been cited by Hanoi as the main reason for maintaining an estimated 140,000 troops in Cambodia.

China had made the proposal to reduce Khmer Rouge numbers to ensure that the Khmer Rouge posed no threat to other Cambodian factions in the event of a Vietnamese troops pullout from the troubled Indochinese country, Prince Sihanouk said.

The prince heads the CCDK. He said [he] gave details of the Chinese assurance in a confidential letter to Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan, whom he met here Monday, and had sent similar letters to the foreign ministers of the other Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) members.

ASEAN, grouping Singapore with Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, and Thailand, with the backing of China, helped forge the disparate Khmer factions in a coalition acceptable to the majority of U.N. members in 1982 and has since masterminded efforts to get Vietnam [to] withdraw from Cambodia.

Prince Sihanouk said he planned to visit Indonesia and Malaysia after Bangkok, but that he also hoped the Philippines and Brunei would invite him to visit.

Vietnam has rejected U.N. calls for a troop withdrawal to allow free elections in Cambodia as well as ASEAN'S diplomatic efforts to negotiate a peace settlement.

The prince said he hoped the new assurance from China would assuage Vietnamese concerns and help speed the peace process. He said the Khmer Rouge had 55,000 operational forces, with 35,000 of them in combat. His nationalist Sihanoukist Army had 11,000 men (7,000 in action) and the divided Khmer People's National [Liberation] Front of Son Sann had about 11,000 fighters (3,000 in action) he said.

China and the Khmer Rouge were strongly opposed to having an international peace-keeping force in Cambodia to hold the peace in the event of the Vietnamese pullout, but Prince Sihanouk said he wanted a peace-keeping force flying the U.N. flag to be in Cambodia for several years.

China had also agreed that the three resistance factions and the Heng Samrin regime now in government in Phnom Penh should form a united Cambodian Army in which all factions had equal strenth.

Prince Sihanouk is due to visit Indonesia from August 19 to 22 and Malaysia from August 22 to 26 before returning to Beijing via Bangkok. He said he also planned to attend the U.N. General Assembly next month.

UP PROFESSOR RAISES CONCERNS ON U.S. BASES

HK041547 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 4 Aug 86 pp 1, 11

[By Olaf S. Giron]

[Text] The American military bases in the Philippines may have to be booted out if the United States decides to keep them after the Military Bases Agreement ends in 1991, according to the University of the Philippines' [UP] International Studies Institute.

UP Prof. Roland Simbulan, expressing doubt on the US Embassy's sincerity in declaring that the US will not insist on staying as an "unwanted guest," pointed to the American base in Cuba which the US maintains against the wishes of the Cuban people.

The American Guantanamo base is an unwanted occupant on Cuban soil, Simbulan said.

"Although we have never known the US to feel a military base was not essential, the base it holds in Cuba is an example for one which closely threatens Cuba and its people but is of nominal value to American defense. And yet the Americans maintain it," he noted.

In the case of the Philippines, he said, so important are those facilities for the US. that the US Government used the maintenance of the bases as "justification for funneling hundreds of millions of dollars in military and other forms of aid to the repressive Marcos dictatorship."

He added: "The US might eventually have to be kicked out as in the case of the Wheeler Air Force Base when al-Qadhdhafi took over in Libya."

Taking issue with the US on its role in the Pacific area, Simbulan said the bases aggravate the "imbalance" of power, citing the American military installations here and in South Korea, Japan, Australia, Guam, Wake, Hawaii and the Aleutians.

On the other hand, he said, the Soviet Union only has Vladivostok and access to Cam Ranh Bay which originally was a US base and technically is not a Soviet base, according to the Stockholm International Peace Research and the Center for Defense Information.

The UP Institute espouses the view that a pullout of US bases will not be conducive to a communist takeover as the experience of Thailand shows.

Since 1950, US forces and installations had been stationed in that country. When Thailand sought a renegotiation of the agreement in order to gain greater access to confidential information generated by the bases as well as jurisdiction over all criminal offenses, the negotiations collapsed.

Thailand then closed down all US installations and asked for the withdrawal of American personnel. To this date, Simbulan said, the domino principle has been discredited by the continued existence of Thailand as a non-communist state.

On the existing labor arrangements in the bases, it was pointed out that Americans doing the same work are paid much higher than Filipinos.

Moreover, Filipino workers are paid one-fourth of what is paid to Korean workers doing the same kind of work for the same level of productivity.

These other points have been raised:

1. Since the standard of living is much higher in Olongapo and Angeles than in Manila, the wage survey annually conducted by base authorities is an obsure exercise even for union leaders.

Wage determination effectively prevents base laborers from demanding higher and more equitable wage rates.

2. Given the strategic importance of the bases and, therefore, the role of the base workers in the overall basing system of the US, the claim that the rate of pay must depend on the economy in which the worker is employed is without significance.

3. Filipino employees enjoy no security of tenure. Positions can be abolished, downgraded, reclassified or contracted out depending on the felt exigencies of the base authorities.

Radio Urges Bases Closure

HK040751 Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan in Tagalog 0440 GMT 4 Aug 86

["Whispers and Shouts" commentary by unidentified speaker -- slantlines denote passages in English]

[Text] My friends, a news item has appeared which says that the United States is selling its subsidized wheat to the Russians because the Americans have a massive balance of payments deficit, with an annual rate of $170 billion. So as to remedy this budget deficit, President Reagan has approved the sale of this wheat to the Soviets. Despite the traditional relations between the U.S. and the USSR, there has been pressure on the U.S. to sell their wheat to the Soviet Union.

Let us consider what drives relations among states. It is not goodness or any altruistic motives, it is simply self interest. The Americans and the Russians have long been enemies, they have been engaged in a race to be the strongest leaders in the world, they never agree about anything. But when the U.S. begins to worry about its budgetary deficit that amounts to several billion dollars, they are not adverse to selling anything to their enemies. This matter of subsidized wheat is [words indistinct] because the Americans have to help their own farmers who are engaged in planting wheat. It's as simple as that.

We should therefore try to do away with all this fuzzy thinking that the U.S. has its bases in our country because it's for our own protection. If the U.S., which is such a mighty, such a superior world power, always looks after its own interests when they sell their products even to their enemies because it suits them to do so, we too should look after our own interests and consider only our own conditions. There is a moral lesson here. Whenever an issue has to do with our own interests, we must always stand up for ourselves. We must ask ourselves if our country will benefit. Regardless of who are our friends and our enemies, we must consider our own survival first. Our problem has always been that we get involved in others' fights, so we become the victims of such fights. We are like the grass that gets trampled. If we continue to behave as we have been doing, this is going to keep on happening.

This is why the Constitutional Commission's proposal to declare our country a non-aligned and neutral one, and hence to remove the military bases, is a good one.

To be truly non-aligned and neutral, it is necessary to get rid of the military bases because we are not really a sovereign country with such establishments on our soil. If the bases remain, we will always be called mere followers of the Americans, not free and independent people.

Here is an article from MALAYA which quotes the Soviet Ambassador to the Philippines Vadim Shabalin. He was asked if the U.S. bases are removed from the Philippines, will the Russian take over? Shabalin said: /[words indistinct] Mr Gorbachev is that we should start increasing military (action) and political (sanctions) in this part of the world. American bases were removed from Thailand but nobody knows about the Soviet Union moving in because there is no such (fact). I would like to say, not as a diplomat but as human being, these concoctions or assertions that if the Americans leave this country the Russians will move in are nonsense./

Asked how the Soviets view the recent ASEAN meeting in Manila, particularly with regard to the point raised on the arms race, his answer was long, the most important part being: /Our country was never an initiator of the arms race./

He said that when the Americans leave the Philippines, the Russians will not take over. The Russians were never initiators of the arms race nor instigators of the arms build-up. This is why we should consider the bases issue in a different light. We say we are afraid that if the Americans remove their bases, the Russians and other enemies will move in. [passage indistinct]

We should consider the history of our country. When the bases were first set up, who was then the strongest nation? None other than the U.S. There were no other countries threatening us at that time, there was no need for any military bases to be set up. It was the Americans who told us there were threats to our security and that their bases were necessary for our defense. It was — and still is — the Americans who are interested in maintaining the bases for their own ends.

Let us consider the issues. What are the arguments for the retention of the bases? The Americans have long drummed into us the reasons for their retention, but all these are bitter pills to take because if these bases remain, they will be the cause of our deaths. They say the bases help maintain democracy in our country. They make the bases synonymous with democracy, they imply that democracy cannot flourish here without the military bases. But the truth is that having these bases is against our democracy, our self-determination and our sovereignty, because a nation cannot be said to be free if a foreign military presence exists on its soil.

Let us go back to this issue of the sale of American wheat to the Russians. If the Americans consider the Russian their enemies, why do they trade with them? Are they obligated to sell wheat to the Russians? It is simply because it is a matter of their own survival, their country's interests. [passage indistinct] If it is in our interests to deal with other countries, be they democratic or not, communist or socialist, why should we not do so?

The Americans make all sorts of conditions before they give us aid, they impose all sorts of restrictions on us, on trade, etc. So why should we not deal with countries which are nonaligned and neutral? Why don't we deal with the socialists? If the U.S. deals and trades with their enemies, why shouldn't we deal with such countries ourselves? After all, those countries are not our enemies. The Russians are not our enemies. We should not limit our horizons because of unreasonable fears. [passage indistinct]

The U.S. may be our long-time friend but if the time should come when we need friends, how can we be sure they will come to our aid? If they behave nicely to their enemy, the Russians, what can we expect from them? Regarding the bases issue, we should only consider our own interests. We may declare that we are friends of the Americans, but we have to think of our own interests if we wish to be known as a sovereign nation. We should not be blinded by irrelevant matters, but we should examine the foundations of [words indistinct]. We should not believe the accepted axioms that we will be protected if the bases remain, that if the Americans leave a foreign power will take over.

The truth is that the only one threatening us is the United States. They exploit us to strengthen their economy. They want to help their own farmers, manufacturers and industrialists, which is why they use up our resources for their agricultural and industrial products. The Americans want to control the world, especially the Pacific region, because they want to trade everywhere. They even go as far as to prepare to launch military offensives which is why they have set up their military facilities as they have done here at Subic, Clark and the other parts of our country.

All this is the truth behind the words Americans use to scare us about threats to Southeast Asia. They are using the Philippines for their own sinister purposes because they want to control this part of the world. It is obvious that what the Russians are doing in the Pacific region is simply to neutralize the Americans so that there will be a balance of power in the area. This is what Ambassador Shabalin meant when he said the Russians have not been the initiators of the arms race. The Russians have no such aims, he said. Let us therefore heed his words because the truth is that it is the U.S. which is expanding its power, which is increasing its plans to take over land, which is extending its power through its military bases. This is why the Russians are seeking to neutralize conditions between the U.S. and the USSR so as to achieve a balance of power. If the Americans continue increasing their arms and their bases abroad, then the balance of power will be lost. So the question is: Are the military bases here in order to counteract this or to maintain a balance of power in the Pacific? [as heard]

Before these bases were ever set up, there was no such thing as a balance of power. Everything was always in favor of the U.S. The strongest nation was always the U.S.

At first they espoused a policy of isolationism, neutrality and nonalignment; but when they became a highly industrialized country, after they increased their products and developed surpluses, they decided to expand their markets. They view the Pacific area as a good market and so they have dumped their products on our country. They use our country as a trading post to get rid of their surpluses.

So, all this business about having to retain the military bases here which they say is necessary to neutralize the Russian is nonsense. What is really behind it is that the Americans want to uphold their own interests. We are the one being sacrificed. If the Americans start a war in the Pacific region, we will be caught in the middle. We will become the targets of their enemies even though we ourselves have no quarrel with anyone.

One lesson is clear from all this: We must examine every issue very carefully and see if it is good for our country. The Americans are here to uphold their own interests. They are not here because they are our friends. We must remember there is no morality among states. The Americans are not here in order to defend democracy or to protect us from our enemies or because they love us. That is the main thing we must always keep in mind.

AQUINO SAYS SHE WILL NOT SEEK REELECTION

[Text] Manila, Aug 5 (AFP) — President Corazon Aquino Tuesday reiterated that she would not seek re-election and said she was determined to succeed during her only term in office for the nation's sake. Speaking at a Roman Catholic women's forum here, she also said her September official visit to the United States could not be postponed because of the urgency of the economic recovery program. "I was just meant for snap elections and I will stick to that," she said when asked about the possibility of seeking re-election. Widespread frauds in February's snap presidential election fueled a popular revolt that reversed strongman Ferdinand Marcos's official proclamation as the winner and drove him to exile in Hawaii.

There is a debate here, particularly in a 48-member commission framing a new constitution, on whether Mrs Aquino should seek a fresh electoral mandate, as well as the length of the president's term and limits on re-election. Mrs Aquino ran for a six-year term during the election. The commission is expected to uphold this, but the matter of re-election is uncertain.

"I am determined to succeed not for the sake of Cory Aquino but for the sake of the Filipino people," Mrs Aquino said at the forum. She said "many people" had urged her to postpone an official U.S. visit but "the economic recovery program cannot wait." There is speculation here of possible coup attempts during the visit, when Mrs Aquino is to appeal for easier terms for repayment of Manila's foreign loans and increased U.S. business investments in her country.

ENRILE DENIES COUP PLANS, DISCUSSES AFP STRENGTH

HK041151 Quezon City NEW DAY in English 4 Aug 86 p 5

[Text] The 250,000-strong Armed Forces of the Philippines can annihilate the armed communist rebellion in the country in one sweep "if President Corazon Aquino orders us to do so," said Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile. It's now so unlike the military during the Marcos administration.

"At the time, our hands were tied since a substantial part of the Armed Forces under General Fabian Ver was busy doing something else, in Manila, like say, protecting the first family or dabbling in other lucrative financial ventures," Enrile told a meeting Friday of the Credit Management Association of the Philippines.

At the present time, the Armed Forces is merely "holding back" to heed President Aquino's call for reconciliation. As far as the efficiency of the military as a whole is concerned, Enrile said: "If we are ordered by the President to proceed and undertake a no-holds-barred, no-nonsense campaign against the insurgents, we will show the world just how efficient we can be in handling the insurgency problem."

At the same time, Enrile brushed aside reports that he has already been included in the Presidential entourage which will enplane to the United States on an official visit on Sept. 15.

Dismissing these reports as "mere media speculations which do not truly reflect the thinking of the President," Enrile said, "I have not been told that I will go with her (President Aquino). [paragraph continues]

"The composition of the entourage is solely the function and decision of the President. We must leave it to the President to decide who to take with her when she goes to the United States. It would be presumptuous of me to do that for her."

Somebody in the audience, however, wanted to pursue the question further. "Mr Minister, the word is that President Aquino and some of the people around her are wary cf leaving you behind because you might stage a coup while they are in the United States ..."

When the predictable laughter subsided, Enrile engaged the questioner in a wager. "I will bet you right now, if the President leaves me behind, there will be no coup ... I'm sure I'm going to collect on that one," he said.

"Seriously, however, all this talk of me staging a coup is just talk indulged in by people who have nothing better to do," Enrile said. "For your information, initiating a coup — and I should know something about that — is a very difficult experience. An action like that affects your conscience, ideals, emotions and most of all your fear that the the coup might fall and reprisals will be directed at you. I would think I value my life too much to seek those reprisals," he said.

Enrile's joviality, however, perceptibly decreased when a reporter asked him to comment on a recent story of an alleged "secret war of nerves" currently raging between the so-called RAM-MND [Reform the Armed Forces Movement-Ministry of National Defense] boys" and certain Malacanang-based elements reportedly building itself up as a "counter-armed"group under the aegies of a prominent Central Luzon businessman close to the Presidnet.

The report alleges, among other things, that the two opposing sides -- both well-versed in the commerce of Philippine political conflict: innuendo, leaks, rumors and gossip -- are "quietly arming themselves through clandestine shipments of guns on remote shores, men being trained, spies crossing over the lines and daily barrages of powerful propaganda in both directions."

"You people," Enrile addressed the reporter, "would really do anything to sell newspapers. Anyway, I'd rather not discuss that particular issue in as much as we would rather have no quarrel with anybody," he concluded with the report neither confirmed nor denied.

Enrile, long rumored to be nurturing presidential ambitions, also said he will resign from the Aquino Cabinet "when the country is already stable."

Communists Working in Government

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said the military has identified a number of radical communist elements now working in the government. Enrile made the disclosure following his speech before the Philippine Institute of Certified Public Accountants at the Intercontinental Hotel in Makati. He said he did not believe that President Aquino is aware of their entry. Enrile was pessimistic over the outcome of the so-called ceasefire talks with the Communist Party of the Philippines. He said, however, that he hopes the talks will succeed to solve the country's insurgency problem.

NPA Human Rights Violations Cited

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said the military has documented at least 38 human rights violations of the New People's Army in Western Visayas for the month of May, including the killing of 25 persons. The NPA atrocities occurred in the provinces of Aklan, Antique, Iloilo, and Negros Occidental. He said 7 killings attributed to the NPA were reported in Aklan, 1 in Antique, 11 in Iloilo, and 6 in Negros Occidental.

AUSTRALIAN TRADE MINISTER ARRIVES IN MANILA

[Text] The Australian trade minister, John Dawkins, has arrived for a 2-day visit. Dawkins is scheduled to meet with Trade Minister Jose Concepcion, Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra, and Deputy Executive Secretary for Energy Vicente Paterno. He will also address a group of businessmen tomorrow at the Manila Polo Club in Makati. The meeting has been set up by the Philippine-Australian Business Cooperation Committee and the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

FOREIGNERS WARY OF MAKING INVESTMENTS

[By Gethsemane M. Selirio]

[Text] For foreign businessmen, the decision on whether or not to invest in the Philippines hinges on one question: What are the local boys doing?

"I understand that there is a reluctancy on the part of our Philippine colleagues," a German businessman noted during a dialogue with high-ranking Philippine Government officials two weeks ago in Cologne, West Germany.

This reluctancy, also known as the "wait-and-see" attitude of local business, still pervades five months after Corazon Aquino assumed power through a popular revolt. As a result, foreign investors have adopted the same attitude.

Their logic is unquestionable: If the local businessmen do not think that the present socio-economic environment is suitable yet for investment, why should foreign businessmen, who are miles away from the Philippines, think differently?

During the meeting with the Federation of German Industries in Cologne, Philippine officials appeared to be groping for answers when asked why Filipino investors are not making any positive moves in local business and industry.

"We can't blame them," Vice-President Salvador Laurel said as he pointed to the myriad of economic and political problems that the Aquino government has "inherited" from deposed president Ferdinand Marcos.

Laurel compared the local economy to a train that has just gone through a "long, dark tunnel," referring to the years under Marcos.

"Nobody wants to get into that train, not knowing whether it will run or not," he said.

Laurel however urged the German businessmen to "jump ahead of the others," perhaps even ahead of the locals. "Better get into that train before it starts moving," he said.

It is unlikely however that Laurel's train analogy worked. German businessmen, like the rest of their European counterparts, are "very cautious" investors. Before they set up a business in a country half way around the world, they send missions, do a lot of studies and talk with the locals.

Trade and Industry Minister Jose S. Concepcion Jr, at one time, even said German businessmen are "parochial" investors. A Philippine Embassy official in Bonn explained that Germans are simply seguristas (They do not want to leave anything to chance).

Aside from their concern over the inactivity of local business, potential foreign investors are also unclear about the country's rules on investments. In particular, foreign businessmen want to know if the present rules on equity will be retained.

"Nationalization will simply not encourage us," a German businessman put it bluntly.

Nationalization of industries is supported by a "small minority" in the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] admitted Laurel. However, he said, that in his "personal opinion," the concept will not go through.

"There is no danger at this point of changing the ratio (60 percent Filipino and 40 percent foreign equity)," Laurel assured the Germans.

Concepcion added that the last Constitutional convention was "more militant, more left of center" than the present one, yet it came out with "moderate constitutional provisions." Looking at the present composition of the Con-Com, Concepcion predicted that "we will have a Constitution that is fairly moderate."

The rationale of the new government for wanting to bring in foreign investments is to set up labor-intensive industries that would generate jobs, and hopefully improve the purchasing power of the people. "I have told the ultra-left that it is better to bring investments in rather than wave the flag for a 100 percent Filipino equity and not create jobs," Concepcion said.

A lot of other questions were raised by German businessmen during the meeting, most of them aimed at determining just how stable the new government is. Laurel, the seasoned politician, breezed through the problems on insurgency even as he gave the assurance that the government is "speeding up the transition period toward political stability."

"The country is ready for an economic take-off," echoed Concepcion.

It remains to be seen whether the two Philippine officials succeeded in convincing their audience or not. At the very least, the Germans are sending a mission to the Philippines soon to study investment potentials.

But nothing would be more convincing to the foreign businessmen than to see their Filipino counterparts activity reviving local trade and industry.

"They (local businessmen) would know better than us," one German businessman said. "We get our signals from them."

GOVERNMENT, IMF AGREE ON NEW FINANCIAL PACKAGE

HK041011 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 2 Aug 86 p 9

[By George T. Nervez and Claro Fernandez]

[Text] The government and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) have agreed on a new financial package that includes a standby loan, financing for a drop in export earnings and a World Bank assistance for government financial institutions (GFIs).

Monetary and economic authorities involved in the negotiations said there has been "general agreement" on all major points of a new financial package.

"Only minor details have to be worked out, but we would be able to come up with a final document before September 1, 1986," they said.

Director General Mrs Solita Monsod of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) said the IMF agreed to raise the budget deficit to 4.4 percent (or P27.9 billion) of the gross national product (GNP). In the past, it limited the deficit (revenues less expenses of the national government) to .9 percent of GNP.

The agreement also includes:

-- Twenty percent expansion in money supply.
-- Public investment program amounting to P31.4 billion, which is 3.5 percent over 1985. This would increase to 5-6 percent of GNP from 1987 to 1989.
-- Tax reforms to raise collections to 10 percent of GNP in 1986, 12.4 percent by 1987 and, 13.5 percent by 1988.
-- Restructuring of 20 percent of the country's total foreign debt of $26 billion.
-- Removal of remaining import restrictions (trade liberalization) in two years.

Mrs Monsod said the IMF would make available $300 million under a standby program over 18 months until end-1987.

On the other hand, the World Bank would make available $300 million for the rehabilitation and restructuring of GFIs, particularly, the Development Bank of the Philippines and the Philippine National Bank.

Also being sought from the IMF is a still undisclosed amount of compensatory financing to make up for the drop in the country's major exports.

The agreement is held significant because it could trigger negotiations for the restructuring of the country's commercial debts.

It could likewise lead to additional financing for other sources, particularly, a $400-million cofinancing between the World Bank and other major foreign banks.

"The IMF has been 'most accommodating' during the negotiations," Mrs Monsod told members of the diplomatic corps at the Diplomatic Kapihan.

She said the IMF was more lenient to the new government as compared to the negotiations during the past administration.

The NEDA chief added that the last letter-of-intent" spelling out the government's economic and monetary programs over the next 18 months, was being finalized, and would be out by mid-August.

Mrs Monsod said the projected budgetary deficit for 1987 has been trimmed to 2.7 percent of GNP or P20 billion, significantly lower than the government's earlier projections of 4.7 percent or P33.9 billion.

$480-540 Million Requested

[Text] Manila, Aug 5 (AFP) — The Philippines is requesting 480 million to 540 million dollars in new loans from the International Monetary Fund (IMF), the Finance Ministry said here Tuesday. The request of the Philippines is for 400 million to 480 million special drawing rights (SDR). An SDR is currently valued at about 1.20 U.S. dollars. The loan is to come from a standby credit agreement and the compensatory financing facility of the IMF, Finance Ministry spokesmen quoted Minister Jaime Ongpin as saying.

The request was contained in a letter of intent (LOI) submitted to the IMF by the government last week, the ministry said. The LOI contains the country's economic program as agreed upon with an IMF mission. An IMF team has been in the Philippines since July 24 to negotiate with Philippine monetary authorities over the drafting of the economic program. The economic reforms embodied in the LOI must now wait for formal approval from the IMF board in Washington for the loan to be released.

AQUINO APPROVES DELAY ON LIBERALIZATION

HK010742 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 31 Jul 86 p 13

[By Ellen Samaniego]

[Text] President Corazon Aquino yesterday approved the proposal of Trade and Industry Minister Jose S. Concepcion Jr. to postpone until October this year the lifting of import controls on 167 items, which were supposed to have been freed since April 30.

During the Cabinet meeting yesterday, Aquino similarly supported Concepcion's stand to further defer liberalization of items scheduled on Dec. 31, 1986 and June 30, 1987 to a later date based on a program that would be submitted to the International Monetary Fund by the end of the year. This covers a total of 246 products.

As proposed by Concepcion, an indepth study will be undertaken in consultation with all affected sectors on the items whose imports were to have been liberalized on April 30. This will take into consideration the appropriate level of tariff adjustments and other conditions necessary after which the government will submit its recommendations by Oct. 31.

The import liberalization program is one of the critical issues in the government's talks with the International Monetary Fund, which had indicated that no loans might be extended to the Philippines unless the schedule of products for import liberalization by April 30 and December 31 this year was strictly and fully complied with by the government.

Concepcion, however, hinted that the government could thresh the problem out with the IMF mission without necessarily affecting the standby credit it was seeking from the IMF.

Aquino's approval was largely shared by a number of Cabinet members including Concepcion who believed that the government should first give the industries a chance and take the necessary measures to save local industries before totally "burying" them should the measures fail.

Labor Minister Augusto Sanchez, countering the stance taken by Economic Planning Minister Solita Monsod to immediately go on with the program to protect consumers, noted its far-reaching effects on the worsening employment situation. He argued that "all of us are consumers, including the producers themselves, but who are part of the different sectors of society."

In recommending the postponement, Concepcion warned the government that "if we are now to comply unilaterally with the demands of the IMF, rather than listen to what our people have to say, we may begin to lose the confidence and good will of the private sector." He added that this would set back the progress the new government has made in convincing the private sector that they were indeed the "engine of growth."

He agreed with the private sector's view that the overall national interest would suffer tremendously by acceding to further liberalization citing that the private sector had sufficiently demonstrated good faith by conceding almost 70 percent of the products included in the program.

He also said that the government has yet to undertake the necessary framework such as an operative vehicle for surveillance and prosecution of smugglers to protect local producers.

EDITORIAL COMPLAINS ABOUT THE IMF METHODS

HK041029 Manila PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER in English 1 Aug 86 p 4

[Editorial: "The IMF's Torture Chamber")

[Text] Like some medieval dungeon master, the International Monetary Fund has come up once again with new methods for making life for the average Filipino difficult.

One recalls that in the Marcos era, the IMF conditions for the grant of loans resulted in the imposition of all kinds of taxes which directly lowered the standard of living of the average Filipino and increased the numbers of those below the poverty line.

To mention only a few of the IMF-sponsored horrors of the Marcos regime, there were the astronomical increases in real estate taxes, in income taxes, in sales taxes, in special taxes like energy and motor vehicle tax, flood tax etc -- all designed to siphon off the citizenry's money and increase the Marcos regime's capacity to pay the country's foreign debt.

That such moves helped to usher the downfall of the Marcos regime does not seem to have fazed the IMF a bit, and it continues to levy a juggernaut of conditions on the fledgling Aquino government.

The latest of such conditions is an import liberalization plan, which in effect will create a market for foreign goods in the Philippines, to the joy of the U.S.-backed IMF and its foreign allies. That it may cause the collapse of Philippine industries and the surge of unemployment among Filipino laborers does not bother the IMF, which, as usual, threatens the suspension of any new loans to the country.

In addition, the IMF would want to have government financing institutions re-structured to suit its own purposes, thus directly interfering in the program priorities of the new government.

President Aquino and her Cabinet have shown resistance to the IMF, a development which never occurred in the era of the supine and spineless Ministers of Marcos.

The 90-day moratorium in the import liberalization plan is proof that the Aquino administration is not about to be dragged into the IMF torture chamber, and this is an attitude that deserves public support.

Perhaps it is time that the government started thinking of protecting the people from IMF conditions and telling the IMF to go take a walk into some other Third World country they can push around.

CON-COM ALLOWS PROVISION FOR MARTIAL LAW

HK010618 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 31 Jul 86 pp 1, 9

[By Rod Y. Villa Jr.]

[Text] The Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] approved last night a provision in the new constitution granting to the president the power to proclaim martial law and lift the privilege of writ of habeas corpus in case of actual invasion or rebellion when public safety so demands.

The body voted 28 to 12 for an amendment introduced by Christian Monsod, authorizing the president to use the extraordinary powers for 60 days, subject to extension by legislative concurrence.

The provision scrapped by substitution a section in the article on executive which the commission members approved last week. [sentence as published] The section called for concurrence by majority vote of the national assembly before martial law may be declared.

The Con-Com also approved yesterday a section calling for full public disclosure of the state of health of a president suffering serious illness.

Blas F. Ople, leading the four-man opposition block which sponsored the measure, said the illness of the president involves national security and stability and, therefore, is a matter of serious public concern.

The Monsod proposal scrapped subversion and sedition in the clause "imminent danger thereof" embodied in the 1973 and 1935 Constitutions which, he said, then President Ferdinand Marcos used as a justification for the declaration of martial law.

Monsod said the new section would grant the future president flexibility for swift decision and action in coping with national emergencies.

He said safeguards are built in the clause limiting the period of martial law to 60 days after which the legislature should decide whether or not to extend the emergency period.

Those who voted for the amendment were Adolfo S. Azcuna, Teodoro C. Bacani, Jose F.S. Bengzon Jr., Florangel Rosario Braid, Crispino M. de Castro, Jose C. Colayco, Roberto C. Concepcion, Hilario G. Davide Jr., Vicente B. Foz, Jose B. Laurel Jr., Eulogio R. Lerum, Regalado E. Maambong, Christain S. Monsod. Tecdoro C. Natividad, Teresa Ma, Nieva, Jose N. Nolledo, Ople, Ambrosio P. Padilla, 5pbmytpold. Regalado, Rustico F. delos Reyes Jr., Cirilo A. Rigos, Francisco A. Rodrigo, Ricardo J. Romulo, Decoroso R. Rosales, Lorenzo M. Sumulong, Gregorio J. Tingzon, Lugum L Uka, and Bernardo M. Villegas.

Those who voted against were Ponciano L. Bennagin, Lino O. Brocka, Edmundo G. Garcia, Jose Luis Martin C. Gascon, Alberto M.K. Jemir, Minda Lu M. Quesada, Napoleon J. Rama, Rene V. Sarmiento, Jose E. Suarez, Jaime S.L. Tadeo, Wilfredo P. Villacorta, and Con-Com president Cecilia Munoz Palma.

Casting her vote for the first time on an important issue, Palma warned the provision would pave the way once more for dictatorial rule.

Monsod led Con-Com leaders in expressing deep concern over what they called the "emasculation of the executive department" by provisions of the new Constitution already approved.

He cited several checks and safeguards the body had instituted. These included the scrapping of Amendment No. 6 and the elimination of the lifetime immunity of the president for all acts while in office.

Monsod also referred to provisions expanding judicial review to include the adjudication of political questions.

Marcos had exercised exclusive perogatives over political questions during his rule, causing the emasculation of the courts, Monsod said.

He likewise noted that appointments in the judiciary are now placed beyond the reach of the president.

With the institution of a bicameral legislature, there are now also two bodies to check the president, Monsod added.

Manila Bulletin

HK041001 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 1 Aug 86 p 6

[Editorial: "Martial Law Powers"]

[Text] The newspaper report says it was the first time Con-Com [Constitutional Commission] President Cecilia Munoz Palma voted on an important issue. The issue was whether the president of the Philippines can declare martial law without the concurrence of the legislature. Mrs Palma voted against.

The proposal is not as ominous as it seems. In the first place, the president can impose martial law only for 60 days. Any extension will have to be approved by the legislature. Secondly, the grounds for declaring martial law have been limited to two: in case of actual invasion or rebellion when public safety so demands.

In the 1973 Constitution, the president may place the country or any part of it under martial law in case of invasion, insurrection, or rebellion, or imminent danger thereof, when the public safety requires it.

It would appear, then, that the provision just passed by the Con-Com is more restrictive than the 1973 provision. Besides, as pointed out in the Con-Com, the Supreme Court may pass upon the validity of the declaration of martial law, according to newspaper reports.

Maybe it is not too late for the Con-Com to scrutinize all the provisions bearing on the martial law powers of the president. The question of martial law did not end with the Marcos regime. Rebellion is strong in some provinces. It will take some time for the government to eliminate the pockets of insurrection in this country. Enough powers should be given to the president to act decisively in the regions where swift action is required.

ACCUSED LOYALIST LAWYER ORDERED RELEASED

NAKASONE COMMENTS ON KAPITSA STATEMENT

OW070535 Tokyo KYODO in English 0523 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 7 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said Thursday that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev should visit Tokyo before he makes a trip to Moscow. Nakasone referred to a statement by deputy Soviet foreign minister Mikhail Kapitsa Wednesday that it has not been decided yet whether he or Gorbachev will visit the other's country first.

No Soviet party leader has ever visited Japan, though Japanese prime ministers have made trips to Moscow, the latest being by Kakuei Tanaka in 1973. Earlier this week, Japanese foreign minister Tadashi Kuranari issued an invitation for Gorbachev to come to Tokyo by the end of this year or next January.

Questioned by reporters at his official residence, Nakasone said, "(Gorbachev) should come first." But Nakasone suggested that he is ready to visit Moscow first if there is any prospect of a breakthrough in talks over Japan's territorial claim to four small islands off Hokkaido. The Soviet Union, which occupied the islands at the end of World War II, says the territorial problem has been settled.

HIROSHIMA PEACE SUMMIT APPEALS FOR DISARMAMENT

[By Suvendrini P. Suguro]

[Text] Hiroshima, Aug. 6 KYODO -- The first Hiroshima peace summit closed Wednesday, the 41st anniversary of the atomic bombing of the city in World War II, with an appeal for the world to heed calls for nuclear disarmament to help safeguard peace. The symposium of scientists, pacifists and Nobel Prize winners, held to mark the International Year of Peace, issued an appeal which said, "We have carefully studied the facts regarding the damage inflicted on Hiroshima and realize that at present the total world nuclear arsenal contains one million times the destructive power of the bomb dropped on Hiroshima. "A single nuclear war might well annihilate the human race and so we invite the world to heed the spirit of the Hiroshima declaration which calls for these aspirations."

it was delivered by Linus Pauling, winner of Nobel prizes for chemistry and peace and president of Linus Pauling Institute of Science and World Affairs, at the first peace symposium in Hiroshima.

The symposium was attended by a wide variety of people, both local and foreign who applauded when the appeal was read out.

Dr. Frank Blackaby, director of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, suggested that as national security can only be achieved by having friendly relations with neighboring countries, Japan as a prosperous nation should help its Asian neighbors. "There is tremendous potential for more aid to flow from Japan to the Asian developing countries and in this way bring about peace," he said. He also urged Japan to help in providing more assistance in research for arms control around the world.

Dorothy Hodgkin, Nobel Prize winner for chemistry, said Japan should work harder and become a responsible partner in keeping the Pacific Ocean nuclear-free. "Even though it is said Japan is nuclear-free, the fact that U.S. warships are allowed to travel freely in and out of her ports threatens the security of the north Pacific Ocean," she explained.

Paul Crutzen of the Max Planck Institute for Chemistry, suggested that Japan use her advanced technology in ways that will strengthen peace moves. "It is important that third countries also provide valuable information on nuclear activities to the people. At present the superpowers are monopolizing this function and it is hard to believe them," he said.

Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Nobel Peace prize winner, answering a question on how the Japanese government can help to end the apartheid system of racial segregation in South Africa, said it is important to stop the burgeoning trade between the two countries. "It is a moral decision they have to take. We are not asking for political or economic sanctions but for support of the freedom we have been fighting for years," he declared.

Following the close of the peace summit there will be a concert by the Hiroshima Symphonic Orchestra and a dinner for the symposium participants Wednesday evening.

MITI HALTS SEMICONDUCTOR EXPORTS TO U.S.

OW061257 Tokyo KYODO in English 1139 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 6 KYODO -- The Ministry of International Trade and Industry disclosed Wednesday it has withheld approval for massive exports of semiconductors to the United States. Ministry officials said the export control ordinance was invoked when it discovered Japanese electronic firms had concluded contracts for exports of a large volume of semiconductors before a Japanese-U.S. agreement was enforced on August 1. The agreement, reached after hard bargaining, called for price monitoring of Japanese-made chips exported to the United States to avoid disruption of the U.S. market.

The officials said U.S. computer makers ordered a massive volume of semiconductors from Japanese makers in a bid to secure supplies of low-priced products. The Japanese manufacturers also tried to expedite shipments for fear that their market share in the United States might fall.

The officials said most contracts involved sales of 256 kilobit dynamic random access memory (DRAM) chips, which account for nearly 80 percent of exports to the United States. Total contracts were valued at more than 10 billion yen, at least double the figure contracted in June.

The ministry took the step in response to a request by the U.S. Government, which had discovered a rush of chip exports from Japan in July.

The ministry plans to hold the volume of Japanese chip exports to the United States during the third quarter to the level of the second quarter. The price-monitoring system will be applied to new contracts to be concluded after August 1.

MSDF ANTISUBMARINE BASE'S LINKS TO U.S. VIEWED

OW061353 Naha OKINAWA TIMES in Japanese 6 Aug 86 Morning Edition p 1

[Text] It has been more than 2 years since the Maritime Self-Defense Force [MSDF] established the "Okinawa Oceanic Observation Station" at the U.S. White Beach military facility in Katsuren Town in July 1984. An antisubmarine warfare base for the defense of 1,000 nautical-mile sealanes, the station had approximately 70 personnel at the time of its inauguration. However, it has been made clear that its personnel has been doubled to approximately 150 and its functions have been strengthened.

With frequent visits by American engineers, there are indications that the base has virtually become a joint Japan-U.S. operation. However, how antisubmarine information is provided to the U.S. side and other details are classifed as "military secrets." All this shows that the station is a "secret base."

Captain Kunihiko Banto, station commander, explained, "our personnel increased to 150 in 1985, and it was as scheduled." U.S. engineers, he said, "are civilians dispatched from their home country and assigned here as needed for technical support." However, he refused to disclose their number.

The oceanic observation station installs stationary measuring devices underwater and collects oceanic environmental data using underwater cables. The Defense Agency has said that the cables are "to gather underwater data for antisubmarine warfare" but has refused to disclose the length of the cables and other details on the grounds that they are "confidential matters." It thus indicates that the cables are laid not only in territorial waters but also in the open sea.

The agency also made clear that the station is part of Japan's share of military costs borne in line with U.S. demands, saying that "the data obtained by the station is important for the defense of the southwestern sealanes, and they are provided to the U.S. forces as well."

Asked to explain how the data is linked to U.S. military intelligence networks, Banto said, "I think it will take at least 10 years to utilize the data, but I cannot comment on the process."

It is believed that he refused to comment for fear he might contradict the Japanese Government's official stand. In 1978, the then Defense Bureau Director General Maruyama said that although military ties between Japan and the United States have become closer, "In peacetime we exchange general information but not tactical information."

REACTOR TESTS MODERATELY ENRICHED U-235 FUEL

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 6 KYODO — A 50,000 kilowatt atomic reactor using moderately enriched uranium as fuel went into operation Wednesday, the Japan Atomic Energy Research Institute announced. The institute said the reactor, the JMTR, installed at its Oarai facility in Ibaraki prefecture, is the world's first facility of its kind.

The institute has been experimenting with 45 percent enriched uranium 235 as a substitute for the 93 percent enriched uranium to reduce the possibility of fuel being used for the production of nuclear weapons. Highly enriched uranium normally is used for experimental reactors to produce high-density neutron radiation to conduct radioactivity-resistant tests on various materials. Uranium with a low 3-5 percent enrichment level is normally used as fuel in atomic power reactors.

The experiment stems from a U.S. proposal in 1977 for the use of uranium with low-level enrichment to avoid the possible use of fuel for military purposes. The moderately enriched uranium was jointly developed with a West German nuclear fuel manufacturer.

The institute said it will continue experiments to further lower the enrichment level to 20 percent.

DMZ INCIDENT 'RECKLESS' PROVOCATION BY U.S. ROK

SK070155 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2153 GMT 6 Aug 86

[NODONG SINMUN 7 August commentary: "Where Are They Attempting To Lead the Situation?"]

[Text] On 5 August, the South Korean puppet Army troops fired several hundred large-caliber machine-gun rounds at our guardposts in the DMZ south of Pyongyang on the central front, thus perpetrating a grave military provocation.

The puppets' dangerous military provocation, perpetrated after vicious propaganda, smearing and slandering us every day through broadcasting in the frontline area, is a premeditated and preplanned criminal maneuver designed to lead the situation to an acute phase by aggravating tension. This shows how reckless the puppets' new war provocation maneuvers have become. In particular, we cannot overlook the fact that the enemy, having refused our proposal for talks between military authorities, responded to the proposal with armed provocation.

As is known, some time ago the KPA Supreme Command made a new important proposal to hold talks between military authorities who have real military power in the North and the South and to take measures for easing tension. Those who want to relax tension and promote peace on the Korean peninsula cannot refuse our peace proposal. However, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets reinforced their troops while refusing our proposal and deployed most of their armed forces in advance areas close to the Military Demarcation Line [MOL] so they will be able to launch an offensive operation at any moment. Thus, they had their armed forces assume a high degree of combat readiness and assume a shooting position by directing many weapons, including nuclear weapons, at us.

War exercises, including the recent "Ulchi-86" staged throughout South Korea, are being staged more frequently and aerial espionage activities are also being staged often. Because of the reckless military provocation maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique, their stooges, the nation's situation has been strained to an extreme point. Thus, the military confrontation along the MOL has reached a most serious stage since the armistice.

This is the reality. However, the Chon Tu-hwan clique, not satisfied with wielding bayonets against us, openly fired at us in the frontline area, where the armed forces of the North and South are tensely confronting each other. Where on earth are they attempting to lead the situation? The recent armed provocation is a reckless act which could be perpetrated only by those who want to have a showdown of strength with us and venture on war.

In the early part of the 1950's, the South Korean puppets ceaselessly perpetrated armed provocations and armed aggression against our republic along the 38th parallel and triggered a war in the end. The puppets are following the same path again and are recklessly acting without discretion. However, the road of war is the road of ruin for the puppets and a path that will lead to their graves. The fact that war did not break out in Korea even amid the strained situation is the result of our consistent peace-loving efforts. The puppets should not misunderstand our patience.

If the puppets advance along the road of war in the end while repeatedly perpetrating military provocations ignoring our warnings, they will pay dearly. The puppets should cool their heads filled with the frenzy of war and should come to the table for talks between military authorities to take measures for easing tension, as we have demanded.

NORTH-SOUTH DIALOGUE NEEDED TO EASE TENSION

SK050443 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0431 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 5 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today prints an article titled "Measures must be taken to ease tension for North-South dialogue"

The author of the article says: As long as the tension is being heightened by staging frantic military exercises against the other party to the dialogue, there can be neither the improvement of North-South relations nor the dialogue for national unity. Noting that the South Korean puppets are still blocking the road to the resumption of the dialogue by holding one after another large-scale military exercises against the north behind various signboards, such as "Team Spirit 86", "Ttangbol 86" "Piho 86" "Shield 86" and "Ulchi 86", the article says:

Facts eloquently tell that at the present moment, peace on the Korean peninsula is a pressing task and the tension must be relaxed before anything else. The question of detente in Korea can be smoothly settled only when those who hold real military power of our side and those of the United States and South Korea who are directly responsible for the heightened tension and under unavoidable obligation to ease it meet at one table. Our proposal for holding talks between the military authorities proceeded precisely from the urgent realistic demand. Now the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets are talking about the "resumption of the dialogue" which is not in their minds, while turning down our fair peace proposal. This is a shameless act ignoring the reality and foolish trick to delude public opinion and thereby shift the responsibility for the suspension of the dialogue onto others.

U.S. EXTRATERRITORIALITY SHOWS ROK CONTROL NOMINAL

[Text] Pyongyang August 7 (KCNA) -- The brutalities commited by the U.S. imperialist aggression troops occupying South Korea against the people ran into more than 15,000 cases in the past ten years, according to a radio report from Seoul. This was disclosed in an answer of the puppet government to an interpellation put in writing by a "national assemblyman" from the New Korea Democratic Party. The puppets announced that they "exercised" "jurisdiction" only in 100 cases of those mentioned above.

The "jurisdiction" claimed to have been exercised by the puppet clique is, of course, nothing but a nominal one. It is totally crippled by the South Korea-U.S. "Status of Forces Agreement" which guarantees extraterritorial rights to the U.S. imperialist aggressors. By disclosing the fact that they failed to refer the overwhelming majority of the U.S. imperialist aggression troops who committed brutalities even to formal trials, the puppets admitted that they defended and connived at their crimes.

EFFORTS FOR NUCLEAR-FREE ZONE, U.S. PULLOUT CITED

[Text] Pyongyang August 2 (KCNA) -- The International Liaison Committee for the Independent and Peaceful Reunfication of Korea calls for launching activity for the success of the Pyongyang international conference for denuclearization and peace on the Korean peninsula and struggling for the conversion of the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free, peace zone and for the withdrawal of the U.S. forces and all nuclear weapons. The International Liaison Committee for the Independent and Peaceful Reunification of Korea says this in its July 25 appeal calling for intensifying the movement to establish a nuclear-free, peace zone on the Korean peninsula.

Noting that during the month of solidarity with the Korean people the world people demanded the withdrawal of U.S. forces and all nuclear weapons from South Korea and denounced the war provocation moves and "two Koreas" plot of the United States and the South Korean dictatorial "regime", the appeal stresses:

During the month of solidarity with the Korean people, it was stressed that the most urgent question is to turn into a nuclear-free zone the Korean peninsula where the danger of a nuclear war is great. The International Liaison Committee for the Independent and Peaceful Reunification of Korea calls upon all the national committees and peace-loving forces of the world to further strengthen the international movement of solidarity with the Korean people and strive, in particular, for the opening of talks of the military authorities to ease the tension and achieve a durable peace on the Korean peninsula.

MASS CONSUMER GOODS PRODUCTION INCREASING

SK052246 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1513 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 5 (KCNA) -- Korea is registering successes by directing efforts to the production of "August 3 mass consumption goods."

In the last two years the production of mass consumption goods has grown five times in Pyongyang, North and South Pyongan Provinces and South Hamgyong Province and their variety four times in South Hwanghae Province, Kaesong Municipality, Chagang and Yanggang Provinces. The variety of "August 3 mass consumption goods" and their output showed a marked increase in the first half of this year, in particular.

As a result, the commodities retail turnover at direct sales stores in cities and counties swelled two times in North Hamgyong and Yanggang provinces and Kaesong Municipality and 1.6 times taking the country as a whole in the first half of this year compared with the corresponding period of last year.

"August 3 mass consumption goods" produced by using by-products, waste and idle materials from industrial establishments carry a weighty significance in meeting the growing demand of people for consumer goods.

Dear Comrade Kim Chong-il went round the exhibition of light industry goods on August 3, 1984, and indicated the orientation and ways of increasing the variety of mass consumption goods and improving their quality. Giving working guidance again to the work of direct sales stores of "August 3 mass consumption goods" on May 13, he set forth detailed tasks to effect innovation in the production of light industry goods and their circulation including the problem of setting up new exchange wholesale stores.

Many shops, workteams, housewives' workteams and sideline workteams producing "August 3 mass consumption goods" have been organised at industrial establishments, cooperative farms and residential neighbourhood units in Korea. Over 20,000 kinds of daily necessaries including various kinds of knit goods, ready-made clothes, domestic articles, kitchen utensils, goods for cultural use, and general merchandise are produced there and sold at over 200 direct sales stores in all parts of the country. Recently exchange wholesale stores of "August 3 mass consumption goods" made their appearance to activate exchange of consumer goods between town and country, contributing better to making the life of working people affluent.

KIM IL-SONG FUNDAMENTALS OF PARTY BUILDING VIEWED

SK020449 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0433 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 2 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN August 1 carried an article explaining the fundamental principle for the building of a revolutionary party expounded in "Historical Experience of Building the Workers' Party of Korea", a lecture authored by the great leader President Kim Il-song.

The most important matter in properly defining the fundamental principle for party building is to correctly represent the demands of the times and the desires of the popular masses, the article headlined "Fundamental Principle for the Building of Revolutionary Party" stresses, and says:

Ours is an era of chajusong. With a deep penetration into the demands of our time, the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded the great chuche idea in his early years and, on its basis, propounded the fundamental principle for the building of a revolutionary party for the first time in history. This principle is to realise political leadership of the whole society, grasping work with people as the main. This is an embodiment in party building of the philosophical principle of the chuche idea that man is the master of everything and decides everything. The fundamental principle for the building of a revolutionary party propounded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is a scientific one which fully accords with the nature and function of the working class party.

The working class party is a vanguard political organization of the working masses and its function is to educate and rally people so as to victoriously advance the revolution and construction.

As expounded by the chuche idea, the subject of history is the popular masses and their strength is inexhaustible. When scope is given to their creative enthusiasm through proper work with people, it is possible to successfully carry out whatever difficult and complex revolutionary tasks arising in building a party and carrying out the revolutionary cause.

The fundamental principle for the building of a chuche-type party expounded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is also a revolutionary one which fully accords with the political mode of the working class party. Politics by the working class party is one synthesizing the will of the working masses. The basic way for realizing such politics by the working class party is work with people. As a most powerful means of organizing and directing the activity of people, work with people makes it possible to fully meet the basic demands of politics.

The fundamental principle for the building of a chuche-type party expounded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is also a lawful one stemming from the socio-historical position of the working-class party. The working class party is a leading political organization that represents the rights and interests of the broad masses of the people and guides in a uniform way their revolutionary struggle as a whole to realize their independent demands. The political leadership of the whole society is ensured through work with people. As the society is unthinkable apart from people, so is the political leadership of the society apart from work with people, political work. The validity and vitality of the fundamental principle for the building of a revolutionary party propounded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song have been clearly proved in the course of the historical struggle for party building, stresses the article.

PARTY REVOLUTIONARY IDEOLOGY, THEORY EXAMINED

[NODONG SINMUN 3 August special article: "The Ideology and Theory of Our Party Reflecting the New Requirements of Revolutionary Development"]

[Text] Our party's ideology and theory are a firm guiding policy of our people's revolutionary struggle to complete the chuche cause. The fact that the party's ideology and theory demonstrate a great attracting force and vitality in revolution and construction has a bearing on the fact that they precisely reflect the requirements of a new higher stage in social development and the development of the revolutionary movement.

The great ideology and theory of the working class are formed to reflect the requirements of revolution, and they are developed and enriched as the revolution deepens and develops. The development of the revolutionary movement and its practical requirements are a condition for the development of scientific revolutionary ideas and revolutionary theory. Reality is an important yardstick in verifying the justness and greatness of a revolutionary theory. Therefore, only ideology and theory based on the popular masses' revolutionary struggle of practice and formed to reflect its requirements can have a scientific and revolutionary nature and carry out a great reforming role.

Developing a new revolutionary theory to suit the requirements of reality become more essential problems as revolution and construction are put on a higher stage. Comrade Kim Chong-il, member of the Presidium of the Political Bureau and secretary of the party Central Committee, noted: Our times, during which revolution and construction are deepening and developing in an unequalled manner and during which numerous new theoretical and practical problems are coming into being, require that we establish the revolutionary guiding theory and the strategy and tactics suitable for today's reality and further develop the working class revolutionary theory in a creative manner.

The revolutionary struggle of the working class and the working popular masses is developing to a new, higher stage. The popular masses' aspirations and demands for chajusong are greater than ever before, and the realization of communism is in the timetable of history as a task of reality rather than as a long-cherished desire in the distant future.

This historical environment presents numerous new ideological and theoretical problems to the working class and its revolutionary party. Our party has consistently and deeply discerned the new requirements of revolutionary practice, given clarification on them with scientific wisdom, and developed and enriched the working class revolutionary ideology and theory in its course.

Our party's ideological and theoretical achievements have been extraordinarily diversified and abundant. These achievements contain the endlessly noble theories and experiences our party has achieved through creative ideological and theoretical activities and practice while leading the work of all fields -- political, economic, cultural, military, and external affairs -- to victory under the slogan of modeling the entire party and society on the chuche idea.

The ideological and theoretical achievements that have developed and enriched the working class revolutionary ideology and revolutionary theory anew are a valuable asset in bringing about ultimate fulfillment of the socialist and communist cause.

The dear Comrade Kim Chong-il's historical treatises, including "On the Chuche Idea" and "Let Us Advance Holding Aloft the Banner of Marxism-Leninism and the Chuche Idea," comprehensively elucidate the essential revolutionary theories required by the new higher stage of development of the revolutionary movement.

Our party's ideology and theory, above all precisely reflect the demands of the times during which the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary idea, the chuche idea, has been brilliantly embodied in revolutionary practice and been brought into bloom in all fields. The working class revolutionary struggle is to realize the revolutionary idea of the leader. This struggle acquires new contents as revolution deepens and develops.

Most important in the historical environment in which the leader's ideology firmly prevails in the entire society as a revolutionary guiding ideology is to ensure the purity of this ideology generation after generation and to work for its ultimate victory. The ideology and theory of the party and the leader leading the revolutionary cause to completion should be based on such demands of the times. This is the fundamental problem determining the might of the ideology and theory of the working class party.

The revolutionary idea of respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the chuche idea, is the true revolutionary world outlook of the working class and a revolutionary theory to realize the chajusong of the working popular masses. This revolutionary idea has been brilliantly embodied in the practice of revolution and has brought about great reform. The Korean revolution, advancing under the banner of the chuche idea, can pioneer the road of struggle victoriously -- overcoming labor pains in the inchoate stage caused by flunkeyism and dogmatism -- and advance along the unfamiliar road of socialism and communism today without the slightest vicissitudes.

The chuche idea has had great impact on development of the revolutionary movement of our times by creating a new independent world.

Firmly believing the ideal of chajusong elucidated by the chuche idea, and advancing along the road of independence is the trend of development of our times. The great Comrade Kim Il-song's [widaehan kimilsong tongji] revolutionary idea has already become a stern historial reality and a great material force, and all the bases for the ultimate victory of Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary idea have been firmly solidified.

This environment, above all, has required the ideology and theory which make it possible to resolutely adhere to this revolutionary idea and to add luster to it forever as a guiding revolutionary ideology, which was solved by our party's creative ideology and theory.

Promoted by the historical mission to defend and adhere to Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary idea generation after generation, our party has clearly elucidated the historical position of this revolutionary idea and formulated the great leader's revolutionary idea, thereby logically proving that Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary idea will be the great guiding ideology, guiding theory, and guiding method of revolution in the future communist society as well as today. This is a great ideological and theoretical achievement that can be accomplished only by the great party which purely inherits the leader's revolutionary cause.

Our party has defended and comprehensively deepened and developed all contents of the great leader's revolutionary idea. In particular, by deepening and developing the chuche idea -- consisting of a new philosophical principle, social and historical outlook, and the guiding principles of revolution and construction -- by original theories, our party has thoroughly demonstrated the justness and indestructible vitality of the chuche idea. This, therefore, powerfully accelerates the development of our revolution and the times, which are vigorously advancing under the banner of the chuche idea.

Our party's ideology and theory also precisely reflect the new requirements of development of the revolutionary movement to brilliantly inherit and complete the working class revolutionary cause pioneered by the leader. The working class revolutionary struggle has a long-term and arduous nature. This inevitably presents a problem of resolutely inheriting the lineage of revolution and completing the revolutionary cause. This problem emerges to the front as revolution and construction deepen and develop.

The problem of inheriting the revolutionary cause is a universal [popyon chogin] historical task facing the communist movement of our times. During the long historical period in which the communist movement has been developed, the revolutionary generations have continuously changed. This historical road shows that when the problem of inheriting the revolutionary cause is correctly solved, revolution and construction vigorously advance with new vitality, though they must otherwise undergo serious vicissitudes.

Over half a century has passed since our revolution was pioneered under the banner of the chuche idea. During this period, a really great victory has been achieved in carrying out our revolution. Under the wise leadership of the great leader, our people have built the most advanced socialist system in this land and have made our country an independent, self-reliant, and self-defensive socialist power. Based on this great victory, we are waging a vigorous struggle of a higher stage to bring about a complete socialist victory.

All the facts have demanded that our party and people continue our revolution, which was launched from the forest on Mt Paektu, to the end and tirelessly stage the struggle to finally consummate the revolutionary cause. This has raised a pressing demand that the issue of inheriting the revolutionary cause be solved correctly.

In a timely manner that has suited this historic period of great change in the development of the revolution, the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il has actively undertaken profound ideological and theoretical activities. Thus, the new ideologies and theories advanced by our party are replete with strategies and tactics, methods and tasks for struggle designed to brilliantly inherit the chuche cause. Herein lie the historical position of the party's ideologies and theories and the characteristics of the times.

Our party, which is endlessly loyal to the leader and his cause, has scientifically explained for the first time that the revolutionary cause of the working class is essentially the revolutionary cause of the leader and that it is a historic cause that should be continued from generation to generation and, based on this, has provided guidelines to brilliantly inherit and consummate the revolutionary cause of the working class explored by the leader.

These guidelines reflect priceless ideological and theoretical treasures for the future of the revolution, including the question of strongly defending and safeguarding the revolutionary ideas of the leader and of thoroughly embodying them within the entire party and society: The question of firmly guaranteeing the political and ideological unity and cohesion of the party from generation to generation; and the question of endlessly consolidating and developing traditions and accomplishments gained by the leader.

In particular, the question concerning the leader's political successor capable of leading the entire party and all the people in a struggle to inherit and consummate the revolutionary cause, and the theory on firmly consolidating the organizational and ideological foundations of the party and establishing a leadership system within the entire party occupy unique places.

Thanks to these unique ideologies and theories, a path capable of inheriting and consummating, without the slightest hitch, the cause of the party, the cause of the leader, has been illuminated and its valuable experiences revealed. Our party's ideologies and theories also correctly reflect the new demands of development of the revolutionary movement presented in the schedule of history -- the building of a communist society.

Communism is mankind's ideal. Ever since socialism and communism were transformed from a daydream into science, the working class and working masses have tirelessly struggled for the victory of socialism and communism. As a result, many countries around the world have already forever swept away reactionary exploitative classes and their systems and have established advanced socialist systems and are now vigorously engaged in a struggle to realize the socialist and communist cause, while strongly defending them against the U.S. imperialist enemy's aggressive and subversive maneuvers.

The path to achieving complete victory of the socialist and communist cause after establishment of the socialist system is still an unknown road that mankind has never traversed and a very hard and complicated path of struggle. Thus, fully explaining the strategic and tactical questions of socialist and communist society and its development has emerged as a pressing demand of development in the revolutionary movement of our era.

Moreover, under circumstances during which the slanders and machinations of the imperialist reactionaries and their quisling buglers, and their subversive maneuvers against socialism and communism are becoming more blatant, fully and profoundly explaining the revolutionary theories, strategy, and tactics to carry out the socialist and communist cause has emerged as an important task to strongly defend the triumphant socialist system, highly display its superiority, and hasten the communist cause ahead of schedule.

This important demand for development of the revolutionary movement of socialism and communism is being brilliantly solved through our party's ideological and theoretical activity. Based on the great leader's revolutionary ideas, our party has fully and profoundly explained the nature and superiority of socialist society, the inherent characteristics and appearance of the socialist and communist society that has completely triumphed, the highest programs and strategic targets for carrying out the communist cause.

Also, our party has newly and fully explained the basic revolutionary tasks for building socialism and communism; forms of combat and forms of the mass movement to implement such tasks; the role and position of political organizations and institutions during the period of socialist and communist construction; and all issues concerning the revolutionary leadership system and methods employed to guide the masses.

Thus, the working class and working masses have come to a most correct understanding of communist society -- which they had considered only an ideal -- and its correct guiding principles, which enable them to build it successfully without the slightest hitch.

At the same time, our party has presented numerous ideologies and theories designed to expedite the world revolution and convert the entire world into one governed by independence, including ideologies and theories on strengthening the unity and cooperation among the socialist countries and developing the Nonaligned Movement. It is because they correctly reflect the new demands for developing the revolutionary struggle of the working class and working masses for independence as such that they have given full and profound explanation to them and that our party's ideologies and theories have a firm grip on the people's hearts and display their invincible vitality.

Our party's ideologies and theories -- the invincible and ever-victorious revolutionary banner which firmly guarantees victory of the popular masses' revolutionary struggle for independence -- will display their own greatness and vitality even more.

INTENSIFICATION OF CHUCHE INDOCTRINATION NECESSARY

[NODONG SINMUN 4 August editorial: "Let Us Conduct Chuche Idea Indoctrination Broadly and Deeply"]

[Text] At present, preferential emphasis in the party's ideological indoctrination should be placed on intensifying chuche idea indoctrination. Chuche idea indoctrination is an important ideological indoctrination to arm party members, working people, and new generations with the chuche revolutionary world outlook. Ceaselessly deepening chuche idea indoctrination as priority work in the party's ideological indoctrination is our party's unchanging demand.

In deepening chuche idea indoctrination, party organizations and the ideological work functionaries have been entrusted with heavy missions. All functionaries in the area of the party's ideological work should arm themselves with the chuche idea and protect and implement it thoroughly. By so doing, they should conduct chuche idea indoctrination broadly and deeply among party members, working people, and new generations. This is an urgent demand of our party's ideological work, of the given revolutionary missions, and of the prevailing situation.

Comrade Kim Chong-il, member of the Presidium of the Political Bureau of the party Central Committee and secretary, has noted: To imbue all of society with the chuche idea, all party members and working people should arm themselves with the chuche idea and struggle unyieldingly along the road pointed out by the chuche idea under all circumstances. Imbuing the entire party and society with the chuche idea is a general task for building our party and the revolutionary struggle. The key to achieving this cause is to make party members and working people arm themselves with the chuche idea and fulfill its demand. Accordingly, we should ceaselessly deepen chuche idea indoctrination in conformity with the demands of the party and the demands of the developing revolution.

Chuche idea indoctrination is a permanent task which our party, the chuche-type party, should carry out without ceasing. At the same time, it is a task that should be further intensified according to the developing revolution. Thanks to proper chuche idea indoctrination by our party, brilliant achievements have been made in building the party and the revolutionary struggle.

Today, our party has become powerful and has armed itself with the chuche idea and achieved firm unity and cohesion in ideology and will. The chuche idea has become our people's firm faith and has yielded great material strength in all areas of the revolution and construction. This is indeed a proud success and our greatest asset. However, we should harbor no conceit. Our people's revolutionary cause to build socialism and communism under the banner of the chuche idea is not yet completed and we should continue to traverse the path of arduous struggle. Accordingly, chuche idea indoctrination to arm party members, working people, and new generations with the chuche revolutionary world outlook should be intensified. Moreover, under circumstances during which the internal and external situations of our revolution are complicated [urihyongmyongui naeoechongsega pokchaphago] and during which the ideological and cultural infiltration of the imperialists continue, we should never neglect but should continue to vigorously push ahead with chuche idea indoctrination, the indoctrination to make all of society completely dominated by the chuche idea.

Today, as the Korean revolution has advanced a long way, a change of generations has taken place in our revolutionary ranks. The aim of the revolution and the target of the struggle have not changed, but the new generations have become the main forces of the revolution. The new generations that have not experienced the trials of the severe class struggle of the past and have not directly experienced the serious struggle to defend the banner of the chuche idea have now taken proud places in the revolutionary ranks.

The method to educate in a revolutionary way those youths and children who have not experienced difficulties and trials but are growing under peaceful circumstances, and to prepare them politically and ideologically, is to deepen the indoctrination of our party's revolutionary ideology, the chuche idea, among them.

In view of the development of our party and revolution and in view of the prevailing situation and change in the revolutionary ranks, intensifying chuche idea indoctrination is a very important task. Thoroughly accomplishing this task is a guarantee for strengthening the might of our party and revolutionary ranks, for defending the revolution, and for advancing it persistently.

At present, in chuche idea indoctrinaton our party emphasizes conducting it broadly and deeply. In other words, the idea is to conduct chuche idea indoctrination deeply so all ideological indoctrination may be considered a part of chuche idea indoctrination and to vigorously further strengthen the chuche idea system among party members and the working people, so the chuche idea may become a tool for the people's ideological discipline and their practical activities.

Only when chuche idea indoctrination is conducted broadly and deeply can all functionaries, working people, and new generations be firmly prepared as ardent chuche-type revolutionaries who take the chuche idea as their faith and world outlook, think and act only according to the demand of the chuche idea and its embodiment, the policy of our party, and devote themselves to implementing it.

In chuche idea indoctrination emphasis should be placed on making party members and working people thoroughly implement the party's militant slogan to live our lives in our own way. The chuche idea means carrying out the revolution by one's own effort. This demand of the chuche idea has been stressed by our party's slogan. The party's slogan "Let us live in accordance with our own way!" shows the stand to uphold the banner of the chuche idea, to live in accordance with one's own way, and to carry on the revolution by one's own effort. Because of its correctness, the slogan displays great attraction and vitality. We should adhere to the party's slogan and concentrate chuche idea indoctrination on implementing this slogan.

For us, our spirit is precisely our party's ideology and policy. Party organizations should make functionaries and working people consider the chuche idea and its embodiment, the policy of our party, as their bones and flesh and their firm faith, think and act only in accordance with its demands, and unyieldingly struggle to oppose impure ideological elements [pulgonjonhan sasangyoso] which run counter to it. At the same time, all sectors and units should be made to endear, defend, and develop what has been created in our own way by our party. By doing so, work to remake the working people's ideology and mobilize their revolutionary zeal and creative positiveness should be conducted according to the way created by our party; management and operation of the socialist economy should be carried on and economic construction should be accelerated in a chuche-oriented way according to the demand of the party's policy; and cultural construction should be carried out in a working class and revolutionary manner according to the chuche stand. Party organizations should meticulously plan indoctrination work so all these tasks may be properly accomplished without discrepancies according to the specific situation of their sectors and units.

The party's slogan on living our lives in our own way reflects the demand of solving problems according to the interests of our revolution and people and settle questions arising from the revolution and construction by our own effort. Party organizations at all levels should adhere to ideological indoctrination so functionaries and working people will firmly fulfill this principled demand under all circumstances.

In addition, in chuche idea indoctrination, deep attention should be directed toward making functionaries and working people thoroughly embody the chuche idea in their practical activities. The chuche idea is the tool for revolutionary practice, and the main objective of intensifying chuche idea indoctrination is to embody it. Adopting an attitude worthy of masters is a demand of the chuche idea and the working style and spirit to embody the chuche idea. Party organizations should intensify indoctrination to make functionaries and working people adopt an attitude worthy of masters. By doing so, they should make party members and working people possess self-consciousness as masters and work sincerely in accomplishing their revolutionary missions. At the same time, party members and working people should be made to highly display the spirit of depending on one's own strength and fulfilling state plans without fail. In particular, great emphasis should be placed on making guidance functionaries -- the commanding staff of the revolution -- energetically think and study, make persistent efforts, and conduct organizational and guidance work responsibly and creatively to implement the party's economic policy given to their sectors and units.

In embodying the chuche idea in practical activities, along with the attitude worthy of masters, it is important to establish a chuche-oriented mass outlook among functionaries. Party organizations should make all functionaries firmly establish a chuche-oriented revolutionary mass outlook, respect the masses, accomplish revolutionary tasks by depending on their own strength, and devote themselves to the people. To this end, it is important to actively conduct work to make all functionaries establish a chuche-oriented mass outlook and to actively follow affirmative examples of those true functionaries who have faithfully worked for the people.

To reflect the chuche idea in thought and practice, we should closely combine the indoctrination of the chuche idea with revolutionary practice. Education on the principles of the chuche idea has been conducted on a large-scale in the past and the level of understanding of the principles among functionaries and workers has been upgraded. We should deepen chuche idea indoctrination one step further based on such successes. We should substantively explain and propagandize the principles of the chuche idea by linking them with concrete realities through all forms and methods of propaganda work including study, lecture, explanation, and talks and through propaganda means including print and press.

When we strengthen a fresh way of indoctrination work, we can smoothly resolve the question of encouraging party members and workers to establish chuche-oriented traits and positions and to highly display an attitude worthy of masters, the revolutionary spirit for self-reliance, and the question of encouraging the entire party to establish the method of chuche-oriented mass leadership.

One of the important issues in conducting indoctrination on the chuche idea is to firmly arm party members and workers with our party's chuche-oriented lines and policy. Our party's lines and policy, which have embodied the chuche idea, are the scientific strategy and tactics of our revolution and the firm guideline in all of our activities.

Only when we deeply understand the party's lines and policy can we correctly realize the party's intention, thinking and acting according to such an intention, and vigorously struggle for victory in the Korean revolution and for the prosperity and development of our fatherland.

As was proven, if we do not know well the party's policy we cannot discriminate between right and wrong nor can we confidently fulfill the revolutionary mission. Party organizations and propaganda functionaries of the party should see to it that functionaries and workers deeply understand the essence and justness of the party's policy by strengthening the indoctrination of the party's policy among them and that they tenaciously safeguard and implement this policy.

For our functionaries and workers, the basic teaching materials in studying the chuche idea and the party's policy are the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's works and party's documents. Upholding the party's slogan for study by the entire party, functionaries and workers should study the works systematically and comprehensively by establishing the revolutionary method of study. Thus, they should understand our party's policy in breadth and depth.

Party organizations should combine indoctrination on the party's current policy with policies historically implemented in the past by our party in indoctrination of the party's policy and should direct deep attention to encouraging functionaries and workers to be well versed in the party's policy in their own sectors. In chuche idea indoctrination -- deeply understanding the history of our party, in particular -- the history of the arduous struggle to establish chuche is important. The history of our party's struggle to establish chuche is a precious textbook for chuche idea indoctrination.

To encourage functionaries and workers to carry out activities as independent and creative revolutionaries, deeply cherishing their faith in chuche, we should make them realize what kind of chuche-oriented lines and policy our party put forth at every moment and every step in developing the revolution and how our party implemented them.

Party organizations and functionaries involved in ideological work should make everyone deeply realize, in particular, the justness of measures taken by our party in December 1955 and in May 1967 to establish chuche and the monolithic ideological system and should make everyone reflect this spirit in their works and life.

All party organizations and functionaires involved in the ideological work of the party should bring a new advance in the work of thoroughly remodelling the entire party and all of society based on the chuche idea by continuously deepening chuche idea indoctrination according to the demands of developing the realities.

ACCELERATED SOCIALIST ECONOMIC CONSTRUCTION URGED

[NODONG SINMUN 7 August editorial: "Let Us Much More Loudly Beat the Revolutionary Drum in Socialist Economic Construction"]

[Text] Today socialist construction in our country has reached a new, higher stage, and brighter prospects have opened along the future path of this socialist construction. Under the slogan calling for imbuing society with the chuche idea, we should much more loudly beat the revolutionary drum with which our party has inspired a great upsurge in socialist construction, and should vigorously accelerate the march of the 1980's.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: To successfully carry out the new prospective task of socialist economic construction set forth by our party, the entire party and people should rise to wage a strained struggle and continuously bring about innovations and upsurges in all sectors of the people's economy.

Amid the seething revolutionary zeal of workers, a new upsurge has been brought about in socialist economic construction in our country, which has traversed the single road of progress under the wise leadership of our party. Having fully demonstrated the might and spirit of chuche Korea by building the world-class Nampo lockgate, displaying a higher revolutionary zeal, and displaying a more unyielding fighting spirit than ever before, our people have vigorously accelerated large-scale construction projects throughout the country, such as construction of the Sunchon vinalon industrial complex, the Taechon and Kumgangsan power plants, the railway in the northern region, the potassium fertilizer plant, tideland and salt farms, and the second-stage expansion work at the Kim Cahek steel milll.

In the history of our fatherland, there has never been as prosperous a mood in construction work as we see today. This directly shows the might of our country's economic power and the unity of our people and the might and boldness of the leadership of our party, which has planned and carried out all work in a bold manner. The vast construction work, which has been carried out according to the magnificent plan for economic construction of the party and leader, is designed to strengthen the country's economic might in various ways and further improve the people's standard of living.

This work is the struggle to provide a precious treasure for the prosperity of our people generation after generation.

The prospective 10-point plan for socialist economic construction being implemented by our people is a great blueprint for prosperity that has never before existd in our fatherland. To implement this magnificent program, which relfects the strategic plan of our party, we should quickly forge ahead with maximum production and construction with the spirit of adding the speed battle to Chollima and should much more loudly beat the revolutionary drum in socialist economic construction.

Loudly beating the revolutionary drum in socialist economic construction implies that the entire country vigorously advances under the leadership of the party with the spirit of adding the speed battle to Chollima and that we help all functionaries and workers bring about a great leap and upsurge in production and construction by seething with high revolutionary passion and ambition and with the high spirit of creation and innovation. The revolutionary drum reflects our people's endless loyalty to the party and the leader, and our people's revolutionary and unyielding fighting spirit of self-reliance, continuous innovation, and continuous advance.

The struggle to much more loudly beat the revolutionary drum in socialist economic construction is the honorable and sacred work of thoroughly materializing the leadership of our party in economic construction and of making the achievements attained by our party in socialist construction shine much more brilliantly.

As shown in building the Namp lockgate, we have the mighty revolutionary ranks to move a great mountain, if the party decides and issues the order, and the strength and foundation to bring progress and perform miracles by loudly beating the revolutionary drum. We have the party's correct line and policy and its wise leadership, the working class which is endlessly faithful to the party, and the powerful foundation of a self-reliant economy. We have the precious experience of creating the history of a great upsurge by loudly beating the revolutionary drum throughout the country during the difficult period of socialist construction by upholding the policy of the speed battle.

The history of the Chollima march and of the march of the speed battle in our country is a proud course during which, by responding to the call of the party and loudly beating the revolutionary drum, our people have performed the miracles of the century and brought about a change, astonishing the people. Along the road of this convulsive march, our people have allowed an innovative spirit to prevail throughout the country by carrying out work in a bold manner by loudly blowing the trumpet of the march of the speed battle, and by launching a blitzkrieg -- intensive and annihilating warfare -- have achieved the high goals of the 6-year plan and the second 7-year plan, and have brought about many changes to make the 1970's and the 1980's shine as a time of greatness.

Indeed, loudly blowing the trumpet of the march of the speed battle, our people have very quickly advanced socialist economic construction and have built throughout the country many monuments that make the era of the workers' party shine, such as the Tower of the Chuche Idea, the Arch of Triumph, the people's grand study hall, and the third ore dressing site in Komdok.

The brilliant success attained by our people in socialist economic construction during the 1980's following the glorious 1970's, under the wise leadership of the party, has made our people entertain feelings of great pride and has been proudly recorded in the history of our fatherland.

We should make epochal progress in building socialism and communism by making the great achievements attained by our party in socialist economic construction shine much more brilliantly and by successfully implementing, at the earliest possible date, the magnificent plan and intent to build the economy of the party and the leader.

Today our people are assigned the very vast and weighty task of building the economy. Our functionaries and workers should bring about great change in production and construction by vigorously advancing the speed of the 1980's, thus responding to the militant call of the party. Important in bringing about a new revolutionary upsurge in socialist economic construction by loudly beating the revolutionary drum is to thoroughly materialize the idea and leadership of our party in all sectors of socialist economic construction. The fighting spirit and ethos displayed by construction workers at the Nampo lockgate is the revolutionary spirit required by the 1980's, which directly materialized the idea, will, ambition, and mettle of our party.

Working with this spirit and ethos constitutes an important guarantee for meeting the party's demand to create the speed of the 1980's and to fully demonstrate the vitality of this demand by vigorously accelerating our march by loudly beating the revolutionary drum.

The basis of the fighting spirit of the construction workers at the Nampo lockgate is the spirit of unconditionally meeting the demand of the party and the revolution without fail in a timely manner, sacrificing everything and making this demand an absolute fighting goal. The spirit of absolutely and unconditionally implementing the order of the party and the leader was the ideological basis for building the large-scale Nampo lockgate over the short period of 5 years.

The faithfulness of our functionaries and workers to the party and the leader should be displayed in unhesitatingly carrying out the tasks assigned by the party. Just as the construction workers at the Nampo lockgate did, all functionaries and workers should not utter empty words while receiving and meeting the party's demands, no matter what work they may carry out in whatever sectors. They should strive to make their determination and deeds agree with each other.

This spirit of unconditionally meeting the party's demands should be displayed in all sectors and units of the people's economy, including the extractive, metallurgical, power, and railway transportation sectors. In particular, this spirit should be much more highly displayed at major construction project sites, such as the Panpyongwonjae and Mapyongwonjae construction sites at the Taechon power plant and construction sites at the Sunchon Vinalon industrial complex, where a strained battle is being waged against time.

Those who carry out the revolution should always have faith in victory and possess the unyielding spirit of fighting to the end by rising a hundred times after falling a hundred times. Carrying out to the end the revolutionary task assigned by the party by defying and overcoming all difficulties with faith in victory is the fighting spirit displayed by the construction workers at the Nampo lockgate. By drawing a lesson from the spirit of the construction workers at the Nampo lockgate, all functionaries and workers should tackle difficult tasks optimistically and should highly display the spirit of independently resolving difficult problems with the spirit of wading through a fiery river and a muddy path.

The work of building the economy is creative work.

To implement the magnificent program of building the economy, our functionaries and workers should resolve all questions to fit their situation with revolutionary mettle and creativeness. The stand consistently assumed by construction workers at the Nampo lockgate and their fighting slogan is: Let us resolve every question in our own style. Our functionaries and workers should adopt the work style of practically meeting the party's demand for living in our own style by displaying mettle and creativeness under difficult circumstances and by estimating the situation in a scientific manner. Thus, we should allow the creative and innovative spirit of independently resolving every question to meet the situation prevailing throughout the country.

To loudly beat the revolutionary drum in socialist economic construction, functionaries should take command of economic work in an aggressive manner with a high sense of revolution. When our functionaries effectively organize and take command of the work of implementing the party's policy by displaying a revolutionary spirit, a breakthrough will be made for advance, and innovation will result.

Today, when we should loudly beat the revolutionary drum in socialist economic construction, is a time when functionaries should carry out all work in a blitzkrieg manner, overflowing with ambition and passion. Upholding the party's policy of the speed battle, all functionaries should help workers display revolutionary zeal, vigorously forge ahead with the technological revolution, and bring about continuous upsurges in production and construction by organizing economic and organizational work according to the requirements of the Taean work system.

The lofty revolutionary spirit of functionaries is being displayed to responsively implement the revolutionary tasks assigned by the party to the end. The responsibility and assignments given to each functionary are important and honorable missions given through the great political trust and consideration of the party and the leader.

A new upsurge in socialist economic construction can be effected only by responsively fulfilling the assigned revolutionary tasks by guiding functionaries with lofty revolutionary spirit.

Correctly realizing the important nature of their missions and the legitimate and instructive nature of the national economic plan, the guiding functionaries of the party, state, and economic organizations should carry out the assigned tasks thoroughly and in a timely manner. Working just as Comrade O Chung-ok, an anti-Japanese revolutionary fighter, is an important demand of functionaries to carry out work in a revolutionary way. He was a revolutionary fighter who had the spirit of absoluteness and the unconditionality to carry out orders and directives of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song without wasting time, even a minute or a second, and who was endlessly loyal to the leader with a sense of devotion and sacrifice, and a sense of responsibility for implementing revolutionary missions.

Today our party demands that all functionaries live and work just as Comrade O Chung-ok. Following the example of Comrade O Chung-ok, our functionaries should persistently and devotedly implement revolutionary missions and highly display the traits of responsibly accomplishing them without deviation.

It is our party's consistent principle in carrying out work and a trait which should be displayed among functionaries in their struggle, seeking lofty targets.

Only when the target is high can one have passion and have his struggle be rewarding.

All functionaries should further accelerate the speed of advancing socialist economic construction by setting high targets of struggle according to the demand of reality for marching vigorously with the speed of the 80's and by waging bold operation, skillful command, and vigorous political work.

Encouraging the entire nation to seethe with revolutionary passion and an innovative atmosphere is an important key to effecting an upsurge in socialist economic construction. There is always innovation in seething places and miracles are created where innovations are effected. This is proven by the construction of the Nampo lockgate and the Taechon Power Plant.

If organizational work is properly conducted and the masses' spirit is inspired, nothing will be impossible. Party organizations and functionaries at all levels should vigorously and aggressively do organizational and political work to inspire the masses to innovations and exploits.

All party organizations and functionaries should make party members and workers correctly realize the party's intention to effect a new revolutionary upsurge in socialist economic construction and give priority to carrying out political propaganda and economic agitation to fully mobilize them in implementing this intention.

Mass heroism is a demonstration of the idea and will of our people, who are firmly united with the leader and party with one ideology and one will. Party organizations should substantively carry out the indoctrination of the masses with indoctrination of loyalty being the basic element among party members and workers. Thus, we should make the combat sites more fiercely burn the flames of mass heroism and collective innovation.

Today when a fierce struggle is being waged, the guiding functionaries should stand in the front ranks. The guiding functionaries in all sectors of the national economy should go more deeply into the fields of combat, which are seething with innovations, and should inspire the masses through political work and by setting examples. Thus, they should resolve all problems by depending on the limitless strength and creative wisdom of the masses.

Vigorously waging the mass movement led by our party is an important method to raise the beacon fire of a new revolutionary upsurge. When the party members and workers actively follow and embody the noble traits and revolutionary work-style of unheralded heroes, the political and ideological might of our revolutionary ranks will be further strengthened and the beating of the revolutionary drum more loudly sounded across the country.

All functionaries and workers should make the entire country seethe with revolutionary passion by boldly marching with new resolution and a vigorous spirit. Let us make the beating of the revolutionary drum more loudly resound from all fronts of socialist economic construction.

TWO MON REBEL FACTIONS AGREE ON MERGER

[By Pratya Sawetwimon]

[Text] Two major factions of the Mon rebel group, one of the leading minority forces fighting for independence from Rangoon, last month agreed to join hands again to consolidate their separatist movement, sources said.

Informed sources told THE NATION that Nai Nonla and Nai Shwe Kyin, both claiming to be leaders of the New Mon State Party (NMSP), in a direct meeting held on July 13 agreed to rejoin their Mon rebel groups after they had parted for almost five years.

The NMSP is an administrative body of the Mon National Liberation Army (MNLA), the Mon ethnic rebel force which has been fighting for independence from the Burmese central governnment since Burma attained its freedom from Great Britain in 1947.

However, according to the sources, both leaders of the Mon ethnic rebels will discuss the implementation of the plan to rejoin the two groups in another meeting which will also be held to draft a formal agreement.

Nai Shwe Kyin's and Nai Nonla's groups halted their joint struggle against the Rangoon's forces since a conflict between the two Mon ethnic leaders broke out in 1981. The two leaders will also sign the agreement in the next meeting, said the sources.

They said the last meeting was also attended by Pagu Man, leader of another small faction in the Mon rebel group, who has about 100 Mon guerrillas under his command. The sources said Nai Nonla's group, with about 3,000 Mon ethnic fighters, is the strongest faction in the rebel movement while Nai Shwe Kyin has about 200 guerrillas.

According to the sources, in an attempt to solve the movement's internal problem both leaders had held indirect talks through mediators several times before their first direct talks on January 1 of this year.

The sources said Nai Nonla seems to gain more support from the Mon ethnic people in Burma and other countries than Nai Shwe Kyin who is the founder of the Mon Freedom movement. The Mon ethnic people in Burma total about 4 million.

The ethnic group has been claiming the five provinces of Pegu, Thaton, Moulmein, Tavoy and Mergui in southern Burma and continuing their struggle against Rangoon for almost 40 years.

An NMSP official loyal to Nai Nonla claimed that the rift between Nai Nonla and Nai Shwe Kyin originated from the NMSP general meeting in 1981 when 100 members of the NMSP committee discussed certain problems of the movement.

HUN SEN PRAISES GROUPS FOR ACHIEVEMENTS

BK010326 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0430 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] The second meeting on national defense labor concluded successfully on 30 July. The closing ceremony was presided over by Comrade Hun Sen, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the Council of Ministers, and minister of foreign affairs.

During the 3-day session, the participants listened attentively to the reports and comments by the committees in charge of national defense labor movement in provinces and municipalities and by the regional command committees stressing successful feats and good experiences in carrying out the movement in accordance with the targets set by the party and state. The Council of Ministers has decided to confer laureate banners to 9 provinces, cities, ministries, and units; citation certificates to 24 provinces, cities, and ministries; and souvenirs to the 4 regions for their outstanding feats in fulfilling the 1985-86 national defense labor campaign.

Speaking on that occasion, Comrade Hun Sen applauded the provinces, cities, ministries, and units for their outstanding achievements. He stressed: To fulfill your tasks more effectively, all comrade party members should set good examples for everyone, and cadres should have high capabilities to guide, arrange, and divide the work to be done appropriately. He called on all participants to persuade the people in their localities to join in the national defense labor movement, use good experiences from the past in their daily work, enhance solidarity between the Army and people and particularly with the Vietnamese Army volunteers, and set targets for emulation drives to score greater achievements for the party and state, thus contributing to defending our fatherland and making it more prosperous and strong.

MAT LY, MEAS KROCH LEAD GROUPS AT WREATH LAYING

BK310552 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0430 GMT 31 Jul 86

[Text] On the occasion of remembrance day for Cambodian war dead and invalid combatants, on the morning of 31 July, delegations from the party, state, and mass organizations led by Comrade Mat Ly, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the National Assembly, and chairman of the Kampuchean Federation of Trade Unions, laid wreaths and paid respect to ancestors and heroic Cambodian combatants who have sacrificed their lives for the cause of liberating the nation, people, and class from old and new colonialism, imperialism, and the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan genocidal regime at the monument to fallen Cambodian combatants.

Taking part were Comrade Ney Pena, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and interior minister; Comrade Nguon Nhel, alternate member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and secretary of the Phnom Penh Municipal Party Committee; members of the party Central Committee; and many other leading cadres.

Afterward, the National Defense Ministry delegation led by Comrade Meas Kroch, deputy defense minister of the PRK; the delegation from the Vietnamese Embassy led by Comrade Ngo Dien, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the SRV to Cambodia; and delegations from various central ministries and services also laid wreaths and paid respect at the monument to fallen Cambodian combatants.

VODK SAYS GORBACHEV'S ASIAN PEACE PLAN 'ROTTEN'

BK050330 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2330 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Station commentary: "The Soviet Union Cannot Act as a God Who Can Find Peace in the Asia-Pacific Region"]

[Text] Speaking in Vladivostok on 28 July 1986, Soviet leader Gorbachev once again tried to make a deal regarding the so-called conference on peace and security in Asia and the Pacific. The Soviet Union made much propaganda about the importance of this conference for seeking peace in this region.

The so-called conference to seek peace and security for Asia and the Pacific is a rotten proposal which the Soviet Union has tried to sell for decades, ever since the late Brezhnev's time. No one wants such rotten goods. Countries throughout the Asia-Pacific region rejected and threw it into the dustbin long ago. Since the time the Soviet Union helped Vietnam commit aggression against Cambodia at the end of 1978 and the Soviet Union itself sent about 100,000 troops to invade and occupy Afghanistan at the end of 1979, this so-called conference on security in Asia and the Pacific has smelled worse than ever before. Despite the fact that, since the time he took power, Gorbachev has tried to give a better image to this so-called conference on security in Asia and to show the Soviet Union's flexible stand through his recent speech in Vladivostok, no one pays any attention to the rotten Soviet proposal. All people know very well that the Soviet Union's aggressive and expansionist stand toward Asia and the Pacific has not changed in the least. Since the time Gorbachev took power, the Soviet war of aggression in Afghanistan has been intensified both inside the country and in the areas bordering Pakistan and Iran. Moreover, the Soviet Union has intensified its air and artillery attacks against the territory of Pakistan, thus worsening the situation in all of South Asia.

While the Soviet Union was announcing its decision to withdraw six regiments of its troops from Afghanistan, the flames of war in Afghanistan continue to burn violently. The Soviet Union's aircraft, helicopters, tanks and modern artillery continue to strafe and drop bombs massacring the Afghan people indiscriminately and barbarously. This clearly attests to the Soviet decision to realize its aggressive ambition in Afghanistan. Moreover, although all countries in Asia and the Pacific and the world community have persistently called on the Soviet Union to stop aiding the Vietnamese aggression against Cambodia, still the Soviet Union has continued to give more aid to Vietnam to enable it to carry on its war of aggression in Cambodia and to invade the territory of the neighboring countries on a larger scale and in a more systematic manner, thus causing permanent tension in Southeast Asia and the Asia-Pacific region. Without Soviet assistance, the Hanoi Vietnamese would not be this arrogant and truculent and their war of aggression in Cambodia would not have lasted until today. Thus, how can the Soviet Union pose itself as a god to seek peace for Asia and the Pacific? If the Soviet Union really wants this region to enjoy peace, we would like the Soviet Union to take the following concrete measures:

1. Concerning the Cambodian problem, the Soviet Union must stop giving aid to Vietnam. It must pressure Vietnam to accept the CGDK' 8-point proposal for a political settlement of the Cambodian problem. This proposal is correct, flexible, and reasonable. It aims both at seeking a comprehensive settlement of the Cambodian problem and at seeking long-lasting peace for Southeast Asia and the Asia-Pacific region. Moverover, the 8-point proposal does not affect the Soviet Union and Vietnam. They will only benefit from this in terms of fame and money. This is because they do not have to waste money in the unjust and useless war of aggression in Cambodia and the Soviet Union may be able to have good relations with all countries in this region.

2. Concerning the Afghan problem, the Soviet Union must withdraw all its aggressor troops from Afghanistan in order to let the Afghan people solve their own problems without outside interference, in accordance with successive UN resolutions.

If the Soviet Union takes the concrete measures mentioned above and really respects the five principles of peaceful coexistence -- respect for each other's sovereignty and territorial integrity, nonaggression, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, equity, and mutual interests -- peace, security, and stability will automatically be restored in the Asia-Pacific region and elsewhere in the world. This is the top priority problem to be solved first, not the so-called conference on security in Asia and the Pacific.

SOVIET ADVISERS SAID KILLED IN BATTAMBANG

BK070107 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2330 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] On 1 August, a Vietnamese train carrying military materiel from Kompong Som to Phnom Penh was ambushed by our forces at Prek Toek Thla, east of Veal Rinh in Prey Nop District [Kampot Province]. We killed 10 and wounded 8 Vietnamese enemy soldiers and destroyed a locomotive, 11 train cars and all material in them.

On the night of 2 August, our national army, in cooperation with our people and Cambodian soldiers forced to serve the Vietnamese, lobbed grenades at Soviet advisers' quarters at the old stone bridge in Battambang town. As a result, we killed two and wounded three Soviet advisers, and we destroyed telegraphic equipment, a telephone, and 10,000 liters of gasoline which burnt brightly over Battambang town causing panic and confusion and forcing the Vietnamese enemy to impose an evening curfew. We also killed three and wounded five Vietnamese soldiers who were guarding the Soviet advisers.

CGDK DEFENSE COORDINATING COMMITTEE MEETS

BK020234 [Clandestine] Voice of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2315 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] His Excellency Son Sen, Prince Norodom Chakkrapong, and His Excellency Im Chhudet, ministers in charge of the CGDK Coordinating Committee for National Defense, held a regular meeting on 31 July and adopted a press communique which reads in full as follows:

Press communique:

1. The three ministers in charge of the CGDK Coordinating Committee for National Defense held their regular meeting on 31 July, 1986 under the chairmanship of His Excellency Son Sen.

2. The three ministers exchanged views and reached consensus on the situation of the anti-Vietnamese military front in June and July at the beginning of the current 8th rainy season. The three ministers noted with satisfaction the all-round development of the CGDK's tripartite forces.

3. The three ministers were satisfied that the fraternal Cambodian soldiers, militiamen, and commune and village administrative agents forcibly drafted into their service by the Vietnamese enemy and our entire people have nurtured an increasingly seething hatred for the Vietnamese, have joined with the tripartite resistance forces of the CGDK in conducting more active attacks against them, and have enhanced support and assistance to the tripartite resistance forces.

4. The three ministers were also glad to note that during the past 8th dry season and at the beginning of the current rainy season, the tripartite patriotic forces of the CGDK have more and more closely increased their cooperation with one another in the attacks against the Vietnamese enemy and have assisted each other throughout the country; for example, on a number of battlefields in Battambang, Pursat, Oddar Meanchey, Siem Reap, Kompong Thom, and Kompong Cham Provinces.

5. The three ministers also exchanged opinions on military plans for the latter part of the current 8th rainy season. They aimed at coordinating actions to eliminate the Vietnamese aggressors' maneuvers of drafting Cambodian soldiers, mobilizing and sending Cambodians to die in the western Cambodian border according to their K-5 plan; looting and seizing rice from our people to feed their own troops; and preventing the people from doing their work, planting crops, and increasing production with a view to massacring the Cambodians through starvation as well as levying all kinds of taxes on the Cambodian people.

The three ministers had the firm conviction that the cooperation among the tripartite resistance forces of the CGDK in conducting more active and more widespread guerrilla attacks will certainly prevent the Vietnamese aggressors from carrying out all these maneuvers at will.

6. The three ministers agreed that the three parties of the CGDK will strive more vigorously to strengthen and develop further all-round cooperation in the spirit of broad national union until our beloved fatherland is liberated in the spirit of the 8-point peace proposals dated 17 March 1986.

7. The meeting proceeded in a fraternally cordial atmosphere.

31 July 1986.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS ON ECONOMIC MANAGEMENT

BK060542 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 5 Aug 86

[5 August Announcement of LPDR Council of Ministers]

[Text] On 4 and 5 August 1986, the Council of Ministers convened an ordinary session under the chairmanship of Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, chairman of the Council of Ministers. Attending the session were comrade vice chairmen of the Council of Ministers, high-ranking cadres of the office of the Council of Ministers, members of the State Planning Committee and of the State Bank Committee, representatives of ministries managing the economy, comrade representatives of the administrative committees of Vientiane municipality and of Luang Prabang, Savannakhet, Chammassak, and Bolikhamsai Provinces, and comrade directors of a number of central and local companies and enterprises.

In his address, after clearly explaining the turning of various economic units into business enterprises -- the issue which was considered the main topic for the session -- Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan stressed certain important issues concerning the situation in the world and region in recent months. He reiterated vigorous support for the peace initiatives of the Soviet Union. He praised especially highly the significant, all-round, and concrete proposal on peace and security in the Asia-Pacific region raised by Comrade Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, in his Vladivostok speech of 28 July. He described it as a very significant contribution to the cause of peace and security in Asia, the Pacific, and the world.

Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan said: The LPDR pledges to do its utmost to help turn Southeast Asia into a region of peace, stability, friendship, and cooperation to help safeguard world peace.

Regarding Lao-Thai relations, he explicitly noted that in certain periods in recent years the relations between the two countries have been improved to the extent that two joint statements were signed between the two countries in 1979, statements in which correct principles on good neighborly and fraternal relations were reiterated. But is is regrettable that lately the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries have pursued a hostile policy toward the LPDR. They have conducted provocations against the LPDR and attacked and occupied three Lao villages, thus creating a tense situation running counter to the just aspirations of the peoples of the two countries. However, the designers of the schemes to sabotage Lao-Thai relations have been initially defeated, and it is certain that they will be totally defeated if they continue along that path. At present, in Southeast Asia as well as in other parts of the world, the overall trend is to settle conflicts through negotiations in order to coexist peacefully. We consider this a good opportunity for the LPDR and the Kingdom of Thailand to take appropriate steps to resume talks with a view to normalizing relations between the two countries and improving them in all respects to meet the just aspirations of the two peoples and to be in conformity with the interests of peace and security in this region. On our side, we are ready to do everything possible, both at the national and local levels, to create favorable conditions for the strengthening of mutual understanding and trust between the two sides.

Afterwards, the comrade chairman of the Council of Ministers discussed transforming management practices and how to turn various economic units into business enterprises. He explicitly pointed to the reasons for transformation of the management apparatuses -- successfully switching from the administrative state financing system of management to the socialist business system while setting up new management apparatuses. He explained in detail the following three basic issues on turning the economic units into business enterprises.

1. Establish rights to self-mastery in running businesses and consolidating and perfecting various business units.

2. Consolidate and perfect economic management and administrative apparatuses.

3. Make arrangments for implementation.

In explaining these issues, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan gave many examples to prove them. He also pointed out some concrete details on the issues, particularly details on the establishment of rights to self-mastery in operating the businesses and consolidating and perfecting various business units. In conclusion, Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan stressed: The transformation of management by switching from the administative state financing system of managment to the socialist business system is a difficult and complicated task. It needs time and persistence to be fulfilled. However, we will certainly be able to successfully fulfill it.

The participants in the session enthusiastically studied and discussed the issues and unanimously agreed to the views of Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan. They also unanimously approved the resolution of the Council of Ministers on transforming various economic units into business enterprises from now until the end of 1986, in order to score achievements to welcome the Fourth Party Congress.

LECTURES ON PARTY CONGRESS TO BE HELD NATIONWIDE

BK061327 Vientiane KPL in English 0938 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Vientiane, August 6 (OANA-KPL) — Lectures on the wide ranging implications of the 4th Congress of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party due to be held soon, are to be launched throughout the country. This was stated in an instruction issued here today by the propaganda and training board of the Central Committee.

The objective of the activity is to make citizens clearly aware of the serious significance of the 4th Party Congress and matters to be discussed on the occasion. In connection, the people are encouraged to actively take part in the emulation campaign aiming at fulfilling the targets of this year's plan to meaningfully salute the coming party congress.

LPA INSTRUCTION ON ARMY EMULATION CAMPAIGN

[26 June instruction by the LPA General Political Department to mobilize an emulation campaign throughout the Army to score achievements welcoming the Fourth Party Congress]

[Text] Soon the Fourth National Congress of the delegates of the party will be convened. This event will be an important and profound political campaign in the political life of our party. It will be a congress of great historic significance for our country and revolution. Therefore, the LPA General Political Department has issued an instruction instructing that an emulation campaign be mobilized throughout the army to score achievements welcoming the Fourth Party Congress.

I. Objectives and Expectations

1. Pay attention to more profoundly studying and appreciating the line and policies of the party and the duties of units and divisions. They heighten faith in the correct leadership of the party. Resolutely rectify the line of indifferent thinking and any acts which do not conform to and obstruct implementation of the party's line and policies.

2. Mobilize all cadres and combatants to clearly appreciate their political duties, to strive to heighten a sense of revolutionary vigilance, to take the initiative in making preparations to smash all destructive and sabotage schemes of the enemies, to maintain strict security for the congress, to maintain political stability during the convening of the congress, to build units with clear-cut changes, to score concrete achievements in fulfilling their duties, and to efficiently execute the 1986 duties of the units and each individual in order to welcome the Fourth Party Congress.

II. Contents of the Emulation Work

1. Name of the emulation campaign: The emulation campaign to score achievements to welcome the Fourth Party Congress.

2. Duration: From 3 June 1986 until 1 month after the congress closes. Short-term emulation campaigns should be mobilized 10 days before and 20 days after the congress to promote the emulation atmosphere. Additional instructions will be issued after the closure of the congress.

3. The emulation campaign must be energetically publicized and popularized through various appropriate forms, including using newspapers and loudspeakers, carrying out artistic and sports activities, and carrying out activities of youth unions, trade unions, and women's unions to promote the congress.

4. The standard of the campaign in details:

All combat units must be prepared to fight and fight well, coordinate with the administrative power to turn to the grass-roots foundations to maintain peace and tranquillity in the localities; educate and train personnel to have high quality, act as good models, efficiently keep and utilize weapons and materials, have strict discipline, and effectively promote internal unity, the unity between the army and people, and the international solidarity; and organize good material and moral living conditions for combatants.

As for organizations, they must effectively fulfill their duties, responsibilities, and specialized work; closely assist grassroots units to effectively accomplish all duties; modify the working plan and method of and efficiently implement the contents and regulations of the organizations; maintain good internal unity and unity and relations with other organizations; and organize good material and moral living conditions for cadres and state employees.

As for settlements and factories, they must fulfill production targets according to plan, maintain production efficiency and creativity in modifying techniques, maintain strict work discipline, maintain effective production solidarity and cooperation, carry out production plans correctly in accordance with technical standards, provide education and training to cadres and state employees to raise their vocational standards, effectively modify work in managing factories and settlements, efficiently keep and utilize machines and technical materials, and effectively practice thrift.

As for schools and hospitals, they must maintain good attitudes and a sense of responsibility toward class instructions, studies, and work serving the studies and treatment of patients; establish effective systems and patterns for schools and hospitals; effectively implement the systems and policies outlined by the higher level; efficiently manage, maintain, and utilize all technical and material foundations and facilities of schools and hospitals; and be concerned with the improvement of material and moral life for cadres, combatants, students, medical doctors, state service employees, and patients.

As for other divisions, units, and organizations aside from those mentioned earlier, they must rely on their own special characteristics and duties in outlining appropriate standards.

III. Method for Organizing the Implementation

1. On the basis of organizing the political life campaign, appreciating the party's line in accordance with the spirit of the 10th resolution of the third party Central Committee, criticizing the remaining weak points and deviations in thinking and attitudes, appreciating the political duties of the divisions and units, and considering thoroughly the method for organizing the implementation of their own work plans, all divisions, units, and organizations must launch an emulation campaign in a thorough and extensive manner with appropriate contents and objectives and constant and firm inspection and guidance.

2. All units at the division, regiment, and combat unit levels; all general departments attached to the ministries; all provincial military commands; and all equivalent units must organize and guide the emulation campaign. All regular forces battalions; all combat units; all regiments attached to the general department in the ministries; all production foundation units, schools, factories plants, agricultural settlements, and hospitals are key units in carrying out the emulation campaign.

3. An emulation committee must be set up to follow, inspect, and promote the emulation campaign with the comrade head of the command and or his deputy in charge of political affairs as chairman, and the comrade deputies in charge of logistics, medical, and technical services and heads of a number of grass-roots units as members. The committee may be composed of between five and nine members. The emulation committee is to closely follow and promote the campaign and must at least review weekly achievements at the battalion level and daily achievements at the company level. Such achievements must be broadcast over the loudspeaker system of each unit and be sent to the editorial staff of the LPA newspaper in a regular and timely manner.

4. Every month between the 15th and the 30th, a review of achievements must be carried out at all battalions and a clear-cut review report must be submitted to the higher level. During a 3-month period beginning in early July until the covening of the congress, the first stage review must be done to use the actual achievements to welcome the Fourth Party Congress. After that the emulation campaign will continue to further enhance the success of the party congress and score achievements to welcome the 38th founding anniversary of the LPA.

After receiving this instruction, party committees and military commands at all levels must study it and organize the correct implementation method for it. They must report to the higher level for further advice whenever they encounter difficulties in implementing this instruction.

Vientiane, 26 June 1986.

[Signed] The LPA General Political Department.

MILITARY UNITS STUDY DRAFT POLITICAL REPORT

Vientiane Provincial Units

BK041421 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0430 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] To implement the instructions of the party Central Committee on launching a campaign to study the draft political report of the party Central Committee for the forthcoming Fourth Party Congress in a timely manner, beginning 14 July, cadres, combatants, and party members in all services under the Vientiane Provincial Military Command organized sessions to study the said draft political report.

During the study sessions, the participants assessed and contributed unanimous views to the draft political report with a view to making its content completely perfect before it is presented to the forthcoming Fourth Party Congress. The report pointed out the growth, development, talent, and capabilities of the party as well as its experiences and traditional victories in fulfilling the two historic tasks of national defense and socialist construction.

After the conclusion of the study sessions, the party committees under the command began to launch political life campaigns among their respective units to assess the responsibility of each party member toward the political duties of the party. All party members expressed views to criticize and laud one another in a comradely manner with the aim of building their respective party units into all-round strong units and enabling party members to fulfill the 6-objective work. Subsequently, the party committee of the command mapped out a plan to consolidate and build the party unit in each service, unit, and foundation and to set guidelines for carrying out campaigns to score achievements to welcome the forthcoming Fourth Party Congress.

Army Brick Factory

[Text] The fraternal workers of Army brick factory no. 5 under the economic production unit of the General Logistics Department recently studied the draft political report of the LPRP Central Committee, which will be submitted to the forthcoming Fourth Party Congress.

During the study, the workers contributed their views to the draft report in a profound and extensive manner in order to perfect the report. Following the 6-day study, the factory outlined the topics of an emulation campaign for each production unit to compete to score achievements welcoming the forthcoming Fourth Party Congress.

In addition, following the conclusion of the study the factory's board of directors held a ceremony to present commendation certificates to fraternal workers for their outstanding achievements in the past 10 years. In this connection, the Itsala order, third class, was presented to two comrades and the labor order, third class, to seven comrades.

ATHIT, OTHERS CALL ON, CONGRATULATE PREM

BK060618 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] At the prime minister's Sisao Residence in Bangkok this morning a group of about 250 senior military and police officers led by Supreme Commander General Athit Kamlang-ek congratulated Gen Prem Tinsulanon on his being reappointed prime minister by the King. Other groups also went to congratulate the prime minister, including Defense Permanent Secretary Gen Prayun Bunnak and a party of about 30 senior Defense Ministry officers, a 30-man group of the mayor of Songkhla City, the president of Tourist Companies Associations, Bangkok City administration officials led by 2d Lieutenant Samoechai Phumphuang, the city permanent secretary, and Bangkok district officers. These groups gave him bouquets of flowers.

Congratulating the prime minister, Gen Athit wished the prime minister good health and firm resolve in order to administer the country so that it will overcome all problems. He said the armed forces and the Police Department are ready to cooperate with the prime minister and the government. Replying, the prime minister thanked him for the good wish and asked all to work for the institutions which all Thai respect and for the nation. He said now that the supreme commander and the police chief have expressed their readiness he will work with confidence, and the people will be confident and will feel secure.

SIAM RAT URGES CHANGE IN POLICY TOWARD INDOCHINA

BK061402 Bangkok SIAM RAT in Thai 4 Aug 86 p 2

[Article by Chen Charik: "We Demand That the Democrat Party's Leader Keep His Election Campaign Promises"]

[Excerpts] There are several points in the statement made by the leader of the Democrat Party, Phichai Rattakun, on 23 July, only 5 days before the general election, which should be reviewed here. [passage omitted] Phichai expressed his confidence in the future of Thailand, believing that the national economy can be improved, especially concerning Thailand's loss of 6,000 million baht annually by not trading with the Indochinese countries.

The country benefiting from Thailand's not trading with Indochina is Singapore. It has been trying to drive a wedge between Thailand and the Indochinese countries so it can continue reaping profits by buying cheap products from Thailand for export to the Indochinese countries.

We do not want to blame others for taking advantage of Thailand when Thai leaders were tailing closely after their great friend whose policy is responsible for creating conflicts in this region, especially conflicts between Thailand and the Indochinese countries which are Thailand's neighbors and which have cultural and traditional similarities with Thailand itself.

We must admit that the law promulgated by the Thai Government, which has been in force for 6 years now -- declaring over 200 items as strategic goods banned for exports to the Indochinese countries -- has brought devastating effects on Thailand's agricultural and industrial production. It has limited the markets for Thailand's trade in this part of the world regardless of the fact that there is a big demand for Thai products in the Indochinese countries. This is why Singapore and Japanese traders play the role of brokers in trade with Thailand. Trade officials of the socialist countries are meanwhile posted in Singapore. Thailand itself has been importing good-quality coal from Vietnam through brokers. Are any of the officials concerned with Thailand's security affairs aware of this?

The decision of the Thai Government to declare over 200 items as strategic goods banned for export to Indochina must have been based on the influence of the big powers, the United States and the PRC, which wanted to block Thailand's trade with these countries. The policy was well received by Thailand's security officials who advocated that Thailand must take tough measures in dealing with the Heng Samrin regime in Cambodia, especially to block the Vietnamese aggressors who could also proceed on to aggression against Thailand in the future. This is the propaganda the Thai people have been told to listen to for a long time.

Meanwhile, the policy which stressed preserving national security has been a setback for Thailand's economy. Because of it, Thailand has been incurring larger and larger trade deficits. Thailand has to depend on foreign loans in order to make ends meet every year. This is not a correct administrative policy.

Anyway, those responsible for national security in Thailand kept defending themselves by saying that the countries in Indochina are poor and where can they find money to buy goods since no one wants to give them the money. We are sick and tired of listening to their argument.

Now where can Thailand hide its mistakes? The World Bank stated in its report that Thailand, which now has almost $18,000 million or about 468,000 million baht in foreign debts, can no longer take the risk of incurring more debts. Otherwise, Thailand will have to increase its taxes and adjust its internal monetary policies. (A report from REUTER on 31 July 1986)

What we have just said should serve as a lesson for the new government. Those responsible for national security should review their policy and adopt a new approach, that of diplomacy and peaceful negotiation in order to solve problems we have with our neighbors.

The international situation has greatly improved nowadays. Recently, the United States sent its diplomats and officials from various agencies and organizations to Vietnam to search for American MIA's. It has suspended financial aid for the CGDK for about 5 or 6 months now. Thailand is fully aware of this.

Some countries in the ASEAN bloc do not want to see war in this part of the world because it is not good for the ASEAN economy. The real threat to them nowadays does not come from the Indochinese bloc. It is rather the economic threat coming from the United States, Japan, and the PRC. The ASEAN countries have suffered losses all along in trade relations with those countries.

If it wants to survive, Thailand must try to reduce military tension along the Thai-Cambodian and the Thai-Lao borders. It must deal decisively with the foreign forces in hiding and operating along the Thai-Cambodian border. Thailand should declare Trat, Chanthaburi, and Rayong Provinces a neutral zone free from war and immediately turn the provinces into an economic zone in Thailand's eastern part.

These are concrete policies for Thailand if it wishes to have full sovereignty and territorial integrity and if it wishes to be honored worldwide as a country cherishing peace.

SIHANOUK VISITS BANGKOK, UPHOLDS PEACE PROPOSAL

BK061200 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1030 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] CGDK President Prince Norodom Sihanouk arrived in Bangkok from Singapore yesterday for a visit to Thailand as part of his ASEAN tour. He is scheduled to leave Thailand on 19 August to visit Indonesia and Malaysia.

The CGDK president told news media upon his arrival in Thailand that the CGDK always upholds the 8-point peace proposal in the hope that Vietnam would adopt a flexible attitude and show its good will. During his stay in Thailand, Prince Norodom Sihanouk will visit DK resistance forces, numbering about 50,000, inside Cambodia.

Earlier this year, in Beijing, the CGDK put forth an 8-point peace proposal calling for Vietnam to pull its troops from Cambodia in stages, and accepting the Heng Samrin regime as a faction in the four-party coalition government of Cambodia to hold a general election under the supervision of an international committee.

Sees No PRC 'Second Lesson'

BK061014 Hong Kong AFP in English 0945 GMT 6 Aug 86

[By Michael Adler]

[Text] Bangkok, Aug 6 (AFP) -- Prince Norodom Sihanouk said here Wednesday he had been told by Chinese Leader Deng Xiaoping that China would not invade Vietnam a second time in reaction to the Cambodian crisis. But China would continue to put "military pressure" along its border with Vietnam to force Hanoi to negotiate with the resistance Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK), Prince Sihanouk told a news conference. "China can no longer afford to teach Vietnam a second lesson," Prince Sihanouk said, recalling China's invasion of Vietnam in early 1979 after Vietnam entered Cambodia to expel the then-ruling Khmer Rouge.

The Khmer Rouge, backed by Beijing, is today the biggest of three groups making up the U.N.-recognized CGDK, led by Prince Sihanouk.

"China has to show to the world that she abides by the siprit of the charter of the United Nations and must not try to solve any problem by force," the prince quoted Mr. Deng as telling him and Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan in Beijing recently. But the prince added that "China will always continue to put military pressure on Vietnam" to force it to negotiate with the CGDK. "China will continue to have clashes with the Vietnamese Army all along the Sino-North-Vietnamese border," he said. "There will be continuous clashes, always — one years, two years, 10 years, 50 years if it is needed."

The U.N. views the CGDK as Cambodia's legitimate government, in defiance of the Hanoi-backed regime of Heng Samrin, but Hanoi and Phnom Penh have refused to meet the CGDK as long as it includes the Khmer Rouge.

Prince Sihanouk, who arrived in Bangkok Tuesday from Singapore on the second leg of a Southeast Asian tour which is also to include visits to Indonesia and Malaysia, said China was adopting a "more and more flexible" position towards resolving the crisis. He pointed to a statement made to him July 3 by Chinese Communist Party leader Hu Yaobang that Beijing would accept reducing Khmer Rouge guerrilla strength to match the ranks of its two CGDK partners and the Heng Samrin army. The factions could even unite eventually into a single Cambodian Army, Prince Shihanouk said, but only after Vietnam had withdrawn its 140,000 troops still stationed in Cambodia.

The Khmer Rouge are believed to field 30,000 guerrillas against the Vietnamese, while its two non-communist partners in the CGDK -- the National Sihanoukist Army and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front -- have at most 15,000 guerrillas each, according to Western estimates. The Heng Samrin army is thought to number 30,000.

China's new policy was not to be confused with a Beijing-backed peace plan, made last March, in which the CGDK offered for the first time to talk directly with Phnom Penh before all Vietnamese troops had withdrawn, the prince said.

The eight-point plan was the CGDK's proposal of record, and would not be amended until Vietnam had shown "flexibility and good will."

The prince said that the main danger was the Vietnamisation of Cambodia, since two-thirds of the population of the capital was now Vietnamese and a total of 700,000 Vietnamese settlers were "everywhere in Cambodia."

But despite reports of military success for the rebels, Prince Shihanouk -- a former ruler of Cambodia -- was not optimistic for the future. "I don't think that during my lifetime I can see once again a free and independent Cambodia." And while he could not trust the Khmer Rouge if he ever did return to Phnom Penh -- "We would be liquidated," he said -- the prince said driving out the Vietnamese was a more pressing priority at the moment than dealing with his coalition partners.

CPV SECRETARIAT ISSUES MASS EMULATION DIRECTIVE

[Text] On 16 July 1986, the party Central Committee Secretariat issued a directive on launching a mass emulation movement for scoring achievements to welcome the Sixth Party Congress. The directive points out that the sixth congress of our party will be held in December 1986. This will be a widespread political drive among our entire party, people, and army. In order to welcome the party congress, the Secretariat has decided to launch an emulation drive to welcome the Sixth Party Congress with the following requirements and purposes:

1. Generate a seething movement for revolutionary action among the entire party, army, and people to strive to emulate in implementing successfully the socioeconomic and security-national defense plans for 1986, in actively developing those strong points and redressing those shortcomings brought up during the recent self-criticism and criticism drive, and in scoring concrete achievements to welcome party congresses at all levels and the Sixth National Party Congress. This emulation drive must prove effective in the following three respects:

-- Produce concrete results in increasing output, quality, efficiency, and thrift in each field of activity in every echelon and sector, especially at the grassroots level.

-- Improve awareness of the party and socialism and strengthen the close relationship between the party and the masses.

-- Broadly develop, through the emulation drive, the experiences obtained by progressive models and emulation heroes and combatants; and create new improvements in production and work and in making party, administrative, and mass organizations firm and strong.

2. The emulation drive must be linked with efforts to motivate the masses to participate in developing and perfecting the new management mechanism at the grassroots level as well as with efforts to resolve urgent problems in production, distribution, circulation, and welfare; enhance the laboring people's positiveness and creativity; vigorously overcome difficulties, especially in the provision of supplies and raw materials; tap all latent potentials for accelerating production while practicing thrift; and encourage the masses to vigorously develop their spirit of collective mastery and to participate actively and effectively in inspection and control activities against negativism at all establishments.

-- For industrial, capital construction, communication and transportation, and small industry and handicrafts units, the emulation drive must be aimed at tapping latent potentials; actively applying technological innovations; making maximum use of the capacity of machines and equipment; practicing absolute thrift; renovating the mechanism of management; rearranging production; redistributing the workforce; striving to increase product quantity and quality and lower production costs; ensuring profitable production and business; and improving the laboring people's living conditions.

-- In agricultural, forestry, and aquatic production, efforts must be made to embark on intensive cultivation and multicropping; enlarge the acreage; develop the various branches and trades; strengthen the collectivized economy; promote the family-based economy; redistribute the workforce; and build the new economic zones.

--- In the distribution and circulation sectors, efforts must be made to control goods and money, improve distribution methods, and control the market and prices.

-- In the scientific, technological, education, public health, physical education, sports, cultural, and social sectors, efforts must be made to accelerate the movement to study and apply scientific-technological innovations in support of production, national defense, and the people's welfare; improve the quality of education and training; intensify practical vocational education for students; promote cultural, artistic, public health, physical education, and sports activities among the masses; build a new socialist lifestyle; and combat backward customs, superstitious beliefs, and social vices.

-- Concerning national defense and security, efforts must be made to accelerate the all-people and all-army movement to strengthen national defense and security, stand ready to fight and fight bravely to defend the fatherland and safeguard political security and social order and safety, and satisfactorily carry out troop recruitment and army rear tasks.

3. Generate harmonious strength in organizing and directing emulation activities at various echelons and sectors, especially at the grassroots level; and try to attain realistic results and do away with bureaucratism, red tape, and formalism while organizing emulation activities. All party and youth union members must set an example by taking the lead in the socialist emulation movement.

-- Party committee echelons must intensify leadership over the emulation drive; supervise and review the adoption of emulation objectives, contents, and organizational methods; promptly guide the party, administrative, and mass organizations at all levels in making emulation pledges; and monitor emulation activities to provide encouragement in the form of commendations and rewards.

-- Enterprise directors and unit leaders should set forth specific monthly and quarterly quotas and arrange sufficient work and create material conditions for workers, employees, and other laboring people to enthusiastically participate in emulation activities. The State Planning Commission, the Statistics General Department, and other organs must closely coordinate with the Emulation Department and the various mass organizations in monitoring the emulation drive and promptly giving out commendations and rewards for initiatives, inventions, discoveries, and other emulation achievements in an accurate and just manner.

-- Mass organizations should develop various forms of emulation activities such as projects and products welcoming the party congress, model stores, and movements to develop initiatives, learn from the experiences of emulation heroes and combatants and progressive units, carry out socialist international emulation activities, and so forth in order to successfully launch realistic, seething, and effective movements for each target group of people, each basic unit, and each sector.

Army Paper Comments

BK031620 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 28 Jul 86

[Editorial in "recent" issue of QUAN DOI NHAN DAN: "Emulate in Scoring Achievements To Greet the Party Congress"]

[Text] The Sixth National Party Congress, which will be held late this year, is the most important event in our country's political life.

The congress will mark a vigorous change in our party's struggle to make itself a firm and strong vanguard party and to define the correct line, policies, and steps for the revolutionary undertaking of our entire people in face of the new situation.

The party Central Committee Secretariat has recently issued a directive on launching an emulation movement nationwide to score the highest achievements in honor of the party congress. With confidence and enthusiasm and with their most practical revolutionary action, let our entire people and armed forces emulate in scoring outstanding achievements to greet that important political event of the country.

Together with various sectors, echelons, and localities throughout the country, our entire armed forces have responded enthusiastically to this by launching a widespread emulation movement in all units.

To ensure that the emulation movement is carried out truly with an impetus that can be translated into conscious action among all cadres and combatants right from the very beginning, all echelons and units must, first of all, strive to make everyone understand profoundly the significance and purposes of the emulation movement outlined by the party central committee. These include generating a widespread movement for revolutionary action to improve the masses' awareness of the party and inspire their confidence in the party's leadership; helping to overcome immediate difficulties; and creating, through the emulation movement, a firm pattern of quality in every field of activity of each basic unit.

Effective emulation measures are the most important factor, while emulation activities must be focused on the grass-roots level, proceeded from the grass-roots level, and carried out at the grass-roots level. This is aimed at ironing out the difficulties and solving the problems of every unit.

All army units with great experience in organizing emulation realize that, to overcome formalism, it is absolutely necessary to establish clear norms for the emulation movement and adopt organizational and operational measures in a specific and scientific way that can mobilize strength from all echelons and all persons, especially combatants.

The emulation movement can be divided into two phases from now until the national party congress. The first phase will last until the anniversary of the August revolution and 2 September National Day, and the second phase will proceed to the opening of the party congress. All echelons and units should go by their conditions, characteristics, and specific tasks to establish practical norms for each phase of the emulation movement.

Emulation activities must be focused mainly and first of all on fulfilling the central task of every unit. The recent self-criticism and criticism drive has shown clearly the strong points and weaknesses, especially the weaknesses, of each unit.

Revolving around the central political task and using emulation as a lever to step up activities in all aspects and concentrate on successfully redressing those shortcomings revealed by various units is the most realistic task of this emulation drive. All unit leaders and commanders must discuss and reach an identity of views on the establishment of emulation norms. They must also ensure that these norms are established in a clear, specific, and practical manner and in a way that suits each type of work, each period of time, and each echelon and person.

It is necessary to avoid the practices of focusing emulation on unimportant tasks or establishing exceedingly high emulation norms and enforcing harsh and compulsory organizational measures, or launching the emulation movement for mere formality.

The masses have participated actively and effectively in the party's self-criticism and criticism drive. Therefore, we must arrange for them to take part in extensive discussion and contribute views to the establishment of emulation norms and enforcement of operational measures this time.

Because this emulation drive is being carried out by all sectors and echelons in the party and among the masses, while paying attention to developing the strength of various mass organizations, especially the youth union, we must avoid assigning it indiscriminately to youth union organizations.

Cadres and party members must participate directly and play an exemplary and leading role in all revolutionary actions while unit leaders and commanders must directly guide, inspect, and supervise the movement and direct and assist youth union members in introducing many diversified, attractive, and vivid emulation measures and contents.

While directing the emulation movement, cadres must always follow closely all norms and promptly discover, honor, and encourage progressive models and new factors in order to be able to establish various encouraging models and records with the aim of successfully fulfilling all the norms set for each phase of the movement.

Satisfactorily organizing this emulation movement means continuing to develop the results of the self-criticism and criticism drive, as well as promoting strong points and redressing shortcomings among all party organization echelons and units, and enhancing the sense of responsibility of party members and the consciousness and enthusiasm of the masses, thus changing comprehensively the situation in every unit and further improving the fighting strength of our entire armed forces.

ARMY PAPER URGES SUGGESTIONS FOR PARTY CONGRESS

BK061105 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 3 Aug 86

["Recent" QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Editorial: "Making Suggestions to the Party Congress"]

[Text] Collecting suggestions made by the masses to the party's draft political report is a task of special importance in preparing for successfully holding the next party congress. Doing a good job of organizing for the masses to contribute their ideas will enable the program of the Sixth Party Congress to epitomize the intellect of the entire people. This is an important condition for ensuring that the line laid down by the congress correctly reflects the law of development of the revolution and responds to the earnest aspirations of our entire people. Making suggestions to the party congress must be done on the basis of a high unity of views on the basic objective of the revolution in our country, namely successfully building and firmly defending the socialist homeland.

Reality has shown that a general line and basic objectives of the revolution set forth at the Fifth Party Congress are correct. Along with the task of perfecting the revolutioonary line, the most important requirement at present is to work out suitable and creative measures to successfully implement this revolutionary line. Therefore, the focal point of making suggestions to the party's program this time around is to suggest and propose measures to effectively implement the program.

Anyone can contrubute one's views to all fields of activity of the party and revolution, from the general and specific lines to the measures and policies to implement them, from the tasks of party building and strengthening solidarity and democracy to the economic, scientific, military, public health, cultural, educational, and other domains. But the important thing is that each person must proceed from the vivid reality of his own field of activity to make correct suggestions and propose creative and correct measures aimed at bringing into full play the strengths and potentials of the country and each sector and establishment, introducing new modes of production, developing successes, overcoming difficulties, and steadily advancing the revolution.

For us as army cadres and combatants, the task of making suggestions, aside from centering on general issues, should also be geared to the domains bearing on the army and national defense -- such as combining economic building and national defense work, raising the quality of the People's Armed Forces, building reserve forces, and implementing army welfare policies.

Ideas can be contributed to the draft political report in many ways. They acan be sent directly to the central level or the organs in charge of preparing for the party congress or raised during the party congress at all levels. They can be expressed in letters forwarded by Army units' party organizations or commanders, in letters or articles sent to the press, radio stations, and so forth. All levels, sectors, and units should coordinate to provide close guidance and create the most favorable possible conditions for the masses to contribute their views. They must also make sure that these views are fully collected for submission to the upper level.

On this occasion, QUAN DOI NHAN DAN will open a column entitled "Contributing Ideas and Making Suggestions to the Party Congress" to publish some suggestions of its readers. The editorial office will collect and forward to the higher echelons those letters and proposals the paper cannot carry. Concerning those suggestions which warrant a reply, the paper will write to their authors personally or coordinate with the responsible agencies of the higher echelons to provide an answer on the paper.

Contributing ideas to the party's program is a way for everyone to exercise their political responsibility and right to collective mastery of the country. The task of making suggestions to the party congress should be closely combined with the efforts to develop strong points and rectify shortcomings following the current self-criticism and criticism drive and with the promotion of the emulation movement to score achievements in honor of the party congress.

The vivid and rich reality to be reflected in the party's program thanks to the masses' action and thoughts will be a great intellectual contribution by the people of all strata which will enable the line set forth by the Sixth Party Congress to be a beacon encouraging our entire people and army to forge ahead.

TRAN KIEN ADDRESSES PARTY CONTROL COMMITTEE

[Text] The Central Control Committee and cadres in charge of the control organs of provincial, city, and special zone party organizations recently held a conference to review control work in the first 6 months of 1986 and to discuss the guidelines and tasks of the control sector for the second half of the year.

Over the past 6 months, control work has served the important self-criticism and criticism political drive, thereby actively contributing to preparing for party organization congresses at all levels. All levels and sectors have paid attention to examining and solving cases of party members violating discipline brought to light by letters from the masses, especially cases involving cadres under the management of various party committee echelons. In such cases, criticism was combined with self-criticism to clearly determine what was right and wrong and draw proper conclusions. All violations of discipline have been investigated, dealt with, and settled more expeditiously, seriously, resolutely, and uniformly.

Speaking about the tasks of the control sector for the last months of the year, Comrade Tran Kien, secretary of the party Central Committee and chairman of the Central Control Committee, clearly pointed out: In the days ahead we will conduct the second criticism and self-criticism drive and hold party organization congresses at all levels. The control committees at all echelons should firmly grasp the general requirement of this task, namely to concentrate urgently all resources on effectively serving the party organization congresses at all levels and the Sixth National Party Congress. First of all, they must coordinate with the Organization Department of the party Central Committee to help party committee echelons promptly and correctly decide cadre and party member cases directly related to the appointment of party committee personnel and on the elections of delegates to the party congress who have problems worth looking into. They must actively serve party committee echelons in inspecting the implementation of various decisions, plans, and measures adopted to rectify the shortcomings of party organizations, cadres, and members. They must also coordinate with all sectors concerned to continue to assist party committee echelons in supervising the implementation of various resolutions of the party Central Committee and Political Bureau.

The conference also discussed measures aimed at perfecting various control committees through the holding of party organization congresses at all levels and drawing experience from the implementation of the system of controlled leadership.

LEADERS INSPECT FLOODING IN NORTHERN PROVINCES

OW021630 Hanoi VNA in English 1510 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA August 2 -- Heavy rains accompanying storm Peggy considerably swelled the water in all rivers of northern Vietnam and threatened to break the dikes in many places. Too much rainfall has caused water logging in many areas in Cao Bang, Bac Thai and Lang Son Provinces, including the provincial capital of Lang Son. In Ha Bac Province, it broke the Noi Doi sluice on a dike along Cau River, overflew or broke many portions of the local embankments, and leakages occurred at many places on the main dikes of the Red River and the Thai Binh River.

The rainfall caused the immersion of vast acreages of rice and subsidiary food crops. In Hai Hung Province, nearly 50 percent of the recently transplanted rice fields are submerged. In Ha Bac Province, 46,000 ha of rice are flooded of which 30,000 ha are competely lost. In the stricken localities, the population, Armed Forces and security force have mounted a persistent battle to defend the dikes with all available means, while on the fields the pumps are fully activated to drain the fields. The break at the Noi Doi sluice has been mended in time thanks to the active participation of the Armed Forces.

Vo Chi Cong, member of the Political Bureau and secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam; vice chairman of the council of ministers, and other high- ranking party and state officials have made an inspection tour of the localities in which the fight against inundation is going on.

FLOOD CONTROL EFFORTS, LEADER VISITS DETAILED

[Text] On 1 August, Comrade Vo Chi Cong, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, inspected flash flood control and dike protection activities in Ha Bac Province, observed the repair of damage, and visited cadres, soldiers, and people at the Noi Gioi sluice construction site on the Cau River dike in Que Vo District of the same province. He was accompanied by representatives of the Office of the Council of Ministers, the Ministry of Water Conservancy, and the Central Committe for Flood and Typhoon Control.

Comrades Nguyen Thanh Quat, secretary of the provincial party committee, and Mai Thuc Lan, chairman of the provincial people's committee, and the local leaders, together with the Command Section of the Noi Gioi sluice construction site, informed Comrade Vo Chi Cong of the flash flood situation, flash flood control and dike protection activities, repair of the Noi Gioi sluice, and other measures taken to overcome the aftermath of inundation in the locality.

A raging flash flood has overflowed and damaged many portions of the local dikes, submerging many areas in the province and causing property losses for the state and the people. More than 46,000 hectares of crops have been flooded in the entire province, with more than 30,000 hectares of 10th-month rice completely washed out. At the Noi Gioi sluice in particular on the dike of the Cau River in Que Vo District, a dangerous incident occurred when flood water broke through the sluice and rushed into the ricefields, seriously threatening the dike. The incident was promptly brought under control by the active and effective participation of various army units and the timely assistance of the Ministry of Water Conservancy, the Central Committee for Flood and Typhoon Control, and various sectors.

At present, while continuing to combat flooding to protect the dikes, Ha Bac is concentrating its power sources on pumping water to control waterlogging and save rice plants and seedlings, draining the fields to transplant the remaining seedlings and retransplanting rice in the flood-stricken areas. The province is also preparing the necessary conditions for growing a good winter crop to make up for the losses of the 10th-month crop and normalize the lives of the people in the inundated areas.

After inspecting the actual situation at the Noi Gioi sluice and working with the local leaders, Comrade Vo Chi Cong praised the provincial party and people's committees, Que Vo District, Bac Ninh City, and especially the units and schools of the army, the Ministry of Water Conservancy, and other sectors which actively assisted and joined the local people in combatting the flash floods, protecting the dikes, and promptly bringing the Noi Gioi sluice incident under control.

Comrade Vo Chi Cong analyzed the significance of the timely control of the Noio Gio incident and the successful protection of the dikes, which helped avert tremendous, immeasurable losses. This was possible because the province was able to promptly detect the incident, concentrated on providing timely and urgent guidance, and mobilized nearly 40,000 people to take part in flash flood control and dike protection activities, with the Armed Forces serving as the backbone force.

Comrade Vo Chi Cong reminded the cadres and people of Ha Bac to continue doing a good job of protecting dams and dikes, repairing immediately all damage caused to dikes, successfully controlling the current spate of flash floods, and actively preparing to combat any subsequent flooding.

At the same time, Ha Bac must grow the 10th-month rice crop satisfactorily, make the best preparations for winter crop production, effectively maintain public order and security, struggle against enemy sabotage, motivate the people in flood-stricken areas, and care for their livelihood. All the central sectors must work out plans to help Ha Bac protect its dams and dikes, overcome natural calamities, and normalize the people's living conditions and production.

During these days of urgent flash flood control and dike protection, Comrade Vo Van Kiet, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, and Comrade Dong Sy Nguyan, alternate member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, inspected flash flood control work and protection of the Red River dikes in Me Linh, Phuc Tho, and Dan Phuong districts in rural Hanoi.

SOVIET STREET, SHIP TO BE NAMED AFTER LE DUAN

[Text] Hanoi VNA August 7 -- The Soviet executive committee of Moscow City has decided that a new street in the Soviet capital be named after Le Duan, general secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam who died on July 10 last. The U.S.S.R. Ministry of Merchant Marine has also decided to name one of its ships under construction after the late general secretary.

HA SON BINH DISTRICT DISCIPLINES ERRANT CADRES

OW051045 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] According to the journal HA SON BINH, after the self-criticism drive, the party committee of Thanh Oai District, Ha Son Binh Province, has taken disciplinary action against a number of cadres and party members for breaking the rules regarding cadre qualities. It has charged the secretary of the district party committee, the chairman of a village people's committee, and the chairman of the Tram Hung Agricultural Cooperative of nourishing a parochial mentality during the anti-waterlogging struggle toward the end of 1985. It has dismissed the chairman of the Mien Giang Village people's committee from the position of party committee secretary for breaking the rules concerning cadre qualities.

It has also examined the use of money and goods by a number of state-run economic units in the district, and has decided to recover more than 10,000 dong lost from misappropriation of goods by the third-level trading corporation and confiscate all the money and goods incorrectly distributed by the district's marketing cooperative on the occasion of the Lunar New Year festival. It has taken disciplinary action against a state store agent for stealing goods from the store and selling them to merchants.

CUU LONG COMBATTING CASES OF ECONOMIC CRIME

BK040430 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] In the first 6 months of this year, the Cuu Long State Inspection Committee inspected 300 cases concerning the new policy on prices, wages, and money at various production and business establishments in key areas, cities, and towns. In implementing the policy on prices, wages, and money, many organizations and enterprises took advantage of numerous difficulties to embezzle state properties.

The committee discovered almost 120 cases of negativism at various production and business establishments -- cases which included embezzlement, illegal trading, waste, irresponsibility, and violation of state regulations and policies. These cases caused losses to state property amounting to 900,000 dong. Some grassroots units arbitrarily sold goods and materials through illegal channels, thus affecting state income by 3.6 million dong.

The state inspection committee has helped the province promptly overcome shortcomings and take positive measures to improve its economic management. It has supervised the province to collect more than 222,000 dong for the state and proposed a disciplinary punishment for 20 individuals who violated state policies.

TRAN QUYNH ADDRESSES SCIENTISTS GOING ABROAD

OW0418830 Hanoi VNA in English 1540 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA August 4 -- A conference for scientific and technical specialists who will go to work in several friendly countries in furtherance of cooperation plans for this year was held here from August 1-4.

Speaking at the conference, Hoang Huu Binh, head of the committee for specialists' cooperation with foreign countries, reviewed the work done by Vietnamese specialists in foreign countries over the past years and acclaimed their considerable contributions to strengthening the solidarity, friendship and cooperation with these countries.

Many reports presented at the conference dealt with many concrete measures aimed at raising the quality of Vietnamese specialists' work and further developing their cooperation.

Tran Quynh, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, attended and addressed the conference.

MINISTER NOTES TALKS WITH NASA ON PALAPA LAUNCH

BK060858 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 0700 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Tourism, Post and Telecommunications Minister Akhmad Tahir in Jakarta today said that the launching of Palapa satellites B-2P by Delta rocket will take place in March next year. He said this to newsmen prior to a limited cabinet meeting on economics, finance, and industry in the Binagraha presidential office. According to the minister, it is important that the Palapa satellite B-2P is launched before the general election in April 1987.

At the moment Indonesia is negotiating with NASA on the cost of the launch because the United States does not subsidize the launching of the Palapa B-2P by the NASA Delta rocket. The United States wants the Indonesian Government to pay for the cost of the launch.

Reveals Approach to PRC

OW061007 Tokyo KYODO in English 0823 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Jakarta, Aug 6 KYODO -- Indonesia has approached the Chinese government about the possibility of launching future Indonesian communications satellites from China, telecommunications minister Akhmad Tahir said here Wednesday. Tahir said his government, taking account of China's good record in satellite launching to date, has already approached Chinese officials in spite of the absence of diplomatic relations between them.

"In order to secure our communications satellite system, we have to consider every possibility regarding satellite launching," Tahir said. He added that the Indonesian government has access to a "special mechanism" making communication with China possible.

Indonesia has relied on U.S. rockets to launch a total of three television and telephone communications satellites since the program got under way in 1976.

The first satellite has since been deactivated, while the second had been held in reserve. The third satellite, scheduled to operate until 1990, was launched by the U.S. space shuttle Challenger in 1983. Plans to launch Indonesia's fourth satellite in June, however, were cancelled due to the explosion of the Challenger last January.

Government sources in Indonesia say U.S. president Ronald Reagan has instructed the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration [NASA] to launch Indonesia's latest telecommunications satellite by an unmanned Delta rocket by March next year.

AQUINO ITINERARY FOR INDONESIA, SINGAPORE VISITS

HK061429 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 6 Aug 86 pp 1-7

[Text] Malacanang released yesterday the itinerary of President Aquino's state visit to Indonesia and Singapore, from Aug. 24 to 27, to convey her desire "for closer relations with these two ASEAN neighbors."

The President is scheduled to arrive in Jakarta in the afternoon of Aug. 24. She will be met by Indonesian President Suharto at the airport, before proceeding to Istana Nagara, the Indonesian Palace, where the ceremonial courtesy calls will be made.

Indonesian Vice President Wirahadikusumah will call on Mrs. Aquino at the guest house of the Indonesian Palace. Later in the evening she will be honored at a state dinner to be given by Suharto.

In the morning of August 25, the President will lay a wreath at the Kalibata Heroes Cemetery, then sit for formal talks between the two governments at 10 a.m.

In the afternoon of the same day, Mrs. Aquino will visit Taman Mini Indonesia Indah, a cultural village in Jakarta, and later attend a civic reception by the governor of Jakarta.

In the evening, she will attend a reception by the Philippine side to be hosted by Ambassador Manuel T. Yan.

The next day, Aug. 26, Mrs. Aquino leaves for Singapore, arriving there before noon time for lunch and official talks with Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew until early afternoon. A short break follows before the customary state banquet to be tendered by Minister Lee.

The second sesson of bilateral talks will be held the next morning, Aug. 27. After a private lunch, the President will leave for Manila in the afternoon.

During the briefing conducted by Deputy Spokesperson Alice C. Villadolid and Press Attache Benedicto David of the Philippine Embassy in Washington D.C., it was also disclosed that the President will deliver 13 speeches in her eight-day official working visit to the United States from Sept. 15 to 23.

Two of the speeches will be major ones; before the joint session of the US Congress and before the United Nations General Assembly.

RAMOS ALLAYS FEARS OF COUP DURING AQUINO'S ABSENCE

HK070311 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] [Armed Forces of the Philippines] General Fidel Ramos yesterday [6 August] allayed fears about a possible military coup during the absence of President Aquino who is going on a foreign trip this month. Gen. Ramos said he is confident the security and stability of the country will be maintained during the absence of the president. President Aquino is scheduled to visit two ASEAN countries and the United States.

The statement by Gen Ramos was given to rest speculations and fear expressed by many quarters that a military coup could happen when President Aquino leaves. They said the AFP will take over the government because of the communist threat and an apparent opposition to the peace pact with the government. The general said President Aquino has nothing to worry about during her foreign trip. He said she should [words indistinct] of her foreign visits for the benefit of the people. Mrs Aquino will visit Indonesia and Singapore on August 24-26, and the United States starting Spetember 15.

ENRILE SAYS ENTIRE CHAIN OF COMMAND BACKS AQUINO

HK051555 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 5 Aug 86 pp 1, 10

[By Jose de Vera]

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said yesteday he was confident that President Aquino would provide the political support to the Armed Forces if it is called upon to operate more aggressively against insurgency.

At the same time, Enrile stressed that the entire chain of command in the defense and military establishments is solidly behind the President's leadership.

Speaking before the Philippine Institute of Certified Public Accountants at Hotel Intercontinental, Enrile said that during the past regime, it was the lack of support from the political leadership that was "one of the greatest constraints to the preparedness and capability of our Armed Forces."

But this factor "has been cancelled in the present regime," he said. And this is borne out of "full confidence in the strength of our national leadership to back up the military politically."

He started his speech by saying that everytime he was invited to speak at a public gathering, he was expected to say something controversial or to deny a rumor.

Whatever alleged controversies or rumors that were made out of his public statements, he said, these were the figment of the imagination of some people whose motives he could not fathom.

According to Enrile, the defense and military establishments have nothing to complain about the political directions President Aquino has set for them as well as her earnest efforts to generate popular support and confidence in the Armed Forces.

"Let there be no doubt on this matter," he said. "We shall firmly resist and fight any quarters that attempt to break or undermine the unity of command -- from the President and Commander-in-Chief down to the last soldier -- with the Armed Forces."

Enrile also said that his views on insurgency and other subjects related to internal or external security have been consistently enunciated by him even during the past regime.

"I believe that one cannot hold or divest himself of certain views or positions regarding the security of our nation simply on the basis of their popularity or unpopularity," he said.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE UNITS PUT ON 'RED ALERT'

HK061421 Manila THE MANILA EVENING POST in English 5 Aug 86 pp 1, 6

[By Ed Malay]

[Text] Military intelligence units of the Armed Forces of the Philippines have been placed on red alert status to cope with what could turn into a violent encounter involving certain political factions following reports that groups supporting Mrs Corazon Aquino have by their own admission been arming themselves in preparation for an armed confronation.

A reliable military source told THE MANILA EVENING POST that while the present situation remains under control, the announcement by certain partisans that they were arming themselves have alarmed the military organization. He stressed that the armed forces will be hard pressed to maintain peace and order, especially if its forces are spread thin throughout the country, if the communist movement will seize the opportunity to pursue its own armed objective to take over the government.

Military intelligence teams fielded throughout the country, the source said, have been directed to determine the identities of those behind moves to arm these groups, especially the sources of firearms being distributed to these factions.

The source said the Philippine Air Force Security Command (Pafsecom), the unit which took over the functions of the Aviation Security Command (Avsecom), has been ordered to maximize its security at the Manila International Airport [MIA] in view of persistent report that sophisticated and high-powered firearms were being shipped through the MIA by certain favored groups.

On the other hand, despite moves by the military to disarm various armed groups identified with former President Marcos, the so-called political warlords have managed to preserve their forces by just lying low. These armed groups are reportedly spread out from Ilocos regions to Mindanao.

It is probably the inability of the armed forces to neutralize the presence of these armed followers of the warlords that groups close to Mrs Aquino have decided to also build their own armed forces. Close to 2,000 men with ages ranging from 18 to 30 were reportedly being trained in one province by two Israeli nationals who were previously employed by former Ambassador Eduardo Cojuangco, Jr. to train the latter's security force.

The source stressed that the underground movement could take advantage of the situation to pursue their aims especially if there were to be an armed confronation among warring groups.

Since the takeover of the government by Mrs Aquino, the underground movement has been able to position its political leaders and sympathizers in the government itself, thus expanding its political influence.

Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile last night revealed that known leftists as well as those who are known for their socialist views have succeeded in infiltrating the government.

Enrile, however, did not identify who these leftists are and the extent to which they have influenced the present government while warning that the government could fall under the influence of the communists if leftist activities remain unchecked.

Enrile said armed action is not the only solution to the insurgency problem. A strong political leadership complemented by an active information and educational campaign will neutralize the political gains achieved by the communists especially in the countryside, he said.

Meanwhile, the presence of so-called leftists in the government of Mrs Corazon Aquino has been marked as among the subjects to be discussed in Washington when Mrs Aquino visits the United States next month.

A U.S. Embassy official who requested that his identity be withheld said that the U.S. Government is closely watching developments in the Philippines and will definitely bring up the presence of socialist-oriented officials in the Philippine Government.

TOLENTINO AGREES TO NEW OATH; AQUINO OKAY NEEDED

OW070933 Tokyo KYODO in English 0924 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Manila, Aug. 7 KYODO -- Former Foreign Minister Arturo Tolentino and other leaders of the failed July 6 rebellion have agreed to pledge loyalty to the government of President Corazon Aquino, Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales said Thursday. Rebellion charges against those who will take the oath will be dropped once approved by Aquino, who has demanded a pledge of loyalty to the "Freedom Constitution" in exchange for clemency. The agreement was reached in a meeting last Tuesday between Gonzales and other loyalist followers of ousted President Ferdinand Marcos led by Tolentino, former Parliament Speaker Nicanor Yniguez, former Member of Parliament Rafael Recto and Salvador Britanico.

The loyalty pledge will not be addressed directly to the "Freedom Constition," Gonzales said. It will be an oath of allegiance to the Philippine Republic, which recognizes the existence of the "present government" and renounces the use of violence.

Aquino promulgated the provisional "Freedom Constitution" shortly after the she took power in a civilian-backed military revolt which toppled Marcos' 20-year rule last February. She appointed a 48-member commission to draft a new charter to replace the 1973 Constitution which she said was tailor-made for Marcos, who fled into exile in Hawaii.

Gonzales said he drafted the oath on his own initiative in the spirit of national reconciliation, "without binding" Aquino. He said "all of this" will have to be approved by the president.

The Marcos loyalists will take their oath after Gonzales and their leaders agree on a list of names of those who will make the pledge.

Manila police filed rebellion charges against Tolentino and 25 other civilian leaders of the rebellion and 15 military men. The Manila fiscal (prosecutor) has not yet decided on whether to file the case in court for a full-blown trial.

MARCOS, AQUINO SUPPORTERS STAGE RALLIES 3 AUG

HK040413 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 3 Aug 86

[Text] Marcos loyalists and supporters of President Corazon Aquino held separate rallies yesterday [3 August]. Several thousand supporters of deposed President Marcos held another weekend rally in Cavite City where they swore allegiance to the 1973 Constitution in a defiant gesture against the Aquino government. The rally was held outside Manila to avoid a confrontation with Aquino supporters who held a demonstration at the Rizal Park.

In the Cavite City demonstration, speakers led by former Batangas Provincial Fiscal Felizardo Lota and movie actor Carlos Salazar accused the government of causing the present instability in the country and placing the nation in danger of a communist take-over.

The Aquino supporters meanwhile lashed out at Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and called for the continued use of people's power to counter those seeking to destabilize the new government. The pro-Aquino rallyists also accused Enrile of being a U.S. puppet and declared opposition to the return of deposed President Marcos. One of the speakers, lawyer Ric Valmonte of the Bagong Alyansa Makabayan [New Nationalist Alliance], said Enrile is trying to influence Marcos loyalists for his own ends.

'PEOPLE'S POWER' GROUP FORMED IN ILOCOS REGION

[BY Carmel M. Pizarro]

[Text] Baguio City -- The Ilocos region, birthplace of former President Ferdinand Marcos, is forming one of the largest multi-sectoral alliances of "people's power" in North. The new alliance aims to counter any attempts of Marcos loyalists to wrestle power from the Aquino government.

Organizers of the alliance claimed an Ilocos-wide multi-sectoral alliance is imperative because of the existing conditions:

-- The retention of political and economic base of the big warlords and the continued operation of their private armies.
-- The existence of Marcos loyalists camps and the big warlords in connivance with the loyalists troops.
-- The reluctance of the military to deal with these problems.
-- The threat of the military supplanting the present warlord domination.

Organizers of the alliance said in their letter-invitation to BUSINESS DAY that "conditions in the North have not significantly changed" and neither "has the Ilocos region been liberated despite the Marcoses flight from the country."

In Ilocos Sur, officer-in-charge acting governor Sally Villanueva is unable to occupy the provincial Capitol which is barricaded by supporters of former governor Chavit Singson.

Singson who was governor of Ilocos Sur for many years, is claimed to be maintaining his own private army. Even the military is unable to help Villanueva.

The letter-invitation also emphasized that through the multi-sectoral alliance, the organizers can prevent "a fascist comeback in the North, cultivate social consciousness among the Ilocanos with particular stress on their awareness of human and legal rights, establish venues for Ilocanos to air their opinions and demands, foster solidarity among Ilocanos and non-Ilocanos towards peace based on justice and genuine national unity."

Representatives from the provinces of Pangasinan, Ilocos Sur, Ilocos Norte, Mt. Province and Benguet, and cause-oriented groups in the region are expected to attend an assembly of the alliance on July 26 at the Diego Silang Hall of the provincial Capital of San Fernando, La Union.

Officers-in-charge from all the Ilocos provinces are also expected to attend the forum.

It is being organized by the "Forum Ilocandia," an organization of Ilocanos and Friends Committed to the advancement of nationalist and democratic initiatives and aspirations based in Metro Manila, in coordination with APPEAL (Advocates of People's Power of Enlightenment, Amelioration and Liberation) based in San Fernando, La Union.

CITIZENS' GROUP TO COUNTER COMMUNISTS LAUNCHED

HK251509 Manila THE MANILA EVENING POST in English 24 Jul 86 p 6

[Text] A citizens' movement to "counter the threat of a communist takeover was launched yesterday with former members of Parliament joining its Council of Leaders.

The movement is PEACE Philippines (Patriotic Effort Against Communist Expansionism), which warned in its manifesto that "at no time in the nation's life than today is the Red Peril most serious - menacing and clear from the escalating violence and virulence of its partisans."

Former Minister and Member of Parliament Jose T. Tumbokon of Aklan, secretary-general of PEACE Philippines, assured his colleagues during the launching at the Asian Institute of Tourism in Diliman, Quezon City, that the movement is non-partisan, non-sectarian and will not engage in street marches and open air rallies "because there are already several anti-Red groups doing it."

"The movement will be active in the academy, in civic and professional clubs, and the like," he said. "It initially intends to field as speakers jurists, diplomats, public and private business executives, and educators."

Citing the communists' open welfare [as published] and terrorism, parliamentary and government infiltration, propaganda and popular deception, Tumbokon said:

Among the purposes and programs of the movement are:

— To provide more organized expression and militancy for the spontaneous choice of the vast majority of Filipinos for Republican Democracy and their innate revulsion towards the communist system of regimentation and repression.

-- To undertake, sponsor and assist informational campaigns and activities to clarify and fortify the faith of the Philippine citizenry in the merits of liberal democracy as a vehicle for enriching their lives and building a strong nation.

AFP GROUPS SAID TO SIGNAL RIFT IN MILITARY

HK300707 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 29 Jul 86 p 5

[By Marites Danguilan-Vitug]

[Text] The emergence of organizations within the Armed Forces is perceived to be creating divisions in the institution expected to be most disciplined and united. It is also seen to be perpetuating a culture of patronage among such groups.

The formation of an umbrella coalition Brothers -- Brotherhood of Officers to Promote Harmony, Equality and Reforms in the Service -- in May 1986 appears to be a duplication of the efforts of the Reform the Armed Forces Movement (RAM). The difference, however, lies in the membership: Brothers is composed of reserve, integree and direct commission officers while RAM is mostly made up of Philippine Military Academy graduates usually considered the elite of the AFP [Armed Forces of Philippines].

The existence of Brothers and RAM shows the classic split between PMA [Philippine Military Academy] 'ers and non-PMA'ers, the former seen as better trained thus they are perceived to get the better deal in the Armed Forces in terms of sensitive and key positions and promotions.

Members of Brothers, too, have an inherent disadvantage: by the nature of their classification (reserve officers), their assignments are temporary. The system says reserve officers should be rotated every two years thus many have to leave the service to give way to another set of reserve officers. Those who want to make a career of soldiering are frustrated. Moreover, those not promoted after five years will have to be separated from the service, creating unemployment problems. In reservist circles, this is called "lateral attrition."

Lt Col Alexander Bellen, member of the Brothers central committee, explained that Brothers is more a parallel organization to the PMA Alumni Association (PMAAA) than to RAM. He also said that the formation of RAM did not embolden them to organize Brothers: "Before Brothers, we in the direct commission classes of 1971 to 1974 were already organized."

Bellen sees the RAM as "just one of the organizations pressing for reforms" and not as a competing group. Eventually, he pointed out, the RAM and Brothers may find cause to come together in "fraternal organization to put an end to the so-called rift."

Brothers has under its wing at least four small groups, all "anchored on the twin issues of security of tenure and equity...intend(ing) to pursue the gains of the February revolt under the broad objectives of professionalism, reform and equality," their May 9 memorandum to the chief of staff says.

These groups go by different acronyms, namely: MOVERS, for Military Officers Volunteers for Equality and Reforms; MONRO, Movement of Naval Reserve Officers; CRUSADERS, Citizens' Reservists for Unity and Service to Advance Democracy, Equality, Reforms and Self-reliance; and IROG, Integree and Reserve Officers Group.

The proliferation of such groups could have been dismissed as insignificant, though, until a leading member of Brothers, Lt Col Reynaldo Cabauatan -- he organized IROG in Region 3 -- figured prominently in the failed Manila Hotel loyalist putsch. He reportedly duped about 200 soldiers into going to Manila Hotel to support Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and Gen Fidel Ramos.

Leaders of Brothers clarified that they are not an association of Marcos loyalists. Bellen, of the central committee of Brothers, said they have already expelled Cabauatan from IROG.

Apart from dragging Brothers into the Manila Hotel fray, Cabauatan also mobilized the Guardians in his region, an old organization within the military formerly named Diyablo. While it is a cooperative, primarily concerned with giving its members financial assistance, the potential political use of Guardians was shown.

Three organizations within the AFP have recently come to fore all in the context of a political role: the RAM for its role in the February revolt; and Brothers and Guardians for their apparently unintentional involvement in the Manila Hotel caper.

Prof. Felipe Miranda, University of the Philippines political science professor and a keen military obvserver, told BUSINESS DAY he reads the proliferation of groups within the military as a process of "changing focuses of loyalty." With the Marcos and Gen. Fabian Ver gone, together with the other generals who actively supported the former Regime, he likened "factions" within the AFP to "truncated pyramids" in search of rallying figures.

In addition, he pointed out that this development could be seen, optimistically, as an effect of the "democratic space" enjoyed under the Aquino government. The military, too, has found the climate propitious for organizing efforts.

"But more than a democratizing process, it is a patron-client relationship at work," Miranda stressed. "The leaders (of these groups) may be attempting to set up bases of support to use in any kind of bargaining with superior officers. It can be politically inspired."

Col. Engene Ocampo, commander of the CHQ Brigade and chairman of the RAM steering committee, however, does not see either Guardians or Brothers as gaining political color. Guardians, he said, is a "benevolent society which enhances the morale of the soldiers." And Brothers is a "professional organization with objectives confined mostly to AFP goals. They promote their own welfare," he added.

Guardians differs from Brothers in some respects, one of which is the fact that the former is an organization of officers and enlisted men while the latter is composed only of officers. Moreover, members of Guardians bear tattoos on their right hands to identify them (as Guardians) and the service command they come from; they undergo a marking ceremony and some initiation rites without physical violence.

The similarities lie in the concern of both organizations for economic benefits and improvements of their welfare as soldiers. In Brothers' circles, it is said their reason for organizing is simply stated, "We want to survive in order to serve."

They have valid demands, Ocampo acknowledged. "I encourage my men to join the Guardians. It is good for discipline. But it's too bad they were played up the wrong way (in the loyalist putsch)." He does not see divisions growing in the AFP as a result of the existence of such groups.

Some observers argue that if the system of economic benefits in the AFP is improved, then there would be no need to form a group like Guardians whose members collect at least P10 each from their ranks to save in a collective fund from which they could borrow during deaths or any other emergency. This logic can be applied to the Brothers; if the tenure of reserve officers would be more secure and if they do not fear displacement then there would be no cause to band together.

Prof. Miranda, who has done several in-depth studies on the military, does not agree. The attraction for joining such groups may be less in case improvements were made, he said, but they will still persist because of the basic patron-client relationship that defines membership in the organizations.

In Guardians, for instance, a head of a chapter is called "godfather" while the leader of the entire organization is "supreme godfather." These labels are an indication of the nature of the relationship within Guardians.

But one positive result could come out, Miranda added, "to the extent that some leaders address the material demands (of their members)."

For the short-term, many expect the groups within the AFP to stay as "unavoidable facts of life" since basic reform will take time to seep into their organization. The AFP leadership thus faces the challenge of consolidating all of these organizations into a united military and steering it away, as much as possible, from political action.

MITRA HOLDS INFORMAL TALKS WITH OCAMPO, ZUMEL

HK061427 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 6 Aug 86 pp 1, 12

[By Ding Marcelo]

[Text] Peace negotiations between the Aquino government and communist rebels began officially though informally yesterday as negotiators from both sides talked for nearly four hours. Discussing topics related to the ceasefire and then later happily renewing old times as former newspapermen.

Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra Jr., representing the government side, told newsmen after reporting to President Aquino in Malacanang yesterday, that the informal talks were initiated by rebel negotiators Satur Ocampo and Antonio Zumel in an undisclosed place yesterday morning.

It was the first meeting between the two panels who for the past several weeks had known about each other's views only through the newspapers and through emissaries that had unofficial ties with the rebel movement.

Describing the meeting as cordial, Mitra allayed the first concern of Ocampo and Zumel about the safe-conduct pass, saying that he has received assurances from the military organization that the two can move about as freely as they want to.

"The question of safe conduct has been clearly defined to mean that they can be anywhere and they could be on their way to the talks or getting out of the talks," Mitra said.

He said that they can be in Aparri (Cagayan) and they can just say that they have come from the talks. "They can really be anywhere," he said, "and we are guaranteeing their safety."

Ocampo, reportedly the chairman of the National Democratic Front [NDF], and Zumel, spokesman of the NDF, had expressed worry that some military men may not honor the pass if they are found in some areas far from the peace talks.

But Mitra was firm in telling them that "now they can surface."

Mitra said the safe-conduct pass is effective immediately and until the peace talks have been terminated.

"The peace talks have started today," Mitra said, "and it means that Satur and Tony Zumel, along with their bodyguards or staff can move about freely."

Mitra said President Aquino was so happy about the latest development that she herself had wanted to announce the breakthrough to reporters but was prevented by an urgent meeting at the palace.

Mitra will be joined in the negotiations with the rebels by Commission on Audit Chairman Teofisto Guingona Jr. who has been authorized by the president to temporarily take the place of former Sen. Jose W. Diokno who is now in the United States undergoing medical treatment.

Mitra also got assurance from the rebels that Guingona would be allowed to sit with the government panel officially even when Diokno recovers and joins the talks later.

It was gathered that the rebels would also add one more member in the panel and reports say that this could be a woman, most likely Bobby Malay, wife of Satur Ocampo.

Mitra also said that Ocampo requested that the discussions be called peace talks and not ceasefire negotiations, and he agreed, though he told the rebels that President Aquino wanted first and foremost that the killings be stopped.

Ocampo, however, said that the ceasefire would only come after they have agreed on certain basic principles and that it should not be temporary but a lasting and durable one.

"I think Satur was of the mind that's part of th entire package which could mean that it would take sometime before we stop killing each other," Mitra said.

Mitra also told the two that it was the policy of Mrs. Aquino that the military take a defensive position against the rebels, meaning there would be no search and destroy missions against the members of the New People's Army.

Ocampo reportedly told Mitra that it was not the case and that the military has been increasing its attack on the NPA's and other progressive elements in the countryside.

Mitra said the discussion with Ocampo and Zumel, who were accompanied by Bobby Malay and two other men, touched only the periphery of the peace talks, like looking for a permanent place to hold the negotiations and press briefings.

It was suggested to hold talks in various places so they can talk in peace and avoid making a stage show of the negotiations and perhaps hold press briefings jointly.

But the more substantive part of the talks was left out for future meetings.

Mitra said the proposed agenda will be submitted to him either today or tomorrow. He did not say whether it's going to be a face-to-face meeting again with the two rebel negotiators but Mitra said a line had already been devised in which contact and communication will be coursed for immediate action by both sides.

Mitra was amazed at how pleasantly the talks with Ocampo and Zumel went. He said they were old friends from way back when Ocampo was a business writer for the MANILA TIMES and Zumel the news editor of the MANILA BULLETIN. Mitra himself used to write for the MANILA CHRONICLE.

"The talks were very pleasant. It was very cordial. They were old friends," Mitra said.

The discussion that lasted three and one half hours centered mainly on their days as newspapermen, Mitra said. "Only about a third of the time was spent talking about the ceasefire," he said.

What also caught Mitra's attention, he said, was that the conversation has none of the communist rhetoric that one hears when talking with rebels -- "You know this statement about running dogs of the Americans, imperialists, compradors."

"There were none of these words," he said. "One would think they were just a couple of reporters pounding a beat."

Aquino, Enrile on Talks

HK070307 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] The president yesterday [6 August] said she will meet with government negotiators and defense and military authorities immediately after the communist leadership submits their proposed agenda for peace talks.

They will just give us the agenda through Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra and once the paper is received, I will meet with Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] Chief of Staff General Fidel Ramos and Minister Mitra, according to the chief executive in an interview after the cabinet meeting in Malacanang.

Mitra, a member of the government panel negotiating for peace talks with the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP], said he expected a draft agenda to be given to him within the next 38 hours. He also said the president was happy over the latest developments in the peace talks negotiations with the rebels. During the cabinet meeting the president was informed by Mitra about his first meeting Tuesday with rebel emissaries Satur Ocampo and Antonio Zumel in a private house somewhere in Metro Manila. In an interview, he said the cease-fire would be a good way to start formal talks.

Minister Enrile, on the other hand, stressed that the military will abide by President Aquino's commitments to the rebels.

[Begin recording] [Enrile] Whatever is agreed upon by the negotiators, once approved by the president, will be followed and respected by the defense establishment. May I just say this one thing: Whatever the president will agree to, we will follow. She is the commander-in-chief. [Words indistinct] she is the commander-in-chief, we will follow whatever her commitments will be.

[Unidentified questioner] Also because there were doubts expressed by the other side that perhaps the defense establishment may not be hearing the orders, so that is why [words indistinct].

[Enrile] Well, when the president will enter into an agreement with the other side of these negotiations, then we will implement her orders all the way to the last man in the service.

[Unidentified questioner] [Question indistinct]

[Enrile] Yes, if that is their wish, they are free to go anywhere -- if they want to go anywhere. If they are negotiating, why not? Naturally the theory is that wherever they are, they are on the way to the negotiation or coming from the negotiation. I think if we are going to negotiate with them -- and this is why I think my way of looking of it [as heard] -- we should give them a feeling of confidence, but they could meet our negotiators even at Peninsula, Manila Hotel, or wherever, and they are assured of their safety. [end recording]

Armed forces chief of staff General Fidel Ramos yesterday said the military is prepared to go all out against the rebels if ordered by President Aquino. Ramos made the statement in an interview over Channel 7's weekly televisin program, "Viewpoint." He said the New Armed Forces of the Philippines has voluntarily refrained from unleashing its firepower against the rebels because of the president's reconciliation policy. He added that is why the military has not gone all out against the New People's Army, which has been fighting a guerrilla war for the past 17 years. Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile also said last week that the AFP is capable of mounting a massive military operation to wipe out the NPA.

LAUREL SAYS COMMUNISTS LINKING U.S. BASES, TALKS

HK061433 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 6 Aug 86 pp 1,7

[Text] Vice-President and Foreign Minister Salvador H. Laurel yesterday said that he has been told that communists will hold peace talks only if the new constitution contains a provision dismantling U.S. bases.

"Otherwise they will campaign against its ratification and forget about the ceasefire," he said.

He said he made this statement to U.S. Ambassador Stephen Bosworth who had expressed his government's concern over the insurgency problem.

Laurel also said he and Bosworth discussed preparations for the visit to the U.S. by President Aquino starting Sept 15. Second Deputy Foreign Minister Leticia R. Shahani has been detailed to Malacanang to assist in the preparations.

Laurel said Bosworth believes the timing of the visit is right because President Aquino currently holds a high popularity rating with the American people.

Foreign Minister Salvador H. Laurel yesterday designated Counsellor Willie Gaa as executive director of the consular affairs office, vice [title as received] Solita Aguirre, with orders to speed up passport applications and processing.

"Mrs. Aguirre is being assigned to another office in the Foreign Ministry prior to her eventual assignment abroad following our rotation system. She has done a good job in running the passport division," Laurel said.

CPP CRITICIZES AQUINO OVER CONSTITUTION

HK040645 Hong Kong AFP In English 0625 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Manila, Aug 4 (AFP) -- The banned Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) has criticized President Corazon Aquino over the drafting of a new constitution and called on Filipinos to topple "the present system" in the long term. The latest issue of the party's organ, the NATION, available Monday, said Mrs Aquino named "almost no direct representatives" of workers and peasants to the Constitutional Commission and hit her appointment of conservative opposition leaders to the panel.

In an editorial, it called on Communist Party members to carry out "propaganda and agitation" to show Filipinos the alleged "machinations" of the U.S. Government and its "lackeys" in influencing the commission's work. "These struggles will help steel (the people) for bigger struggles ahead to bring down the present system and finally enable them to write the constitution that truly serves their interests," it said.

Radicals in the commission are pressing for the removal of two U.S. military bases in the country. The Communist Party publication said this proposal would be rejected in a plenary vote by the commission later this month. The CPP has long demanded the bases' removal.

"We can only expect a draft constitution that formally upholds the people's interests but essentially perpetuates those of imperialism and its local lackeys," the CPP said, adding that only "cosmetic reforms" would emerge.

The commission is due to come out with a new constitution by September 2 to replace a temporary charter which Mrs Aquino enforced after a popular revolt installed her in power in February. The Aquino government is seeking a peaceful solution to the 17-year-old insurgency lead by the CPP's New People's Army.

CEBU COMMUNISTS WARN MILITARY, LOYALISTS

HK250444 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 24 Jul 86 p 3

[Text] Cebu City -- the Communist Party of the Philippines/New People's Army [CPP/NPA] and the National Democratic Front [NDF] in Cebu have warned the local military and the Marcos adherents in Cebu and those whom they call "rabid counter revolutionary reactionary" for sowing a "red scared."

In a press release issued to the local print and broadcast outlets, the CPP/NPA and the NDF also criticized Political Affairs Minister Antonio Cuenco for his pronouncements against "communist progressive and democratic forces."

NDF Cebu spokesman Rafael Flores accused Cuenco, the Marcos followers here and Central Visayas PC/INP [Philippine Constabulary/Integrated National Police] chief Col. Edgardo Abenina for "wanting to maintain an exploitative social order."

Explaining its issues against the military top brass here, the NDF said "Abenina is branding everyone and everything progressive as communist fronts."

NDF also accused the Armed Forces of the Philippines of being the same with that of the Marcos regime.

The NDF statement signed by Andora Sales, NDF Cebu liaison officer, did not specify the issues against Cuenco and the Marcos adherents, except to say that both are engaged in black propoganda against the revolutionary movement.

The Cebu CPP/NPA also admitted to having a "hit list of military and civilian targets."

"We do have a hit list of military and civilian targets," Tomas Magtanggol of the CPP/Cebu provincial committee said in another press statement issued to Cebu's leading daily, THE FREEMAN.

The list "includes fascist military officers and soldiers, FM (Ferdinand Marcos) loyalists and other politicians leading or who are deeply involved in counter insurgency campaigns and other reactionaries with blood debts to the people," Magtanggol said. He however did not identify those included in the hit list.

Magtanggol said the CPP and its military arm the NPA, "do not punish those whose political views differ from ours."

"We do not mete out death penalities to persons who are a conscious part of the NAFP [New Armed Forces of the Philippines] 's counter insurgency campaign," Magtanggol added.

NPA CAPTURES NEGROS OCCIDENTAL POWER SUBSTATION

HK041559 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 4 Aug 86 p 3

[By Leo Enriquez]

[Text] Cebu City -- A multi-million peso sub-station of the National Power Corp. (NPC) in Negros Occidental has fallen under the effective control of the communist New People's Army.

Reports reaching Cebu City said some 100 heavily armed rebels overran three weeks ago the two-hectare complex in Lepanto, Hinobaan town without resistance.

Sources said the capture of the P100-million complex has resulted in blackout in all southern Negros Occidental towns.

Informed sources said NPC employees including security personnel immediately abandoned the power station without firing a single shot. They added that the rebels have freely dismantled transformers and disconnected power lines in the complex.

Earlier, the rebels had also knocked down 20 electrical towers belonging to the NPC causing damage worth million of pesos.

Prominent residents in the Southern towns of Negros Occidental who refused to be identified have deplored the alleged inaction of the military command in that province.

They expressed disappointment over the alleged failure of Task Force Sugarlandia and RUC [Regional Unified Command] 6 to mount an operation to recapture the power station.

MELANESIANS WANT NEW CALEDONIA REFERRED TO UN

HK070632 Hong Kong AFP in English 0559 GMT 7 Aug 86

[By Ian Pedley]

[Text] Suva, Aug 7 (AFP) -- Vanuatu will lead a united Melanesian push for New Calendonian independence to be referred to the United Nations when South Pacific leaders begin a four-day meeting here Friday. A spokesman for Vanuatu's Prime Minister, Father Walter Lini, said New Caledonia would be the new Melanesian bloc's top priority at the 17th conference of the South Pacific Forum. The forum's three Melanesian nations -- Vanuatu, Papua New Guinea and the Solomon Islands -- agreed on the stand at a tripartite meeting in Papua New Guinea last month.

A six-member delegation from New Caledonia's Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front (FLNKS) was strongly lobbying delegates for support Thursday on the eve of the conference. FLNKS spokesman Yann Celene Uregei told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE that he expected this year's forum to finally refer the issue to the United Nation's decolonisation committee. "The forum had agreed to the Fabius Plan for New Caledonia," he said, referring to the referendum proposal of former French Prime Minister Laurent Fabius. "Now that is cancelled I think the forum will make a consensus decision to take New Caledonia to the United Nations. "I don't think any country will oppose," he said. Mr. Uregei said the FLNKS team had been heartened by the support they received during a meeting Wednesday with forum host Prime Minister Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara of Fiji.

In past years the forum's biggest member, Australia, has used its influence to resist moves to have New Caledonia re-listed with the United Nations. However Canberra officials have indicated that Australia's representative here, Deputy Prime Minister Lionel Bowen, will fall in line with the mood of the meeting.

The FLNKS and French Polynesia have again asked for offical observer status at the forum, but observers expect both bids to fail. French Polynesia President Gaston Flosse, who also is French Secretay of State for the South Pacific, visited Suva last week to put his case on the forum agenda.

The South Pacific Nuclear Free Zone Treaty will be the other area of contention at the forum. Ten of the 13 forum nations have signed the treaty to date, but only four of the necessary eight have ratified it. Observers said there was growing momentum among the smaller Pacific nations that the treaty does not go far enough. Papua New Guinea Foreign Minister Legu Vagi fuelled this feeling further by stating on his arrival here Thursday that his government would not ratify the treaty. With both Vanuatu and the Solomons having refused to sign the treaty at all, saying it is too weak, Mr Vagi's statement reinforces the Melanesian bloc's determination to pursue an independent policy line within the forum. Tonga is the odd member out in that is fears the treaty could endanger its defence.

The treaty commits signatories to renounce nuclear warfare and anything that would assist in its conduct, but does not prevent the passage of nuclear warships through the zone. One of the forum's main tasks here will be to finalize a set of protocols to the treaty which the nuclear powers will be asked to sign.

The forum also will be asked to look at a stronger set of protocols drawn up this week at a conference of the Fiji anti-Nuclear Group (FANG).

Suva was treated to the unusual sight of a midday demonstration Thursday when about 250 FANG delegates staged a peace march through the Fiji capital. A prominent left-wing Australian trade unionist, John Halfpenny, and aboriginal activist Shorty O'Neil were among the marchers. FANG will also present several resolutions on New Caledonia to the forum, including a call for all French settlers to be disarmed.

Heads of government of 10 of the 13 members will attend the forum New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange will be the last to arrive on Friday morning just prior to the official opening.

Lini on Forum Issues

HK071022 Hong Kong AFP in English 1005 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Suva, Fiji, Aug 7 (AFP) -- Vanatu's Prime Minister Father Walter Lini said here Thursday he could see no role for a regional peace-keeping force in New Caledonia, although he fears there could be bloodshed there. Father Lini, who is in Suva for the South Pacific Forum meeting, told a news conference he suupported moves for a regional force "But we are talking about a regional force, not necessarily for New Caledonia in its struggle for independence," he said. "We are talking about the ability and security of the region in the future. "With regard to New Caledonia I don't really see how we could involve ourselves there. "I know the French have already built up a very big force in New Caledonia and for us in Vanuatu it would be very difficult to talk about going in and fighting against all the weapons that we don't even have a single one of."

Father Lini said he believed the Pacific island nations appreciated the need for their own force, particularly as Australia and New Zealand seemed to be "a little apart from each other" following the split between Wellington and Washington over nuclear warships. However he would not force the issue at the forum, although he would support any moves to revive the plan, which was first put forward several years ago by former Papua New Guinea Prime Minister Sir Julius Chan.

Father Lini said he believed that independence for New Caledonia was the most pressing issue before the forum and attacked the French Government for delaying the Kanak people's right to determine their own future. He said that without independence the possibility of bloodshed and violence remained very real.

In a wide ranging news conference he expressed confidence that Irian Jaya would one day gain its independence from Indonesia. He said the Melanesian people of West Papua had the same right to independence as the Melanesians of Vanuatu. Father Lini also strongly defended his country's growing ties with the Soviet Union but said that no decision had yet been made on signing a fishing agreement with Moscow. Vanuatu was waiting for the outcome of fishing talks between the United States and the forum countries, he said.

Father Lini said he was disappointed the United States had not replied to Vanuatu's long-standing request for diplomatic relations, but said that this had nothing to do with his government's links with Libya. "I don't see any Pacific role for Libya," he said. Nor was Vanuatu's rapport with the Soviet Union an attempt to bring about a superpower balance in the South Pacific. "Some governments are overreacting," he said.

Vagi Opposes Nuclear-Free Treaty

BK070928 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0800 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Papua New Guinea has reaffirmed that it will not ratify the South Pacific Nuclear-Free Zone Treaty in its present form. This was made clear in Suva today by Papua New Guinea's foreign minister, Mr Legu Vagi, who will be representing his country at the South Pacific Forum starting tomorrow. Mr Vagi told a news conference that Papua New Guinea would push for a complete review of the treaty though he did not elaborate. He said the treaty would be useless unless it was ratified by the five nuclear powers -- the United States, the Soviet Union, France, Britain, and China. [passage omitted]

BOWEN ARRIVES IN FIJI FOR PACIFIC FORUM TALKS

[Text] Australia's deputy prime minister, Lionel Bowen, has reassured the Pacific Island nations of Australia's dedication to the region. In a statement issued after his arrival in Suva for the South Pacific Forum meeting, Mr Bowen said Australia would do its best to help economic development in the South Pacific.

He also said he expected the forum to finalize the three protocols to the South Pacific Nuclear-Free Zone treaty approved at its previous meeting in the Rarotonga, New Zealand. Mr Bowen said the meeting would call on the nuclear powers to sign the protocols. On the proposal for a South Pacific regional environmental program, Mr Bowen said he believed the forum countries were on the verge of a great achievement. He said the proposal would create the first international agreement under which countries with major nuclear industries would legally bind themselves not to dump radioactive waste in the seas and oceans of the region.

SOUTH PACIFIC FORUM OPENS IN FIJI 8 AUGUST

BK080824 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0500 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] The annual South Pacific Forum meeting has opened in Suva with an expression of concern over the region's economic and political vulnerability by the incoming chairman, Fiji's Prime Minister, Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara. Ratu Mara was handed chairmanship of the forum during a formal opening ceremony by the prime minsiter of the Cook Islands, Sir Tom Davis. The new chairman said currency fluctuation, protectionism, security matters, and superpower sparring all impinged on the Pacific nations -- often with greater harshness because of their small size.

Radio Australia's Pacific affairs correspondent, Trevor Watson, says that in an apparent reference to growing Soviet interest in the region, Ratu Mara said the vulnerability of the area could be dangerous not only for the islands, but also for other nations. The chairman said he had used every available opportunity to convey this message to the region's friends and would-be friends, but without success. Ratu Mara called on the 13 forum leaders to take a united regional view (?when) they consider the issues confronting them during the meeting.

[Text] Suva, Aug 8 (AFP) -- After a ritual kava ceremony, South Pacific leaders Friday began four days of discussions here with French and Soviet activities in the region high on their agenda.

New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange was quick to pave the way for the South Pacific forum to refer the question of New Caledonian independence to the United Nations Decolonisation Committee. But he said the forum -- which links 13 independent South Pacific nations -- could do little itself to change French thinking on New Caledonia. "This conference does not have within its power to resolve that at all," Mr. Lange told journalists after the official welcoming ceremony at which a bowl of kava (a soporific non-alcoholic beverage) was prepared by Fijians in traditional native garb. He said that because France had unilaterally changed its independence formula for New Caledonia, his government would for the first time go along with a move initiated by Vanuatu five years ago for U.N. intervention.

Mr. Lange described the reinscription of New Caledonia on the U.N. list as inevitable, but said it also would defuse the issue by switching the focus to the rhetoric of New York. "What in fact is needeed is a determination on the part of France and New Caledonia itself," he said. "It is always possible that blood can be shed but the apprehension of that does not necessarily clarify the mind."

Mr. Lange discounted moves by some forum members to set up a regional peace-keeping force which could move quickly into areas of insurrection or natural disasters. "We talk about that from time to time but we need to consider the questions of regional security," he said. "There is an imperative that would require an enormous amount of hierarchical interaction which is not necessarily the Pacific way."

Some island nations fear that New Zealand's split with Washington over nuclear warships will reduce the traditional ANZUS defence umbrella over the South Pacific.

Australian Deputy Prime Minister Lionel Bowen said Australia understood the concern in some quarters at the increasing Soviet presence in the Pacific which "doesn't help basin stability." But he said such concern would be groundless as long as this presence was only in the form of normal commercial transactions such as fishing agreements. "The concern would be if there was going to be some escalation of presence in terms of military nature through a buildup in the base at Cam Ranh Bay," Mr. Bowen said, referring to the Soviet naval staging base in Vietnam.

Mr. Bowen declined to speculate whether the Soviet Union would use Pacific fishing bases for more than catching tuna, but said anything more would be of concern. He said it was recognised that the superpowers wanted rights of passage through the Pacific. "That's understandable, but the escalation of presence by bases would be counterproductive."

Fiji's prime minister, Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara, said in his welcoming speech there was an upsurge of international interest in the Pacific region. "The time has come for us to reflect on where we are heading as a region -- a region on which increasing attention is being placed by those who strut the world's stage," he said. He called on forum members to take a more panoramic international view of their seascape. "Small is not only beautiful," he warned, in a reference to the tiny populations of some forum nations. "It is also often fragile and beautiful. Our vulnerability can be dangerous not just to ourselves but to others."

Forum To Refer Issue to UN

HK080500 Hong Kong AFP in English 0450 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Suva, Aug 8 (AFP) -- The South Pacific Forum voted unanimously here Friday to refer the question of New Caledonia's independence to the United Nations. The forum's spokesman, Solomon Islands Prime Minister Sir Peter Keniloria, said the 13-nation forum's move was motivated by what he termed the urgency of the issue. Sir Peter said a draft calling for the re-inscription of New Caledonia on the U.N. agenda was being prepared to be sent later Friday to the Committee of 24, the U.N. committee on decolonisation.

He said only the Cook Islands expressed reservations about the decision, saying it might be better to wait for the referendum France plans to hold in the contentious Pacific territory. But Cook Islands Premier Sir Thomas Davis later agreed to the joint forum decision, he said.

Sir Peter said Foreign Minister Legu Vagi of Papua New Guinea suggested that a representative group of forum members go to France to discuss the future of New Caledonia, but added that the proposal was not taken any further at this stage of the talks.

He said the Committee of 24 was due to meet on August 15, and the forum wanted New Caledonia to be on the U.N. body's agenda at that meeting.

Friday's decision came after a five-day battle spearheaded by Vanuatu to have the United Nations intervene in favour of the independence of its Pacific neighbor.

Sir Peter also said that no decision had been made so far on requests by New Caledonia's pro-independence FLNKS -- the Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front -- and French Polynesia for official observer status at the forum.

PARTICIPATION IN SDI 'VIRTUALLY CONFIRMED'

OW071221 Tokyo KYODO in English 1210 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Karuizawa, Nagano Pref., Aug 7 KYODO -- Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda said Thursday that the government is expected to make a formal decision on Japan's participation in the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) within this month. Gotoda told a seminar sponsored by the Japan Committee for Economic Development that the government will reach a conclusion on Japan's participation in the research phase of the space-based antimissile system, or "star wars' project, this month, or in early September at the latest. Gotoda suggested Japan's participation is similar to the "West German formula."

Private enterprises will take part in the research, but the government will not fund their participation while ensuring the return to Japan of technology developed by the Japanese in the course of the research. Key cabinet ministers "virtually confirmed" Japan's eventual participation in the SDI research on the basis of the "West German formula" at their third meeting on July 18, political sources said. The fourth meeting will be held Friday.

Nakasone Says No Decision Yet

OW080241 Tokyo KYODO in English 0225 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 8 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said Friday Japan has not reached a final conclusion on whether or not it will take part in research for U.S. President Ronald Reagan's "star wars" space-based antimissile project. "Studies and research are being made (concerning Japan's participation) but we have not arrived at a conclusion." Nakasone told reporters. He referred to a statement by Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda Thursday that he wants to see a final decision on the controversial defense project, officially known as the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), by early September.

Gotoda said he foresees a "positive" conclusion.

Nakasone said, "I don't know," in response to a question on when a final decision will be made.

Reagan has invited Japan and several other U.S. allies to take part in the research phase of the project. A governmental mission has recommended that Japan join the United States in pushing the project.

GOVERNMENT SOURCES ON ECONOMIC TALKS WITH U.S.

OW071321 Tokyo KYODO in English 1220 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 7 KYODO -- The U.S. Commerce Department has urged Japan to work out a concrete plan for increasing its imports and to set up a joint committee to monitor Japan's auto parts exports to the U.S., government sources said Thursday. The U.S. requests were made prior to MOSS (market-oriented, sector-selective) talks scheduled to be held in Tokyo beginning August 20. The subcabinet-level MOSS talks are expected to center on Japan's purchases of U.S. auto parts.

The sources told KYODO news service that the U.S. called on Japan to promptly draw up a concrete import plan with regard to items and quantities. The idea is believed to be based upon a U.S. request made last month by U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige in his meeting with International Trade and Industry Ministry [as received] Hajime Tamura. Baldrige urged Japan to come up with a "vision" for the expansion of its imports.

The requests also dwelt on the U.S. stand in its trade negotiations with Japan, the sources said. The U.S. is determined to look deep into Japan's nontariff barriers such as certification and inspection procedures for imports which are preventing U.S. companies from entering the Japanese market, according to the U.S. requests. The U.S. said multilateral negotiations will be needed in addition to bilateral consultations to remove such nontariff barriers.

The U.S. suspects that Japanese manufacturers are trying to block the use of U.S. auto parts in Japanese automobiles sold in the U.S. by establishing closer affiliations with Japanese auto parts makers. As part of efforts by the U.S. Government to increase U.S. auto parts exports to Japan, the requests said the U.S. Government will try hard to collect information about Japan's import procedures so as to help U.S. makers get easier access to the Japanese market.

Regarding the U.S. requests, officials of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) pointed to the need for U.S. manufacturers to make strenuous efforts to make their auto parts, originally made for large-sized cars, usable by Japanese producers which are mainly selling small cars. It is the U.S. side which has to come up with a concrete export plan as to products, prices, quality and delivery if they want to sell their products to Japan, the officials said.

DEFENSE AGENCY CHIEF KURIHARA TO VISIT U.S.

OW080445 Tokyo KYODO in English 0438 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 8 KYODO -- Yuko Kurihara, director general of the Defense Agency, will visit the United States for a week starting September 2 at the invitation of U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, a government spokesman said Friday. Kurihara will also meet Secretary of State George Shultz and the chairman of military panels in both houses of congress, he said. The Japanese defense chief will also meet Ronald Hays, commander of the U.S. Pacific Forces, in Hawaii on his way home.

TOKYO-KHABAROVSK HOTLINE TO START 15 AUG

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 8 KYODO -- A direct telephone line linking air traffic control centers in Tokyo and Khabarovsk will be operational in August, according to the transport ministry. Air controllers at control centers in Khabarovsk and Anchorage will be also able to communicate directly through a hotline that links Tokyo and Anchorage.

After the shooting down of a Korean airliner off Sakhalin by a Soviet missile in September 1983, Japan, the United States and the Soviet Union have been consulting on ways to ensure safety of civilian aircraft on the north Pacific route.

The three countries reached an agreement in November last year that the three control centers of Tokyo, Khabarovsk and Anchorage exchange information in cases were a civilian aircraft is in an emergency or has deviated from its course by establishing a direct speech circuit between Tokyo and Khabarovsk. On August 15, officials at the three control centers will exchange messages to mark inauguration of the hotline.

There are five air routes over the north Pacific and some 100 aircraft fly them daily.

TUTU URGES ACTION AGAINST SOUTH AFRICA

OW071335 Tokyo KYODO in English 1310 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 7 KYODO -- South African Bishop Desmond Tutu called on Japanese youth to change the "moral climate" and compel their government and businessmen to take action against South Africa's apartheid policy. Tutu told a near capacity audience in Hibiya public hall here that there can be no neutrality on the issue of apratheid, and reiterated his plea for the Japanese Government to take a "moral stance" by adopting economic sanctions against the Pretoria government.

"No one really wants sanctions," Tutu said in a press conference following the meeting, but they are the only means to change South Africa without violence. Tutu said efforts by U.S. President Ronald Reagan over the past six years to create change through constructive engagement, or negotiations, have done nothing. Tutu also said that he is worried that instability in southern Africa which was introduced by apratheid will lead to a "far more serious cold war in the region."

In the lively address at the public hall interspersed with allegorical stories and humor, Tutu said that were he a Japanese, he would consider it a "horrible insult" to be treated as an honorary white. The audience, which included ambassadors from 24 African nations, gave Tutu a standing ovation.

Leah Tutu in a brief speech following her husband's talk made an appeal to the women of Japan to protest against governments that do not allow women the right to live with their family. She was referring to women whose husbands have been taken prisoner for making statements like "I hate apartheid."

The meeting, Tutu's first public appearance in Tokyo, was hastily organized earlier this week by the "Welcome Committee for Bishop Tutu" consisting of 10 organizations including human rights, and religious groups -- under the sponsorship of ASAHI SHIMBUN, one of Japan's major dailies.

Tutu has been in Japan since last Saturday to attend the Hiroshima Peace Summit that ended Wednesday. He leaves this week for a trip to China.

WHITE PAPER URGES UPGRADE IN MILITARY CAPABILITY

OW080143 Tokyo KYODO in English 0134 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 8 KYODO -- The government said Friday Japan may upgrade its military capability beyond the level projected in the current defense policy to cope with what it calls "persistent" Soviet military buildup in the Far East region.

The defense policy was laid out in this year's defense white paper, which was endorsed by the Cabinet of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone Friday. The white paper, authored by the Defense Agency, gives the government's perception of the global and regional military realities and sets forth the nation's basic defense policy.

Strategically, the north Pacific region is "a complicated situation' because it involves "military confrontation not only between the United States and the Soviet Union, but also between China and the Soviet Union," a summary of the 383-page report said. The paper also said Japan has a stake in peace and stability in the Korean peninsula, which is "crucial for peace and stability in the entire East Asian region, including Japan."

As authors of the white paper see it, military tension is still a reality in the Korean peninsula despite moves toward dialogue between North and South Korea.

The Soviet Union is "trying to expand its sphere of influence, not only to neighboring nations but also to various other areas of the world," the paper said. Despite Soviet appeals for detente, "no change has yet been seen in the trends of the Soviet Union's increase of its military forces" in the Far East, it said.

According to Defense Agency figures, the Soviet buildup in the Far East has been most significant in strategic intermedium-range nuclear forces, with Japan within their striking range. The Soviets now have "more than" 162 SS-20 nuclear-armed missiles and 85 TU-22 strategic Backfire bombers deployed in the Far East, the white paper said, noting that both forces were nonexistent 10 years ago.

The Soviet ground forces in the Far East are now 370,000-man strong, compared to 300,000 in 1976, and the Soviet Pacific Fleet has increased from a 755-vessel force in 1976 to 840 vessels in 1986.

The Soviet Far East Air Force has also increased from 2,030 combat aircraft in 1976 to 2,390 now, the paper said.

The Soviet militlary muscle poses a "latent threat to Japan (which) has increased owing to the remarkable buildup of Soviet forces in the Far East" the paper said. While noting that the level of Japan's military spending -- the 10th largest in the world -- is "exclusively defense-oriented," the paper put it on record that Japan may boost its defense capability beyond the upper limit set in the 1976 guideline.

The government can amend guidelines setting forth the equipment structure of Japan's Self-Defense Forces if the government decided there is a change in "trends of military and technological standards" of other nations, the paper said. The guideline, set in the form of an "attached table" of the 1976 defense outline, put the upper limit of Japan's ground forces at 180,000 troops, 60 surface antisubmarine warships and 430 combat aircraft. The government approved a five-year 18.4 trillion yen defense buildup program last September, which it said was aimed at achieving the targets projected in the 1976 guideline.

In view of Japan's no-war constitution, the white paper found it necesssary to defend the country's "right of self-defense as a sovereign nation." "So long as this right of self-defense is not denied, the government holds the view that the constitution does not forbid maintaining the minimum level of armed strength necessary to exercise the right of self-defense," it said.

Japan's defense policy is to maintain military capability for self-defense to fight off "a limited and small-scale" invasion while relying on security arrangements with the United States in the case of a full-scale invasion, the paper said in recapping the 1976 defense policy.

Japan currently spends 3.3 trillion yen for national defense a year, but in terms of GNP, the national budget and per capita outlays, the Japanese defense expenditures are "considerably lower" than the levels in the United States and Europe, the paper said.

CASTRO: CUBA WILL BOYCOTT OLYMPICS IF NO COHOSTING

SK072340 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0700 GMT 6 Aug 86

['Text' of interview in Cuba with Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, first secretary of the Cuban Communist Party [CPC] Central Committee, president of the Council of State, and president of the Council of Ministers of Cuba by NODONG SINMUN delegation; date not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] Esteemed Comrade First Secretary Fidel Castro Ruz, this year marks the 30th anniversary of the historic landing of the "Granma," which took place under your direct command. It is also a significant year in which the third congress of the CPC Central Committee was held successfully. In connection with the fraternal Cuban people's struggle to more brilliantly mark this year, what would you tell us?

[Castro] This is what I can tell you. The year 1986 in which the third congress of our party was held and which marks the 30th anniversaries of the expedition of the "Granma" and the start of the armed struggle at Sierra Maestra is without doubt an especially important year in the history of the Cuban revolution.

This does not indicate only the tasks that we have already carried out this year or should carry out in the upcoming months of this year. What I am indicating here implies, first of all, the significance of the conception and determination that we are now making, the adjustment of strategies that we have begun in socialist construction, and the profound course to perfect and renovate our society.

Such a small revolutionary country as Cuba, which is struggling to develop under such difficult conditions as it is under the very nose of the strongest and the most aggressive imperialist country and thousands of kilometers away from its main allies, should build a solid economy, have an invincible defense capacity, and temper its people to be more conscious, more civilized, and more united, to believe in their own strength; in other words, to be a more communistic people.

In this area, we have done a lot of work. Over the past 27 years we have registered great successes. On this basis, we are setting forth the goal to achieve the greatest success by our own efforts in all fields of society, including production.

As in many countries of the Third World, Cuba has been influenced to some extent by the serious economic crisis of the capitalist countries. This demands that we further enhance effectiveness and seek economization.

We have established the foundation for industry, agriculture, and stock breeding. Therefore, we should utilize this foundation in a most ideal and reasonable manner. Along with this, we have also pushed ahead with very broad and vast public health and education plans.

Our revolutionary armed forces and people are carrying out outstanding tasks in building national defense, as well. We have a mature, experienced, and politically dignified party. The people's support for the revolution is strong and firm.

We have various mass organizations, including strong youth organizations and working people's organizations.

In a nutshell, today as we celebrate the 30th anniversary of the expedition of the "Granma," our revolution greets the period of upswing, the period of overcoming shortcomings and obstacles, and the active and decisive stage of progress in a higher stage. This is further proof that a genuine revolution can never be depressed but will always gain new strength from continued innovation.

[Question]: It has become a trend that the dictatorial regimes of the world under the protection of the United States are being toppled. The examples of this are the collapse of the Duvalier dictatorial regime in Haiti and the Marcos dictatorial regime in the Philippines. World public opinion indicates that the collapse of these dictatorial regimes will be followed by those of Chon Tu-hwan of South Korea and Pinochet of Chile, the puppets of the United States. What is your view on this?

[Castro]: The present situation is very unfavorable to the pro-U.S. dictatorial regimes. I think the prospect of these regimes will not be rectified in the future, either. Meanwhile, what arouses curiosity is that, embarrassed by such a trend, the Reagan government tries as ever to make it appear as if it were playing the role of a protector and guarantor of democratic changes. This is the height of shamelessness. Frankly speaking, the United States is, in many cases, the direct organizer and supporter of these dictatorial regimes.

The United States was direct organizer and supporter of the dictatorial regime in the Philippines and the military repressive regimes of Uruguay and Argentina, as well. It was also the direct organizer and supporter of the brazen-faced and shameless Duvalier regime in Haiti. The details of the events which took place in Haiti, where the people are suffering under extreme poverty, are very evident.

When the massive struggle was intensified in Haiti, the United States interfered in its domestic affairs in a bid to rescue the Haitian dictator and his conspirators, and then fabricated a regime which protects its interests and does not hesitate to kill students and working people. In other words, Reagan is acting as the gendarme of the counterrevolution. His aim is to prevent genuine revolutions from taking place in capitalist countries as a result of the serious economic crisis in these countries.

The difficult economic situation which can no longer be endured, the heavy burdens of foreign debts, and the people's struggle caused the fascist dictators to be expelled from the seats of power.

Therefore, I firmly believe that the United States will never be able to block serious changes which the masses demand. Reagan will continuously scheme and employ various tricks to replace his puppets when they are driven into a situation in which they are unable to hold on any longer. However, it will be impossible for Reagan to save the bloodthirsty South Korean and Chilean fascist regimes that have been driven into the depths of ruin. This is my firm faith.

[Question]: It has been reported that the participants in the summit conference of the seven Western industrial countries held in Tokyo, Japan some time ago agreed to support the simultaneous entry of North and South Korea into the United Nations and to help Seoul host the 1988 Olympic Games. What is your assessment of such results of the Tokyo summit conference?

[Castro]: I believe that the main purpose of the agreement at the conference is to consecrate the division of the Korean peninsula and the two Koreas theory and to take away the right of the DPRK to cohost the forthcoming Olympic Games with South Korea. This is clear patronage for the Seoul authorities.

I believe that we cannot expect anything from that conference, which was characterized by anticommunism, by support for the U.S. aggression against Libya, and by the arrogant rejection of the urgent economic demands of the developing countries. I also want to add that the moves of world public opinion supporting the cohosting of the Olympic games in Pyongyang and Seoul have been strengthened. These moves cannot be ignored and will be further strengthened in the future. Numerous innocent people on all continents firmly believe that if this problem is not resolved fairly, the Olympic movement will enter a serious crisis. There is no fair reason to oppose the proposal for cohosting the Olympics. Leaders of the international Olympic movement should realize such a situation and bear full responsibility for this.

As is known, there was a small concession to hold some of the games in Pyongyang. In my opinion, it is insufficient. Cuba's stand is that the Olympic Games should be held in a dignified and grand manner in the two cities in conformity with the demands of the precedents and also fairly on an equal level. The firm stand of our country is to not participate in the Olympic games if the games are not cohosted.

[Question]: Today, the Reagan administration is perpetrating, without hesitation, high-handed terrorism, openly infringing upon the sovereignty of progressive countries that it does not like. What is your opinion concerning the consequences of such an adventurous act by the U.S. imperialists in international relations?

[Castro]: In the past I have mentioned the barbarous U.S. air attack against Libya, which the Tokyo Summit supported. I cannot even imagine as brutal an act of terrorism against a country as the official [kongsikchokin] armed forces of a big power being mobilized without a declaration of war to kill the leader of another country. I have never witnessed such an example in the past.

However, this is not the first time the Reagan administration has committed such an act. The United States waged a dirty criminal war in Central America against the Nicaraguan revolution and people. Today, mankind has come to know the surprising fact that the U.S. House has approved a bill appropriating an additional $100 million in aid that Reagan had submitted to assist the counterrevolutuonary rebels in Nicaragua. I think that such an agreement, in other words such a dirty decision, can be made in broad daylight only amid the exclusive and high-handed atmosphere created by Yankee propaganda.

The rascals are extensively creating social public opinion at home and abroad. Precisely in such a way, they are concealing the U.S. intervention in El Salvador. Precisely in such a way, the U.S. imperialists have tried to justify their continued maneuvers against the DPRK since the first day of ther occupation of South Korea. Precisely in such a way, the rascals have glossed over the shameful U.S. role in maintaining the racist regime in South Africa and in helping it continue the military occupation of Namibia and continue the maneuvers of aggression against adjacent countries. Cuba is also a target of the rascals' continued threats and hostile action.

Reagan's policy toward progressive countries poses a grave threat to world peace and security, for example his policies of military superiority over socialist countries and the arms race with them, and his [word indistinct] policy.

It is very important to unceasingly expose and condemn such facts. However, more decisive than anything else is our firm stand, unity, and determination not to yield to any blackmail. These things can prevent the aforementioned threat.

As our brothers in the DPRK know, through our experience we have also realized that imperialism lowers its head only before those people who do not renounce their principles and who are firmly determined to struggle resolutely.

[Question] The friendly and cooperative relations between the parties, countries, and peoples of Korea and Cuba have opened a new chapter with your visit to our country last March and your historic meeting with the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. What do you think about the future in this field?

[Castro] The relations between Cuba and the DPRK have always been close and fraternal and are undoubtedly developing excellently today, too. Only sincere friendship exists between the parties, governments, and peoples of our two countries. The parties, governments, and peoples of our two countries are helping and cooperating with each other in all possible fields. They are expressing solidarity with each other. In particular, the firm will to work together, shoulder-to-shoulder, to further enrich the content of this solidarity is growing ever stronger between the parties, governments, and peoples of our two countries.

I firmly believe that the relations between Cuba and the DPRK will be a genuine model of relations between socialist countries, revolutionary countries. Therefore, I wish you a good future. I also firmly believe that the development of these ties will contribute not only to the interests of the people of our two countries, but also to the interests of the revolutionary movement of the people of the world.

[Question] Esteemed Comrade First Secretary, while visiting your country we have realized that the friendship the fraternal Cuban people feel toward the Korean people is very warm. Do you have any statement you want to deliver to the Korean people through NODONG SINMUN?

[Castro] It has been only a few months since we visited the DPRK. Our hearts were moved by the diligence, spirit of solidarity, and discipline of the heroic Korean people. We returned home, carrying with us unforgettable impressions we got when we met the heroic Korean people. At that time, we wished to see more of the brilliant changes that, despite the heavy destruction of the country caused by the war, the Korean people have registered for some 30 years with their own hands and particularly with the strength of their own efforts and wisdom.

In particular, we returned home carrying with us the special impression of our meeting with dear comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of the Korean people. I explained to comrades of the leadership of our party how wise the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song is, what a great wealth of experience he has. Having known such great people and such a greast leader, it was not difficult for us to understand all the things that we saw there.

Therefore, availing myself of this opportunity given me by NODONG SINMUN, I congratulate the success gained by the fraternal Korean people and their vigorous advance. I express my firm conviction that the Korean people will continue to register new successes and victories under the unswerving leadership of the WPK and the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

CHON TU-HWAN REPRESSION OF STUDENTS DENOUNCED

'Maniac' Chon 'Cracking Down'

SK070509 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0501 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 7 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today in a commentary titled "Frenzy of Dictator" flays the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique for cracking down upon patriotic students.

The author of the commentary recalls that on August 4 the puppet Seoul city police bureau instructed the police stations under it to round up members of the "Committee of the Anti-U.S. Struggle for Independence and the Anti-Facist Struggle for Democracy" (Chamintu) and the "Committee of the Struggle Against Imperialism, Military and Fascism and for the Nation and Democracy" (Minmintu) and all others involved in demonstrations. Earlier, the puppet security headquarters issued a "special arrest order" to round up the backstage forces of the "Inchon Turmoil" now on the "want list", arrested some time ago student of Seoul University engineering college Choe Yong-hwan, chairman of the Central Committee of "Chamintu", and the fascist hangmen searched the vacant campus during the vacation on the pretext of searching "persons on the want list" and tyrannized over passers-by at check points, indiscriminately checking them up, the commentary notes, and says:

As for students whom the puppet clique is crying for rounding up immediately, they are not criminals. Even according to South Korean publications, they struggled for peace against U.S. imperialism, war and nuclear weapons and for democracy against fascism. The puppets try in vain to frighten students at the point of the bayonet and thus break their fighting spirit and bring the crisis of their power under control. Although the fascist maniacs can cast a few students into prison, they will be unable to call a halt to the ever rising powerful tide of independence against U.S. imperialism and of democracy against fascism.

'Purification Teams' Formed

[NODONG SINMUN 8 August commentary: "Dismaying Nation-Selling Traitor"]

[Text] According to a South Korean radio, the so-called puppet minister of culture and information screamed that ideological contamination caused by radical leftist students was serious, and proclaimed that the so-called four-member purification teams and reporting centers would be established in the Ministry of Culture and Information and in all news media organizations in order to prevent ideological contamination. This is another suppressive measure designed to thwart the mass consciousness-raising movement by the progressive youths and students.

Recently, the South Korean youths and students have been actively carrying out the movement to arm the masses with the spirit of independence in various ways, including one of sending letters to youths, children, and residents. This is based on their awareness of the truth of social development and their leading roles. Thus, this is something fortunate.

Under the circumstances in which the U.S. wretches have occupied South Korea for more than 40 years, acted as masters, and spread the ideas of worshipping the United States and being submissive to it -- and in which the puppets have spread ideas of flunkeyism -- planting the spirit of national independence among the residents is a truly patriotic act. The increased puppets' renewed suppression over the consciousness-raising movement discloses their dirty nature as nation-selling traitors.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring has established undisguised investigation and surveillance networks in all areas of South Korea. It has arrested, imprisoned, tried, and punished those youths and students who had sent consciousness-raising letters. It has now begun establishing so-called purification teams. Judging from this, it seems that the wretches have been extremely astounded by the fact that the people are arming themselves with the spirit of independence and by the growing anti-U.S. and antipuppet struggle.

However, the puppets cannot thwart the consciousness-raising movement of the youths and students with any suppressive measure. The consciousness-raising movement is continuing even during the vacation period. It seems that it will be further intensified. It has been unable to block the ideological dissemination even with guns and swords. Now, how can they possibly block it by forming the so-called purification teams with several puppet stooges? The puppets' suppression will only arouse indignation among the youths and students and will further strengthen their determination to intensify the consciousness-raising movement.

CPRF STATEMENT ON ROK TOLERANCE OF U.S. ABUSES

[Information No. 351 of the Secretariat of the CPRF; issued 7 August 86]

[Text] On 4 August, answering a written question raised by National Assemblymen belonging to the opposition New Korea Democratic Party, the South Korean puppets clarified the government's stand on the question of anti-U.S. sentiment and on the presence of U.S. forces in South Korea. The South Korean puppets said their interests basically agree with those of the United States. They then engaged in sophistry, saying that if interests do not partially coincide, it is desirable for one to strive to resolve questions on furthering the interests of both sides through diplomatic activities.

The puppet clique raved that it has exercised sovereignty in relations with the United States, saying it has assumed jurisdiction in more than 100 cases out of the more than 15,000 crimes committed by the U.S. forces occupying South Korea during the past 10 years, and that it is an international custom not to receive fees from the United States for military abuses. This is a cunning trick designed to justify the acts of according privilege to the U.S. imperialists and of serving them as masters. It is also a wicked plot to suppress the offensive of the opposition party and the anti-U.S. sentiment of the people.

According to materials released by the puppet clique, after they revised the materials in their own favor, it has exercised jurisdiction over only 100 of the crimes committed by the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces during the past 10 years. Nevertheless, the puppet clique behaves as if it exercises sovereignty. This is ludicrous.

As for fees for the use of military bases, it is an international custom to pay rental fees for military bases in foreign countries. Nevertheless, the puppet clique raved that it is an international custom not to pay rental fees. This is a piratic act of saying that black is white. That is the truth of the matter.

Nevertheless, answering questions from national assemblymen from the opposition party, the South Korean puppets said they have maintained their relations with the United States based on the spirit of mutual interest and cooperation. This is outrageous.

It is the U.S. imperialists who have described the South Korean people as lemmings. It is the U.S. imperialist masters who, distrusting the stooge they choose, dragged a dog into the office of the puppet foreign minister to detect explosives.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors have exercised extraterritorial rights in South Korea. They have committed all sorts of crimes, such as murder, robbery, and violence. On 5 March, U.S. Army soldiers swooped down upon a South Korean woman like a pack of wolves and killed her after raping her one after another. This is an example of their criminal acts.

Instead of viewing these American carnivores as criminals, traitor Chon Tu-hwan blocked the village and took the husband of the woman away, thus basely maneuvering to prevent the truth of the incident from being exposed. The U.S. Embassy in Seoul patronized the murderous culprits by issuing a statement denying the truth of the incident.

This is the truth. Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique has boisterously babbled about the spirit of mutual interest and cooperation, revealing that the rascals are the top-class stooges of the U.S. imperialists and the toadyist traitors of the century, trying to leave the people as colonial slaves of the U.S. imperialists forever.

As long as the U.S. imperialists and a minority of pro-U.S. toadyist traitors nestle in South Korea, the spirit of mutual interest and cooperation will never be displayed. Only when the South Korean people banish the U.S. imperialist aggressors and only when they overthrow traitors like traitor Chon Tu-hwan can they rise above being colonial slaves.

JAPAN'S DEFENSE PLAN TO BLOCK 3 STRAITS DENOUNCED

[Text] Pyongyang August 7 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today, commenting on the fact that the "Defense Agency" and "Ground Force Staff Headquarters" of Japan started drawing up a concrete operational plan to blockade the three straits in the Far East including the Korean Strait, says: This is a criminal act jeopardizing peace in Korea, Japan and the rest of Asia. The author of the commentary says that the study of operations for strait blockade has so far been undertaken chiefly by the "Maritime Force Staff Headquarters" at the "Self-Defense Forces" of Japan. But this time the "ground force staff headquarters" started a detailed study of the operations for strait blockade. This is a new move in the war preparations of the Japanese militarists. This means that the Japanese reactionaries plan to blockade straits through coordinate operations of units under different arms of the "self-defense forces" "in case of emergency, the commentary notes, and stresses:

They think only when they rapidly blockade the three straits and establish control over them "in case of emergency" can they secure strategic predominance in an aggressive war against Korea and other Asian socialist countries and win "victory" in an "allout surprise offensive."

The U.S. and Japanese reactionaries, therefore, are stepping up the practical and detailed operational study and preparations in every way for blockading the straits within the framework of the U.S.-Japan-South Korea triangular military alliance system to meet the demand of the Far Eastern strategy which has been jointly drawn up by them.

The commentary stresses that the Japanese authorities must give up their attempt to set foot of aggression in the straits, following the U.S. imperialists.

KANG SONG-SAN CONSOLES ZHAO ZIYANG ON FLOODING

SK070442 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0434 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 7 (KCNA) -- Kang Son-san, premier of the administration council, sent a message of sympathy to Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council of China.

The message extended deep consolation and sympathy to the premier, the government of the People's Republic of China and the people of the affected area for the flood damages caused by a downpour and heavy rain in Jilin Province, China. It expressed the belief that the damages will be recovered in a short period and the life of the people in the affected area stabilized under the leadership of the government and the Communist Party of China.

COLLECTIVE LEADERSHIP IN PARTY COMMITTEES STRESSED

SK052236 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1458 GMT 5 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 5 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today prints a signed article titled "collective leadership is a basic mode of the activities of a party committee", which says in part:

Our party defined collective leadership as a basic mode of the activities of a party committee and successfully carried it into practice and thereby enhanced the militant function and role of party organizations to thoroughly establish the system of the party's leadership and ensure with credit its guidance of the revolution and construction.

In his historical lecture "Historical Experience of Building the Workers' Party of Korea", the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, basing himself on the practical experience of building our party, taught that the collective leadership of the party committee must be intensified in order to enhance the function and role of party organisations.

The collective leadership of the party committee means that the party committee discusses and decides measures to implement the teachings of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and their embodiment -- the party lines and policies, decisions and instructions -- with the active participation of its members in reliance upon the will and ingenuity of the broad masses and organizes the party membership and the working people for their implementation.

The reason why the collective leadership is a basic mode of the activities of the party committee is that it is a scientific and revolutionary method of leadership which applies the revolutionary mass line. The collective leadership of the party committee is an embodiment of the revolutionary mass line in the party activities, which makes it possible to adopt correct measures and ways for implementation by putting together the masses' opinions and lead the masses to successfully carry out the revolutionary tasks by enlisting their revolutionary enthusiasm and creative ingenuity. Another reason is that it is a mode of activities suited to the mission of the party committee, an organ of collective leadership.

The collective leadership of the party committee makes it possible to liquidate subjectivism and arbitrary judgment of an individual and correctly solve problems in reliance upon the creative will of broad masses of party members and the members of the party committee. This makes it possible to overcome subjectivism and formalism and ensure chuche character and scientific nature in the party's leadership.

Our party always hold fast to the collective leadership as a basic mode of the activities of the party committee and thus has become a mighty party which dynamically pushes ahead the revolutionary struggle and the construction work, rooted deep among the masses.

NKDP MP STRIKES DJP CHAIRMAN DURING HEARING

HK080558 Hong Kong AFP in English 0543 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 8 (AFP) -- An opposition M.P. threw a jacket reeking of tear gas at the chairman of a parliamentary committee here Thursday bringing the committee's proceedings to a chaotic close, parliamentary sources said.

The M.P., Kim Dong-joo [name as received] tossed the jacket during a session of the Home Affairs Committee in an apparent protest against the police's use of tear gas to suppress anti-government demonstrations. Opposition floor leader Kim Tong-yong confirmed the occurrence, describing it as a "minor incident." Press reports said the jacket had been worn by Yang Soon-jik [name as received], vice-president of Mr. Kim Dong-joo's party, the New Korea Democratic Party.

Mr. Kim Dong-joo, 41, took it from a brief case during the committee session to show it to the national police chief and the home minister and explain how badly Mr. Yang had been tear-gassed by police during an anti-government demostration here four weeks ago. When the committee's chairman Kwon Jung-dal [name as received] warned Mr. Kim Don-joo about bringing unauthorised material into the committee room, the opposition M.P. threw the garment at the chairman, the reports said. Mr. Kwon was caught up in a bout of sneezing and was unable to open his eyes, the reports said, adding that he was forced to close the session amidst pandemonium.

The ruling majority was Friday studying disciplinary action against Mr. Kim Dong-joo for his "inadmissible violent act in parliament" while Mr. Kim Dong-yong apoligized to his majority counterpart, Lee Sei-kee [name as received]. Mr. Kim Dong-yong said that he did not believe the ruling party would make a big issue out of what he described as "a minor incident." Ruling party spokesman Sim Myong-po told newsmen that the opposition party should make it clear that its M.P.'s will not resort to any such "violence" in parliament in the future.

In the demonstration last month, Mr. Yang was reportedly hit by a tear-gas bomb thrown by police. The demonstration was mounted by opposition and dissident groups to protest alleged sexual harassment of a woman dissident by police interrogators. This alleged harrassment has become a hot domestic issue.

CRACKDOWN PLANNED ON SEXUAL TORTURE RUMORS

SK080122 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 8 Aug 86 p 1

[Text] Minister of Home Affairs Chong Sok-mo warned yesterday the government plans to crack down on the fabrication and circulation of rumors concerning the so-called Puchon Police Station incident.

Chong said some dissident organizations are seeking to undermine popular trust in the government by distributing hundreds of thousands of copies of leaflets containing "groundless" rumors concerning the incident.

The minister was testifying before the National Assembly Home Affairs Committee on the incident in which a detained female activist was allegedly sexually harassed by a police investigator.

The committee was one of the four Assembly standing committees that convened to handle outstanding issues including the alleged sexual assault, Korea-U.S. trade negotiations and the fire in the independence hall. The three others were the Legislative-Judiciary, Education-Information and Finance committees.

In response to lawmakers' questions, Chong said, "It is estimated that a total of 39 different kinds of printed materials concerning the Puchon Police Station incident are circulating. The contents of the materials are falsely fabricated." The police are conducting a secret investigation of the suspected writers and distributors of the printed materials, he said. The minister said false rumors concerning the incident are dying out as a result of the prosecution's "objective probe."

Lawmakers of rival parties showed marked gaps in perceiving the allegations that Miss Kwon In-suk was sexually abused by a police officer Mun Kwi-tong during the interrogation. Committee members of the ruling Democratic Justice Party made apparent attempts to describe Kwon as an ideologically-oriented activist, who used sex as a means of struggle. Members of the opposition New Korea Democratic Party, however, demanded to know why the government refused to believe Kwon's consistent assertion. They proposed rival parties form a joint select team to look into the incident.

Minister Chong said it is true that the police investigator in question resorted to violence during interrogation and that he was dismissed to show that no violence should be allowed in criminal investigation. DJP lawmakers said the government violated the principle of legal equity in firing Mun for a simple violence. The minister said, "Miss Kwon's allegation of sexual mockery proved to be groundless. She has a history of employing any method and means to achieve the purpose of her struggle." He said it is not necessary to form a select committee because the prosecution unveiled "all the facts about the incident."

Meanwhile, the police station incident continued to dominate discussions at the Legislative-Judiciary Committee for the third consecutive day. Rep. Yi Taek-ton of the NKDP said Mun, who allegedly tormented Kwon, should be indicted. "If Kwon and Mun stand trial, the court will determine which of the two is true," Yi said. The opposition lawmaker said the police officer recently made an unsuccessful attempt to leave for the United States.

DJP CHAIRMAN DISCUSSES REVISION OF CONSTITUTION

SK070938 Seoul YONHAP in English 0919 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 7 (YONHAP) -- No Tae-u, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP), said Thursday that his party's goal in revising the Constitution is to move closer to the ideals of liberty, justice, and well-being on the foundation of national democratic capabilities. "It would be a constitutional system based on a genuine liberal democratic ideals that would guarantee stability nd prosperity," he added.

No went on to say that the time has come to put an end to the vicious cycle of prolonged rule and the struggle against the system that filled the nation's 40-year constitutional history by guaranteeing the maximum right of the people to freely choose their government. He said that he has high appraisal for the Korean people's democratic capabilities and that the conditions for expanding basic human rights and disintegration of power already exist in Korean society.

"The constitutional amendment should be achieved through national consensus and proper legal procedures and at a level that could be accepted by a majority of the people," he said. "There should neither be a 'destruction of the Constitution' nor a halt in the constitutional rule." The DJP chairman said that the procedure of amending the Constitution is as important as the contents of the Constitution.

DISSIDENT PROFESSORS EXCLUDED FROM RESEARCH GRANTS

SK080102 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 8 Aug 86 p 8

[Text] The Education Ministry yesterday said measures recently taken by university authorities against dissident activist professors regarding promoting and obtaining government research grants were "proper actions" made at the discretion of presidents of the respective universities. In its report to the National Assembly, the ministry noted that some universities had withheld proposed research grants from professors, calling for their self-restraint in political activism. A total of 908 professors of 38 universities declared their political views on current situations, starting at Korea University, with 28 signatories on March 28 this year.

GNP GAP BETWEEN ROK, DPRK 'EXPECTED TO WIDEN'

SK070843 Seoul YONHAP in English 0827 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 7 (YONHAP] -- South Korea's gross national product (GNP) of 81.1 billion U.S. dollars in 1984 was 5.5 times that of North Korea, the National Unification Board reported Thursday. In addition, South Korea's per capita GNP reached 1,999 dollars in 1984, compared with 762 dollars in North Korea. An official at the Unification Board said that the GNP gap is expected to widen in the future.

In 1984, South Korea's economy grew at an average annual rate of 7.5 percent, compared with 3.9 percent in North Korea, according to Unification Board statistics.

South Korea's national budget totaled 13,740 million dollars, representing 16.9 percent of its GNP in 1984, while that of North Korea amounted to 11,080 million dollars, accounting for 75.3 percent of its GNP. In the cited year, Seoul spent 4,360 million dollars on military expenditures (5.4 percent of its GNP), and Pyongyang spent 3,420 million dollars (23.3 percent). As a result, South Korea's per capita military expenditure was 107 dollars in 1984, compared with 177 dollars in North Korea, according to the board.

Seoul's two-way trade volume of 59,870 million dollars was 21.9 times that of North Korea, which totaled 2,730 million dollars.

PRACHEACHON HAILS GORBACHEV PEACE INITIATIVES

BK070912 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 2300 GMT 6 Aug 86

[PRACHEACHON Editorial: "Wave the Flag of Praise and Unreservedly Support the new Peace Initiatives and Proposals of the Soviet Union" -- date not given]

[Text] For the past few years, on the basis of the Leninist foreign policy of peace, and correctly reflecting the essence of socialism permeated with humanitarianism, attachment to peace, and internationalist solidarity against all warmongering policies of imperialism and against oppression and exploitation of nations fighting for independence, freedom and social progress, the Soviet Union has put forward one important peace initiative and proposal after another. These constructive, reasonable, and well-founded initiatives and proposals show the USSR's high sense of responsibility vis-a-vis the destiny of mankind and life on earth.

Since the beginning of 1986, which the United Nations has declared the International Year of Peace, Comrade Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, has successively put forward proposals, respectively on 15 January, 23 April, and 12 June, with the view of completely eliminating nuclear arms by the year 2000, scrapping the development of intermediate-range weapons in Europe, reducing the number of missiles, unilaterally suspending nuclear weapons tests, extending the testing moratorium and making Southeast Asia a zone of peace, security, and cooperation.

On 28 July, at the ceremony conferring the Lenin medal on Vladivostok, on behalf of the party, government, and people of the Soviet Union, Comrade General Secretary Gorbachev once again put forward proposals showing the just stand full of goodwill and responsibility regarding all simmering international issues, especially in Asia and the Pacific. The Vladivostok statement called for an end to the arms race, the cessation of nuclear arms tests, movement toward the elimination of nuclear arms, and an end to the deployment of medium-range weapons in Europe, the reconsideration of the proposal for a conference of Asian and Pacific countries, the enhancement of relations with socialist countries in Asia, preparation for expansion of relations with other Asian countries, and a number of other issues.

The Vladivostok statement, like the other major peace intiatives, enjoys the most resounding and warmest support of public opinion in the region and the rest of the world. The Soviet Union's new constructive initiatives fully accord with the earnest aspirations of the people in the world who cherish peace and justice. These proposals are aimed at eliminating the grave danger posed by nuclear weapons and preserving life on our planet.

Since 6 August 1985 the Soviet Union has on four occasions declared a unilateral moratorium or its extension on nuclear arms tests. It has strictly kept its promise and has appealed to the United States and other nuclear arms producing countries to do likewise in order to advance toward completely eliminating such weapons.

All these new initiatives and proposals of the Soviet Union once again reflect the correct foreign policy of peace advocated by the Soviet Union which is relentlessly striving for a nuclear-free world, for peace and the security of mankind, and for the expansion of international cooperation to ensure safety in the use of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes and in the interests of mankind.

By contrast, the United States has displayed a completely different attitude. So far, it has consistently avoided all the constructive peace proposals of the Soviet UNion and has instead embarked even more deeply upon the path of the arms race and militarization of outer space in its scheme to sabotage the existing strategic military balance and to create tension in the world. The U.S. stubbornness in continuing nuclear arms tests has further heightened the great danger for all mankind. People of good judgment clearly realized that the suspension of all nuclear arms tests is the first and most necessary step toward checking the arms race, gradual arms reduction, and the elimination of all types of mass destruction weapons.

In the face of the stubborn attitude of the United States which is forcefully implementing its policy of confrontation against the revolutionary forces and its arms race and militarization of outer space, the Soviet Union continues resolutely and unswervingly to advocate and put forward many peace proposals in order to reduce tension. At the same time, it has taken firm measures to maintain the existing strategic military balance.

The Asia-Pacific region, including the three Indochinese countries, has not fully enjoyed peace since World War II because of the warmongering policy of the U.S. imperialists who are bent on crushing and snuffing out the revolutionary movement in the countries of the region. The United States, in collusion with the Chinese hegemonist-expansionists and the ultrarightists in the Thai ruling circles, has overtly supported, fed, and armed the Pol Pot remnants and other reactionary Khmer groups to carry out subversive and sabotage activities against the rebirth of the Cambodian people while pursuing wanton hostile policies against other countries in Indochina, encouraging and inciting confrontation between the Indochinese and ASEAN groups of countries, thus causing the situation in Southeast Asia to remain permanently tense and complex. In order to cover up this dark maneuver, the United States has fabricated and spread the allegation and slander about the so-called threat from the Soviet Union and Vietnam, the trick of setting up U.S. arms stockpiles in Thailand, and the maneuver to maintain its military bases in the Philippines as its largest air and naval bases abroad. At the same time, it has given military aid and increased the frequency of visits by high-ranking U.S. military and political figures to the region, especially to Thailand, and regularly proceeded with joint U.S.-Thai military exercises close to the Cambodian border. In fact, Washington recently has vigorously pushed for the escalation of its military conspiracy with Bangkok, planning concrete consultations on the setting up of U.S. arms stockpiles in Thailand and conducting large-sclae U.S.-Thai joint war games code-named Cobra Gold 86 in the immediate vicinity of the Cambodian border, which constitutes an undeniable threat to the security of the PRK and the three Indochinese countries and a threat to peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Contrary to the very reactionary Asia-Pacific strategy of the United States, the peace initiative for Asia and the Pacific region once again raised in Comrade Gorbachev's statement at Vladivostok has demonstrated the principied stand of the Soviet Union regarding the policy of peaceful coexistence among countries of different social regimes aimed at establishing new relations of equality and creating an atmosphere of peace and stability in the Asia-Pacific region, in response to the legitimate aspirations and interests of the people in the region. The fact that the Vladiviostok statement stressed the Soviet Union's decision to withdraw some of the Soviet troops from Afghanistan by the end of 1986 in light of the growth of the Afghan revolution and its readiness together with Mongolia to discuss the withdrawal of a significant number of Soviet troops from Mongolia most clearly shows the irrefutable and consistent goodwill of the Soviet Union to settle the tense situation in the region and the world.

Together with the progressive people in the region and the world, the Cambodian people enthusiastically greet and fully support the latest peace initiatives and proposals of Comrade General Secretary Gorbachev made on 28 July with a view to creating an atmosphere of peace, security, and cooperation in accordance with the legitimate aspirations and interests of the people of the region.

Together with the SRV and LPDR, the PRK has put forward appropriate proposals as described in the 11th and 12 conferences of the three Indochinese countries' foreign ministers to hold dialogue and negotiations on the basis of equality, respect for each other's independence and sovereignty, and mutual benefit with the ASEAN countries in order to solve all remaining problems concerning the two groups of countries and contribute to turning Southeast Asia, as well as the Asia-Pacific region, into a zone of peace, security, and cooperation. We resolutely demand that the United States put an end to nuclear arms tests and begin talks with the Soviet Union in order to gradually advance toward eliminating the grave danger posed by nuclear weapons to mankind and guarantee peace and security for all nations on earth.

SPK VIEWS 'THREAT' POSED BY 'COBRA-GOLD 86'

BK081133 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1113 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Phnom Penh SPK August 8 -- The curent U.S.-Thai joint military exercises "Cobra-Gold 86" being conducted near the Thai-Kampuchean border has posed a threat to Kampuchea as well as to peace and security in Southeast Asia, it is also aimed at maintaining the state of confrontation in the region, particularly between ASEAN and the Indochinese countries.

Such war games which are considered another U.S. move of intervention in various parts of the world, can only aggravate the already tense situation in the world as well as in the Asian-Pacific region.

Under the pretext of helping Thai troops train themselves on the spot in a ground offensive against any possible intrusion, the "Cobra-Gold 86" the fourth of its kind so far, can not justify the international and regional reactionaries hostile acts against Kampuchea in particular.

It has also run counter to the aspirations of the peoples in the region and Kampuchea for peace, freindship and cooperation.

In his recent speech in Vladivostok, Soviet party leader [as received] pointed out that there would be no obstacles, that cannot be surmounted, in establishing the mutually acceptable relationship between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries. Good-will exists on the condition of non-interference from the outside.

After many years of wars, especially the horrible genocide committed by the Pol Pot clique, the Kampuchean people have no other wish than to live in peace and rebuild their country and a happy life. They have time and again expressed their desire to have good neighbourly relations with Thailand.

At the 10th semi-annual conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers, Kampuchea, like Vietnam and Laos, expressed their willingness to settle all problems concerning the relations with Thailand through negotiations.

However, the Bangkok authorities have, on the one hand, refused all these proposals and, on the other, colluded more closely with the U.S. imperialists and the Chinese hegemonists in an attempt to undermine Kampuchea's revival and bring the genocidal clique of Pol Pot, Ieng Sary and Khieu Samphan back to power in Kampuchea. They have conducted joint military exercises near the Kampuchea border with the U.S. forces, and staged the U.S. come-back in the region by letting them to build war reserve stockpiles on Thai soil.

The Bangkok rulers, hell-bent on maintaining a trouble spot to please their patrons in Beijing and Washington, have left no stone unturned to oppose the rebirth of the People's Republic of Kampuchea, from supporting, morally and materially, the Khmer reactionaries in their sabotage activities to directly committing troops to armed provocations against Kampuchea. Week in week out, Thai planes of different types and vessels violated Kampuchea air space and waters. And now with "Cobra-Gold 86" which has posed a serious threat to Kampuchea's security and peace, Thailand proves itself to be a good partner of the U.S. imperialists in their Asia-Pacific strategy as it did before in the Vietnam war.

If the ultra-rightists in the Thai ruling circles and the U.S. imperialists refuse to learn from their past lessons, their more shameful defeats will be inevitable.

PRACHEACHON URGES ATTACKS AGAINST ENEMIES

BK010629 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 2300 GMT 29 Jul 86

[PRACHEACHON editorial: "Attack and Inflict More Heavy Defeats on the Enemies in This Rainy Season" -- [date not received]

[Text] After scoring the big victories in the 1984-85 dry season, we have maintained our mastery both along the border and in the interior of the country. Our armed forces -- including the regular, regional,and militia forces -- have grown firmly and vigorously. After we attack and took over the 17 major enemy bases along the border, the remnants of the three Cambodian reactionary groups have been compelled to move about inside the country since they have no stationary bases. They are facing more difficult supply problems and their activities.

During the past several months, these elements have vainly accelerated their military activities -- robbing and oppressing the people and destroying their property -- and, simultaneously, their psychological warfare. But these activities have not been successful due to our continous sweep operations against them. With each passing day, the enemies have faced new and greater unsolvable difficulties. The enemies could not replace the thousands of their men killed or wounded in the 1st half of 1986 from the heavy blows dealt them by our people and our Revolutionary Armed Forces in close cooperation with the Vietnamese Army volunteers. Moreover, the enemies face logistics and supply problems for their men, who have been suffering from shortages of good, medicine, weapons, and ammunition because of the fact that, after taking over their positions along the Cambodian-Thai border, we built a border defense line and cut their border passes. These enemies do have no established shelters. They must keep moving from one place to another to avoid being swept up by our forces.

Due to these difficulties, the enemy forces have become seriously demoralized and their activities have dwindled. Moreover, having been inside the interior of the country, they have seen how our people live and work happily in our new society. What they have seen runs contrary to the deceitful propaganda, slander against our new regime, and distortion of facts about the progress of our revolution disseminated by their commanders. These elements have lost all hope for the dreamy victory their superiors greatly boasted about.

Moreover, the enemies have suffered more serious internal rifts. Disputes among the three Cambodian reactionary groups and rifts within each group have sidened. They have strangled each other, struggled for power, and tried to topple and massacre one another. This has greatly demoralized the enemies' men. Desperation and submission have become widespread within the enemy's ranks, including the commanding cadres. The number of surrenders has increased. During the first 5 months of 1986, there were 2,038 retrunees, including divisional, regimental, and battalion commanders of the enemy soldiers, bringing with them thousands of weapons.

Despite the fact that they have suffered serious successive defeats after receiving the support and assistance of the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and particularly the Thai ultrarightist reactionaries, the enemies have stubbornly sought all perfidious maneuvers to oppose the rebirth of our people. The political report of our party's Fifth Congress stressed that our people's major task is defending our fatherland and the revolutionary gains. For this reason, the entire party, all armed forces, and all people must pay attention to carrying out the significant tasks of building our country, strengthening our national defense, and maintaining political security and public order. We must constantly heighten our revolutionary vigilance, fight and be ready to fight and smash all maneuvers and counterattacks by the enemies of all stripes, and strive to firmly defend our beloved fatherland's territorial integrity and the peaceful life and labor in towns and the countryside.

Speaking at the recent conference of our leading cadres, Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the party Central Committee, stressed that to be strong ourselves, we must weaken the enemy. This means that while striving to build our revolutionary forces, we must be active in combating the enemies. We must attack and weaken the enemies to the point that they can no longer pop their heads up and maintain a presence in the interior of our country. This is a 2-part problem. We must be strong in order to conquer the enemy. We must conquer them in order to become strong. We must build our forces while intensifying our attack against the enemies.

We must mobilize all forces to combat the enemy in the current rainy season in order to cause them more problems, thus demoralizing them even more seriously and making them collapse stage by stage, plunging them toward complete doom.

It its imperative that we constantly enhance patriotism, nurture hatred of the enemies who have committed bloody crimes against our people, and ceaselessly heighten our combat will and sense of mastery and self-assistance by always keeping in mind that the fight against the enemies is the common task of the party, the KPRAF, and our people.

The armed forces must seek, attack, and destroy the enemies, and must not avoid attacking them. They must always heighten revolutionary vigilance in order to prevent the enemies from attacking them unaware. They must not wait for the enemies to attack first nor lose their initiative. It is imperative that we launch all forms of attack against the enemy and vigorously stimulate the movement to persuade the masses to fight them while carrying out military and security measures to mop up enemy remnants hiding in the jungle and enemy elements implanted among the masses. It is imperative that we enhance the combat initiative and creative ingenuity, fight the enemy using both modern and primitive weapons, seek all means to cut the enemies' supply sources, persuade the families whose relatives are staying with the enemies to urge their misled family members to return to the revolution, and oppose in a timely way the enemies' psychological warfare.

The military command committee in each region, each province, and each district must continue to build the localities and forces and strive to increase our forces' efficiency and combat quality in order to expand our state of mastery and our combat capability. Meanwhile, they must strengthen the local organizations and militia units by clearly dividing and giving responsible tasks to each unit and each sector.

The local authorities and mass organizations must pay attention to livelihood, mentally and materially, and the health of the soldiers and militiamen. They must implement well the policy toward families of the soldiers and of the fallen and disabled soldiers while striving to enhance to combat capability, political quality, and discipline among KPRAF members. It is imperative that we stimulate the proselytization movement by correctly implementing party-state policies and regulations. It is imperative that we control and educate those who have deserted the enemy ranks and returned to the revolution, while carrying out the recruitment work and mobilizing militiamen to join in defending the border and persuading the people to increase the rainy-season rice production and sell paddy to the state.

While striving to expand the integrated forces of our party, our armed forces, and people to carry out the patriotic emulation movement for national defense and construction, we pledge to fight more vigorously against the enemy in order to inflict even more serious defeats on them in this rainy season.

[Text] Vientiane, August 7 (KPL) -- Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP CC, recently received a telegramme of thanks from the general secretary of the Communist Party of Vietnam CC Truong Chinh. The telegramme says.

"I am moved and thankful for your message of congratulations full of fraternal spirit conveyed to me as I was elected as general secretary of the CPV CC. I strongly believe that the special relations, militant alliance and all-round cooperation between Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea on the other, based on Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism, will be forever more developed and consolidated. I wish the Fraternal Lao people under the leadership of the LPRP headed by you, greater successes in the cause of national defence and construction."

LEADERS PAY LAST RESPECTS TO KHAMSOUK SAI-GNASENG

BK071315 Vientiane KPL in English 0905 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Vientiane, August 7 (KPL) -- Lao party and government leaders headed by Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRF CC, chairman of the Council of Ministers, on August 6, laid wreath and paid their last respect to Khamsouk Sai-gnaseng, member of the LPRP CC, minister, president of the Lao-Soviet Friendship Association who passed away on July 29 in a hospital in Moscow at the age of 71.

Among Lao party and government leaders present on the occasion were Politbureau members of the LPRP CC, vice-chairman of the CM [Council of Ministers] Nouhak Phoumsavan, Phoumi Vongvichit, General Khamtai Siphandon and Phoun Sipaseut together with other secretaries of the party, of the Standing Committee of the People's Supreme Assembly and members of the Council of Ministers.

Having observed one minute of silence, the General Secretary Kaysone Phomvihan expressed his deep grief and a sense of great loss in the condolence book. Officials of ministries and mass organisations in Vientiane have taken turn to pay their last respect to Khamsouk Sai-gnaseng. The cremation service will be held today in the afternoon at that [as received] Luang Square.

NOTHING NEW EXPECTED OF NEW THAI GOVERNMENT

[6 August PASASON commentary: "Will Anything New Come From the New Thai Government Being Formed?"]

[Text] Respected listeners, since the completion of the general elections, preparations for the formation of a new Thai coalition government have been carried out in a considerably energetic manner amid a cloud of conflicts resulting from the scramble for power among the various parties and groups to make a huge profit and share the interests. This can be seen very clearly through statements made by various Thai officials and politicians, demonstrations, and in particular the incident at the Thai Parliament on the opening day of its session, 4 August.

In light of the said confused situation, questions have been raised among the Thai people:

Will anything new come from the new Thai Government being formed? What benefits can the Thai people expect to gain from the new government? Through reports by Thai officials on radio and television and reports published by Thai mass media on the parties to be included in the new government and through preparations for formation of the new government, politicians of various countries, as well as Thai politicians themselves, are of the view that there will not be many policy changes in the new Thai coalition government, compared to the policies of the previous governments, whether domestic or foreign policies. In previous government, changes or replacements of government members were made on many occasions and reformations were made on not less than 4 or 5 occasions, but the economic problems of the nation still remained unsolved. On the contrary, with each passing day Thailand has been dragged further into comprehensive crises. The maintenance of dark influence and the enriching of themselves was very popular among various groups of people and parties in the previous governments of Thailand. But, none of them ever paid attention to the interests of the Thai people, workers, and farmers. No one ever paid attention to settling the problems of privation, poverty, starvation, social dangers, unemployment, inflation, murder, and other problems which have seriously threatened the everyday life of Thai people.

All these problems have resulted from the reactionary, domestic policies of the previous Thai Governments, which have run counter to the just interests of the laboring Thai people. Simultaneously, in foreign affairs, the previous Thai governments pursued policies serving the dark schemes of the U.S. imperialists, who have colluded with the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists to create tension and a warlike atmosphere in this region. The ultrarightist reactionaries in the Thai ruling circles have always implemented a hostile policy toward neighboring countries, in particular toward the LPDR. Conducting challenges and provocations along the Thai-Lao border, slandering Laos, and conducting blockades against Laos in many fields, in particular the economic field, have become the normal practices of previous Thai Government.

Worst of all, the previous Thai governments served completely the arms race of the U.S. imperialists, bought modern war weapons from the United States, expanded the area and scale of joint U.S.-Thai military exercises under the name Cobra Gold, and accepted the building of a U.S. war reserve stockpile in Thai territory with the hope of fulfilling Washington's goal to return to Southeast Asia, despite its defeat in the war of aggression in Indochina in 1975. Such acts of previous Thai Governments run counter to the just interests and earnest aspirations of the Thai people. They have also run counter to the urgent aspiration of the various nations that want to make of Southeast Asia region of peace, stability, and cooperation.

Nevertheless, if the next Thai Government is also crazy about the interests of particular parties, continues to scramble for power, takes advantage of and makes a huge profit off Thai farmers and workers, thinks only about the interests of certain groups of persons of associates, follows the footsteps of the previous governments, and continues to betray the nation by serving foreign policies it is certain that no urgent and vital problems in the country will be solved. Moreover, it will even bring danger and the disaster of war to Thailand, thus directly threatening peace and stability in this region and the world.

CADRES IN VARIOUS PROVINCES STUDY POLITICAL REPORT

BK040404 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Political life campaigns for cadres and state employees of Kenthao District, Sayaboury Province, and Luang Praband and Phong Saly Provinces have concluded. The participants are effectively translating what they have studied into practice.

After studying and expressing views on the draft political report of the LPRP Central Committee, which is to be submitted to the forthcoming Fourth Party Congress, all cadres and state employees unanimously approved the draft, particularly the orientation and organizing of each aspect of the tasks in the new period. They also clearly perceived the multilateral achievements and victories recorded by the entire party and people over the past 10 years. These achievements serve as a basis for them in carrying out work in the years to come -- for example, efforts to further build and develop the economy.

Following conclusion of the campaigns, everyone has decided to further raise the level of his knowledge and consciousness to jointly help defend and build socialism in the country. Such political life campaigns have been completed at the provincial level in Luang Prabang and are currently continuing at the district, canton, and village levels.

Culture Ministry

BK040400 Vientiane Domestic Service in Laos 0000 GMT 4 Aug 86

[Text] Since 15 July the Ministry of culture has organized three political courses for its cadres, state employees, and workers. These political life campaigns were attended by 1,201 persons.

The participants contributed their views to the draft of the political report to be submitted by the LPRP Central Committee to its Fourth Party Congress. Through these political activities, cadres, state employees, and workers under the ministry have been made aware of the multilateral and firm achievements and victories and the party's wise and clearsighted leadership in the past 10 years as well as the orientation and tasks of the Lao revolution in the year to come, particularly the second 5-year state plan. The participants positively contributed their views to the draft report with a high spirit of responsibility and compared the draft with the concrete plans of each unit, factory, school, and enterprise in order to understand the right and wrong, shortcomings, and remaining problems, thus enabling them to better the Second 5-Year Plan.

During the courses, the participants expressed determination to consolidate their attitude and standpoint and distinguish friends from enemies in the struggle to determine who is winning over whom between two lines -- socialism and capitalism. They were also aware of the success of each branch of work and remaining problems to be resolved in the immediate future.

Journalists' Association

BK021309 Vientiane KPL in English 0923 GMT 2 Aug 86

[Text] Vientiane, August 2 (OANA-KPL) -- The Association of Lao Journalists held here on Thursday an enlarged session chaired by its president Son Khamvanvongsa who is also acting chairman of the State Committee for News Agency, Newspaper, Radio and T.V. The conference examined ways and means for mass-media to encourage the rank-and-file in the party, army and the general public to seriously study and make responsible suggestions to the political report draft of the party CC being widely studied at the moment. The final political report will be presented at the forthcoming 4th Congress of the Party. Issues pertaining to the preparation for the 10th general assembly of International Organisation of Journalists to be held in Sofia, Bulgaria, on October 20-23 were also discussed.

PARTIES DISCUSS PORTFOLIOS; SITTHI RESUMES POST

BK080149 Bangkok THE NATION in English 8 Aug 86 pp 1, 2

[Excerpts] A major stumbling block to the formation of the Prem V Cabinet was removed yesterday when the Democrat Party dropped its demand for control of the Interior Ministry, informed sources told THE NATION.

As a result, the interior, finance and defence portfolios will be headed by non-partisan figures to be handpicked by Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon.

But the Democrat retreat is conditional on the party's participation in the selection of a suitable figure to head the ministry. The development is seen as a modest breakthrough in the negotiations among four parties on the division of Cabinet portfolios.

But haggling for other key Cabinet posts continues, most notably over the Agriculture Ministry where the Democrat and Chat Thai parties are demanding control.

The sources said the Democrats were negotiating from a stronger position with 100 MPs under its control and it appears to have a better chance of taking control.

If Chat Thai fails to win the Agriculture, it will demand the post of communications minister instead, according to the sources. Chat Thai secretary general, Banhan Sinlapa-acha, has set his sights on either the agriculture or communication post.

But the Democrats have also demanded control of the Communications Ministry with party secretary general, Wira Musikaphong, understood to be keen for the post.

The other economic ministry, Commerce, is likely to be given to the Social Action Party (SAP) which will also have control of the Foreign Ministry. SAP has demanded control over two ministries.

The sources said that the latest negotiating positions of the three major parties are as follows:

-- Democrats: agriculture, communications, education, public health, university affairs and justice.

-- Chat Thai: industry, either agriculture or communications and science, energy and technology.

-- SAP: foreign affairs and commerce. [passage omitted]

SAP party leader, Sitthi Sawetsila, has said he will resume as foreign minister and leave the deputy premiership to a senior SAP party member, said to be either Phong Sarasin, Dr Kasem Sirisamphan or Commerce Minister Surat Osathanukhro.

Deputy Foreign Minister Praphat Limpaphan and Deputy Agriculture Minister Prayut Siriphanit are expected to retain their respective posts.

The sources confirmed that the new Cabinet line-up will be cross-bred so all parties have joint responsibility for the government's performance.

ATHIT DENIES REPORTS ON CABINET NOMINATION

BK080115 Bangkok THE NATION in English 8 Aug 86 p 3

[Text] Supreme Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek yesterday dismissed as "groundless" press reports that he would be appointed a Cabinet member in the new coalition government.

"It's purely rumour," Gen Athit retorted when asked to comment on the widespread reports that he had been approached to join in the new coalition government comprising Democrat, Chat Thai, Social Action and Ratsadon Parties.

The supreme commander, who is due to retire late this month, said he would serve as the Armed Forces chief until his mandatory retirement date.

"I have a lot of work to do before my retirement," he said.

Speaking after attending a ceremony to lay the foundation stone of a dormitory at Si Nakkharinwirot University's Prasanmit campus, the outgoing supreme commander called on all sides concerned to stop spreading rumours and to be cooperative in protecting the country's interests.

Regarding his Wednesday's visit to former SAP leader M.R. Khukrit Pramot at the latter's Suan Phlu residence, the general described it as a "normal visit." "I visited him because I was told of his ailment. We talked on general affairs," he said.

CHAWALIT ON SETTING UP ARMY ADVISORY TEAM

BK060754 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Army Commander General Chawalit Yongchaiyut told newsmen this morning that the army has set up an army advisory committee comprising 21 retired senior army officers, with Field Marshal Thanom Kittikhachon as chairman and General Sup Aksaranukhro as secretary of the committee. On 4 August the army advisory committee held its first meeting. The advisory team heard a briefing on the general situation and the army's development plan. The army commander-in-chief said the purpose of setting up an advisory team is to be able to make use of the experience of those former senior army officers as they had all served in the army for a long time. The setting up of the committee is also aimed at forging friendship between retired officers and officers in service.

CENTRAL BANK OFFICIAL ON DEBT BURDEN SITUATION

[Text] Although the appreciation of major currencies in the foreign exchange basket against the baht has cost the country about 2,300 million baht more in its debt burden, the lower interest rate in the international money market has made Thailand enjoy a net lower burden by about 500 million baht.

Praphaphim Sakuntaphai, chief spokeswoman of the Bank of Thailand, said yesterday that it is expected that in the last five months of the year, Thailand would be able to save about 950 million baht in terms of interest burden on loans to the government sectors, and about 1,800 billion baht for private sectors.

As of the end of last year, the outstanding debt owed by the government sectors amounted to U.S. $9,778 million, while the outstanding debt of the private sectors amounted to $5,221 million and about $1,000 million was owed by the Bank of Thailand.

Mrs Praphaphim said that the structure of the government sectors' loans was U.S. dollar amounting to 5,282 million or 54 percent, yen amounting to $3,600 million in equivalent or 39.6 percent; deustchemark, $248 million in equivalent or 2.5 percent; and Swiss franc, $141 million in equivalent or 14 percent.

The structure of the loans borrowed by the private sector was $3,400 million in terms of U.S. dollars or 66 percent; yen, $452 million in equivalent or 8.7 percent; deustchemark, $236 million in equivalent or 4.5 percent; and Swiss franc, $715 million in equivalent or 13.7 percent.

Under these structures, she said that the depreciation of the U.S. dollar against the baht has resulted in Thailand's debt burden being reduced by 500 million baht, but the appreciations of yen, German mark and Swiss franc have resulted in a higher value of Thailand's loans by 2,100 million baht, 200 million baht and 450 million baht respectively.

As a result, the total higher burden amounted to 2,300 million baht.

THAI PRINCESS DENIES RUMORS ABOUT QUEEN

BK081112 Bangkok THE NATION in English 8 Aug 86 P 16

["Excerpts" of 7 August interview with Princess Chulaphon by TV personality M.R. Thanatsi Sawatdiwat to be broadcast on the occasion of the Queen's birthday, 12 August]

[Text] M.R. Thanatsi: There is a widespread rumour that Her Majesty the Queen is sick. It is said that Her Majesty is paralyzed and afflicted with a fatal disease preventing her from making public appearances. Is this true?

The Princess: The rumours are not true. Since Her Majesty underwent an operation in 1985, she has been getting much better. Now she constantly exercises and even though I am 25 years her junior, I can hardly keep up when I join her during her walking exercise. After the exercise I find myself really exhausted and on the verge of fainting. If the people are going to get angry because of her disappearance from the public views, it is us (the Prince and Princesses) who should be blamed since we always insist that she rests instead of making appearances.

In the past 30 years, Her Majesty the Queen has been working all day and night. She constantly teaches her children that time waits for nobody. "We should work to the best of our ability while we can."

Thus when the Queen is sick, the Prince and Princesses want her to take a well-earned rest. Normally everybody has holidays, but Her Majesty never had one. She has no weekends, no holidays. In fact she should be entitled to five years worth of holidays if we accumulated all the weekends and holidays she has not taken over the past 30 years. It has been only the last six months that she has been resting.

And even when she does not work physically, she still has many ideas and we often consult her.

M.R. Thanatsi: I don't think that the Thai people are getting angry, but we are concerned about her condition, because we realize well enough how hard she has been working for us, and how much she has contributed to the Thai people. The only thing we are waiting for is for someone to tell us how the Queen is.

Normally when Her Majesty works until two or three in the morning does she make you run an errand for her?

The Princess: Yes, I do. I'm sort of her personal secretary. Her Majesty is not only the Queen, but also a mother and a housewife. I have to admit that I can't compete with her in terms of mental ability. I ask her for ideas that she may have and based on these, I work out the details.

Sometimes Her Majesty calls for me at midnight. She apologizes for this but explains that she has just had an idea, and if she doesn't tell it to me right away, there is a tendency that she may forget it.

M.R. Thanatsi: I think the people would like to know about Her Majesty's regular activities while she is at Chitlada Palace, things the public may not be aware of.

The Princess: When the day starts, Her Majesty will begin working and continue doing so until bedtime. If she can't go to sleep, she will continue working until the next morning. She normally wakes up at 10 or 11 am. But right after waking up, she never has time for anything else but work. Even during a meal, she may call for me and her personal secretaries to assign duties. For instance, she tells us to follow up on the cases of certain patients, most of whom are sick villagers we met during our trips. She also monitors the academical results of students (village children) who she sponsors.

Every single handicraft work done by those under the SUPPORT (Foundation for the Promotion of the Supplementary Occupations and Related Techniques) is closely examined by her. It is only between 8 to 9 pm that we are dismissed. The Queen's lunchtime is usually at 2 or 3 pm with dinnertime being at 10 pm.

Her Majesty also reads, not for pleasure, but for expanding her knowledge and giving her ideas to improve the capabilities and produces of SUPPORT. Her Majesty does not only give guidelines to the villagers on how to produce the handicraft, she also concerns herself with the potential markets for these products.

Around midnight, Her Majesty prays for about an hour. After that she continues work then goes to sleep at 3 or four in the morning. Sometimes the Queen suffers from insomnia and can't get to sleep until six in the morning.

When we make trips upcountry, we frequently have morning engagements at around 9 am. Her Majesty, even though she sleeps at three in the morning, never fails to make it for the next day's engagement and then return to the provincial palace at night.

Her Majesty possesses a strong determination that never lets up if there is work to carry out.

Sometimes when we go out to remote areas, there have been thousands of patients waiting for a check-up in our mobile medical unit. Her Majesty will always be there to conduct the examination and make sure that each of them are being carefully examined.

She frequently tells us that we have to take care of them (the sick villagers) as though we were taking care of our own relatives. Only the best treatment is good enough for them. For more than ten hours, she sits there and never moves, never even goes to the wash room. Before her ailment, she went out everyday to see the villagers. She said to me that "We have only a little time for these people, we're only here for a few days, but there are more people who live in small villages, tambons, amphurs, who are waiting for us."

... Her Majesty is a strongly determined woman. For as long as I can remember, I have never heard her say that she is "tired." When we ask whether she is tired, her reply would be "It's alright, there are many more persons who are more tired."

M.R. Thanatsi: There is another rumour going around in Bangkok that Her Majesty is trying to take over the job of His Majesty. [Bangkok MATICHON in Thai on 8 August carries on page 3 excerpts of this interview, including the above question which reads: "There have been rumors about the Queen taking over duties....forgive me for asking, Your Highness, but I have to ask the truth from you....there has been talk that the Queen has taken over duties [yaeng ngan] from His Majesty the King"]

The Princess: It's not true at all. We all work for His Majesty because of our loyalty towards him. Nobody in our family wants popularity for themselves. Everybody is sharing the work and we work as a team. His Majesty is quite keen on water resources, irrigation and agriculture with HRH Princess Maha Chakri Sirinthon helping along. Her Majesty is interested in social welfare, the health of the public and supplementary occupations to which I give a helping hand. But again, there are people who say that our family is divided into two sides -- His Majesty's and Her Majesty's -- which is not true at all.

Her Majesty even encourages me to help the King on his work with maps. But I myself admit that I'm not too keen on it. I can't do it. My area of interest is medication. When we (the Queen and the Princess) work together, we can carry our work out quite well. It is just like sharing the job among ourselves.

M.R. Thanatsi: According to a doctor, the Queen's condition is stabilizing now. Is this true?

The Princess: She is almost as healthy as before but she needs more rest. Doctors constantly call on her to check on her blood pressure and to give nutritious foods. But she is much better now. She even walks at least two or three kilometres a day.

M.R. Thanatsi: When will the Royal Family make a trip upcountry again?

The Princess: Normally, our schedule is that we leave for Narathiwat on the third week of August. But it is not certain at the moment. If we go, we will take care of Her Majesty in order to be sure that she will not work herself too hard. And whatever we can do on her behalf, we will do our best. However as I said, we still need ideas and creativity from Her Majesty. Even if I have a long list of degrees to my credit, I admit that I cannot compete with the Queen's intelligence.

PHAM VAN DONG RECEIVES MEXICAN DELEGATION

[Text] Hanoi VNA August 7 -- Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong received at the presidential palace here today the visiting delegation of the Mexican Committee for Solidarity with Vietnam headed by its president Ms. Martha Lopez.

In a cordial talk, Chairman Pham Van Dong expressed his joy to meet again Ms. Martha Lopez, a close friend of the Vietnamese people. He thanked the Mexican Committee for Solidarity with Vietnam for its practical and diverse activities in support of Vietnam in the past as well as at present. "Martha Lopez's enthusiastic activities and her fine feelings toward Vietnam are a vivid expression of the Mexican people's solidarity and friendship with the Vietnamese people," he stressed.

In her reply, Ms. Martha Lopez reassured the Vietnamese leader of the continued support of her committee and the peace- and justice-loving people of Mexico to the Vietnamese people in their just cause.

The reception took place in an atmosphere of cordiality and friendship.

NHAN DAN EDITORIAL ON DRAFT MARRIAGE, FAMILY LAW

BK031525 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 29 Jul 86

[NHAN DAN 30 July editorial: "All the People Participate in Building the Draft Marriage and Family Law"]

[Text] Implementing the resolution of the 11th session on 30 June 1986 of the Seventh National Assembly, today, 30 July, the Council of State made public the Draft Marriage and Family Law and encouraged the entire people to contribute their opinions with a view to perfecting the draft so it will be presented to the National Assembly for approval at its next session.

Vietnam's Marriage and Family Law was passed by the National Assembly on 29 December 1959 and promulgated for implementation on 13 January 1960 when our country still remained divided. Following the liberation of the south, pursuant to a resolution of the Council of Government which is now the Council of Ministers, on 25 March 1977, this law became effective nationwide. Having been enforced for 27 years in the north and 9 years in the south, this law has had the great effect of contributing to eliminating the bondage of the feudal marriage and family system, developing a socialist marriage and family system based on the free and progressive marriage, one wife and one husband, and equality between men and women; protecting women's family interests; and safeguarding the interests of children in the family.

However, since it was promulgated during the socialist transformation period, the 1959 Marriage and Family Law is focused only on resolving the questions of marriage and divorce and does not fully and specifically define other family relations as well as relations between the family and society. Now that the entire country has been reunified and is advancing toward socialism, major political, economic, cultural, and social changes have greatly affected marriage and the family.

Surveys made in various localities have made it easy to see that our state's marriage and family law system does not fully meet the practical requirements of marriage and family at present. The fundamental principles of this law are progressive and consistent with the masses' aspirations; but given the current social situation, the specific stipulations designed to guarantee these principles are not really adequate. In addition, there are a number of marriage and family relations yet to be adjusted by the law; and consequently, their observation is not uniform and consistent in various localities -- such as the annulment of marriage, [words indistinct], the system of wardship, and marriage and family relations bvetween Vietnamese citizens and foreign nationals. Therefore, our state must promulgate a new marriage and family law to meet the realistic requirements of life in the marriage and family domain at present.

The draft of the new Marriage and Family Law succeeds and develops (?past) laws on marriage and family, especially the 1959 Marriage and Family Law which is currently in force; and, at the same time, it is based on Articles 63, 64, and 65 of the 1980 Constitution, the political report and resolution passed at the Fourth and Fifth National congresses of Party Delegates, and subsequent documents of the party. The draft defines the socialist marriage and family relations against a background in which our country still remains in the initial stage of the transitional period to socialism; and, at the same time, foresees the development of these relations in the next 15-20 years. The goal of the new law is to develop and consolidate the socialist marriage and family system, shape a new type of man, and promote a new socialist lifestyle (?along the line) of eliminating the vestiges of feudalism, backward customs, and bad or bougeois thoughts about marriage and family.

The draft of the new law is (?broader in scope than) the 1959 Marriage and Family Law in that it defines two new issues -- the system of wardship and marriage and family relations between Vietnamese citizens and foreign nationals -- in Chapers VIII and IX. The relations [words indistinct] which are defined by the 1959 law in one chapter now cover three chapters of the draft -- Chapters IV, V, and VI. The new law is established in accordance with the principles of voluntary and progressive marriage, one wife and one husband, equality between wife and husband, protection for the interests of parents and children, and protection for mothers and infants. The tasks and principles of the new Marriage and Family Law decided the contents of its stipulations. From a general point of view, the content of the Draft Marriage and Family Law successfully reflects the fundamental (?characteristics) of the marriage and family system in our society at present. This is possible thanks to the great efforts made by the drafting committee and to the serious and enthusiastic contribution of views by delegatons of national assembly deputies as well as by all echelons and sectors throughout the drafting process.

However, since the marriage and family issue involves the interests of all strata of people, it is very important that the people broadly contribute their views toward this issue. Party committee echelons and administrative bodies at all levels, together with all sectors from the central to grassroots level and mass organizations, especially the women's union and the Ho Chi Minh Communist Youth Union, are responsible for introducing and interpreting this draft law and soliciting opinions of young men and women in particular and of the people in general toward the draft.

CADRES MEET TO STUDY DRAFT POLITICAL REPORT

BK050452 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 1 Aug 86

[Text] The party committees of Thuan Hai, Phu Khanh, Tay Ninh, and Binh Tri Thien provinces recently held conferences for leading cadres to study, thoroughly understand, and make suggestions to the draft political report to be submitted to the Sixth National Party Congress and to apply the basic concepts and viewpoints of the report.

The conferees concentrated on studying, discussing, and firmly grasping the major concepts, viewpoints, and contents of the draft political report. They made many suggestions that helped shed more light on the achievements and shortcomings noted in the process of implementing the resolution of the Fifth Party Congress, especially in implementing the recent Central Committee and Political Bureau resolutions. They also discussed the implementation of the guidelines, tasks, objectives, measures, and various major positions and policies in the days ahead. The conferees suggestions on the draft political report reflected their sincerity, frankness, constructiveness, seriousness, and high sense of responsibility. Nearly 3,000 suggestions were made by 250 leading cadres of the Binh Tri Thien provincial party organization to propose amendments to or revisions of various details ranging from the arrangement of chapters and articles to the specific contents of the draft political report, especially the concrete policies envisioned for the years ahead.

Relying on the basic concepts and viewpoints of the draft political report, the party organizations of the provinces concerned set forth immediate socioeconomic targets and formulated urgent measures aimed at promoting production and gradually normalizing the people's living conditions.

The party committees of Thuan Hai and Phu Khanh have launched an emulation movement throughout their entire party organizations and people to step up productive labor, practice thrift, and satisfactorily carry out self-criticism and criticism. In the immediate future, Thuan Hai Province will concentrate on caring for and protecting the summer-fall rice and planting subsidiary food crops. It will make the fullest use of land to grow subsidiary crops to make up for the shortfall of grain output and will strive for a production volume of 320,000 metric tons of grain by the year's end. The entire province will concentrate on the 10th-month fishing season, striving to catch 75,000 metric tons of marine products for 1986 and to purchase and collect 75-80 percent of the total catch. On the front of goods distribution and circulation, the province will focus more on controlling money and goods, enhancing market and price management, broadening the retail network, renovating the distribution methods, delivering essential consumer goods to consumers, and firmly maintaining the living standards of the salaried and working people.

For its part, Phu Khanh Province will concentrate all efforts on agricultural production. In the immediate future, it will strive to provide sufficient fertilizer and insecticides for the summer-fall and 10th-month crops, make the fullest use of land to grow subsidiary food crops, and make every effort to produce 490,000 metric tons of grain in 1986. It will also strive to purchase and collect 180,000 metric tons of grain, promptly procure sufficient supplies for the production of essential goods, do a good job of managing the market, distribute supplies and goods to the right consumers, and resolutely oppose all negative phenomena in socioeconomic management.

Phu Khanh adopted a program for overcoming the shortcomings pointed out during the self-criticism and criticism drive among the entire party organization, especially the lack of depth and responsiveness in perceiving and implementing various party and state policies, the manifestation of localism in promoting an assigning cadres, the failue to severely and promptly deal with negative phenomena within the ranks of the province's personnel, and the cumbersomeness, bulkiness, and inefficiency of the administrative apparatus.

In Tay Ninh, the conference of key cadres clearly pointed out the difficulties to be overcome in the days ahead. Specifically, the province must apply active measures to grow 115,000 hectares of rice for the whole year and 14,000 hectares of manioc and step up the planting of and caring for tens of thousands of hectares of short-and long-term industry. The province will also restructure and reorganize the small industry and handicraft production sector in each district by mobilizing capital and craftsmen among the people, thereby producing large quantities of consumer goods in support of the people's lives and export.

HA BAC PARTY STUDIES CONGRESS DOCUMENTS

[Text] The Executive Committee of the Ha Bac provincial party organization has held a conference for leading cadres to study, thoroughly understand, and apply the spitit and basic viewpoints of the various draft documents to be submitted to the forthcoming party congress and to determine the guidelines, tasks, and urgent measures to be adopted by the local party organization.

After studying and making many suggestions to the draft political report to be presented to the Sixth National Party Congress, Ha Bac's leading cadres applied the spirit and basic viewpoints of the draft political report to the task of evaluating the actual situation, potential, labor, land, and trades of a midland province strong in agricultural, forestry, animal husbandry, small industry, and handicraft production. They also decided on the guidelines and objectives of the provincial party organization's activities in the coming years.

In the next few months, the province will pay attention to readjusting its investments by concentrating on procuring agricultural supplies and resolving waterconservancy problems -- including irrigation and draining -- to carry out intensive farming and practice multicropping on 62,000 hectares slated for the planting of high-yield rice. The province will devote the remainder of its cultivalbe land to grow crops in any way that may yield the best economic results to gradually increase grain output. The province will prepare conditions for strongly developing the planting of groundnuts by gradually shifting to groundnut cultivation on areas hitherto reserved for rice planting, thereby increasing groundnut output in the coming years. The province will also carry out the intensive farming of soybeans and firmly maintain the area under this crop to provide soybeans for export while creating raw materials for the production of foodstuffs in support of the people's lives. The province will continue to develop the planting of other food crops such as vegetables including garlic and red pepper.

In the immediate future, Ha Bac will apply urgent distribution and circulation and will concentrate on promoting close coordination among the trade, financial, banking, public security, inspection, and market management services to combat speculation, upsetting the market. The province will also strive to broaden the organized market.

To achieve various socioeconomic targets, since July the Ha Bac provincial party committee has vigorously restructured and rearranged its organizational apparatus, adding a large number of capable young cadres to its personnel and sending leading and managerial cadres to various districts and cities. The province considers this as an important measure to effect new changes in the style of leadership and in the capability to guide the implementation of policies, thereby satisfying the requirements of the new stage of the revolution.

LONG AN PROVINCE COMPLETES GRASSROOTS CRITICISM

BK040902 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 30 Jul 86

[Text] NHAN DAN reported on 29 July that Long An Province has basically completed the criticism and self-criticism drive at the grassroots level comprising various villages, party chapters in districts, the armed and public security forces, and district party committees and organizations.

Through this criticism and self-criticism drive, Long An Province exposed various problems regarding such phenomena as bureaucratism, authoritarianism, and neglecting the people, especially at the grassroots level. The principle of democratic centralism is being violated, the implementation of democracy is carried out just for form's sake; and bossism is still prevalent among leading cadres, while protectionism and lack of unanimity in carrying out tasks and supervision are persistent and serious at some places. Persecution is also prevalent, thus discouraging party cadres, members, and the people in their struggle.

After the criticism and self-criticism drive, the party committee issued a resolution to mete out disciplinary punishment to eight members of a district party committee, two of whom are members of the district party committee's standing body. Also in the course of this criticism drive, the provincial postal service's cadres and personnel proposed to the higher echelon that their director should be discharged on a charge of embezzlement, irresponsibility, and displaying negative phenomena. The provincial agricultural service also made a proposal to expel from the party and suspend one deputy director.

The Long An party organization also noted other shortcomings and designed tasks for the days ahead which are aimed at satisfactorily carrying out the party and state political activities.

AUSTRALIA

WHEAT DELEGATION GETS ASSURANCES FROM CONGRESS

BK061013 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Australia's wheat delegation to the United States has made some late progress after days of unsuccessful lobbying in Washington. The all-party delegation led by the minister for primary industry, Mr Kerin, has been in Washington lobbying congressmen to abandon plans to sell subsidized American agricultural produce. One such sale of 4 million tons of wheat to the Soviet Union was announced earlier this week resulting in Australian protests that extensions on farm subsidies would severely threaten Australia's export income.

However, Radio Australia's Washington correspondent, Jim Middleton, reports that the delegation has now won a commitment from the House of Representatives Foreign Affairs Committee to try to postpone action on measures to extend the subsidy scheme further. Middleton says the committee made two undertakings: First to win a delay of 6 months on legislation extending the scheme, and secondly, to obtain a guarantee from the Soviet Union that Australia's traditional share of the Soviet market be preserved.

NEW ZEALAND

GORBACHEV SPEECH 'SOBERING' FOR GOVERNMENT

HK070215 Auckland THE NEW ZEALAND HERALD in English 2 Aug 86 p 6

["Politics" by Russell Hill: "Government Grappling Hard With New Policy in Defense"]

[Text] That the Russian leader, Mr Gorbachev, should mention New Zealand so freely in his speech in Vladivostok this week was held by Soviet diplomats in Wellington as cause for mild celebration.

Certainly, the ambassador, Mr Vladimir Bykov, and his staff were delighted their far-flung outpose had merited reference in the major foreign policy address.

For the New Zealand Government, however, Mr Gorbachev's speech was a distinctly sobering event. For the Prime Minister, Mr Lange, in particular, it was a sharp reminder of New Zealand's undoubted, if unwelcome, role in the drama of superpower rivalry in the Pacific basin.

Business End of Review

The Vladivostok speech was also a reminder for Mr Lange of some difficult assignments he is about to confront in the process of attempting to take New Zealand out of the nuclear firing-line while maintaining a credible self-defense capability.

Armed, theoretically at least, with a summary of public attitudes on defence and security issues, Mr Lange this week set in train the business end of the 1986 Defence Review by which his government will seek to co-ordinate the country's defence arrangements with its new look foreign policy posture.

Next week, he will have to face the South Pacific forum in Suva to defend and promote the South Pacific nuclear-free zone treaty which will reduce (again in theory) the threat of nuclear war in this part of the world.

Mr Lange will have to cope with the spectacle of an ANZUS treaty council meeting in San Francisco this month from which New Zealand will be conspicuously absent.

And, more important, he will be called upon to steer through Parliament the anti-nuclear legislation which will place in stark relief New Zealand's newly acquired status as the black sheep of the Western defence alliance.

Whether in San Francisco or upon the enactment of the New Zealand Nuclear Free Zone, Disarmament and Arms Control Bill, the United States is expected to make a declaration that it has formally withdrawn its guarantee to defend New Zealand against foreign aggression.

The declaration would bring to a head the running dispute with the United States over nuclear ship visits and set Mr Lange the task of convincing New Zealanders that, with the withdrawal of the American defence umbrella, their country had been made a safer place.

For all the hurdles confronting him in the coming few weeks, however, it was the completion of the second stage of the 1986 Defence Review this week which brought Mr Lange face to face with one of the least palatable aspects of Labour's anti-nuclear policy.

The report of the defence inquiry panel is intended to lead on to the development of a more self-reliant national defence force at an inevitable and probably formidable economic cost.

Reduction in Spending

That the corollary of the anti-nuclear policy will be an expensive upgrading of conventional military hardware was acepted by the government at the outset.

Part of the price was paid last year in the form of a $19 million allocation for extra ammunition and equipment and a commitment to the purchase of a tanker to extend the range of navy frigates.

But it was left to the Minister of Defence, Mr O'Flynn, this week to reveal details of the extent to which key areas of defence, far from increasing, were being reduced.

The armed services are to take a $16 million cut in operating funds, covering fuel and training, he said together with a $17 million reduction in their allocation for new capital equipment.

All told, the military will be making a $55 million contribution to the government's latest economy drive.

As Mr Lange must be keenly aware, the cuts were scarcely conducive to the impression that the government was ready and willing to follow through with its declared commitment to a beefed up defence force.

No External Threat

And, as Mr O'Flynn may privately concede, the 1986 budget laid a less than solid foundation for what he has claimed will be the most thoroughgoing defence review since before the First World War.

The extent to which the country's defences should be strengthened in the post-ANZUS era is clearly still open to debate.

Among the 5000 submissions to the defence review panel, a good proportion perceived no external threat to New Zealand, raising the question of whether all that was required was an effective civil defence network and an effective force to patrol the exclusive economic zone.

But, as Mr Lange must also be aware, it would be a brave New Zealand Government which would expect acceptance by the electorate of anything less than the present, distinctly limited array of military material.

For this government in particular, the risk of being seen to have abrogated the prime constitutional obligation to the defense of the nation is a potent political threat.

Just how serious the threat would be in election year will be one of the questions to which Mr Lange will be seeking answers in the document deposited on his desk this week by the defence review panel.

In addition to the welter of submissions received by the team headed by the former Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Mr Frank Corner, the results of a special public opinion poll are expected to give some clues about the extent to which New Zealanders believe they should be equipped to repel potential aggressors.

With the defence review still in its early stages, the government has also yet to define precisely where to spend such funds as it will make available and how to forge a defence force consistent with the anti-nuclear foreign policy.

Disclaimer from PM

The chairwoman of Parliament's foreign affairs and defence select committee, Helen Clark, drew a disclaimer from Mr Lange with her assessment of New Zealand's present status as a "semi-ally" in the Western defence grouping.

"It is now entirely appropriate for New Zealand's defence arrangements to be developed on the basis of our ANZAC and South Pacific relationships and on promoting collective security arrangements within the framework of the United Nations," she said.

In denying Government acceptance of the suggested move towards semi-alignment, Mr Lange pointed to Helen Clark's position on the Labour Party left-wing.

If anything, the final decisions of the defence review will bear a closer resemblance to the status quo than those clearly sought by the Mr Albert MP.

But the thrust towards greater self-reliance in defence will remain an underlying feature of the review, together with the extra cost which that implies.

PAPUA NEW GUINEA

ANOTHER MINISTER RESIGNS FROM CABINET

BK070940 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0800 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] The Papua New Guinea Government has announced the third ministerial resignation in 3 days. The Office of Prime Minister Wingti confirmed that the land minister, Mr Paul Torato, had been asked to resign following allegations by a Singapore-based company. AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATED PRESS said the claims relate to the development of the huge Porgera gold deposit in Mr Torato's Enga Province. Mr Torato is head of the United Party in Papua New Guinea's five-party governing coalition.

Earlier this week, the education minister, Aruru Matiabe, and the environment minister, Mr Tom Muliap, resigned because they have court cases pending. Mr Matiabe's case involved alleged misappropriation while Mr Muliap's involved drunken driving.

MALAYSIA TO CUT OIL OUTPUT, FOLLOWS OPEC MOVE

BK060704 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0600 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Malaysia is to reduce its output of oil in line with the decision of the OPEC countries to cut crude oil production. A statement issued by the Prime Minister's Department in Kuala Lumpur this morning says that Malaysia supports the move. Although Malaysia is not a member of OPEC, it will take steps to reduce its oil output.

The prime minister, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed, was informed of the OPEC decision by the Indonesian minister of oil and energy, Professor Dr Subroto, in a telephone call from Geneva. The 13 oil ministers of OPEC decided that output would be slashed by 20 percent or 4 million barrels a day for at least 2 months. The move is to help boost oil prices, which have been on the downward trend since January this year.

The chairman of Petronas [Malaysian state oil company], Raja Tan Sri Mohar Badiozaman, in welcoming the decision, said that it will help boost the prices of Malaysian crude oil. Malaysia currently produces about 510,000 barrels of crude oil per day.

Petronas Reduces Production

BK070656 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0600 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Malaysia will cut its petroleum output by 10 percent from the present 510,000 barrels per day in support of OPEC move to reduce the production by 20 percent. This was disclosed by Petronas Chairman Raja Tan Sri Mohar Badiozaman. He said Petronas contractors will be asked to take appropriate measures soon to adjust production level accordingly. In view of the expected price increases, he said exploration activites could pick up.

OPEC ministers reached a unanimous decision to slash output by 4 million to an overall ceiling of 16 million barrels per day for at least 2 months. Petronas is Malaysia's state-owned oil company.

USSR AMBASSADOR INTERVIEWED ON GORBACHEV SPEECH

HK081130 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 4 Aug 86 pp 3, 7

[By staff member Chit Estella]

[Text] On July 28, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev delivered in Vladivostok a speech detailing his government's proposals to reduce political tension in various parts of the world by reducing superpower military rivalry.

His statement mentioned his administration's views on the ASEAN, its prospects for future dialog with other nations, and the conditions in the Asian-Pacific region.

In a very timely sense, Gorbachev also drew attention to the American military presence in the region -- particularly in the Philippines -- and strongly indicated that its removal would affect Soviet military policy in this part of the world.

The speech, which got varying reactions from Soviet observers and some world leaders, was described by Soviet Ambassador to the Philippines Vadim Shabalin as "significant."

"It is an important working paper for our foreign policy...and a list of concrete measures which should be undertaken by our foreign policy officers and diplomats, particularly in this region."

Developments such as this have come at a time when the young government under President Aquino is likewise searching for new directions in its foreign policy.

With the Philippines already entangled in the web of superpower rivalry, the new administration's declaration of its intention to pursue an independent foreign policy would have to face one of its important tests.

Following are excerpts of MALYA's interview with Mr Shabalin:

MALAYA: Mr Gorbachev, in his statement at Vladivostok, said among other things, that the removal of American military presence in the Philippines will not be left unanswered by the Soviet Union. Exactly what did he mean by this?

Shabalin: The statement means first of all our political will, our desire and our preparedness to negotiate on both bilateral and multilateral levels and to look for ways through which military presence of both powers would and should be reduced.

Using not a diplomatic but a journalistic language, I should say we are ready to open our doors on this matter. In particular, we are ready to discuss the necessity of reducing military fleets in this region. We would like to start first of all with the reduction of rivalry in the field of anti-submarine weapons, in certain zones in the Pacific which create instabililty in the region.

So, this statement is both address to the United States and to a certain extent, the Philippines.

MALAYA: It would seem there was a shift or a change in Soviet policy then. What brought about this change?

Shabalin: I think there had been no change in our political line and our political force in general. More than once, the Soviet Union has put forward certain proposals on all regions of the world, particularly the Asian-Pacific region. I should say that what is new is not the shift in our foreign policy regarding this region but the introduction of new concrete proposals.

MALAYA: Do you think it would be realistic to expect the removal of U.S. military bases in the Philippines in the near future?

Shabalin: The question is addressed more to the Philippine people and government as well as the American government and people, not to the Soviet Union. But I would like to say something.

A long time has passed since the conclusion of Philippine-American agreement on the bases. Here in the Philippines and around it, changes are happening. I would like to say that the changes in the country are aimed at strengthening independence and sovereignty.

The issue of the bases is being discussed within the framework of the Constitutional Commission. We paid due attention to the statement made by Madame Corazon Aquino that the Philippine Government will keep its options open until 1991. But we are realists, And we understand that there is still an agreement which provides for the retention of American military bases in this country until 1991.

In my opinion, the most probable and realistic way is the reduction of military activities in this region. This process could and should take place in two or three years.

MALAYA: But one of the reasons put forward for the retention of the U.S. military bases here is the contention that if the U.S. moves out, the Soviet Union would come in.

Shabalin: One of the main meanings of Mr Gorbachev's speech is that we should start reducing military activities and political tension in this part of the world. American bases were removed from Thailand, but nobody knows about the Soviet Union moving in because there is no such fact.

I would like to say not as a diplomat but as a human being: these concoctions or assertions that if Americans would leave this country, the Russians will move in are nonsense.

MALAYA: How does the Soviet Union view the recent ASEAN meeting in Manila, particularly with regards to the points raised on the arms race?

Shabalin: We understand that calls were raised for the elimination of arms race. This call is addressed to both the Soviet Union and the U.S. But our country and the U.S. are being placed on the same level, which is not correct. Our country was never an initiator of the arms race. Our efforts were only aimed at not lagging behind the U.S. which initiated the arms race.

We believe the superpowers should implement their commitment with regads to the SALT II treaty. It is our position that the treaty should not be ignored.

We welcome the efforts of ASEAN countries to create a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in Southeast Asia. These efforts are well in line with our own regarding the reduction of hostilities and creation of peace in the region.

MALAYA: What about the Kampuchean issue?

Shabalin: We understand also the interest shown by ASEAN in solving the so-called Kampuchean problem. We likewise note the interest demonstrated by the governments and peoples of the Indochinese nations -- namely the Republic of Vietnam, the Republic of Kampuchea and Laos -- in solving this.

I believe the problem must be solved without the participation of Pol Pot or his regime which annihilated about three million people in Kampuchea.

Second, I believe the problem or issue should be solved without any foreign intervention. Issues should be solved only by the people of the Indochinese peninsula.

In the speech of Mr Gorbachev, he said the process can be facilitated by the links between ASEAN and countries of Indochina.

MALAYA: What do you think of the ASEAN's position on trade protectionism?

Shabalin: We welcome the moves of the organization to strengthen cooperation among the member-states. We believe these moves are aimed at strengthening economic independence and the growing economies.

The Comecon, a council for economic cooperation among socialist states, has proposed to establish links and cooperation with ASEAN. Comecon is a serious organization; so is the ASEAN. We believe there is the possibility of establishing cooperation between two serious organizations.

We support the efforts of developing nations against protectionism by industrialized nations. We understand the essence of the resolution of ASEAN regarding protectionism because our country is also subject to discrimination by capitalists.

MALAYA: How would you describe Philippine-Soviet relations today?

Shabalin: We are satisfied with the present level of bilateral relations but we think and we believe in the possibility of further strengthening these in various fields.

Some good signs for improvement have appeared. For example, our countries exchanged congratulatory messages in the highest levels on the 10th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic ties between our two governments. This has not happened before.

There is a new Philippine Ambassador to the Soviet Union. There was no ambassador for four years. The position was vacant under the Marcos administration.

MALAYA: There were reports that agreement concerning Ambassador Alejandro Melchor's acceptance by the Soviet government took long in coming.

Shabalin: I must say that the choice of ambassador is completely the perogative of a particular country. The agreement on Melchor's appointment was issued in four or five days only. This doesn't happen very often. From our side, it was manifestation of our desire for good, friendly relations.

MALAYA: How do you propose to improve Philippine-Soviet relations?

Shabalin: On the development of bilateral relations, both sides should demonstrate more clearly the political will and preparedness to develop such relations. We must create an atmosphere of mutual trust and understanding. We already have an atmosphere of understanding, but this should be more clearly manifested.

I believe we should broaden the exchange of delegations and contacts in different fields. I think a very important role in this process (must be played by) the media. For us, for example, it is funny and sometimes embittering to read articles in Philippine newspapers which say that in our country, children below 8 years old are being exploited. That in our country, churches are closed and that Soviet citizens are prohibited from professing their religion.

I would like to assure you the publication of this sort in our country about the Philippines never appeared and will never appear.

We should combine our efforts in exchanging information about each other.

REPORT NOTES IMPROVEMENT IN RELATIONS WITH USSR

HK061441 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 6 Aug 86 p 9

[By Tara S. Singh]

[Text] Philippine-Soviet relation, which has been strained with the sequestration of at least one Soviet compnay, is now heading for the better.

The Aquino government is putting things in order by replacing Marcos-appointed men in two Soviet firms and in a cultural society.

FilSov Shipping Company, Inc, a joint venture in ship agency between Soviet and Filipino businessmen, is expected to be deleted from the list of sequestered firms with the replacement by a supporter of President Corazon C. Aquino to head the firm.

Eduardo Cojuangco Jr. chairman of FilSov, will be replaced by Ricardo C. Delgado, president of Manila Integrated Airport Services, Inc, (Maiscor). Delgado is the nephew of former ambassador to the Vatican Antonio Delgado.

Another Soviet firm, Aeroflot, will have a new head. The Soviet national airline maintains inbound and outbound agency and is headed by former Ilocos Norte Vice Governor Roquito Ablan.

The Aquino government is entrusting Aeroflot to Philippine Airlines.

A cultural association, the Fil-Soviet Friendship Society, is headed by former labor minister Blas E. Ople. Ople, who is a commissioner of the Constitutional Commission and heads the opposition political party Partido Nacionalista ng Pilipinas, will be succeeded by Agrarian Reform Minister Heherson Alvarez.

Government sources disclosed that a proper request has been submitted by the Aquino government on these replacements.

The Soviet Embassy in Manila, however, forwarded the Philippine Government request to Moscow, sources added.

Sources told BUSINESS DAY that the ouster of Marcos appointed officials in these entities will greatly enhance Fil-Soviet relations.

The government's move is seen by political observers as a sign that the Aquino government would pursue friendly relations with the USSR.

They said by the prompt replacement of Marcos men in even a cultural society, the Aquino government is once again sending a message to the USSR; that Marcos in not the President of the Philippines whom Moscow congratulated when Marcos took his oath of office prior to his flight to Hawaii.

A top government official told BUSINESS DAY that the key to all this "good intention" of the Aquino government lies in the prompt replacement of appointed Marcos officials.

"We hope a decision (by Moscow) is reached soon," he added,

But what puzzles political observers is the appointment of "American boys" including the earleir designation of Alejandro Melchor as ambassador to Moscow.

The Aquino government however has made it clear to the Soviets that relationship with USSR will be focused, if not solely, on trade, sources said.

The same sources said Vice-President and Foreign Minister Salvador H. Laurel, Ambassador Melchor, Trade and Industry Minister Jose Concepcion Jr, and Economic Planning Minister Solita Monsod have been meeting with local Soviet Embassy officials to further two-way trade relations.

At present, the Philippines enjoys favorable balance of trade with USSR.

In 1985, the Philippines exported to USSR $45 million as against imports of only $29 million. In the first quarter of this year, USSR imported from the Philippines $19 million as against exportation of $8 million. Most of the traded items are chemicals, coal, and fertilizer.

STUDENTS DEMONSTRATE AGAINST BASES AT CON-COM

HK070351 Laoag City Nation Broadcasting Corporation Radio DWRI in Ilocano 2300 GMT 6 Aug 86

[Text] Around 1,000 students gathered yesterday at the Constitutional Commission [Con-Com] to request the abolition of the U.S. military bases and a ban on arms. The students came from different college in Manila including St. Theresa, St. Scholastica, and the Children's Rehabilitation Center. They urged the Con-Com to do away with the military bases and the nuclear plant. This was printed on their placards which included paintings, the most attention-catching being a dramatization on civilian deaths caused by nuclear explosion.

This was done when the Con-Com commissioners emerged from their offices. One of the spectators was commissioner Ed Garcia.

COLUMNIST URGES AQUINO RECONSIDER U.S. TRIP

HK051533 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 5 Aug 86 p 4

["Here and Now" column by Francisco S. Tatad: "Should the President Visit the U.S.?"]

[Text] Despite Malacanang's official announcement of President Aquino's visit to the United States next month, it is worth asking whether this is the time for her to go to the US. Should she not cancel, or postpone it?

The decision to go was made sometime in May when her supporters within the official US establishment as well as in the media thought she had to be seen and heard by the American public before their enthusiasm for her bloodless "revolution" was overtaken by something else. It was their urgent view that if she came after the bloom was off, she would miss the ticker tape parade.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, the chairman of the House Subcommitte on East Asian and Pacific affairs, who conveyed Speaker Tip O'Neill's invitation for her to address the joint session of Congress, had been most persuasive in suggesting that she come before the Congress goes on recess.

Recognizing the value of that advice, she sent Minister Teddy Boy Locsin to Washington to talk to undersecretary Michael Armacost at the State Department, among others, and propose an early visit. The young minister did not find it necessary to involve Ambassador Emmanuel Pelaez in the project at that stage. That provoked some understandable resentment. But being professionals, the ambassador and his staff at once began preparing for the visit once they had heard about it.

A Philippine study mission visiting the US in June got a feel of this strong enthusiasm for an Aquino visit in conversations with officials at the State Department, the Pentagon, the National Security Council, the two houses of Congress, bankers, academics, and the press. The mission naturally reported its impressions to the President.

But so much water has since gone under the bridge. Certain developments at home and abroad appear to have considerably altered the political climate that existed during Aquino's first 100 days. Some fundamental perceptions on Philippine-U.S. relations, and Mrs Aquino's role as President, are being put to the test.

At the 48-member Constitutional Commission, the Committee on Preamble and Declaration of Principles has passed, on a 7-2 vote, a provision which says that "subject to existing international agreements, foreign bases, troops, or facilities shall be forbidden in the Philippine national territory, nor shall nuclear weapons or parts thereof be allowed therein."

This provision will most probably be defeated when the Con-Com in plenary session votes on it. But it has given the opponents of the US facilities at Clark and Subic an initial victory, which could fuel their campaign against the entire Constitution when it is submitted to the people in a plebiscite.

The anti-bases elements have gone so far as to denounce the mere presence at the Con-Com gallery of the US Embassy personnel who are monitoring proceeedings that are completely open to the public. They have also savaged Ambassador Pelaez for attempting to present a view judged to be inimical to their interest.

If the Con-Com's self-imposed deadline of Sept 2 is kept, Mrs. Aquino will be visiting the US after the anti-bases proposal will have been voted down by the commissioners. But it would be very clear to Washington that the proposal will have been defeated without her having had to define her position, not necessarily on the question of whether the bases should stay after 1991, but on the question of whether the Constitution should be the place in which to decide it.

Given the fact that, according to the recent Ateneo-Social Weather Station survey, 50 per cent of Filipinos want the bases to stay, and 56 percent believe that "most of what the US government wants to happen in the Philippines is good for the Filipino," it will not be hard to credit the defeat of the anti-bases proposal to the commissioners, without any reference to the President.

Assuming the defeat of the anti-bases proposal is credited to her, she still would have to overcome the threat posed against the ratification of the Constitution by those who want the bases out and those who want her to submit to an early presidential election. Since no one can forecast with any predetermined accuracy what would happen at the ratification, she would then be visiting the US with some pesky questions concerning constitutional legitimacy. This is the last thing she needs to win American support and overcome the constraints posed by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law in getting more US money for her government.

If on the other hand she goes to the US only after the new Constitution is ratified, she would have none of these difficulties. She would be traveling as the constitutional president with a fixed term of office, rather than as a termless president of a revolutionary government. Washington might even go out of its way to upgrade her official visit to a state visit.

INDONESIAN EMBASSY DENIES TIES WITH MARCOS

HK051545 Manila THE MANILA CHRONICLE in English 5 Aug 86 p 3

[Text] The Indonesian Embassy yesterday denied "special relations" existed between Indonesian President Suharto and deposed President Marcos.

The denial came as President Aquino prepared for a state visit to Indonesia, Aug. 24 to 26.

Embassy spokesman Akhmad Kusumayuda told the "CHRONICLE" Indonesia dealt with the Marcos administration as it would with any regime of other countries it has diplomatic ties with.

It was widely believed that the Indonesian Government had donated two airplanes to the Marcos government for its counter-insurgency campaign.

Counsellor Kusumayuda said his government "merely lent" two jet planes to the Philippines' armed forces for their "civic mission." Indonesia hoped that the Philippines would eventually buy planes from Indonesia.

Indonesia, according to Kusumayuda, has a thriving aircraft industry, and had eyed the Philippines as a prospective buyer.

"We make very good aircraft," he said. "The United States and the Middle East countries buy planes from us. He described the planes as light aircraft that can seat 25 persons and can take off in short runways. He said the planes were returned to Indonesia last May by new Air Force Chief, Maj. Gen. Ramon Farolan.

"It was an official arrangement made between Gen. Fabian Ver and our armed forces chief, Gen. Benny Murdani," Kusumayuda added.

According to Kusumayuda, Suharto is "impressed" with Aquino peaceful assumption to power, and prouder still that the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) has produced its first woman president.

2 SOLDIERS KILLED ALONG LAUREL MOTORCADE ROUTE

HK080951 Hong Kong AFP in English 0939 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Cebu, Philippines, Aug 8 (AFP) -- Gunmen Friday killed two soldiers detailed along a route to be taken by Vice President Salvador Laurel near this central Philippines City, the slain men's commanding officer said. Sergeants Emiliano Umacob and Eduardo Martelino were shot while posted at a residential district in nearby Talisay town, known to be influenced by communist New People's Army (NPA) guerrillas, Major Prudencio Erpe said. He said it was not immediately known if the attack was intended against Mr Laurel, who is also Foreign Minister, but Talisay residents said there appeared to be no connection with the visit.

The Vice President passed by on his way to Minglanilla town some 45 minutes after the attack, Major Erpe told reporters. Mr. Laurel could not be reached for comment. He was on an overnight visit to the island to induct new members of his party UNIDO [United Nationalist Democratic Organization].

The major said the slain soldiers were part of a batallion assigned to guard a 15-kilometer stretch of road to be taken by Mr Laurel's motorcade. Armed men overran a military detachment in Talisay last month, and the NPA later took credit for the attack in written statements distributed to the Cebu press. The NPA is the 16,500-strong amred wing of the banned Communist Party of the Philippines, which has been waging a 17-year rural-based insurgency.

LAUREL REJECTS COALITION WITH COMMUNISTS

OW081159 Tokyo KYODO in English 1145 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Cebu, Philippines, Aug 8 KYODO -- Vice President Salvador Laurel said Friday he will oppose a coalition government with the Communist Party of the Philippines and will support retention of the U.S. military bases in the Philippines. Laurel made the remarks in response to questions at a press conference in this central Philippine city after meeting local leaders of the political party, United Nationalist Democratic Organization (UNIDO), which he heads.

Less than three hours after the luncheon press conference, two soldiers and a policeman manning road security points along Laurel's route to a town south of the city were shot dead by five men suspected to be members of a liquidation squad of the communist-led New Peoples Army (NPA). Military officials, who doubled security for Laurel, refused to comment on whether the killings were intended to harass the 57-year old leader.

A Manila newspaper report in June, quoting a draft CPP document, said the coalition government and the removal of the U.S. military bases are mong the demands of the communists in current ceasefire talks betweent he leftist umbrella group, National Democrtic Front (NDF), and the government of President Corazon Aquino. However, no demands were made by NDF negotiators Satur Ocampo and Antonio Zumel when they met for the first time last Tuesday with Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra, one of the three government negotiators.

"I will oppose a coalition government with the communist party of the Philippines," Laurel said when asked if he was "agreeable" to a coalition. "If the people will not prepare, this government will lose its freedom and democracy and will fall into communist hands," he said. "We overthrew a dictatorship to regain our freedom, but we must preserve it and protect this country from a communist takeover."

Laurel was Aquino's vice pesidential running mate on the opposition ticket in the February 7 snap presidential election that preceded the civilian-backed military revolt that toppled the 20-year rule of Ferdinand Marcos. Asked about his position on he bases, Laurel replied: "I have always been consistent and I will continue to support their retention because we need them."

Aquino has said that she will resepct the Philippine-United States bases agreement and will keep her options open when it expires in 1991. Heated debates on the bases are expected in the Constitional Commission now draftng a new charter after a proposal to declare the Philippines a bases-free and nuclear-free country was passed by a committee of the 48-member commission last July. Laurel has said the constitution should not make specific reference to the military bases in order to allow the national assembly to tackle the issue through legislation.

TOLENTINO TO PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE TO 'REPUBLIC'

HK080425 Hong Kong AFP in English 0423 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Excerpts] Manila, Aug 8 (AFP) -- Opposition leader Arturo Tolentino said Friday he had agreed to take an oath acknowledging the existence of the Aquino government in exchange for the dropping of rebellion charges following his abortive coup last month. The oath will not mean allegiance to the government but to the Philippine Republic and the people of the Philippines, Mr Tolentino said in a statement as Manila dailies reported the agreement he made with Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales. "I have agreed to make a sworn statement which will contain a reaffirmation of my allegiance to the Republic of the Philippines, an acknowledgment of the existence of the present government, and a stand against force or violence to overthrow said government," he said. [passage omitted]

"For myself, I have nothing to fear from a court case because I know I am innocent. Being over 70 years, I cannot be sentenced to death, and I can be out of jail under a bail bond," Mr Tolnetino said in his statement. [passage omitted]

The oath to be made by civilian participants was worked out in talks between them and Mr Gonzales, who disclosed their agreement Thursday. "I did not ask for amnesty. The final and definite dismissal of the cases against all the civilian respondents...is enough," Mr Tolentino said. He said it was possible that only he would take the oath on behalf of the other coup participants. No date has been fixed for the oath taking.

Mr Tolentino told a press conference that the oath would be taken before a judge. He added that negotiations were still underway and he might reach a final agreement with Mr Gonzales Monday or Tuesday. He said that charges against those who will not take the oath will also be dismissed once he takes the oath. "In exchange for the oath, all the charges against the civilians will be dismissed," he said.

He also said he will petition for the quashing of the subpoena issued by a state prosecutor against him because it was against the law. "What the law requires is a sworn complaint by the complainant, because that is when we are going to answer by counteraffidavit. What counteraffidavit are we going to make when there is no affidavit of complaint?" he said. The chief prosecurtor of Manila, acting on a recommendation from Mr Gonzales, issued a subpoena ordering Mr Tolentino to explain in writing why he should not be charged in court with rebellion.

JAPANESE EMBASSY ISSUES TRAVEL ADVISORY

[Excerpt] Manila, Aug 6 KYODO -- Japanese Ambassador Kiyoshi Sumiya advised Japanese nationals not to visit certain areas of the southern Philippine island of Mindanao Wednesday following a spate of kidnappings, some involving foreigners, staged by what he said were suspected antigovernment groups. In a travel advisory notice issued Wednesday by the Japanese Embassy here, Sumiya identified the "middle and western" portions of the insurgency-wracked island as areas which Japanese national should avoid visting.

Sumiya was apparently referring to the predominantly Muslim-populated provinces of Lanao Del Sur and Zamboanga where a number of kidnappings have occurred in the last three months. He urged Japanese nationals who have to visit these places because of work to exercise "maximum altertness." The Japanese Embassy's warning was the second to be issued by a foreign embassy to its nationals in the Philippines. The American Embassy released a State Department travel advisory notice on July 25 urging American citizens to "exercise special caution" in traveling to the southern Philippines. [passage omitted]

NDF NEWSPAPER LIBERATION AVAILABLE FOR SALE

HK050655 Manila THE MANILA CHRONICLE in English 31 Jul 86 p 16

[Text] A young girl wearing the uniform of an exclusive school in Metro Manila anxiously scanned the newspapers displayed in a newsstand on Ayala Avenue. Suddenly, she smiled broadly, as though she was finally seeing what she had been looking for. Taking P3 out of a leather wallet, she handed it over to the old woman tending the stall. And she walked away with her copy of LIBERATION, the magazine published by the underground movement.

LIBERATION started appearing in some Metro Manila newsstands and at Popular Bookstore only last month. It had been available before then only to members of the National Democratic Front [NDF]. (The NDF is an underground alliance of organizations which espouse both armed and unarmed means of struggle to attain national democracy.) Other recipients of LIBERATION had been media persons and some individuals among them government officials, whose copies were surreptitiously mailed to them in envelopes of some government office or another.

Now that LIBERATION has gone public, it is selling like the proverbial hotcakes, according to some newsboys interviewed by this writer. In fact, when a national daily published a news story that LIBERATION is now for sale, it received several inquiries about where copies were available.

The NDF does seem to have discovered a booming enterprise. LIBERATION at P3 is more affordable to most people than other magazines which sell for P4 to P7 a copy.

More than its cover price, however, the appeal of LIBERATION lies principally in its underground character and the articles on the rebels' activities. Long withheld from the public partly because of strict media censorship during the Marcos era, the underground revolutionary movement has become an enigma which people are eager to uncover.

While a large proportion of Metro Manila residents may prefer to cure the defects of society through nonviolent means, many of them still recognize one's right to bear arms to defend oneself against oppression. They may shun direct participation, but, consciously or unconsciously, they still sympathize, even support, the revolutionary movement. These people will go out of their way to buy a copy of LIBERATION.

Then there are the simply curious as well as the intellectuals who want to learns more about the underground movement. And let us not forget the military who may not bother to buy their copies but simply confiscate them from the dealers.

LIBERATION is all of 28 pages of size 11 x 8 1/2 (inches) newsprint. The latest issue being sold by newsboys has on its cover Antonio Ma Zumel, the NDF spokesman in the ceasefire negotiations with the Aquino Government, with the title "Tony Zumel -- Newsman, unionist and revolutionary."

The issue contains the following sections: an editorial page, the cover story, news on the underground movement, news on the government and the United States, news briefs on the legal protest movement, short items on the economic and political crises, a forum, a culture page and a humor page.

On the second page is a picture of a shy-looking boy holding a copy of LIBERATION. The accompanying text says. "There was a time when possessing a copy of LIBERATION could have cost your freedom. Today it just costs P3."

The writer must have been referring to Marcos' Presidential Decree [PD] No. 33 which penalized the distribution, possession and printing of subversive materials. This P.D. was among several which President Corazon Aquino abolished as soon as she assumed power. At his first press conference then Information Minister Teodoro L. Locsin Jr. said that underground newspapers and manifestos like LIBERATION were no longer prohibited.

What must be the major selling point of LIBERATION, however, is the mystery surrounding not just the underground movement but the magazine itself. For obvious reasons, its writers have to use pen names or more aptly, nom de guerre. Victoria Manalo, Juan Picas and Pen Guerrero and other names appearing at the end of the articles could be anyone you meet on the street. No one but themselves knows for sure. A reporter, in fact, has long been asking around how he can interview the editor of LIBERATION; his request remains unanswered.

Metro Manila's middle class may find the alternative being articulated in LIBERATION too radical for their taste. Surely, its mere presence in the newsstands is enough to send shivers down the spine of conservatives and rabid anti-communists.

Others would argue, on the otherhand, that its availability in the heart of the country's financial district should stand as a proud symbol for the Aquino Government of the democracy it has given to the people. Whether the people accept or reject the alternative of LIBERATION, they still have the right to make the decision.

The government, least of all the military, should have nothing to fear with the exposure of radical ideas if it truly serves the interests of the majority. Instead, it should encourage the free flow of ideas in order to build a country truly based on democracy.

COMMUNISTS FAIL TO PRESENT TALKS AGENDA

HK071334 Hong Kong AFP in English 1318 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] Manila, Aug 7 (AFP) -- Communist insurgents failed Thursday to present their proposed agenda for ongoing peace talks with the Philippine Government, a government negotiator said. Newly-appointed negotiator Teopisto Guingona told AGENCE FRANCE PRESSE that the government had been expecting National Democratic Front (NDF) representatives to present their agenda on Thursday but the proposals did not arrive. The other government representative, Ramon Mitra, told reporters Wednesday that following a meeting with NDF emissaries on Tuesday, he expected the rebel coalition to provide an agenda by Thursday, "at the latest."

President Corazon Aquino initiated the talks in a bid to reach a political solution to the 17-year-old rebellion by New People's Army (NPA) guerrillas of the banned Communist Party of the Philippines. Meanwhile, the official PHILIPPINE NEWS AGENCY (PNA) quoted Agriculture Minister Mitra Thursday as saying the government had granted a communist request to field a three-member team in the negotiations. Mr. Mitra could not be reached for comment Thursday, but Mr. Guingona told AFP that he was unaware of Mr. Mitra's reported statement. The local television station RPN 9 identified the third negotiator as Carolina Malay, wife of NDF negotiator Satur Ocampo. The other communist representative is Antonio Zumel, the reputed head of the NDF.

Ground Rules Being Set

[Text] Government and communist emissaries will meet again next week to discuss the cease-fire talks. Agricultural Minister Ramon Mitra Jr., said that ground rules for both parties on the talks are being drawn up. He added that there may be possible additions to the peace talk delegations on both sides.

MNLF SAID CONSOLIDATING FORCES IN SOUTH

HK051549 Manila THE SUNDAY TIMES in English 3 Aug 86 p 3

[By correspondent Vic M. Alvarez]

[Text] Zamboanga City -- The Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) is consolidating its forces in Sulu, TawiTawi, Basilan, and other Muslim provinces in the south.

This was revealed here recently by Sheik Abdulhamid Camlian, former top MNLF revolutionary leader, during a meeting of Muslim religious, political and traditional leaders of Zamboanga.

The MNLF, Camlian said, was regrouping its forces in the wake of reports that foreign-based MNLF Chairman Nur Misuari has revived his original demand for the total separation of Mindanao, Basilan, Sulu, TawiTawi, and Palawan from the rest of the country.

He told the leaders that Misuari no longer recognized the Tripoli agreement which he signed with the late Defense Deputy Minister Carmelo Barbero and representatives of the Islamic Conference in Tripoli, Libya in 1976.

Camlian, who was responsible for installing Misuari as MNLF chairman, also revealed that the MNLF was recruiting new fighters from all over Mindanao.

Meanwhile, a consultative meeting of Region 9 Muslim leaders will be held here on August 9-10.

Muslim religious, political and traditional leaders will discuss the proposal of Lanao Sur Muslim leaders to incorporate regional autonomy in the proposed 1986 Constitution.

They are also expected to discuss other matters affecting Muslims in Southern Philippines. Hadji Nuno, a respected Muslim traditional leader here, told the MANILA TIMES that Muslim commissioners in the Con-Com were expected to attend the two-day consultative meeting.

BUTZ AQUINO TO MEET NUR MISUARI IN SAUDI ARABIA

HK061525 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 6 Aug 86 p 12

[Text] Zamboanga City -- Agapito "Butz" Aquino, President Corazon C. Aquino's brother-in-law, is set to meet with separatist leader Nur Misuari in Jeddah this month to discuss the Mindanao problem.

The scheduled meeting was announced by Norberto Gonzales, chairman of the Partido Demokratiko Socialista ng Philipinas (PDSP) [Philippine Democratic Socialist Party] in an interview with the PHILIPPINES NEWS AGENCY at the Lantaka Hotel here.

Gonzales, who will accompany "Butz" Aquino, said Misuari, chairman of Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), had already called for the government to start the talks.

The PDSP, which has established links with the MNLF in 1978 when it was forced by the Marcos government to go underground, is "informally" laying the grounds for the talks between the MNLF and the new Aquino government.

Gonzales, however, stressed that at the moment, the PDSP role or involvement in the talks is "quasi government" even if Butz Aquino is involved.

Carrying a safe conduct pass issued by Armed Forces chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, Gonzales is conducting a series of meeting with MNLF field commanders to get their views on the coming talks.

Gonzales met with commander Talib Congo, MNLF chairman in Basilan province, Monday afternoon. He met Congo who was with some 500 armed men in a mountain peak in Basilan without any military escorts.

Congo has confirmed that Misuari did issue a ceasefire order to them and that they are waiting for results of any talks.

Col. Cesar Abella of the Philippine Marine had also reportedly informed Gonzales that they will stick to any ceasefire.

Last July 30, Gonzales was in Sulu where he also talked with some 50 MNLF commanders operating in that area.

Recalling his trip to Sulu, Gonzales said for some 10 kilometers along the way to the undisclosed meeting place, armed MNLF stood meters apart along the way. They talked for some four hours in the hills.

In effect, there is also a ceasefire in Sulu, he said.

Describing his recent telephone talk to Misuari while in Manila, Gonzales said Misuari is "receptive to government's effort to find a solution to the Mindanao problem."

The PDSP, which has established a relationship with the MNLF, is interested in resolving the MNLF problem in southern Philippines.

Outlining the PDSP's understanding of the MNLF problem, Gonzales said peace could be attained if the Bangsa Moro be recognized as a people with its own tradition and culture.

TEODORO BENIGNO NAMED NEW PRESS SECRETARY

Friday's vote on New Caledonia came at the end of a five-year campaign spearheaded by neighbouring Vanuatu whose people are of similar Melanesian stock.

New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange told journalists that relisting New Caledonia with the U.N. Committee would enable member-nations of the United Nations to raise the subject in speeches to the General Assembly early next year. He earlier had indicated that New Zealand was dropping its previous opposition to the relisting because of its reservations over the Pons plan, a course also followed by Australia and Fiji.

France Pressed on Plebiscite

[Text] Suva, Aug 11 (AFP) -- South Pacific leaders Monday warned France to conduct an acceptable plebiscite on independence in New Caledonia or risk creating further problems in the territory. A joint communique issued after a four-day meeting here of the South Pacific forum concluded that the change in French policy towards New Caledonia over the past year was a "significant backward step." "While the forum acknowledged that there were some positive aspects to the approach of the new French Government, they did not, in its view, adequately recognise the aspirations of the Kanak people." The 13-member forum noted that the French Government remained committed to an early plebiscite in New Caledonia. "It concluded that if the results of the plebiscite ruled out the prospect of independence, this was likely to exacerbate rather than resolve problems in the territory."

The communique said that the forum had asked the United Nations Committee on Decolonisation to have New Caledonia re-inscripted to ensure that the U.N. regularly reviewed the territory's progress towards self-government and independence. It also said that Fiji, as a member of the so-called Committee of Twenty-Four, recommend re-inscription to the U.N. General Assembly. It further requested Vanuatu, as the only forum member belonging to the Non-aligned Movement, to seek the movement's support at a forthcoming meeting in Harare.

Nothing that France had recently moved to have talks with individual forum members on New Caledonia, the communique expressed the hope that this would be undertaken.

The communique expressed optimism that the world nuclear weapons powers would endorse protocols to the South Pacific nuclear free zone treaty. These protocols prohibit signatories from using or threatening to use any nuclear device against any treaty members or anywhere in the nuclear free zone. "The forum finalised the protocols to the treaty and agreed that they should be opened for signature when the treaty came into force or on December 1, 1986, whichever came first," the communique said. The revised protocols included a "specific withdrawal clause to enable signatories to the protocols to withdraw in the event of any unforeseen circumstances arising which would jeopardise their national interests. This withdrawal clause, which was not included in the communique, allows each signatory to withdraw its commitment by giving three months advance notice, such notice to include a statement of the extraordinary events it regards as having jeopardised its supreme interest. "The forum noted with pleasure that some states eligible to sign the protocols had already indicated that signature would receive prompt and favorable consideration." No specific reference was made about France, which is considered unlikely to sign the protocols because of its continued underground nuclear test program at Mururoa atoll in French Polynesia.

Outside the conference forum leaders previously had said that China and the Soviet Union would definitely sign the protocols while the other two nuclear powers, Britain and the United States, were likely to follow suit as a result of the new escape clause. The forum reiterated its view that the treaty was a significant addition to the existing arms control and disarmament regime and would make an important contribution to protecting the region's favourable security environment. Four further ratifications by forum members are required before the treaty, initiated by Australia in 1983, can take effect. Australia and New Zealand will ratify the treaty over the next few weeks with Kiribati and Western Samoa expected to provide the last two ratifications.

The forum also reaffirmed its strong opposition to the dumping of all radioactive waste at sea and all nuclear testing.

Additionally, the forum urged prompt termination of the United States' trustee agreement over Micronesia in accordance with a resolution of the U.N. trusteeship council last May.

The forum expressed dismay that the South African Government "has shown no willingness to undertake fundamental reforms or to initiate genuine negotiations with blacks about South Africa's future.'

S. PACIFIC FORUM SEEKS U.S. FISHING DEAL

[By Ian Pedley]

[Text] Suva, Aug 9 (AFP) -- South Pacific leaders offered no bait to further Soviet expansion in the region when they agreed here Saturday to pursue a joint fishing deal with the United States. The U.S. Tuna Boat Association's failure to come to terms on fishing rights has been some South Pacific nations go it alone in separate negotiations with the Soviet Union. [sentence as received]

A meeting here of the 13 South Pacific Forum nations voted to continue their attempts to break a deadlock over fishing fees. The forum spokesman, Solomon Islands Prime Minister Sir Peter Kenilorea, said there had been mixed feelings over the lack of progress, but the question of separate agreements with the Soviet Union had not been discussed.

However, New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange later suggested that the United States was already offering far more than the potential catch was worth in a bid to keep the Soviets out. "They are bidding to have a lack of competition for maritime space in the Pacific," Mr. Lange told New Zealand journalists. Asked if superpower rivalry had been reduced to the price of fish, Mr. Lange replied: "Yes. If your only enemy is a tuna, then I'm with you, mate." To the suggestion that the offer could also be construed as an aid package, Mr. Lange said: "You couldn't call it anything else."

Until recently, the United States and its fishermen had refused to recognise the 200-mile economic zones of the Pacific on the grounds that the tuna is a migratory species. But forum officials said the United States had since stepped up its offer to 37.5 million U.S. dollars for a five-year regional fishing pact during the latest discussions in Rarotonga in the fifth round of talks this year. The forum's fishing agency is seeking 16.5 million dollars a year.

The tiny nation of Kiribati last year became the first Pacific nation to grant fishing rights to the Soviet Union, with a one-year agreement worth a reported 1.5 million dollars. Vanuatu is reported to be on the verge of an agreement that may also include shore facilities, which has caused some concern in Western quarters.

Sir Peter said the fact that the forum had not discussed Soviet activities did not necessarily mean there was no concern among the members. He said the question of Soviet shore rights simply had not arisen. Sir Peter also said no reference had been made to the new Asia-Pacific initiative announced by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev July 28 in Vladivostok.

He confirmed that a resolution seeking New Caledonia's relisting with the United Nations Committee on Decolonisation had been sent to New York Friday.

Commenting on a breakthrough with the South Pacific nuclear free zone treaty, he said he believed most of the world's nuclear powers would react favorably. Mr. Lange announced Friday that only France was unlikely to endorse the protocols to the treaty. Asked Saturday about reports that neither Britain nor the United States would confirm any such endorsement, Mr. Lange said they naturally needed to see the revised protocols first.

Forum leaders Saturday completed their official business and went off to a private weekend retreat at a Fijian coastal resort. They will return here Sunday evening and issue a formal communique Monday. The meeting began Friday.

LANGE: U.S., UK ENDORSE NUCLEAR-FREE ZONE

HK081100 Hong Kong AFP in English 1035 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Suva, Aug 8 (AFP) -- Britain and the United States are likely to endorse a treaty declaring the South Pacific a nuclear-free zone, leaving France in an isolated position in the region, New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange said here Friday. The Soviet Union and China have previously indicated interest in signing protocols to the treaty, but Mr. Lange's disclosure of U.S. and British intentions came as a surprise. Mr. Lange told journalists at a meeting in Suva of the South Pacific Forum -- which groups 13 independent nations in the region -- that the development represented the first break in the relationship between the Western-oriented nuclear powers. "It is thought to be expected now that China, the Soviet Union, the U.S. and the United Kingdom will agree to honour the protocols," he said.

The protocols to the South Pacific nuclear-free zone treaty oblige signatories not to manufacture, test or store nuclear weapons in the South Pacific, nor to use them or threaten to use them in the region. Ten of the forum nations have signed the treaty and Mr. Lange said he expected the eight ratifications necessary for it to be sent to the United Nations would be completed next month. He said France, through its continued nuclear testing at Mururoa Atoll in French Polynesia, "would be in conflict with the protocols and out on its own." "It will serve to make it absolutely obvious that France remains the sticking point and that the (Western) nuclear solidarity ... is not extended to protect France on this occasion -- that's very significant."

Asked why he expected the other nuclear powers to sign the protocols, Mr. Lange replied: "Because they have indicated that they would."

"They are still considering it and would be considering it for a very great deal of time if there were no provisions made that have now been done. Now with the expectation given through signals from them before and the adjustments which have been made here, one can look forward to a positive response from them."

Mr. Lange said the changes being finalised by the forum to the protocols would basically allow the nuclear power signatories three months notice of withdrawal from their obligations if they were given cause. Only Vanuatu, the Solomon Islands and Tonga have not signed the treaty -- the former two because they believe it is too weak and the latter because it considers it too strong. The treaty bans members from the manufacture, storage or use of any nuclear weapons, prohibits the dumping of any nuclear waste but does not prevent the passage of any nuclear warships through the zone. Solomon Islands Prime Minister Sir Peter Kenilorea, the forum spokesman, said the meeting Friday had agreed that all current signatories should now proceed to ratification of the treaty, although Papua New Guinea has said it will not take this final step.

LANGE DOUBTS U.S. WILL TRY TO UNDERMINE REGIME

[Text] Suva, Aug 11 (AFP) -- New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange said here on Monday he did not believe the United States would try to undermine his anti-nuclear government to bring his country back into the Australian, New Zealand and U.S. (ANZUS) defence fold. Mr. Lange told a news conference he expected talks in San Francisco on Monday between Australia and the United States to result in both countries continuing their alliance under the broad name of ANZUS. "The outcome of San Francisco will be, I think, that the U.S. will in a tone more of sorrow than of anger announce it has withdrawn its so-called security guarantee from New Zealand," said Mr. Lange. "The ANZUS treaty will be terminated, which is a prophecy I made some two years ago."

Mr Lange said he did not think the United States would attempt to bring about the downfall of his government. The New Zealand government's strong anti-nuclear stand has led Washington to declare inoperative its 35-year-old ANZUS commitment to New Zealand. New Zealand's opposition national party has promised to reverse the Lange government's ban on visits by nuclear warships if it is returned to office.

Asked if the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) might try to destabilise his government, Mr. Lange replied: "I don't accept that it is any part of American strategy to have them operate in that way in New Zealand." He added: "It would certainly play into the government's hands were it to do so."

Mr. Lange said it was entirely up to U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz and Defence Secretary Caspar Weinberger to decide at the San Francisco meeting if the United States would make it tougher for Australia to cooperate militarily with New Zealand in the way it had done for over half a century. But he said it could not be in the United States' interest to have New Zealand reduced to a lower capacity in the Pacific theatre.

"New Zealand has a maritime surveillance role, it has a role with respect to the invigoration of the exclusive economic zones, which is broadly what I call western security interests," he said. "I cannot see how it suits the interests of Australia or the U.S. to see that capacity reduced."

Mr. Lange said there "will be an inevitability that Australia and New Zealand will renew their talks after our defence review." He added: "So I expect to see essentially under the broad name of ANZUS two partners, Australia and the U.S., acknowledging that they are working under it, and New Zealand and Austrialia saying that they are working together in defence terms but without referring to the word ANZUS."

NEW ZEALAND'S ROLE OUTSIDE ANZUS VIEWED

Melbourne Cites Lange

[Text] New Zealand's prime minister, Mr Lange, says United States and Australia are likely to formally exclude his country from the ANZUS defense alliance when officials from the two countries meet in talks in San Francisco. He said, however, that once out of the 3-nation ANZUS alliance, he expected New Zealand to maintain its close defense relationship with Australia. Speaking in Suva where he is attending the Pacific Forum meeting, Mr Lange said he believed Austrialia's foreign minister, Mr Hayden, and defense minister, Mr Beazley, would tell the United States that defense ties between their country and New Zealand would remain close. But Mr Lange added that Washington may try to force Australia to break off the relationship.

[Begin Lange recording] The United States could well put conditions on Australia which would affect or compromise the ability of Australia to have a military relationship with us. It is perfectly plain to me that Australia sees its relationship with the United States military as being more important than its relationship to New Zealand military. [end recording] New Zealand's prime minister, Mr Lange.

Mr Hayden and Mr Beazley have been holding informal talks with their American counterparts, the Secretaries of State and Defense, Mr Shultz and Mr Weinberger, in San Francisco ahead of the annual ANZUS meeting tomorrow. Radio Australia's North American correspondent, Jim Middleton, says they have been working out final details of a document detailing defense arrangements involving only Australia and the United States.

Australia's Bowen on Ties

BK080940 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] The deputy prime minister, Mr Lionel Bowen says Australia's defense ties with New Zealand will remain strong although there are differences between Wellington and the United States. Mr Bowen gave the commitment after the opening ceremony of the South Pacific Forum which he is attending in the absence of the prime minister, Mr Hawke. America no longer regards New Zealand as a close ally because of the Lange Government's refusal to allow nuclear-powered or -armed warships into its ports.

Mr Bowen said Australia-New Zealand bilateral defense agreements would remain as strong as ever all the time. He said Australia had no problem with New Zealand. Mr Bowen also said he understood the reasons for the Pacific island nations signing agreements with the Soviet Union. He said those nations wanted to improve their standard of living and their economy. However, he said that if the Soviet Union wished to establish anything more than fishing bases on those islands it would be a matter of concern.

VANUATU POLITICKING, LANGE PULLOUT THREAT AT FORUM

[Text] Suva, Aug 11 (AFP) -- New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange threatened on Monday to pull his country out of the South Pacific Forum if it became a political platform for Vanuatu's prime minister, Father Walter Lini. Mr Lange took issue with Fr Lini at the end of four-day meeting here of the forum's 13 member-nations.

Fr Lini told a news conference that having referred the question of New Caledonian independence to the United Nations, the forum should look at French Polynesia, Wallis and Futuna Islands, Irian Jaya and perhaps East Timor. He also indicated that next year he would ask the forum to recognise the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) and the Southwest Africa Peoples' Organisation (SWAPO) to give it a common stance at the United Nations, the Non-Aligned Movement and other interested bodies.

But Mr Lange told journalists later the forum should deal more with social and economic issues in its own region. "If it is going to be a mini-United Nations, we will not be coming," he said.

Of the likelihood of Vanuatu signing a fishing deal with the Soviet Union, Fr Lini said such a deal was "getting very close...it could be today." He said none of the other members of the forum had expressed concern to him about the possibility of Vanuatu according the Soviet Union shore facilities.

JAPAN CONTINUES DEBATE ON SDI PARTICIPATION

OW081101 Tokyo KYODO in English 1050 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 8 KYODO -- A cabinet task force held a fourth brainstorming session Friday over Japan's participation in the U.S. strategic defense initiative (SDI) project and officials hinted a conclusion was near. Officials said the meeting focused on implications of Japanese participation and a 1969 Diet resolution banning military exploitation of Japan's space development efforts. "We don't think participation in the research phase of the SDI program will violate the Diet resolution," a government source said.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Masaharu Gotoda, who chaired Friday's session, said he would like to call another session late this month or early next month to reach a conclusion "one way or the other." In a speech Thursday, Gotoda said he foresaw a "positive" conclusion from the ministerial task force.

Reacting to Gotoda's remarks, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone maintained his government is still studying the matter and said he doesn't know when a final decision will be taken.

Political sources say the government hopes to have the decision in time for Defense Agency Director-General Yuko Kurihara's scheduled September 2-8 visit to the United States. Kurihara, a member of the SDI ministerial group, is traveling to Washington at the invitation of U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Japan's participation in the SDI research project is expected to figure in the agenda of their talks.

Apart from Gotoda and Kurihara, other cabinet members who took part in the meeting included Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari, the minister of international trade and industry and the director-general of the Science and Technology Agency. It was the first gathering since Nakasone inaugurated a new government following the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party's landslide election victory in July.

West German and some other U.S. NATO allies have agreed to take part in the project, and the so-called "West German" model has been cited as a formula which Japan may follow. West Germany allows the private sector to undertake SDI-related research on behalf of the Pentagon while the government itself stays away from the program.

Government sources say Japan hopes to work out an agreement with the United States this year on ground rules for Japan's participation, including proprietory rights to research achievements and flowback of technology to Japan.

The ministerial task force was set up in April, a month after a government fact-finding mission recommended Japan take part in research work on the SDI project. Politics apart, "research work on the SDI project is important for Japan's high technology," said Bunsei Sato, a former minister of posts and telecommunications.

NAKASONE ON VISIT TO SHRINE; 'NEW JERSEY'S' CALL

OW090809 Tokyo KYODO in English 0750 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Nagasaki, Aug 9 KYODO -- Prime minister Yasuhiro Nakasone hinted Saturday that he will not make an official visit next week to Tokyo's Yasukuni Shrine, which is dedicated to the war dead, because of the effect such a visit might have on Japan's international relations.

Nakasone said at a press conference here, "Although the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party has strongly urged me to visit the shrine in an official capacity, it is important to consider Japan's position in the international community."

Nakasone's remark was interpreted as meaning that he does not intend to visit Yasukuni, where convicted war criminals are among those enshrined, because it might lead to a deterioration in diplomatic relations with China, South Korea and other neighboring countries.

Nakasone visited the shrine in official capacity on August 15 last year, which marked the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II, and there has been speculation that he might make another visit on this year's anniversary. China strongly denounced Nakasone's visit last year as indicating the danger of a revival of Japanese militarism.

Referring to the possibility of an official visit to Japan by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Nakasone said the government will continue to try to help realize Gorbachev's visit to Japan between December and the end of January next year, as Foreign Minister Takashi Kuranari had earlier indicated.

Asked about Japan's reaction to a proposed port call in Japan by the U.S. battleship "New Jersey," the prime minister said that the U.S. has not yet informed Japan of which port the ship may visit. "We are greatly concerned with the port of call because the ship is capable of both nuclear and nonnuclear deployment. The government is prepared to have consultations with the U.S. side prior to the port call, if necessary," Nakasone said. The New Jersey is expected to make a port call at Sasebo, Nagasaki Prefecture, in August or September. The government does not officially allow port calls by any U.S. warship deployed with nuclear arms.

Touching on government assistance to enable South Korean atomic bomb survivors to receive medical treatment in Japan, Nakasone said that he personally feels sympathy with such people and the government will continue consultations on the matter with South Korea. The Korean victims, who were among those brought to Japan as forced labor during Japanese colonial rule of Korea between 1910 and 1945, are now estimated at 20,000. The Japanese Government pays the medical cost of the Koreans under a 1981 bilateral agreement which is due to expire in November. The South Korean Government, which has been paying the survivors' transportation costs to come to Japan, had indicated that it does not wish to continue the arrangement, and that the survivors can receive treatment in South Korea.

MINISTERS TO VISIT SHRINE

OW080819 Tokyo KYODO in English 0746 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug 8 KYODO -- Nine cabinet ministers said Friday they will visit Yasukuni Shrine where Japanese war dead and 14 convicted war criminals of World War II are enshrined, on August 15, the 41st anniversary of the end of that war.

They are Education Minister Masayuki Fujio, International Trade and Industry Minister Hajime Tamura, Transport Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto, Construction Minister Kosei Amano, Home Affairs Minister Nobuyuki Hanashi, Director General of the National Land Agency Tamisuke Watanuki, Director General of Defense Agency Yuko Kurihara, Director General of the Economic Planning Agency Tetsuo Kondo, and Director General of the Science and Technology Agency Yataro Mitsubayashi.

The other ministers said that they have not yet decided to visit the shrine or that they will make their decisions after the government comes to a conclusion on the matter.

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone has already indicated that he will not visit Yasukuni this year. Nakasone's official visit to the shrine last year -- as the first postwar prime minister to do so -- sparked an international controversy, with China being especially critical.

OFFICIAL ON SOUTH AFRICA'S COUNTERSANCTIONS

OW081125 Tokyo KYODO in English 1108 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 8 KYODO -- Japan expressed regret Friday over South Africa's "counter-economic sanctions" recently imposed on Zambia and Zimbabwe. The regret was conveyed by Wasuke Miyake, director general of the Middle Eastern and African affairs bureau of the foreign ministry, to J.F. Wentzel, South Africa's consul general in Tokyo. Miyake told Wentzel the punitive measures will have a serious effect on the economic situation of other neighboring African countries and that they are against Japan's policy seeking a peaceful solution of South African problems, including apartheid.

The Pretoria government said Tuesday it will impose special deposits on all exports via South Africa from Zambia and Zimbabwe to third countries. Wentzel told Miyaka the measures are only "technical" in accordance with international trade practice. He said he will convey the Japanese regret to his home government.

The foreign ministry told Katsumi Sezaki. Japanese consul general in Pretoria, the same day he should also convey the regret to the South African government.

JULY EXPORTS UP IN DOLLAR TERMS, DOWN IN YEN

OW111113 Tokyo KYODO in English 1049 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 11 KYODO -- Japan's contract-based exports in July scored a sharp increase in dollar terms but suffered a steep fall in yen terms from a year earlier, the ministry of international trade and industry reported Monday. July exports in terms of traders' reports to customs totaled 18,033 million dollars, up 25.5 percent from July last year. But in yen, they were down 15.1 percent from a year earlier at 3,047.1 billion yen. The decrease in yen value was attributed to the yen's continued appreciation against the U.S. dollar. The ministry also said July imports in terms of traders' reports to foreign exchange banks totaled 8,574 million dollars, down 7.6 percent from July last year. In yen, July imports were down 37.5 percent at 1,448.8 billion yen.

Automobile exports scored a 27.1 percent increase, reflecting soaring exports to the Euroean community. Video tape recorders were up 37 percent, semiconductors 53.7 percent, computers 51.6 percent and steel 2.5 percent.

By area, exports to the EC jumped 72.2 percent, those to Southeast Asia 41.3 percent and those to the United States 25.2 percent. Exports to oil-producing countries and China decreased sharply.

Imports of crude oil declined 56.5 percent, iron ore 31.9 percent and raw cotton 19.5 percent. Imports of raw materials and fuels as a whole decreased 29.8 percent.

Among manufactured goods, automobile imports advanced 81.4 percent, textile 38 percent, and those of large planes showed a 2.1-fold jump. Foods also gained 17.4 percent.

Record Monthly Trade Surplus

OW110947 Tokyo KYODO in English 0930 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 11 KYODO -- Japan's trade surplus hit a record monthly high of 8.22 billion dollars before seasonal adjustments in July compared with a 4.60 billion dollar surplus a year before, the finance ministry said in a preliminary report Monday. The previous record surplus of a revised 7.55 billion dollars was registered in May.

Customs-cleared exports hit a record high of 18.87 billion dollars last month, up 23.4 percent over July 1985, while imports totaled 10.65 billion dollars, down 0.4 percent, the report said. Behind the steep export surge was the continued effect of the yen's appreciation, which automatically inflated the dollar value of yen-denominated exports, ministry officials said.

Japan's trade surplus with the United States on a customs clearance basis came to 4.52 billion dollars, the second largest ever, following a record high of 4.76 billion dollars in April, it said.

Japan's overall exports of automobiles soared 24.9 percent and auto parts 61 percent over the same month last year to 3.92 billion dollars and 724 million dollars respectively. But its imports of crude oil plunged 57.2 percent to 1.07 billion dollars due to sharply lower prices, contributing to the marginal decline in July's overall imports.

Exports to the U.S. showed a 28.5 percent year-on-year increase to 7.48 billion dollars due to rises in shipments of office equipment, semiconductors and automobiles, the report said. Imports from the U.S., Japan's largest trade partner, jumped 39.0 percent to 2.96 billion dollars, boosted by purchases of three planes and gold.

Japan's exports to the European community (EC) expanded and shot up 66.9 percent from a year earlier to 2.82 billion dollars, and imports from the EC also soared 55.1 percent to 1.26 billion dollars, leaving a trade surplus of 1.56 billion dollars for Japan, the second largest monthly figure following a record high of 1.60 billion dollars in March.

Japan's exports to nine Asian countries and regions -- South Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, India and five of the six members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) -- rose sharply -- 38.8 percent -- to 3.82 billion dollars, while those to China declined 25.2 to percent to 930 million dollars.

REPORTAGE ON 5, 8, 9 AUG DMZ SHOOTING INCIDENTS

5 Aug Incident Blamed on U.S.

SK090722 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2155 GMT 8 Aug 86

[NODONG SINMUN 9 August commentary: "A Thief Shouts 'Stop Thief!'"]

[Text] As has already been reported, on 5 August South Korean Army troops committed military provocations by firing hundreds of large-caliber machinegun rounds at our side's outpost from a spot in the DMZ in the middle sector of the frontline. On 6 August, our side's senior member to the MAC lodged a stern protest against the U.S. side in connection with this and strongly demanded that the U.S. side take responsible action to prevent the recurrence of such an incident. Instead of apologizing to our side and pledging to prevent the recurrence of such an incident, the U.S. side made preposterous remarks.

On 6 August, the U.S. forces command occupying South Korea denied our claim and announced that the North side's outpost fired first, and that it only fired in response to the firing. Chiming in with this announcement the next day, the spokesman of the U.S. Department of Defense conducted false propaganda in the same way. The U.S. imperialist aggressors raved that this was confirmed through an investigation into the incident. This reminds us of a proverb where a thief shouts "Stop Thief!"

The so-called investigation allegedly confirmed by the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces command occupying South Korea was conducted with puppet army troops, which had committed armed provocations against our side in the DMZ as the target. By choosing the puppets, the executors of the provocations, as a witness, the U.S. imperialists have revealed that they actually concocted the recent shooting incident.

After committing the provocations, they have raved that the opposite side committed provocations. This is a hackneyed method the U.S. imperialists have always used. The U.S. imperialists boisterously babbled about someone else's provocations when they committed espionage by infiltrating the armed spy ship Pueblo deep into the territorial waters of our country, and when they carried out hostile activities by infiltrating the large EC-121 reconnaissance plane deep into the territorial airspace of our country. The U.S. imperialists acted the same way at the time of the 18 August incident at Panmunjom. Having provoked a war in Korea 36 years ago, the U.S. imperialists tried to shift responsibility for this onto us. Historical facts indisputably show who has been committing military provocations.

We recently advanced a proposal for holding talks between persons in military authority from the DPRK, the United States, and South Korea to prevent the danger of war in Korea and to alleviate tension. We have exerted efforts to implement this proposal. Instead of responding to our peace proposal, the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets have caused the people at home and abroad -- who desire lessened tension in Korea -- to deeply worry by increasing military capabilities, by repeatedly kicking up war exercise rackets, and even by touching off a shooting incident in the DMZ.

The U.S. imperialists' attempts to conduct false propaganda is a maneuver to avoid at any cost the denunciations at home and abroad of them as a ringleader that has heightened tension in Korea. The U.S. imperialists' act of shifting responsibility for armed provocations onto us after instigating the puppets to commit them and after refusing to make an apology is an unusual attempt.

Today the majority of the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces and the puppet army have been deployed in forward areas along the Military Demarcation Line. They are seeking an opportunity for a northward invasion. Large quantities of emergency materials have been stockpiled in South Korea for use in wartime.

The recent provocative incident, which has coincided with frequent references to the completion of war preparations between the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces and the bosses of the puppet military, is by no means accidental. While heightening tension by strenthening hostile activities along the demarcation line, they are seeking an excuse to provoke a new war. With high vigilance, we are watching the U.S. imperialists' and South Korean puppets' provocative maneuvers, which have become much more reckless with the passage of time.

8 Aug Incident Protested

[Text] Here is news just in. There is news just in. The South Korean puppet army once again has committed grave military provocative acts at the central frontline. Twice today, at around 1717 and 1936, the puppet South Korean Army committed provocative military acts by firing several 12.7-mm large caliber machinegun and M-16 automatic rifle rounds at a spot 1,250 meters south of Military Demarcation Line marker 0572 on the central frontline where one of our guard posts is located in the opposite side.

In this connection, the senior member of our side has sent a protest message to the enemy side. In the protest message he said: The enemy's military provocation acts are a violent violation of the armistice agreement as well as deliberate and intentional criminal acts that strain the situation inside the demilitarized zone.

He stressed that he has no choice but to regard as serious the fact that -- despite the South Korean puppet army having received our side's strong protest in connection with their firing several hundred rounds at our side's guard posts on 5 August -- they have again fired on the same spot. The senior member of our side protested strongly against the enemy act and demanded that the enemy side take responsible measures to prevent such incidents from occurring again. The enemy should look squarely at the situation created in the demilitarized zone and act judiciously.

9 Aug Incident Protested

[Text] At around 2035 today, the puppet South Korean army fired dozens of rounds of 11.7-mm large-caliber machinegun and M-16 automatic rifle fire at one of our guard posts from a spot 1,250 meters south of Military Demarcation Line marker 0572.

In this connection, the senior member of our side sent a message of protest to the enemy side. In the message, stating that the enemy recently has committed similar acts of military provocation at the same spot in succession as a deliberate and intentional criminal act aimed at artificially exacerbating the situation by dragging us into incidents, he noted that we have no choice but to pay serious attention to this.

The senior member of our side then sternly protested against the enemy's continued acts of firing against us and strongly demanded that the enemy side take responsible measures so that such military provocations will not occur again. The enmy should look squarely at the situation created in the Demilitarized Zone and act discreetly.

JOINT STATEMENT BY DLEGATIONS TO N-S TALKS

SK110109 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2100 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Joint statement issued 10 August by the spokesmen for the DPRK delegations to the North-South economic, Red Cross, and parliamentary talks]

[Text] The North-South talks, which had been conducted amid great expectations and concern from the people at home and abroad, have not been held for 8 months since the beginning of this year. This greatly disappoints all fellow countrymen and the world's peace-loving people who hope for detente [wanhwa] peace, and progress on dialogue in our country.

Despite our repeated efforts to resume the North-South talks, they still remain in a state of suspension entirely because of persons in authority in South Korea who, together with the United States, are spoiling the atmosphere of the talks by aggravating the tension in the country with reckless war and confrontation rackets.

As is widely known, we have shown complete sincerity and made every possible effort to resume and normalize the various forms of talks which had been suspended because of the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise, an extremely provocative exercise that the persons in authority in South Korea staged together with the United States.

Even at the time when the persons in authority in South Korea publicly declared -- in effect refusing talks -- that they would continuously strengthen the "Team Spirit" joint military exercise together with the United States, while further aggravating the tension in the country by kicking off in succession against us such large-scale war exercises as "Tiangbol-86" and "Piho-86" and by mobilizing a great number of troops, policemen, and civilian forces even before the "Team Spirit" joint military exercise that had suspended the North-South talks came to an end, we strongly called upon them to abstain from further spoiling the atmosphere of talks by immediately issuing a joint statement.

In particular, the KPA Supreme Command put forward an epochal peace proposal for holding talks between those who have real military power in the North and South as a practical measure to ease tensions on the Korean peninsula and eradicate the danger of an imminent [paktuhan] war there. This new peace proposal of ours is the most reasonable and practical measure and is capable of turning the tension in our country toward detente and peace and of rescuing the North-South talks, which are at the crossroads of resumption or rupture [chaekaewa kyollyolui kalimkil].

Had the United States and those in authority in South Korea responded, as a matter of course, to our serious efforts to resume talks and chosen to create a climate for talks, no doubt the North-South talks would have already been resumed and normalized. However, the United States and those in authority in South Korea have challenged us by further strengthening war rackets rather than responding to our sincerity with sincerity. And their policy of confrontation has become more vicious after our proposal for talks between military authorities was proposed.

While noisily prattling about the nonexistent threat of southward invasion, those in authority in South Korea have conducted such exercises of all-out war mobilization in all parts of South Korea as "Ulchi-86." Recently, those in high authority took the lead in creating war madness by such acts as directly checking the posture of mobilization for an emergency, babbling that the next few years are crucial or that the time has come to fight to the finish. Not content with this, they have even gone so far as to commit provocative acts of firing hundreds of rounds of gunfire at our side in areas close to the Ministry Demarcation Line.

Anticommunist lectures, anticommunist rallies, and tours inspecting the fierce battlefields and other such anticommunist campaigns that are being conducted almost every day across South Korea are an expansion of the provocative anticommunist confrontation racket that cannot be overlooked.

Branding even the assertions of the South Korean youths, students, and people -- who are promoting the anti-U.S. cause for independence and the antifascist cause for democratization -- leftist-leaning or identical with the North's slogans, those in authority in South Korea are unscrupulously committing such brazen-faced acts as tyrannically suppressing these people by linking them to us.

As a result, the tension that had reached an extreme point in the wake of the "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise is becoming more aggravated with the passage of time and the grave obstacles that had driven the North-South talks to a state of suspension still remain unremoved.

We hold that the United States and the South Korean authorities -- as the responsible parties concerened who have driven North-South dialogue into suspension -- should create an atmosphere for the resumption and normalization of dialogue at the earliest possible date. In this connection, we consider that the United States and the South Korean authorities should immediately [sikuphi] take the following steps at this juncture:

First, they should accept without delay the new peace proposal advanced by the KPA Supreme Command in order to create an atmosphere for an early resumption of the Red Cross talks, the economic talks, and preliminary contacts for the parliamentary talks. The United States and the South Korean authorities should sincerely approach discussion and resolution of the immediate problems arising in eliminating the danger of war and alleviating tension, including the question of suspending such large-scale war exercises as the "Team Spirit" joint military exercises and arms buildup, the question of reducing armaments, and the question of observing the Korean Armistice Aggrement as demanded by its original text.

Second, they should renounce frantic war provocation rackets and anticommunist confrontation, which is incompatible with dialogue and which run counter to national reconciliation and unity. The United States and the South Korean authorities should not stage war exercise rackets against us, wantonly conducting false propaganda about the nonexistent threat of a southward invasion and obstruction of the Olympics, and should drop all acts inciting the consciousness of national confrontation among the South Korean people.

Third, they should renounce suppression of the righteous struggle of youths, students, and people in South Korea, and groundlessly linking it with us. The South Korean authorities should not suppress patriotic youths, students, and people who have risen up in the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and the antifascist struggle for democracy, charging them with procommunism and leftist tendencies, and should immediately release those illegally arrested and imprisoned.

The above questions are very elementary demands arising at present in resuming the suspended North-South dialogue and in leading it along a smooth course. This completely reflects the unanimous desire of all our bretheren and the peace-loving people of the world who want dialogue, peace, and peaceful reunification in Korea. We consider that the United States and the South Korean authorities should show due, sincere attitudes toward these unavoidable questions.

The South's delegations have already lost the necessary desire to even talk about dialogue, because they have connived at and followed the reckless confrontation policy and war maneuvers of the United States and the South Korean ruling group, which have refused dialogue.

We hold that the South Korean delegations should show a sincere attitude before talking about empty, hollow dialogue which lacks feasibility and which no one welcomes. The attitude toward these principled demands of ours will be a touchstone as to whether or not they want to resume the suspended North-South dialogue. We will continue to watch the attitude of the United States and the South Korean side.

[Signed] The delegation of the North side to North-South economic taks, the delegation of the DPRK Red Cross Society, and the delegation of the North side to the preliminary contact for North-South parliamentary talks.

JAPANESE MILITARISTS INCREASING DEFENSE BUDGET

SK090520 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0450 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 9 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today, commenting on the fact that the Defence Agency of Japan set the military budget for 1987 6.3 percent higher than this year's, denounces Japan's policy of militarist arms buildup as a wrong-chosen reckless road. The author of the commentary says:

The increase of Japan's military budget means precisely the acceleration of the arms buildup in Japan and this is demanded by the United States. What the United States demands is that Japan reinforce her Armed Forces in conformity with the requirement of its Asian, Korean strategy and Japan, while complying with demand of the United States, tries to build up strong armed forces of aggression for the realization of her own ambition to stage a comeback to the Asian region. Noting that Japanese Prime Minister Nakasone thinks nothing of the former decision on limiting the military budget to no more than one per cent of the gross national product, the commentary says:

According to reports, the Japanese reactionaries plan to produce cruise missiles and start the production of nuclear weapons and are examining the plan to deploy nuclear submarines. The Japanese reactionaries are racing headlong along the road of unbridled arms buildup. The danger of such moves is to be seen most graphically in their aggressive moves against our country and other Asian countries. Japan in collusion with the United States and South Korean puppets, is working round the clock to frame up a triangular military alliance, has drawn up an operational plan against our republic and is scheming to launch even "strait blockade" operations. If Japan persistently follow this road, she will meet only another defeat.

SO YUN-SOK SPEECH COMMEMORATES KIM IL-SONG ADDRESS

[Report on 5 August Pyongyang meeting at 8 February Hall of Culture commemorating 15th anniversary of Kim Il-song's 6 August 1971 speech "The Joint Struggle of the Revolutionary Asian People Against the U.S. Imperialists" with portions recorded]

[Text] On 5 August, a Pyongyang meeting was held in the 8 February Hall of Culture to mark the 15th anniversary of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's historic speech of 6 August 1971, "The Joint Struggle of the Revolutionary Asian People Against the U.S. Imperialists Will Be Victorious Without Fail."

Respectfully placed at the front of the meeting hall with the flag of the republic in the background was a portrait of the great leader of our party and our people Comrade Kim Il-song. Banners reading "Long live the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song!" and "Long live the glorious WPK!" were hung in the hall. The figures "1971-1986" were hung behind the rostrum.

Present at the meeting were Comrade So Yun-sok, member of the Political Bureau of the WPK Central Committee, responsible secretary of the Pyongyang municipal party committee, and chairman of the Pyongyang Municipal People's Committee; Comrade Ho Chong-suk, secretary of the party Central Committee; Chong Sin-hyok, chairman of the Central Committee of the Chondoist Chongu Party; Kim Yong-chun, vice chairman of the Central Committee of the Korean Social Democratic Party; Wang Kyong-hak, vice chairman of the Pyongyang Municipal Administrative and Economic Guidance Committee; and responsible functionaries from public organizations, together with workers of the city from all walks of life.

The meeting began with the playing of the national anthem. Comrade So Yun-sok gave a speech at the meeting:

[Begin So Recording] Comrades: Under the moving circumstances during which the entire party, the entire nation, and all of the people vigorously carry out the chuche orientation of the entire society and the three revolutions -- ideological, technological, and cultural -- and during which the South Korean people and the overseas compatriots vigorously wage the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle and the patriotic struggle for national reunification, we today significantly mark the 15th anniversary of publication of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's immortal work, "The Joint Struggle of the Revolutionary Asian People Against the U.S. Imperialists Will Be Victorious Without Fail."

Greeting this day, all of the Korean people again warmly feel the justness and great vitality of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's historic 6 August 1971 speech, which opened a new epochal turning point in our people's struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the nation. We recall with deep emotion the proud course during which we vigorously advanced along the single road of national reunificaton elucidated by the great leader over the past 15 years.

The great leader's immortal work was published when the confrontation and struggle became extremely acute between the anti-imperialist peace-loving forces and the aggressive imperialist forces in the international arena, when complex situations were being created in the political development of the world, and when the people's aspirations for national reunification grew higher than ever before.

As is known to all, the international situation during the early 70's was very complex and eventful due to new moves which showed drastic change. In particular, the U.S. imperialists were rejected everywhere by the anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle of the revolutionary Asian people. The U.S. imperialists' aggressive Asian policy was faced with a crisis of overall collapse in the areas. Even within the United States, the antiwar and antigovernment movement was unprecedentedly enhanced and economic catastrophe was further deepened. In addition, contradiction and discord within the internal leadership began to grow more acute with each passing day.

Putting forth the so-called new Asian policy designed to make the Asian people fight against one another, the U.S. imperialists, attempting to save their deteriorating situation, maneuvered to implement this policy. However, this could not halt their destiny of failure. The U.S. imperialists, backed into a corner at home and abroad, attempted to improve relations with large countries while further strengthening aggressive maneuvers more viciously against small and divided countries, thus adhering to double-dealing tactics. As the first step to implement the cunning double-dealing policy of the U.S. imperialists, Nixon announced a plan to visit the PRC. Concerning Nixon's visit to China, varying speculation and views circulated throughout the world. At that time, in his historic 6 August speech, the great leader sagaciously evaluated Nixon's Chinese visit as evidence of the overall bankruptcy of the blockade policy persistently implemented against the PRC for a long time and as a visit by one who had suffered a defeat and turned out with a white flag as his nation's fortunes began to decline.

The great leader proposed a wise policy for the people of all nations of the world pursuing revolution to heighten vigilance in firm unity against the imperialists' double-dealing tactics and to cut the last windpipe of the imperialists, who were on a downward slide.

The great leader in particular elucidated a new anti-imperialist struggle strategy for the people of revolutionary Asian countries to vigorously wage a joint struggle against the U.S. imperialists and the Japanese militarists by further strengthening the anti-U.S. and anti-imperialism united front. As the great leader elucidated a revolutionary strategy for the anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle based on scientific analysis of the prevailing situation, world public opinion, which had been in temporary confusion, stabilized and the revolutionary people in Asia and around the world were able to firmly maintain their principled position against imperialism and came to have a powerful weapon with which they could wage the anti-imperialist, anti-U.S. struggle more powerfully. [applause]

In his historic speech, the great leader not only put forth the strategy of the anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle based on scientific analysis and the evaluation of the situation in Asia and the overall international situation, but also elucidated a new epochal policy to accelerate the independent and peaceful reunification of the nation.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: We are prepared to meet with, at any time, all political parties and public organizations in South Korea, including the Democratic-Republican Party, as well as individual figures.

At that time, a very favorable situation for our people's struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of the nation was being created in our country.

All the people in the northern half of the republic brilliantly achieved the historic cause of socialist industrialization by embodying the revolutionary line of independence, self-reliance, and self-defense.

They did so by upholding the banner of the immortal chuche idea and more firmly consolidating the revolutionary bases in the northern half politically, economically, and militarily.

The South Korean people, encouraged by the successes in socialist construction in the northern half of the Republic, more fiercely waged the struggle to expedite freedom, democracy, and the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland. The South Korean puppets, frightened by the situation which developed in favor of revolution at home and abroad, more undisguisedly perpetrated acts to preserve their remaining life by depending on the U.S. imperialists and the Japanese reactionaries and further strengthened maneuvers to perpetuate the nation's division while loudly raving about peace and reunification.

The rapidly changing situation at home and abroad urgently required that we take a new step for national salvation and take the lead in pioneering the road to independent and peaceful reunification of the country with the united strength of the nation. It was then that the great leader set forth a policy of holding extensive negotiations with all political parties, including the ruling party, public organizations, and individual figures of South Korea.

The policy of extensive negotiations proclaimed by the respected and beloved leader embodies the noble position of loving the country and the nation enough to subordinate everything to solving the problem of reunifying the country -- the foremost task of the nation -- and to open a new phase for reunifying the country, the long-cherished desire of the nation, by the total mobilization of the entire nation. This policy put forward by the great leader also contains the broad and deep capacity and maganimity, providing opportunity, even for those who committed crimes against the country and the nation, for them to cleanse themselves of their crimes and resuscitate themselves along the road to reunifying the country.

Truly, the policy of extensive North-South negotiations proclaimed anew by the great leader is an epochal nation-saving step which precisely reflects the ardent desire of all Korean people to bring an end to the tragedy of national division and to reunify the country at an early date, and it is a most wise policy of negotiation exactly conforming to the demands of the situation at home and abroad. [applause]

Therefore, the policy of extensive negotiation set forth anew by the great leader evoked extensive support and consensus among the peace-loving people of the world, as well as all Korean people at home and abroad, as soon as it was made public, and demonstrated great vitality. While the voices of the people at home and abroad welcoming and supporting the great leader's historic 6 August speech rose higher with each passing day, those in the South Korean social and political circles strongly asserted that our policy of extensive North-South negotiation should be accepted.

Under such circumstances, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, who had long opposed even contacts between the North and South, could no longer keep the door closed and were compelled to respond, reluctantly, to our proposal for extensive North-South negotiations, though these were in the form of Red Cross talks. This resulted in opening the door between the North and South that had been firmly closed for over a quarter of a century, opening a way to contacts and dialogue at long last and leading to high-level North-South political talks.

In particular, a new situation was created between the North and South in which the historic 4 July North-South joint statement, the basic contents of which were the three principles for reunifying the country -- independence, peaceful reunification, and grand national unity -- was issued.

That dialogue between the North and South, which was held for the first time in 26 years since the division of the country and the nation, resulting in issuance of the North-South joint statement, was entirely the shining realization of the policy of extensive North-South negotiations proclaimed by the great leader in his historic 6 August speech and of the policy of the independent and peaceful reunification consistently maintained by our party. It was a valuable first success brought about by the serious effort and endless struggle of our party and people to reunify the country. [applause]

Because dialogue was held between the North and South and the 4 July North-South joint statement was issued pursuant to the policy of extensive North-South negotiations set forth by the great leader, the South Korean people came to have greater endless reverence and admiration for the respected and beloved leader; their adoration for the northern half of the republic, where the immortal chuche idea is brilliantly realized, became stronger with each passing day; and the mood to reunify the country was heightened more than ever.

Because the respected and beloved leader put forward a policy of extensive North-South negotiations in his historic 6 August speech, a new epochal change was brought about in our people's struggle to reunify the country. This was another shining achievement which the great leader has made along the sacred patriotic road to independent and peaceful reunification of the country. [applause]

Taking this significant opportunity, I respectfully give the greatest glory and warmest gratitude to Comrade Kim Il-song -- the great leader of our party and people, the peerless patriot and lodestar of the country's reunification who scientifically analyzes the situation at home and abroad with extraordinary insight and wisely leads our people's struggle for reunification of the country -- with the endless feelings of reverence and admiration and the blazing loyalty of all Korean people. [applause] [end recording]

[So Yun-sok], the reporter, continued noting in detail how our party and the government of the republic have made every possible effort to lead the dialogue between North and South to success and to facilitate reunification of the country based on the three principles of reunification since the great leader put forward the policy of extensive North-South negotiation in his historic 6 August speech.

He then exposed in detail how the South Korean puppets have turned away from our just policy of reunifying the country, pursued the two Koreas plot, scheming from the first day of dialogue to maintain division rather than work for reunification, and driven the North-South dialogue into a state of complete frustration in conspiracy and collusion with the U.S. masters.

He also exposed how the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets desperately attempted to block the progress of North-South dialogue by conducting the extremely provocative "Team Spirit-86" joint military exercise, although we made a series of constructive proposals last year and this year to open a new phase for peace and peaceful reunification by leading a multichannelled North-South dialogue to success and continue to make active efforts to provide a good atmosphere and environment for North-South dialogue.

He continued, exposing how the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique is unprecedentedly stepping up suppression with the U.S. imperialists' backing, discussing the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and the antifascist struggle for democratization by the South Korean students and people, and discussing how the puppet clique is absurdly relating them to us.

He also said that the commotion of war and the anticommunist confrontation maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets, which have become more open with each passing day, are leading the situation on the Korean peninsula closer to the brink of war and that North-South dialogue is on the crossroad of resumption or complete rupture.

He also stated that the South Korean ruling gang, with U.S. backing, rejected our proposal for talks by military persons in authority for the alleviation of tension, peace, and dialogue and conducted a new large-scale exercise of total wartime mobilization called "Ulchi-86" which mobilized numerous members of the puppet army, the puppet police, and even residents. He sternly condemned this as an open challenge to the consistent yearning of all Korean people and the peace-loving people of the world for the alleviation of tension on the Korean peninsula, peace, and reunification and as an intolerable crime pushing North-South dialogue deeper to frustration.

The reporter continued: [Begin So Yun-sok recording] The entire course of the struggle over the past 15 years to reunify the country based on the policy put forward by the great leader in his historic 6 August speech eloquently shows who truly desires peace and peaceful reunification in our country and who is scheming for war and division, who truly desires dialogue and who seeks confrontation.

The U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets are the unpardonable warmongers who oppose peace and the peaceful reunification of our country and persistently seek confrontation and war. They are vicious splittists and destroyers of dialogue. With surging national indignation, I sternly denounce the U.S. imperialists for laying grave obstacles before dialogue, peace, and peaceful reunification while occupying Korea with armed forces and exercising a malicious colonial and fascist rule. I also denounce the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique, a group of fascist dictators, war maniacs, national splittists, and treacherous traitors for being bent on fascism, war, treachery, and division in collusion with foreign forces.

Comrades, our people are assigned the urgent task of easing the strained situation, of preventing the danger of war, and of pioneering the road to independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Removing the state of military confrontation between the North and South and dispelling the danger of war are the most important conditions for peaceful reunification of the fatherland.

During the situation in which the North and South confront each other while pointing a gun and the danger of fratricidal war prevails, no contact and negotiation between the North and South can attain good success, and genuine national unity and reunification cannot be achieved. Today, the state of military confrontation between the North and South is reaching an extreme. An acute situation in which the fuse of war could be ignited prevails in our country where a huge number of armed forces sharply confront each other across the Military Demarcation Line.

If war breaks out again in our country during the situation in which some 1,000 nuclear weapons are deployed in South Korea, it will easily become a nuclear war and, thus, go beyond the bounds of the Korean peninsula and plunge Asia and the world into the holocaust of war. This grave situation urgently demands that measures for military detente be taken before anything else.

Only when measures for military detente are taken can the dagger in the bosom be removed, an atmosphere for holding an authoritative dialogue [himi innun taehwa] be created, and a wide road to peace and peaceful reunification be opened.

Precisely for this road to detente, dialogue, and peace we have proposed holding talks between military authorities. Talks between military authorities should be promptly held. The United States and South Korean authorities should not seek the road of confrontation and war, but should show an affirmative response to our constructive peace proposal at an early date.

The Korean peninsula should be turned into a nuclear-free zone of peace to prevent war and consolidate peace in our country. Turning the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free zone of peace is the unanimous demand of the Korean people and the aspiration of the people and the political and social circles of all countries which oppose war and love peace. Precisely for this reason, a series of proposals to turn the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free zone of peace, set forth in a statement by the government of the republic last June, arouse active support and welcome from a broad range of social and political circles around the world.

The United States must look straight at the tenor of the times, give up its wild ambition to trigger a new nuclear war in Korea, and immediately withdraw its nuclear weapons from South Korea.

If any negotiation is needed in connection with our proposal to turn the Korean peninsula into a nuclear-free zone of peace, we are willing to respond to the negotiations at any time without confining their form. If it genuinely wants to prevent nuclear war and preserve peace, the United States should, first of all, work to make the Korean peninsula a nuclear-free zone of peace and unhesitatingly respond to the proposal put forward in the statement of the government of our Republic dated 23 June.

To guarantee a durable peace on the Korean peninsula and provide a basic prerequisite for achieving peaceful reunification, we should realize tripartite talks -- just as we have already proposed -- with the participation of the DPRK, the United States, and South Korea. We will continuously exert efforts to realize political talks and will patiently wait for a response to these talks by the United States and the South Korean authorities.

The United States and the South Korean authorities should abandon, at the earliest possible date, their erroneous refusal of all of our rational proposals for true detente, dialogue, and peace, and should quickly and affirmatively respond to our peace proposal by adopting any methods and forms whatsoever.

Cohosting the 24th Olympics by the North and South to eliminate the state of tension and confrontation on the Korean peninsula today and expedite peaceful reunification poses a most important question. Holding the 24th Olympics in Seoul, South Korea alone will aid the political plot of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to concoct two Koreas by intensifying confrontation between the North and South and by disguising South Korea, a colony of the U.S. imperialists, as an independent country, and will bring about a grave consequence that will greatly hinder wholesome development of the international Olympic movement, whose ideals are peace, friendship, and unity. Therefore, we demand that the 24th Olympics be cohosted by North and South of Korea, and we will unsparingly exert every effort to realize this demand.

The South Korean authorities should abandon their dark, hidden desire to use the Olympics for an impure political aim by winning support from foreign forces and should behave sincerely and cohost the 24th Olympics with the North. If the 24th Olympics are cohosted by the North and South, we will provide sufficient conditions for successfully holding all sporting events in the areas of our side. We will also provide great convenience to all people, including athletes, sports workers, and reporters.

The reunification of our country should be achieved based on the three-point principle delineated in the historic 4 July joint statement -- independence, peaceful reunification, and grand national unity. This reunification should also be achieved through the method of founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo. [applause]

To achieve the fatherland's reunification, we should achieve the independence and democratization of South Korean society. Under circumstances plagued by fascist tyranny, the South Korean students and people have traversed the single road of patriotic struggle for 15 years to achieve independence, democracy, and reunification. The South Korean students and people have performed proud exploits in overthrowing the Yusin dictator through their resolute democratic struggle and in shaking the U.S. imperialists' colonial rule from its base. In particular, the Kwangju people's uprising in May 1980 vigorously demonstrated our people's heroic and unyielding fighting spirit to the world, causing the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to become greatly panic-stricken and uneasy and opening a new, brilliant chapter in the history of the South Korean people's nation-saving struggle to achieve freedom and liberation. [applause]

Since then, directing the brunt of the struggle toward the U.S. imperialists, the South Korean students and people have fiercely kindled the flames of the anti-U.S. struggle throughout South Korea to achieve independence.

On behalf of all the Korean people and as one of their fellow countrymen, I positively support and encourage the anti-U.S. struggle for independence and antifascist struggle for democracy of the South Korean students and people and extend firm solidarity with these struggles. [applause] Continuously upholding the anti-U.S. banner of independence and the antifascist banner of democracy, which they have already held aloft, the South Korean students and people should tenaciously struggle until they banish the U.S. imperialists from South Korea, end their colonial rule, overthrow the military fascist ruling system, and achieve the democratic development of society.

The South Korean people from all walks of life, including workers and peasants, should positively support and encourage the righteous nation-saving struggle of the patriotic students and should wage the pan-national, anti-U.S., and antifascist struggle to save the country. The U.S. imperialists should not maintain their colonial rule over South Korea, should not pursue the criminal policy of two Koreas, and should withdraw from South Korea without delay in accordance with the unanimous demand of the people at home and abroad and in accordance with the decision of the 30th UN General Assembly, taking their aggressive forces and all lethal weapons with them.

The Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique should stop suppressing the people in a fascist manner and should relinquish power without delay, taking responsibility for turning South Korea into a desolate grave of democracy and into a barren land for human rights, as we see today.

To achieve peace and the peaceful reunification of the country, all the people should achieve grand unity and join their efforts. Regardless of whether they are from the North, the South, or from overseas, and regardless of their ideologies, political views, factions, or affiliations all Koreans who love the country and people and who are concerned over the future of the people should firmly unite under the banner of the fatherland's reunification and positively strive to achieve the cause of reunification through unity. Many obstacles and difficulties lie on our people's future path toward the struggle to achieve the fatherland's reunification. However, we will courageously wade through any grim and thorny road with a patriotic will to achieve reunification and will strive to the end to build a single, prosperous, and reunified Korea in the 3,000-ri land by achieving the historic cause of the fatherland's reunification through the united effort of all the people. [applause]

The people of the northern half of the republic have a weighty but honorable task to expedite the fatherland's reunification. With high revolutionary vigilance, all workers should acutely watch the maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and South Korean puppets to provoke a new war and concoct two Koreas, and should work and live in a revolutionary manner, always assuming a tense and mobilized posture. The future path of our people tenaciously struggling and upholding the profound program for reunification delineated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and following the wise leadership of the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il to achieve the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification, will always be victorious and glorious. [applause]

Let us firmly unite around the party Central Committee led by the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song, uphold the revolutionary banner of the great chuche idea, and much more vigorously struggle to achieve the complete victory of socialism in the northern half of the republic and the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification and to complete the chuche revolutionary cause. [applause] [end recording]

S. KOREANS URGED TO BECOME INDEPENDENT OF U.S.

SK100855 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0838 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 10 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today comes out with a signed article headlined "Independence of South Korean Society is Guarantee of Anti-War, Anti-Nuclear Peace", which says in part:

A basic guarantee for dispelling the danger of war and preserving and consolidating peace on the Korean peninsula is to realise the independence of South Korean society. South Korea is an out-and-out colony of the U.S. imperialists and the biggest nuclear forward base in the Far East. The presence of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces in South Korea itself constitutes a hotbed of war. If war is to be prevented and peace preserved and consolidated in Korea, the U.S. imperialist aggression forces must withdraw from South Korea, taking along their nuclear weapons. This will be made possible only when the independence of South Korean society is realised.

Realising the independence of South Korean society means that South Korea frees itself from the control and subordination by the United States. In other words, it means putting an end to the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and policy of aggression. When all the patriotic forces of South Korea take an active part in anti-war, anti-nuclear peace campaign under the banner of independence against U.S. imperialism, the U.S. imperialists will be unable to stay on in South Korea but be driven out of there.

CHON ON DOMESTIC POLITICS, RELATIONS WITH NORTH

[Text] Seoul, Aug 11 (YONHAP) -- South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan Monday urged North Korea to agree to hold a summit meeting "at an early date," and to reopen the existing channels of dialogue between Seoul and Pyongyang. In a press conference held at Chongwadae, the presidential mansion, Chon appealed to North Korea to participate in the Seoul Asian Games this year, as well as the 1988 Seoul Olympics. As leader of the host nation, Chon expressed the hope that "our compatriots in the North, in addition to the presence of their athletic team, will join us in watching the two major international sports festivals and in sharing with us the honor and glory of hosting them."

Chon said that he wants to use the summit as an occasion to discuss national security. He also expressed concern over North Korea's current efforts to rapidly strengthen its military links with the Soviet Union. The president pointed out that a high Soviet military officer recently disclosed that the Soviet Pacific Navy is ready to wage joint operations with North Korea, indicating the possibility that Soviet ground forces may intervene on behalf of North Korea.

He said that the next two to three years will be a crucial period encompassing the Seoul Olympics and the peaceful change of the South Korean Government. Considering such a situation , he continued, the South Korean people should be alert and vigilant during the period.

If war does not break out on the Korean peninsula, Chon predicted, North Korea will have to modify its stance in light of the enormous gap in various fields between the two Koreas. He said that if Pyongyang maintains its current socio-political system, it will be compelled to take considerable interest in earnest dialogue with South Korea. Last January, North Korea boycotted all scheduled talks with South Korea, including economic and Red Cross talks.

Concerning the planned constitutional revision, the president called on the ruling and opposition parties to discard "self-interest, and partisan gains and starategies" in order to reach agreement on constitutional revision through "genuine dialogue and compromise." He said that the new constitution should be conducive to "genuine democratic progress, sustained national development and greater public welfare." There is no need to slow down the constitutional revision process, Chon said, and the sooner the matter is successfully concluded, the better. "Should any side turn its back on the principles of compromise and accommodation and insist on ramming through an amendment proposal based on its unilateral partisan strategy, it would not be able to avoid public questioning and rebuke, and would have to take responsibility in history," he said.

Regarding he ruling Democratic Justice Party's presidential candidate, the president said that "any member of the DJP who is legally qualified can run for party candidate." He said, however, that the candidate should be a person with the trust of the general public, the respect of his party colleagues and the capability of "astutely and resolutely dealing with the difficult and grave matters that constantly confront the nation." When a constitutional amendment bill is prepared by the national assembly, he added, the nation's political timetable will take a more concrete form and clearer answers will then be provided.

Concerning speculation about a coming reshuffle of the cabinet and DJP leadership, he said that the frequent changing of personnel would undermine the consistency of work and the efficiency of the government administration. Chon added, however, that it would be "appropriate'" to reorganize the government and the government party "if and when a new situation demands new people." "This kind of reorganization is an indspensable ingredient of statecraft for coping with changing circumstances," he said.

Chon expressed particular concern over and pledged stern and resolute actions against the recent emergence of radical leftist students and hardline dissident groups, which he said are "certainly a serious problem." The president said that those groups' search for reform is "nothing other than a revolution to overthrow our liberal democratic system." Noting that South Korea faces tenacious campaigns of agitation and sabotage by the North Korean communist regime, Chon said, "to us, pro-communist radicalism is not an abstract theory or a temporary ailment of society: it is a challenge to our national security and survival." He said that the government intends to make even greater efforts to properly guide and reorient those students who have temporarily turned sympathetic to radical leftist ideology or the theory of violent revolution by playing the role of their parents and siblings. "However, the extremely indoctrinated hard-core radicals, habitual masterminds of violent demonstrations and others who are beyond guidance will have to be removed from the campuses and society in accordance with the law," he said. "We can never tolerate violence and other unlawful acts that will destabilize the nation and society, no matter in what name, ism or cause they are committed -- whether in quest of constitutional change or democratization," Chon continued. "To safeguard national survival and security, I renew my pledge to sternly and resolutely deal with such acts by invoking all the powers vested in the office of the president under the Constitution," he added.

Chon has repeatedly stressed his intention to become the first Korean president to step down precisely at the end of his prescribed term in office. He said he hopes that the day when he honorably leaves Chongwadae of his own volition will long be appreciated by future generations as the day that a new era of genuine democracy was opened in Korean history. Although his term of office will expire in about 18 months, Chon said that in the cause of "national advancement," he will not tolerate any situation that causes citizens to become anxious and worried. "No matter what may come, I will do everything in my power to maintain and enhance a social climate conducive to productive work. My administration is unwaveringly determined to protect and promote the well-being of all citizens. The government is strong and powerful enough to back up this pledge," he said.

Pointing out that Korea now stands at a crossroads of national history leading either to further progress or to retrogression, Chon said that the country's success or failure will depend on a series of major tasks in two to three years, including the 1986 Asian Games, the 1988 Seoul Olympic Games and the first-ever peaceful transition of power, also scheduled for 1988. "If we successfully accomplish these momentous tasks and continue to grow steadily under conditions of stability through the 1990's as we are now doing, I am confident that Korea will not fail to reach the very forefront of development," he said.

DJP, NKDP, KNP React

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 11 (YONHAP) -- The ruling Democratic Justice Party (DJP) said Monday that President Chon Tu-hwan gave the people "fresh confidence and courage" by frankly voicing his opinions on a wide range of state affairs in Monday morning's news conference. In an official party statement, DJP spokesman Sim Myong-po said, "Today's news conference by President Chon, which featured a frank expression of experience and confidence, as head of state, on general affairs and pending issues, gave confidence and courage to the people, who are looking forward to social stability and political development." Sim continued: "We welcome wholeheartedly President Chon's firm determination never to allow circumstances that will make the people feel uneasy, and to fulfill the key points of his party's policy of expanding the middle class." The DJP spokesman said that his party expects all the people to work toward stability and development in accordance with the president's determination at this critical point in time, when the nation should establish a milestone for true democracy.

The opposition camp was less supportive in its assessment of Chon's comments, however. Rep. Kang Sam-chae, deputy spokesman for the main opposition New Korea Democratic Party (NKDP), said that his party was "disappointed" by the absence of comments on pending political issues such as the release of political prisoners. "We could not restrain our disappointment over the president's lack of sincerity in the press conference about matters involving the creation of an atmosphere conducive to constitutional revision, such as the release of political prisoners and the granting of amnesty and restoration of civil rights for dissident leader Kim Tae-chung," Kang said. The minor Korea National Party (KNP) said that the press conference was insufficient because Chon did not mention measures to calm down public sentiment, which deteriorated as a result of a series of pending issues, including the recent independence hall fire and Korean-U.S. trade issues.

Business Organizations React

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 11 (YONHAP) -- South Korea's four major economic organizations Monday welcomed President Chon Tu-hwan's economic policies, as outlined in a press conference on Monday. The organizations said that Chon's remarks reflected his firm determination to promote the development of the national economy and the stabilization of the nation's standard of living.

Chon expressed his confidence in the future of the national economy, the Korea Chamber of Commerce and Industry said. The president's emphasis on the development of the capital goods industry well presented the most urgent task facing the Korean economy, according to chamber. Chon's contention that Korea should improve the many structural weaknesses of its economy is a common view held by Korean business circles, it said. The Federation of Korean Industries also welcomed Chon's policy direction of strengthening efforts to develop domestic substitutes for machnery and plant equipment, and parts and components, for which Korea has depended heavily on other countries, and to foster the capital goods industry. It said that all Koreans should make concentrated efforts to establish a surplus in the nation's international balance of payments The Korean Traders Association and the Korea Federation of Small Businesses made similar comments supporting Chon's policy of boosting the capital goods industry, which it called a "timely" decision, considering the fact that Korea's dependence on Japanese goods has been growing, despite the sharp rise in the value of the Japanese yen.

SIHANOUK ON PRC DIPLOMATIC FLEXIBILITY

[By Francis Deron]

[Text] Thai-Cambodia Border, Aug 10 (AFP) -- China is trying to strengthen its diplomatic position by showing new flexibility towards the Cambodian crisis, Prince Norodom Sihanouk said Sunday. He said that China is trying to muster support from the international community by promising a cut in the forces of the Khmer Rouge, the biggest coalition group, if the Vietnamese leave Cambodia.

The prince was speaking to reporters at a "mobile" guerilla base run by his forces in the northern Cambodia province of Oddar Meanchey near the Thai border. He was there to receive the credentials of a new ambassador from a country friendly to his U.N. recognised resistance government.

The leader of the anti-Vietnamese resistance in Cambodia also said that although Beijing was showing new flexibility, China was determined not to lose ground to the Soviet-Vietnamese alliance. An eventual thaw in relations between China and the Soviet Union, which backs Vietnam, would have little effect on the guerrilla war being waged in his country, the prince said.

Prince Sihanouk heads the tripartite Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK), whose 50,000 guerrillas have been fighting some 140,000 Vietnamese troops stationed in Cambodia since late 1978 to prop-up the Heng Samrin regime in Phnom Penh.

The "suggestion" of a Khmer Rouge troopcut, put forward by the Chinese Communist Party chief Hu Yaobang, was aimed at enhancing the CGDK's position at the next session of the U.N. General Assembly, Prince Sihanouk said.

Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan, who was with the prince when he talked to reporters Sunday, said the Khmer Rouge had "not yet given thought" to the Chinese proposal.

Prince Sihanouk had said earlier that the Chinese party chief proposed that Khmer Rouge forces, currently 35,000 strong, be cut to the same level as those of the other two CGDK partners -- the National Sihanoukist Army and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) led by Son Sann. Prince Sihanouk also said that he had been assured "there will be no softening" of China's stand against Soviet military support for Vietnam and that China would maintain a strong military presence on the Sino-Vietnamese border.

He predicted that his government would receive "almost the same number" of votes as it did last year at the next U.N. General Assembly for a resolution demanding the complete withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia. The CGDK holds the Cambodian seat at the United Nations.

Prince Sihanouk said that his presence at the guerrilla base was proof that the Cambodian resistance still intended to "bleed" Vietnamese forces despite Hanoi's military success against the resistance since 1985. "The situation is changing step by step in favour of the resistance," he said, referring to guerrilla claims to have stepped-up activities recently inside Cambodia.

Prince Sihanouk was receiving the credentials of Bakri Aiyub Ghazzali, the new Malaysian ambassador to his government. It was the first time the prince had performed such a ceremony in an area held by his troops. Previous ceremonies had been held in Khmer Rouge-controlled territory. It was also the first time that representatives from the KPNLF had participated. The ceremony was organized with the help of Thai authorities who transported reporters to the unidentified guerrilla base in military trucks. Both resistance and Thai military authorities refused to indicate where the ceremony was held or release the name of the base, saying only that it was a "mobile base" like five others established by resistance forces since the fall of several large frontier camps in late 1984 and early 1985.

Prince Sihanouk's son Norodom Ranariddh, the commander of Sihanoukist forces, said there were 4,000 men at the base, with barracks hidden in the jungle.

Prince Sihanouk also gave leaders of the KPNLF, which split into two rival factions almost a year ago, an appeal from Singapore Premier Lee Kwan Yew to "achieve reconciliation as soon as possible."

The prince is scheduled to preside Monday over a CGDK cabinet meeting and visit a Cambodian refugee camp in Thailand where the families of some of his followers live.

Says No New Peace Plan

BK090350 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 6 Aug 86 p 9

[Text] Prince Norodom Sihanouk said yesterday he would not propose new initiatives on the Cambodian resistance's eight-point peace plan as these may upset China.

While he agreed with Foreign Minister S. Dhanabalan that the peace proposal could be improved upon to make it more acceptable to the international community and Vietnam, he felt that the time to do this "is not right".

The President of the un-recognised Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea told newsmen at a press conference at Mandarin Hotel before leaving for Bangkok: "I know China and the Khmer Rouge are not yet ready to listen to me."

From his remarks, Prince Sihanouk made it very clear he believed China to be calling the shots in the search for a political solution to the eight-year-old Cambodian conflict.

He said he, too, was all for disarming the fighting forces and having international peace-keeping forces in Cambodia after the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops -- two elements which Mr. Dhanabalan would like to be included in the eight-point plan -- if it were not for China's stand.

China and the pro Beijing Khmer Rouge guerillas, he said, are against disarming the fighting factions. The possibilities of them changing their position are "remote".

"So, for the time being, I am keeping quiet as far as new initiatives are concerned. I will not make new proposals. We will have to wait for the right time to do so."

However, he said there has been a slight shift in China's position, following his meeting with Mr. Hu Yaobang, General Secretary of the Chinese Communist Party, on July 3.

China, he revealed, has agreed that it would reduce the "effectiveness" of Khmer Rouge fighters and bring its military strength on parity with the other Cambodian resistance forces led by himself and Mr. Son Sann -- if Vietnam agrees to pull out its troops.

He said he sent a "confidential" letter to Mr. Dhanablan two days ago, informing him of China's more "flexible" attitude. He will convey the same to the other ASEAN leaders.

On his meetings with the Prime Minister, Mr. Lee Kuan Yew, and Mr. Dhanabalan, Prince Sihanouk, who was here with his wife Princess Monique on a four-day official visit, reported that both leaders expressed satisfaction with the progress made by the Cambodian resistance fighters in the battlefield.

He added that he agreed with Mr. Dhanabalan that the coalition forces should change their image to project themselves as more sincere rather than as hardline communists or socialists.

If he had his way, he said, he would change the name Democratic Kampuchea to Cambodia, and change the colour of its flag -- "it's too red. I would like to add some blue and white, with the silhouette of Angkor Wat in the middle".

Prince Sihanouk and his wife left last night for Bangkok. They will also visit Indonesia and Malaysia before flying to Europe and New York, where he will lead the CGDK delegation at the UN.

KHIEU SAMPHAN NONCOMMITTAL ON FORCE REDUCTION

BK101411 Kuala Lumpur BERNAMA in English 1056 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Kampuchean Liberated Zone, Aug 10 (OANA-BERNAMA) -- Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan was noncommittal Sunday when asked about China's suggestion that its forces be reduced to the level of its noncommunist partners in the Kampuchean resistance coalition after Vietnamese troops leave Kampuchea.

Stressing the need to consider all "national imperatives" he said even after Vietnam withdraws "the Vietnamese will always be at our door, ready to come back."

Khieu Samphan, who is vice-president of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea (CGDK), said the suggestion would be examined once there was a breakthrough in the current deadlock in Kampuchea.

The suggestion made by Chinese leader Hu Yaobang to Prince Sihanouk had not yet been thought about, Khieu Samphan added.

"What I can tell, what is clear, is that we must be united now as well as after the Vietnamese withdraw to ensure national defence."

Prince Sihanouk, who announced the suggestion in Singapore, has clarified that it was not a new element in the coalition's eight point peace plan.

The Chinese suggestion would cut the Khmer Rouge force now numbering about 30,000 to the level of the two non-communist groups -- the Sihanoukian Nationalist Army (ANS) who has about 11,000 armed fighters and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) which has 15,000.

Khieu Samphan's comments came during a press conference given by Prince Sihanouk at the resistance base where he received the credentials of Malaysian Ambassador to Thailand Bakri Aiyub Ghazali who is also accredited to the CGDK.

The base belonging to the ANS is located 4 kilometres from the Thai border oppposite Thailand's north-east Surin Province.

Khieu Samphan also said that it was impossible for the Khmer Rouge, which now calls itself the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea, to unite with the Heng Samrin regime to rule Kampuchea after Vietnam withdraws.

He added, however, that the Khmer Rouge accepted the principles of national reconciliation who would allow participation of the Heng Samrin regime in the eventual government in Kampuchea. [sentence as received]

"But first Vietnam must withdraw. We are ready to permit Vietnam to withdraw with honour and dignity," he said.

KHIEU SAMPHAN MESSAGE TO WU XIEQIAN ON FLOODS

[Text] To Excellency Wu Xueqian
Member of the State Council and Minister of foreign affairs of the PRC

Excellency:

I am very grieved to hear about floods in Jilin Province and other regions in China during which millions of Chinese people have suffered and tens of thousands of houses, millions of hectares of rice fields, and other property have been destroyed. On behalf of the Cambodian people and the CGDK an in my own name, I would like to express most grievous condolences to the Chinese people and government as well as all the bereaved families. Please accept by highest regards.

Greets Singapore National Day

BK090417 (Clandestine) Voice of the National Army of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian 2315 GMT 8 Aug 86

[8 Aug "greetings message from Khieu Samphan, Democratic Kampuchean vice president in charge of foreign affairs, to His Excellency Suppiah Dhanabalan, foreign minister of the Republic of Singapore"]

[Text] To His Excellency Suppiah Dhanabalan, foreign minister of the Republic of Singapore:

Excellency: On the auspicious occasion of the national day of the Republic of Singapore, on behalf of the Cambodian people and the CGDK and in my own name, I am honored and very glad to extend to you and, through you, to the government and friendly people of Singapore our warmest greetings and best wishes. May the Republic of Singapore score new and greater successes in all-round development and may the people of Singapore enjoy happiness and well-being forever.

Availing ourselves of this auspicious occasion, the Cambodian people, the CGDK, and I would like once again to express our deepest thanks to you and the government and people of Singapore for your firm support and assistance to the struggle for national liberation and racial defense waged by our Cambodian people and the CGDK against foreign aggression and occupation.

Recently, the Republic of Singapore and the other ASEAN member countries were among the first nations to voice their support for the CGDK's 8-point proposal for a political settlement of the Cambodian problem. The continuous and active support given us by the Republic of Singapore and other friendly ASEAN countries constitutes a great encouragement to our Cambodian people and National Army, who are waging the struggle on the battlefield, and a valuable contribution to the search for peace in Cambodia and to the defense of peace, security, and stability in Southeast Asia, the Asian-Pacific region, and elsewhere in the world. I would like to express deepest gratitude to you and the government and people of Singapore for this.

With the firm conviction that the traditional bond of friendship and cooperation that binds our two nonaligned countries will further strengthen and flourish, I would like Your Excellency to please accept my highest regards.

COMMENTARY ON SOVIET INITIATIVES FOR ASIA, PACIFIC

[Unattributed commentary: "Support the Soviet Union's Initiatives on Peace and Security in the Asia-Pacific Region"]

[Text] The Asia-Pacific region covers one-third of the earth and is inhabited by two-thirds of the world's population. This region, which is rich in various natural resources, has become a base and an area of military influence for the United States. The United States uses this region as its base and an area of military influence for threatening and suppressing the various struggle movements for independence and democracy of the nations in the region and for forcing these nations to follow the U.S. policy of encircling and pressuring the various countries currently struggling for independence and those refusing to follow in its footsteps and of positively assisting counterrevolutionaries in opposing the indendence-loving states through its undeclared wars here and there.

In addition, the United States has pursued a policy of encouraging one country to continuously contradict, confront, and clash with other countries.

In Southeast Asia, with the approval of the international reactionaries, the United States has incited continuous confrontations between ASEAN and the Indochinese countries, thus removing a normal and peaceful situation from Asia and the Pacific and causing tension in relations among nations in the region. This is an important cause that may easily lead this part of the world to a war.

In the face of the ever more serious situation in the region caused by the Reagan administration's policy of inciting tensions, and thereby affecting the security and stability of the various nations in the region, it is thus necessary to bring peace and security to the Asian-Pacific region -- an earnest aspiration of the nations in this region.

With its high sense of responsibility, the Soviet Union has on many occasions in the past expressed constructive intentions and initiatives to turn the Asia-Pacific region into a zone of peace and stability free from nuclear weapons. This attitude was clarified once again in CPSU Central Committee General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev's 28 July speech in Vladivostok on security and cooperation in the Asia-Pacific region.

At the recent regular session of the LPDR Council of Ministers, Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and chairman of the LPDR Council of Ministers, affirmed his vigorous support for the Soviet Union's peace initiatives. He particularly highly valued Mikhail Gorbachev's important, all-round, and detailed proposals on peace and security in Asia and the Pacific, regarding them as a very important contribution to the cause of peace and security in this part of the world.

The Soviet Union's constructive intentions and initiatives conform with the aspirations of mankind in the world and in the Asia-Pacific region and with the wishes of the Laos people. When talking about the Lao people's wishes, Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of Ministrs, stressed that after defeating the ferocious war unleashed by the U.S. imperialists, the Lao people have ardently sought to live in peace, friendship, and cooperation with all countries, particularly those in Southeast Asia and the Asia-Pacific region.

The LPDR is trying its best to contribute to the struggle to turn Southeast Asia into a region of peace, stability, and cooperation. In this struggle it has, together with the SRV and the PRK, advanced various good-intentioned proposals to reduce tension and promote dialogue among various countries in the region to settle the Cambodian problem and other issues of dispute.

The LPDR has on many occasions proposed to the Kingdom of Thailand, a neighboring and fraternal country, to normalize bilateral relations on the basis of respecting each other's independence and territorial integrity and establishing cordial, neighborly relations in conformity with the interests of the peoples of the two countries. However, it is regrettable that the various Thai ultrarightist reactionary forces have pursued a hostile policy toward the LPDR by conducting provocations, launching nibbling attacks against three Lao villages, and creating tension along the Lao-Thai border, thus running counter to the legitimate aspirations of the two peoples.

For this reason, in conformity with the overall trend of resolving clashes through talks for the sake of peaceful coexistence in the region, the Thai side must display sincerity for talks with the Lao side and join in resolving problems of mutual misunderstanding. This is to jointly heighten each side's responsibility for the fate of the people in each respective country, thus positively contributing to turning the Asia-Pacific region into a zone of peace, stability, and cooperation.

PREM 'SATISFIED' WITH FINALIZED CABINET LIST

[Excerpt] The Cabinet list has been finalised and problems between the Democrat Party negotiating team and Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon have been overcome, the BANGKOK POST was told yesterday.

The Democrat leadership assigned to negotiate formation of the government is, however, expected to face a tough session this morning from rank-and-file MPs who are unhappy with their performance.

The question of whether the Democrats would opt to become the opposition is certain to be raised, some MPs said last night.

A source, who is close to the Premier, said Gen Prem ordered the full Cabinet list to be typed out after he met Democrat leader Phichai Rattakun yesterday afternoon.

The atmosphere was said to be good during Mr Phichai's half-hour meeting with Gen Prem, who emerged "satisfied" and ordered the list to be typed.

The source did not give details of the talks, and Mr Phichai, who left the Premier's Si Sao Thewet home shortly after 2:30 pm could not be contacted for comment. [passage omitted]

DEMOCRAT PARTY LEADER PHICHAI HOSPITALIZED

BK110145 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 11 Aug 86 p 1

[Text] Democrat Party leader Phichai Rattakun was admitted to Bamrungrat Hospital yesterday and treated for bronchitis.

Mr Phichai was admitted to hospital at 4 p.m., after he met Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon at his Si Sao Thewet residence.

Mr Phichai arrived at about 3:30 p.m. along with his family including his son, Bangkok MP Phichit, sources told the BANGKOK POST last night.

The family left at about 7 p.m., sources said.

The sources said Mr Phichai seemed physically weak when he was admitted.

POST reporters were told that Mr Phichai was too ill to make any comment.

Sources said that the Democrat Party leader would stay overnight at the hospital but would be attending the party meeting at 10 a.m. today.

PRC AMBASSADOR CALLS ON, CONGRATULATES PREM

BK080948 Bangkok ZHONG HUA RIBAO in Chinese 8 Aug 86 p 4

[Text] On 7 August Prime Minister General Prem Tinsulanon received PRC Ambassador to Thailand Zhang Dewei for cordial and friendly talks at his Si Sao residence. Ambassador Zhang Dewei warmly congratulated Gen Prem Tinsulanon on his reappointment as prime minister of the Government of the Kingdom of Thailand, wishing his new cabinet greater success in its efforts to develop the country and bring about social prosperity and the people's happiness. He also expressed confidence that the traditional friendship between the peoples of China and Thailand, and the good cooperation between the two countries will strengthen and develop continuously.

Prime Minister Prem said that he has always been concerned with the long-standing good relations between Thailand and China and regarded China as most friendly toward Thailand. He appreciated China's good wishes for Thailand, adding that he is proud to be a friend of China. He asked Ambassador Zhang Dewei to convey his good wishes to Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang and the Chinese people. Prime Minister Prem also said that the traditional friendship between the peoples of Thailand and China has laid a sound foundation for the development of relations between the two countries. He is confident that the friendly relations between the two nations will further develop.

FOREIGN MINISTRY ON 10 YEARS OF TIES WITH SRV

BK081153 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1030 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] On 6 August the Foreign Ministry sent a greetings message to the SRV Foreign Ministry on the 10th anniversary of Thai-Vietnamese diplomatic relations. Following is the gist of the message:

On the 10th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between the Kingdom of Thailand and the SRV, the Thai Foreign Ministry conveys good wishes to the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry. It is the desire of Thailand to have good relations with Vietnam based on respect for each other's national independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity, as well as noninterference in each other's internal affairs. The past decade of diplomatic relations between Thailand and the SRV has been a period in which Southeast Asia lacked stability. Thailand hopes that far-sighted new leaders in Vietnam will agree with the principle of peaceful coexistence with all neighboring countries, a principle which is recognized by the international community, in the interest of the return of peace and stability to this region and greater mutual benefit of the Thai and Vietnamese people.

THAILAND OPPOSES SOUTH AFRICAN APARTHEID

[Text] On the 30th anniversary of the African women's demonstration protesting the pass law requiring black African people to carry the Pretoria government's pass cards, which falls on 8 August, Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila sent a letter to the United Nations expressing Thailand's support for the South African people's struggle against racial discrimination which constitutes a serious violation of the UN Charter and social value upheld by civilized societies.

According to Foreign Ministry Spokesman Sawanit Khongsiri, the Thai Government which adopted a policy opposing apartheid and racial discrimination and in solidarity with the South African and Namibian people in their just struggle against racial discrimination, calls for an end, immediately and completely, to the Pretoria government's policy of apartheid and racial discrimination which resulted in killings of innocent people -- as many as 1,150 died and 7,000 were arrested in September 1984 alone.

MATICHON CARRIES PRINCESS CHULAPHON INTERVIEW

BK101141 Bangkok MATICHON in Thai 8 Aug 86 p 3

[Report on interview given by Princess Chulaphon to Interviewer M.R. Thanatsi Sawatdiwat to be broadcast on the occasion of the queen's birthday, 12 August]

[Text] M.R. Thanatsi: On the occasion of Mothers' Day, today, we are to hear about the activities of Her Majesty the Queen as a mother, as the queen, and in her other capacities which benefit the nation. And there is no other better person to tell us about her than one who is close to her at all times.

I would like to ask your royal highness about rumors that the Queen is suffering from a serious illness. Some sources have even said that she is suffering from paralysis, that she cannot stand up and that she has to stay in her room without going anywhere. Is the rumor in any way true?

Princess Chulaphon: This is utterly groundless. After undergoing an operation in December 1985, the Queen has been recovering steadily. When we take exercise, I myself, although years her junior, cannot keep up with her; I feel like fainting. The queen has been absent from functions because we, her children, have asked her to take a break. If the people are angry, they should be angry with us, the children. She has been working hard for over 30 years as Queen.

We have been helping her, and so we see how hard she has worked. She starts early in the morning. At lunch time, she is again thinking, writing, doing her work. At 0200 or 0300, she is still working. There are no Saturdays or Sundays for her. She teaches us that time waits for no man, and we must carry out our duties fully. When she fell ill, we all realized that it was a good opportunity to have her take a full rese while she was recuperating.

In fact, on the basis of how we, normal people, take our break -- Saturdays, Sundays, holidays, and leave days -- the Queen is entitled to about 5 years of holidays. She has taken only 5 to 6 months of rest, and the rumors have started already. If the people are angry about her absence from social functions, they should blame us children. We all love her and we are concerned for her. Besides, we think that we are all grown up enough to help her shoulder some responsibilities.

Even though she has not appeared in public functions recently, that does not mean that the Queen has stopped working. She remains the driving force behind many projects, as before.

M.R. anatsi: I do not think that the people were angry, but rather they are concerned for her. Besides, nobody tells them what is going on or that the Queen needs some rest. There are many people who realize how hard the Queen works. The Thai people are touched by Her Majesty the Queen's dedication to her duties. They are never angry. I have heard that the Queen has been suffering from a chronic illness, some kind of an allergy. Others would never be able to stand the hard work as she has done. She has such strong determination. She never succumbs to weakness. She works until midnight. I myself work without weekend holidays, but I feel tired. I really wonder how the Queen has manged to work without weekends for over 30 years, day and night, in remote areas also. There are rumors because the people do not know the truth. Official statements only tell them the major points, and not the details -- such as she has been advised by doctors to rest. In fact, she is no longer young. Others would already have succumbed to such hard work.

I do not think the people will be angry with her children for advising her to stay away from public functions. They will understand better now after hearing this. We have been waiting for so long to know the truth. I would like to ask your royal highness: when the Queen works until 0200, 0300, does she ask for your help sometimes?

Princess Chulaphon: Most of the time yes, because I am like her personal secretary. I often took her orders and carried them out for her. Her Majesty is not only the Queen, but also as a housewife. I do what I can for her, to help her. However, there are certain things I cannot do for her. For instance, I cannot compete with her in ideas. In such cases, I ask her what I should do , and I do what she tells me. Sometimes, she would call for me at midnight. She would apologize for calling me up late, but said she had to do so because she got an idea and that she would forget it if she did not tell me right away.

This is what happens, and we are all willing to do it for her.

M.R. Thanatsi: I have seen that your royal highness is always with Her Majesty and you are therefore the person most close to her.

Princess Chulaphon: It seems so -- because I am her youngest child. I have always felt very close to my mother since childhood. No matter how I was scolded by her, I have always loved her the same way, and respected her, and always wanted to follow here wherever she goes.

M.R. Thanatsi: I really appreciate what you said. You go to sleep late, don't you?

Princes Chulaphon: I go to sleep late myself, never before midnight. Sometimes I have to take care of my little children. Sometimes, I have work to do myself. I am used to it. I cannot sleep early.

M.R. Thanatsi: The people would like to know about the Queen's regular activities at Chitlada Palace, things the public may not be aware of. Would you please tell us a little about it. For example, at what time did her majesty wake up and start her working days before she fell ill?

Princess Chulaphon: Her majesty goes to sleep or takes her meals depending on her work schedule. The Queen has difficulty in going to sleep. If she cannot go to sleep, she does not remain in bed, but continues working. In that case, if she has no early morning obligations, the Queen may wake up around 1000. From the minute she wakes up she never has time for anything else but work. Even during a meal, she may call for me or her personal secretary, Khunying Supraphada Kasemsan, to assign us duties concerning the cases of the patients whom we have met during our trips, in Bangkok and at villages upcountry. She inquires about the work of following up those cases -- whether those sick people have recovered, whether their families are hard up, whether their children receive proper schooling. She also inquires about every single handicraft project undertaken by the teachers and students under her patronage. Sometimes she sits there from 1100 until 1900 without moving.

As for myself, I admit receiving orders from her during meals many times. She must pity me because she would dismiss me at about 1900 or 2000. The Queen herself continued her work. Sometimes, she has her lunch about 1400 or 1500 and her dinner at about 2200. After that, she would spend her time reading, not for pleasure, but for expanding her knowledge. Otherwise, she would study her Support program [Foundation for the Promotion of the Supplementary Occupations and Related Technique] and the marketing of the products. She used to tell me that we must find the markets for the villagers after teaching them to make products. The Queen would continue working until midnight or 0100. Then she would pray for about an hour. She would continue work until 0300 or 0400. Sometimes she had insomnia and could not get to sleep until 0500 or 0600. When I was a student at Kasetsat University, when I still lived with her and had my bedroom next to hers, I woke up at 0600 one day to see her walking in front of her room. I greeted her and said she was up very early. She replied that she still had not gone to sleep. This is how it has been.

When we made trips upcountry and she had to attend functions at about 0900 or 1000, she never adjusted her schedule to go to sleep earlier. When working upcountry, she refused to stop if the work had not been done. All of the thousands of sick people waiting for us must get the checkups. She is like that. She used to tell me: You must consider those sick people your own children and your own relatives, not just villagers. We must give them the best.

Concerning this, we would start our mobile service early in the morning. About 2,000 sick people would be waiting for us. Some of them had not had a checkup by sunset, but she never abandoned the job. As for the handicraft project, she would sit there to examine the silk or other products brought by the villagers and give them advice about the design or the measurements. Once I remember I was with her on such a duty when we returned home at 0300 without any meal or any rest. About 12 hours work nonstop.

Before she fell ill, she went out every day to see the villagers. She said that we have such a short time for each part of the country. It was great when we could spend 2 months in certain provinces. She thinks about how many districts in a province, how many tambons in a district, and how many families in a village. She is farsighted and plans for it.

M.R. Thanatsi: I feel that she has worked too much for too long without thinking of being hungry, of her meals, or her difficulties. I think this is really a magic thing. A common man would not survive after 1 year of such hard work. How can she do it?

Princess Chulaphon: She has such a strong determination. I do not know what to say myself. I have been with her all my life, and yet I have never heard her complaining about being tired. I once asked her if she was tired. She said it was all right, she was not tired. She said other people have more difficulties than she. She only thinks of others, never of herself.

M. R. Thanatsi: I feel that only those close to her or those villagers in remote areas are aware of how hard the queen has worked. Meanwhile, the people in Bangkok or in urban areas do not seem to know much about her apart from what they see on television. There have been rumors about the Queen taking over duties.... forgive me for asking, your highness, but I have to ask the truth from you.... there has been talk that the Queen has taken over duties from His Majesty the King.

Princess Chulaphon: It's not true at all. Both His Majesty and Her Majesty are considered one, and Her Majesty would perform any kind of duties in service of His Majesty the King. She has the obligation toward him not only because he is her husband, but because he is the king. She has always told her children: We must dedicate ourselves to His Majesty the King because we owe him our gratitude. We must be loyal to him. Therefore in doing our work, we never compete with one another. Neither the King, nor the Queen, nor Princess Sirinthon, nor I myself, none of us ever think of competing with one another in order to appear more on television or in the newspaper. We carry out our duties according to the share we have been given. The King is responsible for matters concerning irrigation, water resources, and agriculture. He is being assisted by Princess Sirinthon. Her Majesty the Queen is interested in matters concerning health and welfare of the public, and she is assisted by me.

Again, there have been rumors that we are divided into camps -- the king's camp and the queen's camp. This is not true. I must admit to you that the Queen has been trying to encourage me to help the King on his work, concerning maps and other matters as well, but I am not keen on it. I cannot do it. On the other hand, I am interested in medication. That is why I have chosen this line instead of meddling with the work of His Majesty -- I would only give him more headaches.

M. R. Thanatsi: By helping Her Majesty the Queen, your highness has become close to her. This is not competing with one another, but sharing the work. This is a complete cycle. If it were a company, it would prosper. Therefore the rumor about you competing with each other for the sake of popularity is not true.

Well, we have learned many things, especially about how hard Her Majesty the Queen has been working. No ordinary people could work like her. This is why she has fallen ill. She has had such a hard time not being able to have regular meals or go to the bathroom when she needs. Anyway, I have heard that her majesty's condition has greatly improved.

Princess Chulaphon: There are no more medical bulletins on her health because she has fully recovered, but we the children continue to insist on her taking more rest. We always tell her that she does not need to do this or that because they are not important functions that need her presence.

Queen Postpones Audiences

[Text] Audiences granted by Her Majesty the Queen to birthday well-wishers have been rescheduled from this afternoon until next Monday, it was announced yesterday.

Thanpuying Supraphada Kasemsan, principal private secretary to Her Majesty, said the postponement was made necessary by rain which might inconvenience well-wishers visiting the Queen at Chitlada Palace.

OFFICIALS WELCOME DROPPING OF JENKINS BILL

BK080125 Bangkok BANGKOK POST in English 8 Aug 86 p 13

[Excerpts] Thai Government officials and the private sector yesterday joined several textile exporting countries in welcoming the decision of the U.S. House of Representatives to drop the controversial Jenkins Bill, the issue having now come to an end.

The failure to pass the bill means that the country's garment export quotas to the U.S. for 1987 and 1988 will not be affected as earlier feared.

Industry Minister Dr Chirayu Itsarangkun na Ayutthaya said that the rejection will certainly help improve bilateral trade relations between the two countries.

"It was a great relief for us to get this breathing space," said Foreign Trade Department [FTD] director-general Oranut Osathaon, who has been greatly involved with the restrictive bill.

The feeling was shared by Thai Garment Manufacturers Association president Wirot Amatakunchai and the National Federation of Thai Textile Industries president Wichian Traiwongphaisan.

Mrs Oranut said that this would at long last rid Thailand of the worry over the negative impact the bill could have had on Thailand.

The FTD chief also expressed that the U.S. will not try to introduce a similar trade restriction again. [passage omitted]

Mrs Oranut said that she believed that the failure to approve the bill might also be because of the recent renewal of the Multi-Fibre Arrangement in Geneva, which saw several new items being added to the existing agreement as sought by the U.S.

Besides, several major exporters of textiles and garments, including South Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong, have entered into agreements with the U.S., limiting their export growth to America as a "sacrifice," in order to kill the Jenkins Bill which could have hurt them badly.

She went on to say that a Thai mission, led by herself, will leave for the U.S. on August 11, to negotiate with U.S. authorities over unresolved problems on certain categories, including CATs 434, 636, 611, 301/311, particularly on the amount of quotas.

The mission, she said, would try to negotiate for the highest possible quota volume. [passage omitted]

SPOKESMAN REJECTS SOVIET STAND ON CAMBODIA

BK081515 Bangkok Television Service in Thai 1300 GMT 8 Aug 86

[8 August statement by Thai Foreign Ministry Spokesman Sawanit Khongsiri given at the Foreign Ministry -- recorded]

[Text] Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Gorbachev made a statement recently in Vladivostok about the problem in Cambodia. He said the Cambodia problem is a domestic problem of Cambodia to be settled by conflicting parties in that country. Concerning this, Thailand, other ASEAN members, as well as about a hundred countries in the United Nations disagreed with the Soviet Union. We hold that the problem in Cambodia is to be settled by Vietnam and Cambodia. In 1978, Vietnamese soldiers marched into Cambodia on aggression and toppled the legitimate government of Cambodia. The settlement of the problem in Cambodia therefore cannot be tackled among the conflicting parties in Cambodia. It is a problem to be settled by the aggressors on one hand, and the attacked on the other hand, that is, between Vietnam and Cambodia.

NHAN DAN REPORTS ON GORBACHEV VLADIVOSTOK SPEECH

BK071145 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 30 Jul 86 pp 1, 4

[VNA report]

[Text] On 28 July in Vladivostok, Comrade M.S. Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU, presented the highest Soviet award -- the order of Lenin -- to this city. This large industrial and cultural center of the Soviet Union, situated on the shore of the Pacific, was rewarded for its achievements in economic and cultural construction and for its great contributions to economic development in the Far Eastern region of the Soviet Union.

Established Goals Can Only Be Attained on If We Learn Continously and Deepen Our Thoughts Constantly

Speaking at the awards ceremony, Comrade M.S. Gorbachev dealt with the domestic situation following the 27th CPSU Congress. He pointed out the positive changes that have taken place in the economy: Greater dynamism in economic processes and improvements in the rate of production development and labor productivity. The work situation in the machine manufacturing sectors, fuel-energy and agricultural-industrial combines; the ferrous metal sector; and some other sectors has improved. Social tasks have also been carried out more satisfactorily.

Comrade M.S. Gorbachev urged everyone not to feel complacent. He clearly pointed out that the most important economic, social, and organizational measures have only just been implemented. He said: "We are embarking on a complex undertaking. We are setting for ourselves realistic, yet difficult goals, the attainment of which is only possible on condition that we learn continuously from life and deepen our thoughts constantly on its experience, lessons, and new trends."

Comrade M.S. Gorbachev dealt in detail with the issues of economic development in the Far Eastern region of the Soviet Union and set forth the task of turning this region into a highly developed national economic combine. He described the most important trends of economic activities as using oceanic resources and the rich coastal mineral deposits more fully and stepping up development of the fuel-energy combine of the Far East. He also pointed out the need to utilize the capabilities of the Far East for promoting economic cooperation with other countries in Asia and the Pacific.

He paid special attention to developments in the social field.

The Soviet Union's Peace Initiatives Have Won Sympathy and Support From Broad Sections of World Opinion

Comrade M.S. Gorbachev devoted a considerable part of his speech to international issues.

He said: The notion that peace is needed by all is powerfully penetrating the consciousness of all nations, even in places where the governments continue to regard weapons and war as a means of politics. It is needed by all precisely because a nuclear war would not be a clash merely between two blocs, between two opposing forces. It would lead to a global catastrophe in which mankind's civilization would find itself under the threat of doom.

The comrade clearly pointed out that the Soviet Union's initiatives for nuclear disarmament and a considerable cut in conventional arms and armed forces and for monitoring and improving the international atmosphere have been supported by the countries of the socialist community and the developing countries and given serious consideration by broad sections of social activists and even by practical-minded Western business representatives. Meanwhile, in many capitalist countries, forces blindly hostile to socialism that enrich themselves by waging wars continue to hold away. The U.S. ruling circles and a number of their allies try to portray the Soviet Union's initiatives as pure propaganda or beneficial only to the Soviet Union.

Time is insistently demanding a new understanding of the current rate of development of civilization; of international relations; of the world, a world that is contradictory and complex but objectively united by ties of interdependence and international relations which, even taking into account all the differences and clashes of interests, no longer allow one to live according to the traditions of the "law of the fist" that has existed for thousands of years. Time is also demanding a civilization clearly demonstrating the unprecedented power of human intellect and labor and, at the same time, its fragility and vulnerability to the forces that have been released by human genius but put at the service of destruction.

All this dictates the need for an urgent radical break with many conventional approaches to foreign policy, a break with the traditions of political thinking, and with views on the problems of war and peace, on defense and security of a number of countries and on international security. In this connection, it can be easily understood that our views and radical proposals of global significance, such as the program for liquidating nuclear and other mass destruction weapons in this century, for a total ban on testing nuclear arms, for banning chemical weapons, and for cooperation in the peaceful use of space, and for a whole series of other proposals concern the entire world and all countries.

The Lessons of Vietnam's Victory Highlight the Invincible Strength of the Idea of Freedom and Socialism

The main problem before mankind today is the problem of survival; it is equally acute and urgent for Europe, Africa, America, and Asia. It takes a different shape, however, for each part of the world. And so, since I am here in Vladivostok, it is natural to look at world political issues from the Asia-Pacific angle.

Such an approach is justified on many counts -- above all, because a large part of our country's territory lies east of the Urals, in Asia, Siberia, and the Far East. It is here that many all-union tasks put forward by the party congress will be resolved. Naturally, the situation in the Far East as a whole, in Asia and the adjacent oceanic expanses where we have for a long time been permanent residents and sailors, is for us a national, state interest. Many major states are situated on this huge expanse, almost half the earth, including the Soviet Union, the United States, India, China, Japan, Vietnam, Mexico, and Indonesia. There are states here considered to be medium-sized, but which according to European standards are fairly large -- Canada, the Philippines, Australia, and New Zealand -- and, together with them, dozens of comparatively smaller and also quite small countries. Some of them have a millenium and many centuries of history; others were formed in modern times; and many came into being very recently.

Each country has a political and social system characterized by its own features, traditions, successes and difficulties, lifestyle and faith, and confidence and political views; and each is aware of its own spiritual and material values. Each country has something to be proud of and to be cherished in the treasure of mankind's common civilization.

How development of the socioeconomic system will continue here and which processes will become dominant in the relations between countries are questions that will greatly influence the destiny of the entire world.

Socialism is an integral factor in the tremendous and difficult changes in this region. As a result of the success of the Great October Revolution and the victory of the war against fascism and Japanese militarism, as a result of the success of the great Chinese revolution, and after a new social system was established in Mongolia and in the last of Korea, whose people displayed unusual steadfastness in the struggle for a socialist future for their motherland, and afterward in Vietnam and Laos, socialism secured firm positions in Asia. But it was here that it had to face the most brutal and cynical opposition. Vietnam is the most vivid example of this. The heroic experience of Vietnam and the lessons of its victory over imperialism have once again accentuated the invincible strength of the ideas of freedom and socialism.

However, we also note many other things in Asia and Oceania. There, the dignity of people is outraged by colonialism; the consequences of poverty, illiteracy, and backwardness; and, together with them, deeply seated prejudices are still maintained to foment mistrust and hatred among people of different nationalities, including those living together within a nation. Imperialism has taken advantage of the difficulties and vestiges of the past to provoke regional conflicts and massacres among different ethnic and religious groups and to cause political instability.

In all places where independence is becoming a noticeable international force and where a threat arises to the exploitatory interests of imperialism, imperialism resorts to its most favorite means: economic blackmail, intrigues against the leadership of a country, interference in internal problems, support for separatist elements, and giving aid to our even blatantly arming counterrevolutionaries and terrorists. The Punjab and Tamil problems, which imperialism also wants to turn against India; the undeclared wars against Cambodia and Afghanistan; the annexation of Micronesia; interference in the Philippines; and pressure on New Zealand -- these examples alone are sufficient to show how the contemporary mechanism of intervention and pressure policy of imperialism work.

We Advocate Jointly Establishing New, Equitable Relations in Asia and the Pacific

The Soviet Union is also an Asian-Pacific country. The complex issues of this large region closely concern the Soviet Union, and the Soviet Union is directly involved in these issues. This also decides the calculated and large-scale viewpoint toward this vast part of the world where there are so many different countries and nations. Our way of raising the issues concerning this region is based on a recognition and understanding of the outstanding realities here. At the same time, our interests consist of neither an ambition to have certain perogatives or special positions, nor a selfish bid to consolidate our own security at the expense of others, nor the seeking of benefits detrimental to others. We see our interests in the pooling of efforts and in cooperation on the basis of total respect for the right of each nation to live according to its own choice and to settle independently its own problems under peaceful conditions.

We advocate jointly establishing new, equitable relations in Asia and the Pacific.

It is necessary to admit that the process of militarization that increases the danger of war in this region is starting off at a dangerous speed. The Pacific is being turned into a zone of military and political confrontation. [paragraph continues]

This is the very reason why nations living here feel more and more worried each day. This also makes us worry in all fields, including the security aspect of the Asian part of our country.

In the Soviet Union's foreign policy, the Asian-Pacific region is an integral part of the general line of the CPSU for its international activities, which was charted at the April 1985 party Central Committee plenum and the 27th Party Congress. However, a line is not a formula that can be applied under all circumstances. To put it more correctly, it consists of principles and methods based on experience.

Proceeding from this, how can we visualize the process of ensuring international security and coordinating actions for peace in this vast region?

First, implementing the principled line of the 27th Party Congress, the Soviet Union will strive to strengthen its relations with all countries in this region without any exception. We will strive to consolidate friendship and multiform relations with the MPR, the DPRK, the SRV, the LPDR, and the PRK. We consider the relations built on the principles of equality and solidarity with our friends to be an integral part of the common system of security in Asia and the Pacific. For instance, together with the leadership of the MPR, we are now looking into the question of withdrawing a considerable part of the Soviet forces from Mongolia.

We are ready to broaden our relations with Indonesia, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Burma, Sri Lanka, Nepal, nei, and the Maldivese, and with all young and independent participants in the political life of the region. We already have diplomatic relations with some of them, including Papua New Guinea, Western Samoa, the Kingdom of Tonga, Fiji, the Republic of Kiribati, the Republic of Nauru, Tuvalu, the Republic of Vanuatu....

Speaking in a city close to the PRC, I want to refer to the main point of our relationship with that country. This relationship is of special importance due to a number of factors. First of all, we are neighbors. We share the longest land border in the world; and therefore, we as well as our children will have to live next to each other forever. But, naturally, things do not stop there. History has placed on the shoulders of the Soviet and Chinese peoples a very important mission.

In recent years, marked improvements have been made in our relationship. I want to affirm that the Soviet Union is ready, at any time and at any level, to discuss with China in the most serious manner the problems concerning supplemental measures aimed at creating an atmosphere of good neighborliness. We hope that in the not distant future, the border that separates us -- I only want it to be a border that joins us -- will become a border of peace and friendship.

In our relations with Japan, there have been indications of a change for the better, and we hope that this change will materialize.

In the Pacific region, the Soviet Union also borders on the United States. This is a close neighbor, in the literal sense of the word, since it is only 7 km from the Soviet Union, just the distance between the Soviet island of Big Diomede and the American Little Diomede.

We clearly realize that the United States is a great power in the Pacific because, first of all, a significant part of the country's population lives on the shores of that ocean.

The western part of America, which extends to the Pacific, is playing a growing role in the country's life and is distinguished by its dynamism. The United States undoubtedly has important legitimate economic and political interests in the region. There is no doubt that without the United States, without its participation, one cannot solve the problem of security and cooperation in the Pacific in a manner satisfactory to all states in the region. Unfortunately, Washington has so far failed to show any readiness for this -- it is not even contemplating serious talks on the subject of the Pacific; and if this theme is touched upon, then it steps onto the well-trodden path of "Soviet threat" and saber-rattling to further strengthen this myth. Our approach to relations with the United States is known to all. We are for peaceful, goodneighborly relations on an equal footing and for mutually advantageous cooperation. While on the subject, I would like to add that there are quite a few opportunities for such cooperation both in the Far East and the Pacific.

As I am talking about the United States, I would also like to add a few more words about the most important issue today in our relations: the ending of the arms race. Since the Geneva meeting, the Soviet Union has put forward many major proposals on all the aspects of reducing and eliminating arms and on verifying this process. However, we have not yet seen any reciprocal move from the U.S. side. We, in essence, have still been regaled with the same fare as before the Geneva meeting.

In order to overcome this stalemate, we have done even more to meet the other side. In my letter in June to the U.S. President, we put forward new, major compromise proposals. Since coming here, I have received a reply from President Reagan. The letter calls for thought, and we have begun to study it. We will deal with it with responsibility and attention. For us, what is important first and foremost is to what extent the proposals contained in the letter respond to the principle of equal security; do they allow us to arrive at effective joint solutions in the field of ending the arms race and not allowing its extention to space? It is in accordance with this that we will determine our future steps. As far as a new Soviet-U.S. summit meeting is concerned, I can repeat that we favor such a meeting, but are resolutely opposed to the accord reached at the last meeting in Geneva being interpreted as allegedly coming down to a promise to meet again in the future. No. The main thing that President Reagan and I agreed on then, and what we signed, was an agreement that we would strive for normalization of Soviet-U.S. relations and an improvement in the international situation, and that we would speed up the course of the talks on arms reduction. This is what the new meeting should serve as well.

We often hear from abroad various rumours about the Soviet Union beefing up its military might in the east of the country. With a full sense of responsibility I state that we are neither doing, nor shall we do, anything in excess of what is necessary to meet the minimum requirements for our defense and for the protection of our friends and allies, especially taking into account U.S. military activities not far from our and their borders.

We would propose a Pacific Ocean conference along the lines of the Helsinki Conference, with the participation of all countries situated on the coasts of this ocean, as an objective, if not a close one. When (and, of course, if) there is success in agreeing to its convocation, it will be possible to agree on where it should be held as well. One possibility is Hiroshima. Why should not that city -- the first victim of the atomic evil -- become a distinctive Helsinki for Asia and the Pacific Ocean?

To conclude, I want to stress once again that we favor including the Asia-Pacific region in the general process of creating an all-embracing system of international security, which was discussed at the 27th CPSU Congress. How do we envisage this in concrete terms?

First of all is the issue of a regional settlement. I will speak of Afghanistan separately. I will now deal with Southeast Asia and Cambodia. The Cambodian people have experienced terrible sacrifices. This country, its cities and villages, were more than once subjected to U.S. bombing. Through suffering, it has earned the right to choose its friends and allies. It is unacceptable to draw out its tragic past and decide the fate of this country in distant capitals or even in the United Nations.

Much here, as in other problems of Southeast Asia, depends on the normalization of Sino-Vietnamese relations. This is the sovereign affair of the governments and leaderships of the two countries. We can only express our interest in seeing the border between these two countries again becoming one of peace and good-neighborliness and in renewed dialogue with unnecessary suspicions and distrust removed. This moment seems propitious, and the whole of Asia needs it.

In our opinion, there are no unsurmountable obstacles to establishing mutually acceptable relations between the countries of Indochina and ASEAN. Given goodwill and conditions of noninterference from outside, they could at the same time settle their problems for the good of general Asian security.

There is the possibility of not only eliminating the dangerous tension on the Korean peninsula but also of beginning a movement along the path of solving the national problems of all the Korean people. If one starts from truly Korean interests, there are no rational grounds for rejecting the serious dialogue being proposed by the DPRK.

Second, we favor erecting a barrier to the proliferation and build-up of nuclear arms in Asia and the Pacific.

Third, we propose starting talks on reducing the activity of naval fleets -- first of all, ships equipped with nuclear arms -- in the Pacific Ocean.

Fourth, the Soviet Union ascribes great significance to the radical reduction of armed forces and conventional weapons in Asia up to the limit of reasonable sufficiency.

Fifth, the Soviet Union considers the time long ripe to place on a practical footing discussions of confidence-building measures and the nonuse of violence in the region. It is possible to start with simpler measures, for example, security measures concerning maritime communications in the Pacific Ocean and averting international terrorism. It would be possible to hold a conference for the discussion and working out of such steps in one of the Soviet coastal cities.

By the end of 1986, the Soviet Union will withdraw six regiments of its troops from Afghanistan.

In conclusion, concerning Afghanistan, it was stated from the rostrum of the 27th CPSU Congress that we are prepared to send home the Soviet troops who are in that country at the request of its government. As you know, comrades, the party now firmly maintains the principle: Behind words are action. Having thoroughly evaluated the present situation and consulted with the DRA Government, the Soviet leadership has adopted a decision that I will officially announce today.

By the end of 1986, six regiments -- one tank regiment, two motorized infantry regiments, and three antiaircraft regiments -- along with their established equipment and weapons will be withdrawn from Afghanistan. These units will return to the regions of their permanent deployment in the Soviet Union in such a way that all those for whom this may be of interest may be easily convinced of it.

Undertaking this serious step -- about which we have already informed interested countries, including Pakistan -- the Soviet Union is striving to hasten a political settlement and to provide yet another stimulus toward it. It also takes as a starting point the fact that those who are organizing and implementing armed intervention against the DRA will correctly understand this unilateral step that we have taken and will evaluate it properly.

The response to this step must be the curtailment of outside interference in the internal affairs of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan.

Some progress was recently achieved at the Afghan-Pakistani talks being conducted through representatives of the UN secretary general. As soon as a political settlement is firmly worked out, the withdrawal of all Soviet troops from Afghanistan can be speeded up accordingly. An agreement on the timing and stages of this withdrawal has been reached with the Afghan leadership.

However, all those who encourage and finance the undeclared war against Afghanistan, and from whose territory it is waged, should know that if intervention against the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan continues, the Soviet Union will not leave its neighbor in the lurch. Our internationalist solidarity with the Afghan people and the security interests of the Soviet Union rule this out absolutely.

The Soviet state calls on all Asia-Pacific countries to cooperate for the sake of peace and security. Anyone who aspires to these goals and hopes for a better further for his people will find us interlocutors of good intent and honest partners.

FOREIGN MINISTRY ON DECADE OF TIES WITH THAILAND

OW091605 Hanoi VNA in English 1552 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Hanoi VNA August 9 -- The Ministries for Foreign Affairs of Vietnam and Thailand have exchanged greetings on the 10th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries (August 6).

The message of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry says:

"The Foreign Ministry of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam takes this opportunity to reaffirm the consistent policy of the S.R.V. of respecting the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Thailand and all other countries, and its readingess to build and develop a relationship of friendship, cooperation and good neighbourliness with Thailand and all other countries.

"The Foreign Ministry of the S.R.V. believes that with good will from both sides, we are fully able to solve all outstanding questions between the two countries, in the interest of the people of our countries, and of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation in Southeast Asia."

TRADE MINISTER URGES FARMERS TO BUY FROM USSR

BK090804 Melbourne Domestic Service in English 0430 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] United States moves to widen wheat subsidies has led to an Australian Government offer to closer trade links with the Soviet Union. The trade minister, Mr Dawkins, has written to his Soviet counterpart, Mr Aristov, offering assistance to promote the sale of tractors and other farm machineries.

Will Atkins in Canberra:

[Begin Atkins recording] Mr Dawkins said Australia's offer to the USSR followed the severe undermining of Australian wheat markets by the American move. He said Australian farmers continued to buy United States machinery and other imports and urged them to look at the Soviet Union as a supplier of some equipment such as tractors and generators.

Mr Dawkins said the Soviet Union was one of Australia's biggest wheat customers with whom it enjoyed a large trade surplus and Australia could not afford to ignore the source of export receipts in determining its future trading relationship.

Mr Dawkins has invited Mr Aristov to launch a major Soviet trade display in Australia and said the federal government would help. [end recording]

FARMERS' DELEGATION TO LOBBY IN WASHINGTON

BK071314 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0830 GMT 7 Aug 86

[Text] The National Farmers Federation of Australia says it will send a delegation to the United States early next month to continue the work started by the all-party parliamentary delegation.

The parliamentary delegation returns from Washington this week after trying to halt the sale of subsidized wheat to the Soviet Union and China. The United States ignored the protest and announced the sale of 4 million tons of subsidized wheat to the Soviet Union.

The farmers Federation's president, Mr McLachla, will lead its delegation which is leaving Australia at the start of next month. The farmers want to lobby senior congressmen and members of the Reagan administration in Washington to press Australia's case for opposing the sale of subsidized farm products on world markets.

The delegation will also meet with American farmers as well as producers from all the major food exporting countries.

FOUR ARRESTED IN PROTEST AGAINST U.S. NAVY SHIP

BK100812 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0430 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Four people have been arrested during clashes between police and protesters after the docking of the American warship "Chandler," in Brisbane. Antinuclear demonstrators on surfboards and small dinghies attempted to board the ship and erect placards on the side. However, they retreated when "Chandler's" crew menaced them with a fire hose.

Three men and one woman are expected to be charged later today, the woman with wilful damage after her car collided with a police vehicle. The warship was forced to dock without the help of tug crews and linesmen, who had black banned it.

HAWKE FORESHADOWS 'POLITICALLY UNPOPULAR' BUDGET

BK100754 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0430 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] The prime minister said today the federal government would continue to make tough economic decisions no matter how politically unpopular they appeared. Speaking about next week's federal budget during a television program, Mr Hawke said it was probably the most important budget the government would hand down. While he believed the budget would be responsible for putting the country back on a sound economic footing it would also be politically difficult.

[Begin Hawke recording] I will not avoid making the decisions, as politically unpalatable as they may be now, on the basis that they might be more politically healthy for me. If I believe [words indistinct] hard, tough decisions have to be taken now to ensure the long-term economic health of this country, they will be taken. [end recording]

On the same program Mr Hawke said he hoped to win over the two Labor premiers who voiced opposition to government's fringe benefits tax. Both the New South Wales premier, Mr Unsworth, and his West Australian counterpart, Mr Burke, have said the tax will result in increased unemployment. The issue is likely to be raised during talks between the prime minister, Mr Hawke, and Mr Unsworth in Canberra later today. Mr Hawke said he also hoped to meet Mr Burke on the same subject and was confident that both premiers would be persuaded of the equity and good sense in what the government was doing. He denied that there was a specific plan to water down or streamline the fringe benefits tax legislation.

[Begin Hawke recording] If there are ways which become clear as the new tax comes in of simplifying its application, of course, we will do that. This is not something which is unique to the fringe benefits tax. Any new tax of some substance will obviously have some bedding down problems. [end recording]

NEW ZEALAND

POLL SHOWS OPPOSITION PARTY GAINS GROUND

HK100658 Hong Kong AFP in English 0619 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Wellington, Aug 10 (AFP) -- New Zealand's opposition National Party has gained ground and is now only the percentage point behind the government, according to the latest public opinion poll here.

The ruling Labour Party lost four points to 48 percent of public support, while National under new leader Jim Bolger jumped seven points to 47 percent, according to the poll by the national research bureau in late July. National achieved its best showing since 1978.

The poll was taken as the government of David Lange was handing back into French control two French secret agents jailed for the Rainbow Warrior bombing here.

Some observers said that the Rainbow Warrior settlement had led to a "one-shot loss" of support by the government, which would soon regain its poll edge.

But others suggested that Mr Lange's credibility had been permanently damaged by the Rainbow Warrior settlement, under which New Zealand was paid seven million U.S. dollars compensation in return for the two French secret agents being released from New Zealand jails into French custody.

The poll shows 18 percent of voters remained uncommitted at this stage in the run-up to next year's election, due by September, with some 15 percent of Labour support from the last election in the uncommitted category. At the same time, Labour had gained more from the collapse in minority party support than had the national opposition.

It was the first poll success for National since Mr Bolger, a conservative North Island farmer, ousted former leader Jim McLay, an urban liberal lawyer.

The National Party has taken several steps to the right of the spectrum in the past year as it has sought to counter the free-market economics of the Lange government -- policies which have undercut National's traditional policy ground.

He was followed by Ghafar Baba, then by the other ministers in groups of five.

TEMPORARY CEASE-FIRE SIGNED WITH MUSLIMS

BK091307 Hong Kong AFP in English 1257 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Manila, Aug 9 (AFP) -- The military and Moslem separatists have agreed to a temporary ceasefire while a government panel visits Saudi Arabia to hold talks with insurgent leaders, the PHILIPPINE NEWS AGENCY (PNA) said Saturday. The agreement provides for a halt in hostilities between the armed forces and the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) in the southern island group of Sulu, and freedom of movement for both groups, PNA said. The temporary ceasefire, signed Friday in the southern town of Maimbung in Jolo Island, would remain in effect while peace talks are pursued by MNLF leaders, the official news agency added.

The agreement was reportedly signed a day before Candu Muarip, President Corazon Aquino's Moslem affairs minister, left for Jeddah, Saudi Arabia at the head of a government panel to negotiate with exiled MNLF chief Nur Misuari. The MNLF has been waging a 14-year-old guerrilla campaign for a separate state for the minority Moslems in Mindanao and other southern islands. MNLF factions loyal to Mr Misuari are based in Sulu. Two other factions favouring autonomy operate in Mindanao.

(Meanwhile, in the northern Mindanao city of Cagayan de Oro, the governor of Misamis Oriental province said Saturday that he is negotiating with local communist guerrilla leaders for a long-term cease-fire in 10 provincial towns. Governor Vicente Emano said the rebels were "amenable to continuing the cease-fire" if the military will issue "an official statement that they are also amenable to a cease-fire." He said he held two days of talks with Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP)-New People's Army (NPA) leaders of the region last week.)

(Regional military chief Brigadier General Mariano Adalem told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE: "We are willing ... provided it leads to a discussion of final cessation of hostilities and the final solution of the insurgency problem nationwide.") The communist underground had previously rejected any regional ceasefire arrangements, but has named two emissaries to peace talks being held at the national level. Mrs Aquino initiated the talks in a bid to seek a political solution to the 17-year-old rebellion now being waged by some 16,500 NPA guerrillas.

COMMUNISTS AGREE TO PARTIAL CEASE-FIRE

HK100103 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 0030 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Communist insurgents have agreed to a cease-fire in the major portion of the southern island of Mindanao. The Philippine official news agency said yesterday officials of the Communist Party of the Philippines and its military arm, the New People's Army agreed to stop operations against government forces following talks with some of the region's civilian officials. The Philippine News Agency said that on being informed of the breakthrough, the area's military commander immediately ordered his troops to also cease operations against the rebels in the region. The region covers six provinces in the northern part of Mindanao, the Philippines' second largest island, the scene of some of the bloodiest clashes between rebels and government forces in recent years.

Also, military and separatist leaders in Sulu in the southern Philippines agreed yesterday to observe a ceasefire in preparation for the peace talks this month in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia.

The agreement was signed in a schoolhouse in Sulu between the commanding officer of the 2d Marine Brigade and the Sulu revolutionary committee chairman. Other signatories were other military leaders and officers of the MNLF. The agreement was signed in the presence of some 20 marine troops and about 1,000 fully-armed rebels.

In a related development, Libyan Leader Mua'mmar al-Qadhdhafi supports President Corazon Aquino's efforts to resolve conflicts with Muslims in southern Mindanao island, the palace quoted Libyan Ambassador (Salam Adem) as telling Mrs Aquino yesterday. Mr (Adem) passed along the message during a 15-minute visit to the Malacanang presidential palace guesthouse in Manila.

[Text] Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi expressed his support to President Corazon Aquino's efforts to restore peace in Mindanao. This message was conveyed to President Aquino when Libyan Ambassador [name indistinct] called on her at Malacanang. The president, on her part, expressed her gratitude and joy over al-Qadhdhafi's support. Speaking to newsmen after the meeting, the Libyan ambassador stated that al-Qadhdhafi will take part in the Islamic Conference in order to help settle the Philippine Government's problem. Deputy Foreign Minister Mamintal Tamano added that in this connection, MNLF leader Nur Misuari is ready to return to the Philippines anytime and hold talks with the Aquino government on solution of the Mindanao problems.

COMMUNIST NEGOTIATOR GIVEN SAFE-CONDUCT

[Excerpts] Manila, Aug 10 (AFP) -- The Philippine armed forces said Sunday they had issued a safe-conduct pass to a woman insurgent leader who will act as the third member of a communist panel now holding peace talks with the government. Carolina Malay-Ocampo and her personal security escorts have been granted freedom of movement, the same privilege given to her husband Saturnino Ocampo, and the third negotiator, Antonio Zumel, a military press statement said. The panel representing the communist-led National Democratic Front (NDF) is scheduled to meet for the second time later this week with a government panel composed of Agriculture Minister Ramon Mitra and chief government auditor Teofisto Guingona.

The passes guarantee the safety of the communist negotiators and are valid for 30 days, but do not authorize the bearers to carry firearms, Armed Forces Chief General Fidel Ramos said in the statement. He ordered the information disseminated to the 250,000-strong armed forces. [passage omitted]

Meanwhile, the church-backed human rights group Ecumenical Movement for Justice and Peace (EMJP) has proposed the creation of an independent body to serve as the third party and mediator in the current talks. The open proposal, drafted Saturday, calls for an independent body acceptable to both the government and the communists, EMJP spokesmen told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE. The third party should also be granted the power to determine and act on the culpability for violations by any group of the agreements to be reached in the talks, the proposal said.

Safe Conduct Guidelines Rejected

[Text] Manila, Aug 11 (AFP) -- Communist rebel negotiators Monday rejected military guidelines governing their movements to and from the site of planned peace talks with Philippine Government representatives. The rejection was contained in a typewritten statement signed by two negotiators of the communist-led National Democratic Front (NDF) and delivered by couriers to news agencies here a day after the guidelines were announced.

The guidelines, laid down by Armed Forces chief General Fidel Ramos, guaranteed "safe conduct" for a 30-day period for the rebel panel and their bodyguards but barred them from carrying firearms. Government negotiators could not be immediately reached for comment. Presidential palace and Armed Forces spokesmen had no immediate reaction, saying they had no direct information on the NDF rejection. President Corazon Aquino has called for talks with the NDF in a bid to bring an end to a 17-year-old communist insurgency.

COMMUNIST PRECONDITIONS FOR PEACE TALKS REJECTED

HK090150 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Text] The government yesterday rejected the communist demands for a coalition government and the ouster of Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile as preconditions to peace and reconciliation. The government's position is that the cease-fire dialogue, which will officially start soon, must be something of mutual benefit, and as such, both sides should not impose ridiculous preconditions. These were discussed in a meeting with newsmen at the presidential palace by ranking government officials. The government's position was clarified by Deputy Executive Secretary Fulgencio Factoran, Jr. Also present at the press conference were Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, Presidential Spokesman Rene Saguisag, and outgoing Information Minister Teodoro Locsin, Jr.

Factoran said the Communist Party of the Philippines and its military arm, the New People's Army, are not entitled to impose any conditions. He said the possibility of a coalition government with the communist rebels is a far-fetched reality. He said the communists must submit to elections if they want to have a part in the government.

REBELS REJECT LAYING DOWN ARMS AS TRUCE CONDITION

HK081513 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 8 Aug 86 p 15

[Excerpt] The communists will never agree to lay down their arms as a precondition to a ceasefire with the government, a ranking rebel leader told the PHILIPPINES NEWS AGENCY yesterday. Identifying himself only as Ka Bien, he said their arms are their only defense against "the reactionaries of the state." "We all recognized that laying down our arms could catch us off guard and deprive us of our only defense against the reactionaries of the state," he said. Another reason, he said, is the military.

"We view the peace talks as a positive step toward peace, but we are doubting if the military will abide by whatever is agreed upon by the Aquino government and the rebel emissaries," he told the PNA in an interview.

Until now, he added, the rebels still hold some doubts about the sincerity of the military, saying "it could pose a barrier to the yet to be started ceasefire." The ceasefire has been called by President Corazon C. Aquino to end the 17-year-old communist insurgency problem in the country. [passage omitted]

MILITARY ORDERS CEASE-FIRE IN MISAMIS ORIENTAL

HK081551 Manila THE NEW PHILIPPINES DAILY EXPRESS in English 8 Aug 86 p 2

[By Proc Maslog]

[Text] Cagayan de Oro City -- Military authorities have ordered a stop to all military operations in Misamis Oriental to allow civilian authorities to hold peace talks with the rebel leaders.

The ceasefire, which took effect Wednesday, was ordered by Brig. Gen. Mariano Adalem, RUC [regional unified command] -10 chief, on a request by Gov. Vicente Emano, who left Thursday with church officials for an undisclosed place to talk with top leaders of the New People's Army.

The ceasefire order covers army troopers of the 33rd infantry battalion under Lt. Col. Cesar Ilano, the 9th infantry battalion under Maj Rogelio Navarro, and other units involved in anti-insurgency operation.

Sources said Commander George Madlos, a ranking member of NPA's Komisyon Mindanao and Commander Nido Nabong, chairman of the North Central Regional Party committee, will represent the rebels.

Last April, Emano convinced rebel leaders to a three month ceasefire, which ended last June. The peace pact, the only province-wide ceasefire agreement, was signed by the rebel leaders, church authorities, and civilian and military authorities.

AQUINO MAY SETTLE SEPARATIST PROBLEMS FIRST

[By reporter Abrino Aydinano]

[Text] President Corazon C. Aquino may settle the Cordillera and Mindanao problems first before striking any deal with the insurgent Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), according to confidential information reaching BUSINESS DAY.

Talks with the CPP emissaries started Tuesday, but talks with the Cordillera leaders are on advanced stages.

A date has been set when President Aquino and her panel sits down with Roman Catholic priest Conrado Balweg and other leaders of the Cordillera People's Liberation Army [PLA]. The CPLA is fighting for the concept of a Cordillera state within a Federal Republic of the Philippines.

Meanwhile, Agapito "Butz" Aquino is scheduled to leave for Jeddah to talk to Nur Misuari of the Moro National Liberation Front.

The government's military establishment, through Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and leaders of the influential reform movement within the New Armed Forces of the Philippines, has expressed support for Cordillera autonomy.

Government officials also are optimistic about the Aquino government's chance to end the war with the Moro National Liberation Front. Basic demands range from simple autonomy to complete independence for the Bangsa Moro (Moro Nation) consisting in the MNLF's view not only of the Muslim but also of non-Muslim tribes in the Mindanao mainland, the Sulu, Basilan, Tawitawi and Palawan archipelagos.

Both the government and MNLF believe the key to a political settlement of the Mindanao conflict lies in the implementation of the Tripoli Agreement worked out in 1976 by the former government of Ferdinand Marcos with the Muslim rebels under the auspices of MNLF-backer Libya.

Under the Tripoli Agreement, the Muslims would enjoy self government, would set up their own legislature and judiciary, would have their own economic and financial system and would maintain their own regional security forces. The area of autonomy would cover 13 present Mindanao provinces, including Sulu, Basilan, Tawitawi and Palawan.

Considering that even the power-conscious Marcos had to come to terms with the Muslims' demand for autonomy, analysts believe the minority communities should be able to expect more sympathy and justice from President Aquino with her "sharp moral sense" and "democratic instinct."

The analysts also point out that the President's late husband, towards whose political mind Aquino does not hide an attitude akin to reverence, gave a written commitment on behalf of the then opposition to respect the Tripoli Agreement.

In his written statement which the late senator intended to read on arrival from foreign exile when he was gunned down at the Manila International Airport, he gave explicit support for the struggle of the Muslims and the Igorots.

Moveover, both the major ruling parties, United Nationalist Democratic Organization and Pilipino Democratic party Laban ng Bayan, undertook in party resolutions to support the implementation of the Tripoli Agreement once they come to power.

It is significant that the talks with the CPLA which President Aquino's brother-in-law Agapito has been conducting is coming across to the public as the personal initiative of the president.

Although the moves the government has been taking towards the MNLF are under wraps, there are indications that members of the AFP reform movement loyal to Mrs Aquino have opened "friendly" communication with the Muslim rebel leadership.

The president's game plan would build up political pressure on the CPP which can scarcely influence the outcome of the government negotiations with the CPLA and MNLF.

The CPP would be put in a dilemma of deciding whether to sit by while the political control of territories where it also operates are delivered to unfriendly forces or to come across as opponent of the Igorots' and Muslims' autonomy.

ENRILE TO JOIN AQUINO PARTY ON U.S. TRIP

HK081200 Quezon City ANG PAHAYAGANG MALAYA in English 1 Aug 86 p 1, 7

[By Staff Member Joel Paredes]

[Excerpt] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile will join President Aquino's official party on her Sept 15 working visit to the United States, the Palace said yesterday.

Information Minister Teodoro Locsin, Jr. said the President wants an official party of 7 to 10 Cabinet ministers, one of them the defense minister.

Locsin said that apart from him and Enrile, the other officials in the President's group include Presidential Spokesman Rene Saguisag, Finance Minister Jaime Ongpin and Central Bank Gov. Jose Fernandez.

The Palace said some ministers and other government officials may be part of the "accompanying" party that would back up the President's group.

Locsin also confirmed Mrs Aquino and U.S. President Ronald Reagan will meet on Sept 17 in Washington where she is also scheduled to address the U.S. Congress.

The information minister said that more than any other goal, the President wanted "to get the support of the American people."

Meanwhile, Saguisag said they were looking into the possibility of including stopovers in Los Angeles and Chicago in the President's 8-day U.S. trip visit because of the large Filipino communities in those areas.

In her original schedule, the President included official working visits to Boston, New York and San Francisco.

Saguisag said Mrs Aquino will be speaking before Harvard University in Boston where she has "fond memories," having lived in that city with her husband Benigno during their three-year self-exile.

It was also learned that Mrs Aquino had already turned down a doctorate degree a well-known university in the United States is to confer on her because of her tight schedule.

Saguisag said an advance team from the President's party is leaving August 14 for a "walkthrough" on Mrs Aquino's visit.

Although, the government was not ruling our the possibility of anti-government rallies, Saguisag said they have received word the President will get a "tremendous" welcome from the American and Filipino communities.

LAUREL THREATENS TO REPLACE MINISTERS

HK110515 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 9 Aug 86 pp 1, 7

[By Olaf Giron]

[Text] Vice President Salvador H. Laurel threatened yesterday to replace "all undesirable Cabinet ministers" during President Aquino's visit to the United States next month when he assumes the presidency in an acting capacity.

"After the President authorizes me, I will right all the unrightable wrongs that had been committed by this administration," Laurel told a press conference at the Cebu City Sports Country Club.

"But I do not want to do anything which the President will reverse when she comes back because then it will be useless," he added.

Laurel said he has cancelled his trip to the United Nations in New York scheduled in September because the President asked him to act as caretaker in her absence.

The apparent target of Laurel's threat was Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel with whom he has had differences of opinion on appointments of local officials.

The Vice President, concurrently foreign affairs minister, said he will "untangle the crisis created by the designation of officers-in-charge because it has caused so much controversy that it has distracted the Filipinos from the more urgent task of fighting the insurgents and rebuilding the economy."

Another possible target was executive Secretary Joker Arroyo who reportedly was responsible for the abolition of the prime minister's office to which Laurel had been appointed.

The appointment of Laurel as acting president took on a curious twist since traditionally it was the executive secretary who was named "Little President" in the absence of the President.

Meeting with local officials, in particular members of the Cebu chapter of the UNIDO [United Nationalist Democratic Organization], the Vice president appealed to them to set aside party rivalry and concentrate on reunification "to insure the survival of the new government."

He added: "It is more our responsibilty to insure the survival of this government because we were the ones who were responsible for installing it. We fought and won against deposed President Marcos last February".

He told the political leaders to wait until after the ratification of the Constitution being drafted by the Constitutional Commission before pursuing election plans since "that's the only time we go into politics.

Aquino, Laurel Split Viewed

HK110529 Hong Kong Domestic Service in English 0500 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] In the Philippines, signs are appearing of a split in the government of President Corazon Aquino. The dissension was brought to a head with the announcement by Vice President Salvador Laurel that as caretaker during Mrs Aquino's visit to the United States next month, he would reorganize key cabinet posts. From Manila, here's Keith Dalton:

[Begin recording] Mr Laurel's statement that he would replace what he called all undesirable cabinet ministers during Mrs Aquino's 8-day U.S. trip is regarded by many observers here as a surprising political blunder. Although he did not specify which cabinet members he would like to get rid of, newspaper speculation here has centered on three people: Labor Minister Augusto Sanchez, who has won the ire of local foreign businessmen, who blame him for a record number of strikes in the 5 months Mrs Aquino has been in power; another would be Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, who has been blamed by Mr. Laurel's political party, Unido [United Nationalist Democratic Organization], for lobbying to have Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile replaced; and the third could possibly be Local Government Minister Aquilino Pimentel, who has overlooked many Unido officials in his drive to replace governors and mayors appointed by ousted President Marcos.

But Mr Laurel's plans have backfired. Executive Secretary Arroyo very quickly announced tha Mrs Aquino had no intention of relinquishing official duties to Mr Laurel while in the United States. Modern communications facilities, he said, made this unnecessary. Most likely, implementation of Mrs Aquino's orders will be coursed thorugh Mr Arroyo's office. This definite clarification has not only embarrassed Mr. Laurel, but he has now accused Mrs Aquino of reneging on an earlier pledge to hand over temporary power to him. [end recording]

MINISTER CHALLENGES ENRILE TO IDENTIFY COMMUNISTS

HK110129 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2300 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Local Governments Minister Aquilino Pimentel yesterday [10 August] dared Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile to identify the government officials who are allegedly communists, or with communist leanings. Pimentel hurled the challenge to the defense chief in a press conference in Cagayan de Oro City. His dare was a reaction to te recent charge by Minister Enrile that there are communist officials in the Aquino government, who have infiltrated the administration. Pimentel said it is important for Enrile to reveal all, so the president can be guided in what action to take, considering that she promised not to have any communists in her government.

5,000 MARCOS FOLLOWERS HOLD 'PRAYER RALLY'

[Text] About 5,000 followers of ex-president Ferdinand Marcos sang songs for their ousted leader yesterday during a gathering that organizers called a prayer rally at a suburban Manila park. It was the first rally police did not disperse since president Corazon Aquino banned demonstrations by Marcos loyalists after former Philippine foreign minister Arturo Tolentino proclaimed himself as acting president.

Pro-Marcos Rally Broken Up

[Text] Manila, Aug 10 (AFP) -- A woman demonstrator was hit by a speeding public vehicle when riot police broke up an illegal rally by hundreds of supporters of deposed President Ferdinand Marcos here Sunday. Some 100 policemen armed with clubs charged at some 500 pro-Marcos demonstrators gathered in front of the central post office. The demonstrators flashed the victory sign and chanted "Marcos still" when the police gave them five minutes to disperse.

Mercedes Serrano, [word indistinct] suffered slight injuries when she was hit by a jeep while running with several companions along a bridge at the back of the post office, hospital sources said. Eyewitnesses said she was wearing red, the Marcos supporters' color.

President Corazon Aquino banned all pro-Marcos rallies after an aborative coup d'etat by Marcos supporters July 6. The demonstrators, many in red clothing and waving miniature Philippine flags, gathered at the edges of a public square in front of the post office because policemen were guarding the square to prevent the rally. There were no immediate reports of arrests.

Meanwhile, police said they will file murder charges against two more Marcos backers suspected of involvement in the fatal beating of an Aquino supporter at Rizal park last month. Nilo Pacadar was arrested in front of the post office Sunday some two hours before the pro-Marcos rally was forcibly broken up, police investigators told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE. Both Mr. Pacadar and Romeo Sison, who was arrested Saturday, admitted that they were at the park when 23-year-old Stephen Salcedo was beaten to death by a mob July 27, but denied taking part in the attack, they added. The two, together with two other suspects previously charged in connection with the beating, are being detained without bail.

MILITARY PROPOSES 'DEATH SQUADS' TO COUNTER NPA

[Text] Manila, Aug 10 KYODO -- Military and police personnel have proposed the creation of "death squads" to counter urban guerrilla operations of the communist-led New People's Army in Cebu City, central Philippines, the PHILIPPINE NEWS AGENCY reported Saturday. It said the proposal was made during a secret conference held by a group of military and police personnel following the killing Friday of two soldiers and a policeman by a five-man NPA liquidation squad. The three troopers were gunned down by the NPA squad while securing the route to be taken by Vice President Salvador Laurel who was on his way to a meeting with local political leaders in Minglanilla, 10 miles south of Cebu City.

According to the state-run agency, the death squad would be given authority to track down and kill all communists "in the same way they have allegedly eliminated agents of the law and innocent civilians." The PNA said the plan includes the "elimination of 'self-proclaimed' human rights adocates" whom the group said were behind the killing of at least 20 military and police personnel in the last few months. The plan, however, was vetoed by the local regional military commander, Col. Edgardo Abenina, who said it would be wrong for the lawmen "to take the law into their hands."

MILITARY REPORTS MOVEMENT OF NPA FORCES

HK081557 Manila THE NEWS HERALD in English 8 Aug 86 pp 1, 6

[Text] The New People's Army, military arm of the Communist Party of the Philippines [CPP], has reportedly shifted its forces in Southern Tagalog in an apparent attempt to make the region a staging ground in preparation for the encirclement of Metro Manila, seat of the national government.

The massing of dissident forces in Southern Tagalog, according to a recently declassified intelligence report, is due to the continuing military pressure on the NPA in the Bicol and Central Luzon regions.

Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, armed forces chief of staff, who visited Camp Nakan in Lucena City the other day, was told by military commanders in the area that the NPA has taken "paramount interest in destabilizing security conditions in the Southern Tagalog region, being the gateway to the national government."

In a command briefing, Ramos was also told that lately, the NPAs concentrated their activities in Eastern Quezon, Bondoc Peninsula, Mt Banahaw, the triangular border of Batangas, Laguna and Quezon provinces, and the island of Mindoro.

The field commanders also briefed Ramos that armed urban partisans have been particularly active in the cities of San Pablo and Lucena.

Southern Tagalog military authorities also disclosed that there are 560 armed regulars operating in the whole region with a complement of 1,480 subversive mass activities and 71,200 mass base.

The rebels acquired their weapons through raids of military and police detachments, and "agaw armas" [arms-grabbing] operations.

Ramos wes also told that as of July 31, there were 250 CPP/NPA affected barangay, 51 influenced, and 199 infiltrated. However, 492 other barangay are said to be threatened by dissident operations in the region.

Orchestrating all these insurgency-related activities is Sotero Llamas, alias commander Nognog, former head of the Bicol Regional Party Committee. Llamas was reportedly elevated to the Central Party Committee of the CPP/NPA and is now head of the Southern Luzon Commission.

REPORT CLAIMS REBEL INFILTRATION OF MILITARY

HK081505 Quezon City BUSINESS DAY in English 8 Aug 86 p 16

[Text] Communist guerillas are infiltrating the Defense Ministry and the Armed Forces, a military report said.

In a report to AFP [Armed Forces of the Philippines] chief Gen. Fidel Ramos, Regional Unified Command (Ruc) 4 chief, Brig Gen. Restituto Padilla said the primary target of infiltration are groups within the armed forces, specifically the so-called "El Diablo" which was recently renamed "Guardians."

The guardians were a dominant military split group which participated in the aborted Manila Hotel coup led by former foreign affairs minister Arturo Tolentino.

Padilla's report did not contain other details on the plot to infiltrate the defense ministry and the AFP.

In the same report, Padilla said the New People's Army (NPA) is backing the transfer of full control of police forces to town and city mayors. Such a transfer, he said, would weaken the military's counter-insurgency posture, because the police act as military's so-called "frontliners" in the anti-communist campaign.

The move will also divide the loyalties of the police between their anti-communist mission and the mayor's instructions.

The Aquino government has recently laid down the groundwork for the return of full police control to the mayors. The move will in effect dismantle the centralized command of the AFP through the Integrated National Police (INP).

Padilla added that the rebels are protectors of illegal gambling in the Southern Luzon area to derive money from such operations for its 17-year campaign against the government.

Aside from protecting gambling operation, the NPA is also engaged in extortion, victimizing businessmen, beverage firms and bus companies, Padilla said.

Failure to pay the "taxes," Padilla said would mean harassment from the NPA such as hijacking of buses and burning of factories.

Padilla also said the rebels have geared for the intensification of their intelligence networks in preparation for mass recruitment operations and its normal anti-military operations, namely suprise attacks, on isolated AFP detachments and "Agaw-Armas" [arms-grabbing] operations.

U.S. BASES' CLOSURE COULD MEAN P1 BILLION TAX LOSS

HK081555 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 8 Aug 86 p 5

[By Jun Ramirez]

[Excerpt] The national and the Pampanga and Zambales local governments stand to lose more than P1 billion in tax payments annually if the two American bases are closed down.

This was the initial assessment by the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) yesterday based on a tentative report submitted by lawyer Fortunato Aguas, revenue regional director for Central Luzon.

The report said the BIR collected last year some P400 million in international revenue taxes from service and commercial firms which depend their survival on Clark Air Base in Pampanga and Subic Naval Base in Zambales.

It said another P90 million in withholding taxes from the payroll of some 34,000 Filipinos employed inside the bases were remitted last year.

The amount, the report said, could easily exceed the P1-billion mark if customs duties and payments to the local governments were included.

The BIR regional office based in San Fernando, Pampanga, is among the biggest contributor to the annual tax collection of the bureau.

For this year, the region was asked to raise P675 million, which is roughly 50 percent over 1985.

Aguas expressed optimism that the collection assignment could be attained as the first six months take of the year exceeded the target for the period by P50 million. [passage omitted]

WORLD BANK AGREES TO IMPORT LIBERALIZATION DELAY

HK071545 Manila MANILA BULLETIN in English 7 Aug 86 p 13

[TextO The World Bank has agreed to postpone the lifting of import controls on 383 remaining sensitive items until May 1, 1988 at the latest.

In an aide memoire submitted to Finance Minister Jaime V. Ongpin, Norman L. Hicks, head of the World Bank Economic Recovery Loan Appraisal Mission, said that every effort, however, should be made to limit extension to one year from the original schedule.

Hicks told Ongpin that the World Bank is pleased by the liberalization of 849 items out of the 1,232 items scheduled to be liberalized.

The complete lifting of import controls on the 1,232 items is one of the conditions imposed by the World Bank on a $300 million economic recovery loan and by the International Monetary Fund (IMF) on a financial package amounting to $504 million.

So far, some 383 items remain to be liberalized. Of this, 137 items were supposed to be liberalized last April 30, 169 are scheduled for liberalization on Dec 31, 1986 and another 77 items on June 30, 1987.

The cabinet, however, has deferred action on the 137 items until Oct 30, this year and on the other items. A final determination will be made by Dec 31, 1986.

These remaining items are now being thoroughly reviewed by the government in view of strong opposition from affected local industries.

These remaining items which are considered sensitive include 43 raw materials used in the manufacture of basic iron and steel products, 71 intermediate and capital goods used in the production of paper and paperboard, 31 high-tariff consumer goods, 149 raw materials used by local textile mills and 35 non-essential items.

AQUINO GIVES SPEECH AT CONSTABULARY RITES

HK080555 Quezon City Radyo Ng Bayan in English 0330 GMT 8 Aug 86

[Speech by Philippine President Corazon Aquino during Philippine Constabulary--Integrated National Police rites at Camp Aguinaldo in Manila -- live, monitored in progress]

[Text] .... This was Marcos' big mistakes. [passage indistinct] I do not think Marcos has realized that you cannot be a real commander-in-chief of the Armed Forces without also being the president of your people. His battalions finally realized this. They did not turn their guns on him. Instead, they joined the Filipino people in turning their backs to him. [passage indistinct] that is why he keeps wasting our money, calling here long distance. He has not learned that you must first be the president of the people before you can presume to call yourself the commander of their Armed Forces. He never learned that real power cannot be counted on the fingers of your hand even [words indistinct] by battalions or services, for true power derives from the multitudes and the people. [words indistinct] that there is only people power if you are talking about real power, I have long known. My whole campaign was [words indistinct] to bring them over to the cause of their liberation. It is a lesson that I know you have learned here at EDSA [Epifanio Delos Santos Avenue]: That with the people there is nothing you cannot accomplish, whether it is governing the country as president or bringing security to the people as soldiers and police.

The importance I place on drawing upon the power and the blessings of the people makes my jobs a little more complicated and, some complain, tedious. If it's tedious for them, it has only been enriching for me. The pains I take to consult the people are more than offset by the confidence I have in the decisions I finally take. I note with great satisfaction that we have been charting the same course in a (?personal conversation) in drawing up these strategies. No one can know better than the people what they need protection from, and what kind of protection will improve, rather than aggravate, the security of their communities.

Open yourselves to what the people have to say, enlist their support and not just their tolerance of your presence. I address these matters to you because, of all the elements of the Armed Forces, you, the constabulary and the police forces, have been specially charged and trained to maintain peace and order in our communities. You are shaped to design your instruments for peace-keeping than the regular armed forces [sentences as heard] You are expected not to disrupt but, on the contrary, to preserve the way of life of the communities placed in your hands. For this reason, interaction with the communities becomes an integral part of your work. Your mission is essentially preventive, to prevent [words indistinct] from going to a state that will require the intervention of our regular forces.

In the 85 years of its history, the Philippine Constabulary has, by and large, [words indistinct]. They have [words indistinct] the previous government the constabulary to obscure the distinction of its overall performance. Throughout our history, there have been many movements that have sought to rend the fabric of our society. Only recently have any of these movements approached their objectives. The vast majority of these attempts to break up our society have failed, and this is thanks to the work of the constabulary. [applase]

NAKASONE WILL 'SKIP' VISIT TO YASUKUNI SHRINE

OW121039 Tokyo KYODO in English 1016 GMT 12 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 12 KYODO -- Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone will skip a visit to Yasukuni shrine, a Shinto shrine in Tokyo dedicated to the war dead, on August 15, the anniversary of Japan's defeat in World War II, government officials said.

Nakasone told a group of conservative Diet members that he personally hopes to visit the shrine but must act in national interest because of opposition from neighboring countries.

Asian countries, particularly China and South Korea, denounced Nakasone last year for paying an official visit to Yasukuni where convicted war criminals are also enshrined. China said the visit hurt the sentiment of Asian peoples.

Chief cabinet secretary Masaharu Gotoda will issue a statement Thursday on the eve of the 41st anniversary of the end of the war to announce Nakasone's decision, the officials said.

FOREIGN MINISTERIAL TALKS SOUGHT WITH ROK

OW111127 Tokyo KYODO in English 1118 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 11 KYODO -- Japan hopes to hold the first Japan-South Korea regular meeting of foreign ministers in late August or early September in Tokyo, a senior Foreign Ministry official said Monday. The official said the ministry is now negotiating on the matter with South Korean officials. He said the meeting, which was decided in Seoul last August at the regular Japan-South Korea cabinet ministers conference, is expected to cover a wide range of subjects, including a bilateral trade imbalance, the fingerprinting of Korean residents of Japan, fishery problems, science and technology cooperation, resumption of the Pyongyang-Seoul dialogue and the overall situation on the Korean peninsula.

The official said Japanese Foreign Minister Tadashi Kuranari may find it difficult to go to Seoul due to his tight schedule, and for that reason the ministry hopes that the meeting with South Korean Foreign Minister Yi Won-kyong can take place in Tokyo. The official said Japan wants to open the first foreign ministers' meeting late August or early September because it is almost one year since the meeting was agreed in Seoul and the foreign ministers of the two countries have not met since they attended last year's United Nations General Assembly.

The official also said the annual bilateral cabinet ministers' meeting, which Japan had wanted to hold on August 29-30 or September 1-2, is not now expected to be held then due to the formation of the new Japanese cabinet in late July. He said the cabinet ministers' meeting will have to be postponed until October or later.

According to the official, the Japanese Government will try to resolve a dispute concerning fingerprinting of Korean residents under the alien registration system in the not too distant future, and the problem will also be taken up in bilateral working-level consultations on Korean residents status to be held in Tokyo on August 19. He also said Japan hopes that North Korea, the Soviet Union and East European countries will participate in the Seoul Olympics.

On the possibility of a visit to South Korea by Japan's Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko, the official said the ministry is discussing the matter with South Korean officials and hopes to make a final decision by the end of this month. The undated visit was announced by former Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe in March, but it has been pending because the princess had a hysterectomy operation soon after the announcement.

DEFENSE AGENCY SEEKS INCREASED DEFENSE SPENDING

[Text] Tokyo, Aug. 9 KYODO -- Defense Agency officials said Saturday they will seek a 6.3 percent increase in defense spending next year, which would include funds to purchase 16 F-15 "Eagle" interceptor fighters, 12 P-3C "Orion" antisubmarine patrol aircraft and "Patriot" missile systems. This would bring the national defense budget for the fiscal year beginning next April to 3.55 trillion yen. Finance Ministry officials have said, however, they will keep government spending down as much as possible because of fiscal austerity. The defense outlay rose 6.58 percent this year, compared with a 3 percente overall budget increase.

The agency will also demand about 10 million yen to study introduction of over-the-horizon (OTH) radar systems, and analysts regard it as certain that the system will be installed during the current five-year defense buildup program which began this year. The system, primarily wanted to check on a buildup of Soviet air attack capabilities, would allow agency experts to detect aircraft as far as 3,000 kilometers away.

The Ogasawara Islands, 1,000 kilometers south of Tokyo, and the Nansei Islands, southwest of Okinawa, are possible sites to set up the OTH radar systems, agency officials said.

The 6.3 percent budget increase will be made official at a meeting of senior agency officials next week, agency sources said.

The government normally draws up a budget outline toward the end of each year.

U.S., ROK WARNED AGAINST FURTHER 'PROVOCATIONS'

SK100903 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0847 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 10 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today in a commentary titled "Escalation of Provocations for War" lashes at the South Korean puppet army for firing bullets at a post of our side again on August 8, in the wake of its similar armed provocation on August 5. The continued firing cases in the Demilitarized Zone are premeditated and deliberate hostile acts of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique for leading the situation of our country to the brink of war, the author of the commentary says, and stresses:

Brazen-faced are the U.S. imperialists who impudently described their armed provocation as a work of some others before the world public opinion. This reminds people of those who set fire crying "fire". If the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets persist in armed provocations and follow the road of aggravating the situation, despite our repeated warnings, they will be unable to excape a deserving punishment.

REAGANS' NUCLEAR FANATICISM THREATENS KOREA

SK111029 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1016 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 11 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Sunday, in an article carried on the lapse of 41 years since the U.S. imperialists dropped atomic bombs over Hiroshima and Nagasaki, brutally killing hundreds of thousands of people, says Reagan is a reckless nuclear maniac who likes to pull the nuclear trigger.

Truman is recorded in history as the U.S. president who committed the hideous crime of ordering the first nuclear bomb dropping over mankind in the world, the paper notes, and says: Reagan surpasses Truman by far in anti-communism and nuclear fanaticism. In order to realize the wild ambition for world supremacy, Reagan increased military expenses to a record high in the U.S. history to mass produce and deploy new type nuclear weapons and means of their delivery.

Reagan has a common point with Truman in choosing Asia, notably the Korean peninsula, as a testing ground of nuclear confrontation with the socialist countries. Truman tried to open in Korea a breakthrough to smash the socialist countries five years after the Second World War.

Reagan, during his tour of South Korea in November 1983, inspected the frontline areas in the demilitarized zone along the Military Demarcation Line and openly raved that the United States should use nuclear weapons on the Korean peninsula in case of "emergency". His raving was based on practical nuclear war preparations.

The "Team Spirit" military exercises held every year in South Korea are a preliminary war to carry into effect the nuclear war plan against the DPRK. More than 1,000 pieces of nuclear weapons including neutron bombs and various means of their delivery are deployed in South Korea. Today, South Korea is no. 1 nuclear base in the world, four times greater than "NATO" in the density of nuclear weapons. Not content with this, U.S. imperialists plan to build 36 special nuclear weapon depots in South Korea and introduce their medium and long-range nuclear missiles.

This shows that the U.S. imperialist war likers bossed by Reagan are biding their time for first nuclear strike to make a breakthrough of "anti-communist crusade" on the Korean peninsula.

The criminal moves of the U.S. imperialists to bring the mushroom cloud to the clear sky over Korea must be decisively checked.

KIM IL-SONG 11 AUG ACTIVITIES REPORTED

Receives Pakistani Delegation

SK111058 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1037 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 11 (KCNA) -- The great leader President Kim Il-song on August 11 received the visiting parliamentary delegation of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan headed by Malik Mohammad Ali Khan, deputy chairman of the Senate.

Present on the occasion were chairman Yang Hyong-sop and Vice-Chairman Son Song-pil of the standing committee of the Supreme People's Assembly and Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Kim Hyong-yul. Mohammad Khaliq Sultan, charge d'affairs ad interim of the Pakistan Embassy in Pyongyang, was on hand.

President Kim Il-song conversed with the guests in a warm and friendly atmosphere.

The head of the delegation conveyed a gift of President Mohammad Ziaul Haq to President Kim Il-song.

Fetes Cuban Officials

SK111044 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1033 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Pyongyang August 11 (KCNA) -- Comrade Kim Il-song, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea and president of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, on August 11 received Cuban Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Korea Ricardo Danza Sigas and his embassy officials on the 60th birthday of Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz, first secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Cuba, president of the Council of State and president of the Council of Ministers of the Republic of Cuba.

Present on the occasion were Kim Yong-nam, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Workers' Party of Korea, vice-premier of the Administration Council and foreign minister; Hwang Chang-yop, member, and secretary, of the MPK Central Committee; and Kil Chae-kyong, alternate member, and vice-director of a department, of the WPK Central Committee.

Comrade Kim Il-song warmly greeted the 60th birthday of Comrade Fidel Castro Ruz and had a cordial and friendly conversation with the embassy officials. Then he arranged a reception for them which proceeded in a warm atmosphere.

ANTI-U.S. STRUGGLE MONTH CONCLUDED 'SUCCESSFULLY'

[NODONG SINMUN 9 August editorial: "The Source of War and Division on the Korean Peninsula Should Be Eliminated"]

[Text] This year's anti-U.S. joint struggle month, from 25 June-27 July, has been successfully held and concluded. The month was grandly observed in many countries in all the continents and regions of the world, including socialist, nonaligned, Third World, and capitalist countries.

Various events held during the solidarity month, such as solidarity meetings, lecture meetings, film appreciation meetings, and book and photograph exhibitions, were filled with heightened enthusiasm for struggling against the policy of aggression and war of the U.S. imperialists, who are aggravating tension and creating the danger of war on the Korean peninsula.

In connection with the anti-U.S. joint struggle month, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-Song has received messages of solidarity from state and government leaders of many countries of the world supporting the Korean people's just struggle for peace and peaceful reunification. Political parties, public organizations, national organizations, friendship organizations, research organizations, struggle organizations, international organizations, and international democratic organizations also sent solidarity messages and letters to their counterpart political parties and organizations.

The events adopted such documents as joint statements, solidarity resolutions, solidarity messages, solidarity letters, and letters of appeal denouncing the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers of aggression and war and supporting our people's cause of reunifying the country. Numerous newspapers, news agencies, and broadcasts of the world issued various articles and data, including statements, special articles, and commentaries.

During this period of 1 month, world attention was focused on the situation on the Korean peninsula and the Koreans question. People cried out, "Korea should be reunified. The U.S. troops should be withdrawn from South Korea." Through the anti-U.S. joint struggle month, the international solidarity with our revolution was strengthened to a higher degree.

The last Korean war started by the U.S. imperialists was the most shameless and brigandish aggressive war ever, unprecedented in the history of the world, and it was a bloody murderous war. In this war the U.S. imperialists employed all of the most atrocious, devilish, and beastly means of war unprecedented in the war history of the world. However, the U.S. imperialist aggressors could not make the Korean people give in. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the ever-victorious iron-willed commander, wisely led our people and the KPA to victory with his outstanding military strategy and refined leadership. All the people and the KPA soldiers, demonstrating unequaled mass heroism and valiance, defeated the U.S. imperialists' armed invasion and honorably defended the freedom and independence of the country. Our people's historic victory in the fatherland liberation war demonstrated that the U.S. imperialists are far from being invincible, and if the people rise up and wage a resolute struggle against them they can defeat this enemy.

With the miserable defeat inflicted on the U.S. imperialist aggressors by the Korean people during the fatherland liberation war, a new era of heightened anti-imperialist and anti-U.S. struggle began, and the U.S. imperialists have been on the road of decline ever since.

Some 30 years have passed since the U.S. imperialists suffered a miserable defeat in the Korean war of aggression. However, the U.S. imperialists are still occupying South Korea today. Implementing a harsh colonial military fascist rule there, they are recklessly maneuvering to wage a new war of aggression, a nuclear war against the Korean people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Because of the continuous provocative maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military fascist elements, the situation in our country is always tense, and there is a constant danger of war, which could break out at any time in our country. Today, there is more tension and danger in Korea than anywhere else in the world.

The U.S. imperialists regard the Korean peninsula as very important in carrying out their aggressive world strategy and Asian strategy, and it is an important part of their Korean strategy to maintain their occupation of South Korea and turn South Korea into a launching site for waging a new war against our republic and other socialist countries.

The United States has already deployed some 1,000 nuclear weapons in South Korea, including neutron bombs, the most vicious means of murder. It has brought in such means of nuclear attack as F-16 fighter-bombers, B-52 strategic bombers, and various rockets. It is also scheming to bring in more weapons of mass destruction, such as Pershing II missiles, Tomahawk missiles, and binary chemical weapons.

In the Kunsan base in South Korea, they are pushing ahead with a plan to build 36 special underground nuclear weapons storerooms. South Korea has been turned into the largest nuclear weapons arsenal in the Far East. Nuclear weapons are more densely deployed there than anywhere else in the world.

The U.S. imperialist warmongers, with a view to provoking a new war, have worked out an operational plan against our republic and other socialist countries, especially an operational plan for a nuclear attack. They have deployed over 80 to 90 percent of the U.S. and puppet army armed forces near the Demilitarized Zone, keeping them in readiness to start an offensive war at any time.

Meanwhile, accelerating the maneuvers to form a triangular military alliance between the United States, Japan, and South Korea, they are scheming to bring the aggressive armed forces of the Self-Defense Agency, the revitalized and rearmed Japanese militarist armed forces, into South Korea to use them to attack the Korean people. Under the pretext of modernizing the South Korean puppet army, they are supplying it with vast quantities of modern murderous weapons.

Because of these maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges for arms buildup and war preparations, the situation on the Korean peninsula is extremely tense, leading the situation to the brink of war. There is no doubt that if a new war, a nuclear war, breaks out on the Korean peninsula, it will spread into a new world war, a thermonuclear war.

During the anti-U.S. joint struggle month, world opinion exposed that the U.S. military occupation of South Korea and the maneuvers for division and war threaten peace on the Korean peninsula and increase the danger of war, and are the greatest obstacle to the reunification of Korea. World opinion also consistently demanded that the U.S. forces' occupation of South Korea be brought to an end for peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea.

The grave situation created on the Korean peninsula requires that a step to ease tension and prevent nuclear war be taken at an early date.

Some time ago we proposed an important initiative for holding talks between military authorities to ease the acute tension on the Korean peninsula and bring an end to confrontation. We also made a proposal to establish a nuclear-free peace zone on the Korean peninsula to remove the danger of nuclear war and maintain and solidify peace.

These proposals clearly show the consistent peace-loving position of our republic and people, endeavoring to help resolve our people's national problem by avoiding an armed conflict on the Korean peninsula and accelerating peaceful reunification and endeavoring to maintain and solidify peace in Asia and the world.

However, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean authorities did not accept our peace proposals, turning away from the opposing them. This realistically proves that the U.S. imperialists want not peace, but confrontation and war and that it is they who are responsible for the tension and danger of war on the Korean peninsula.

During the anti-U.S. joint struggle month, the world's peace-loving people actively supported our important initiative for holding talks between military authorities and the 23 June statement of the DPRK Government in connection with the establishment of a nuclear-free peace zone, denounced the insincere attitude of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean authorities and asserted that the United States should accept these proposals and that this is in conformity with the purpose of proclaiming this year to be a year of peace.

In order to prevent war on the Korean peninsula, to ensure lasting peace, and to realize peaceful reunification, the basic cause blocking them should be removed. The Korean question is not resolved and the Korean people are living in a divided state and in the danger of war, entirely because of the U.S. line of division and war against Korea and because of the U.S. forces' occupation of South Korea.

The United States has no reason whatsoever to station its aggresisve forces in South Korea. The U.S. forces' occupation of South Korea is totally illegal and anachronistic. The United States should accept our peace proposals; withdraw its aggressive forces, nuclear weapons, chemical weapons, and other lethal weapons from South Korea without delay; and withdraw its hands of interference from Korea.

The anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle of the South Korean people and students is a just patriotic struggle to regain national dignity and sovereignty and achieve peaceful reunification of the country. This struggle will certainly bear shining fruit. During the anti-U.S. joint struggle month, strong voices demanding the withdrawal of the U.S. forces and nuclear weapons from South Korea were heard all over the world. This is a great encouragement to all the Korean people who have risen up in the just cause of peace and reunification and to the South Korean people who are waging a sacred anti-U.S. struggle for independence and an antifascist struggle for democratization.

All the Korean people will force the U.S. imperialists out of South Korea and will certainly achieve the independent and peaceful reunification of the country.

We express our gratitude to the governments, political parties, public organizations, international organizations, international democratic organizations, anti-imperialist, antiwar, and peace organizations of socialist countries, nonaligned countries, and Third World countries; all the peace-loving countries of the world; and all the peace-loving people of the world who are offering unsparing support to and solidarity with our people in their struggle to oppose the U.S. imperialists' new war provocation maneuvers and to achieve peace and peaceful reunifcation of the country.

We express our expectations and conviction that they will, as they did in this year's anti-U.S. joint struggle month, continuously and vigorously support our peace proposals and our people's struggle for reunification of the country and demonstrate firm solidarity with the South Korean people and students in their anti-U.S. struggle for independence and in their antifascist struggle for democratization.

CHON USING ASIAN GAMES TO INCREASE POWER

[NODONG SINMUN 10 August commentary: "They Should not Use the Games for the Purpose of Securing Their Power"]

[Text] The South Korean puppets began a drastic wholesale roundup on the pretext of smooth operation of the Asian Games. On 7 August, the puppet home minister noted to the National Assembly Home Affairs Committee that he would do his utmost to attain social stability during the Asian Games, including eliminating the final campus movement organizations and blockading demonstrations. He also babbled that once the source of groundless rumors and the cause agitating public sentiment are discovered, he will deal with them according to the law.

This means that on the pretext of the Asian Games, he will eliminate and obliterate all social and political factors disagreeable to his feelings including activities of core struggle organizations of youths and students, their courageous anti-U.S. and antifascist demonstration struggle, and movements of people from all walks of life and opposition circles seeking the democratization of society and the right to exist.

At the same time of such an impure attempt by the puppets, a bloody wholesale roundup has begun throughout South Korea. Tanks and armored cars have been deployed at every major public building and important location, and heavily armed puppet army troops and police have taken up positions for repression. Campuses and offices of opposition organizations have been thrown into disorder by surprise searches by the police.

The police have strengthened checks and inspection activities everywhere according to orders allowing arrests and searches for indefinite periods to bring about the good results of more arrests. In particular, they are more frantically running amok with the operation to repress those involved in various demonstration struggles, including members of the Minimintu and Chamintu. South Korea has been turned into a graveyard of democracy where unprecedented terrorist politics, unseen even during martial law rule, are rampant.

From the very beginning, South Korea was not an appropriate venue for international sports games, including the Asian Games. There is neither freedom nor democracy in South Korea. It is a dark frozen land where rights to exist are infringed upon. For this, the confrontation between democracy and fascism has become more serious with each passing day and social disorder continues.

To block the rapidly growing independent and democratic forces striving to eliminate their treacherous rule, the puppets have launched a roundup while raving about a threat by someone, and have indiscriminately arrested and imprisoned a number of patriotic students and innocent residents as objects of sacrifice for such nonexistent and slanderous incidents as infiltration, thus cruelly punishing and massacring them.

Such maneuvers are perpetrated more viciously when international meetings and international sports games are held in South Korea.

However, whenever such events take place, the South Korean people dealt a blow to the puppets with their courageous struggle. This was proven by the fact that the congress of world banks and the annual meeting of the IMF held last year in Seoul were deflated [kirul pijimotada] by the people's patriotic shouts condemning nation-selling acts and that such meetings had to suffer the tear gas fire and repression of the puppet police.

Because of the ceaseless new war provocation maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and their stooge, the Chon Tu-hwan clique, South Korea even embraces the constant danger of nuclear war.

It is widely known to the world that South Korea has been reduced to a place of various horrible contageous diseases, including AIDS, and serious public pollution, to a place where the safety of people's health cannot be ensured.

A number of people from social circles and sports sectors around the world have expressed concern over the fact that South Korea was designated as the venue for the Asian Games. Nevertheless, the puppets have dragged the international sports games into South Korea. This is designed to create a favorable international atmosphere for the two Koreas plot and to consolidate the foundation for a long-term continuation in power of the DJP military fascist group.

This is shown by situations created in South Korea on the pretext of guaranteeing the Asian games and the Olympics. Handing down repressive emergency orders one after another since the beginning of the year, the puppets have simply turned South Korea into a place of martial law without declaring it and have tied the hands and feet of the people.

The puppets' 100-day roundup operation carried out since June on the pretext of protecting the Asian Games became more wicked when the order of indefinite roundup and search handed down some time ago began to be followed.

The Uijongbu Police Station alone has arrested approximately 1,250 people as of 30 June on charges of being criminals hindering the Asian Games. How many people have been arrested and imprisoned throughout South Korea?

Not satisfied with blocking the people's just advance by wielding bayonets and guns, the puppets again pulled out their bayonets to repress the people while raving about checking demonstrations, eliminating organizations, and so forth. This clearly shows that the puppets are attempting to repress the anti-U.S. and antifascist struggle of youths, students, and people on the pretext of guaranteeing the sports games and to achieve security for their power.

If they must repress the people demanding independence and democracy and must forcibly demolish the houses or residents because of the sports games, such sports games will only bring pain and calamity to the people. Repression with bayonets and guns and sports games are incongruous with each other. It is natural that the South Korean people have risen in a struggle to oppose the Asian Games, denouncing them as reckless games which sacrifice poor people and a festival held with debts to maintain power. The Asian Games, which sacrifice the interest of the people demanding independence and democracy, and which destroy the foundation of the people's lives should deservedly be rejected by the people. The people from the sports sector of Asia cannot but pay due attention to this situation. The puppets are pursuing impure aims for power security while repressing the people with bayonets and guns on the pretext of guaranteeing the Asian Games. This will not only endanger the sports games, but will also result in igniting the time bomb installed by their treacherous rule.

NORTH URGED TO RESUME INTER-KOREAN TALKS

DPRK Negotiation Terms Outlined

SK110935 Seoul YONHAP in English 0902 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 11 (YONHAP) -- North Korea asserted Sunday that South Korea accept the proposal by the North of tripatite military talks, abandon anti-communism policy and give up the military exercises if the South wants the resumption of the inter-Korean dialogues. The Pyongyang Radio said Monday that the North made the assertions in a joint statement issued by the delegations of economic talks, Red Cross meetings and preliminary meetings for parliamentarians talks.

The North boycotted the economic talks and the Red Cross meetings on the pretext that the South staged a joint U.S.-ROK military exercises early this year.

Meanwhile, on July 11, the South urged the North to resume the inter-Korean dialogues in a joint statement by the chief delegates of the three inter-Korean talks. In a response to the demand, the North called on the South to hold the military talks among the North, the South and the United States prior to the resumption of the inter-Korean talks.

Red Cross Appeal

SK120520 Seoul YONHAP in English 0906 GMT 12 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 12 (YONHAP) -- South Korean national Red Cross President Kim Sang-hyop Tuesday urged North Korea to unconditonally resume participation in the suspended Red Cross talks, discarding inhumane behavior in the spirit of the Red Cross. Kim made the remark in a ceremony marking the fifth anniversary commemorating families separated on either side of the demarcation line dividing the two Koreas. About 600 people attended the cerermony.

Last January, North Korea unilaterally broke off the Red Cross talks, citing the annual South Korean-U.S. joint military exercise "Team Spirit" as an excuse. Pyongyang has never responded to Seoul's appeal to resume the talks, even after the military exercise ended in April, Kim said.

In an address, Choe Yong-sik, chairman of the Korean assembly for the reunion of ten million separated by the division of the Korean peninsula at the end of World War II and by the Korean war. The participants adopted a three-point resolution calling on North Korea to unconditonally and immediately return to the inter-Korean Red Cross talks in accordance with the principles of humanitarianism.

UNC DENIES DMZ 8, 9 AUG SHOOTING INCIDENTS

SK120151 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 12 Aug 86 p 8

[Text] The North Korean side of the Military Armistice Commission yesterday counterproposed that the 479th meeting of the MAC secretaries convene on Aug 18, the United Nations Command announced yesterday.

The UNC had proposed earlier that the MC secretaries' meeting be convened yesterday at the Joint Security Area.

The UNC, meanwhile, denied that another shooting incident had taken place in the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) Friday, calling the charge by the North Korean Communists a complete fabrication.

There was an incident last Tuesday in which North Korean guards opened fire on the U.N. posts in the DMZ, but no shooting has occurred since then, a spokesman disclosed.

POLICE RAID KOREA UNIVERSITY TO BREAK UP RALLIES

SK120750 Seoul YONHAP in English 0740 GMT 12 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug. 12 (YONHAP) -- Sixty-eight students were arrested Tuesday when police staged two massive raids on a private university in Seoul in an effort to break up a planned "summer camp" set up by radical students.

In a morning raid on the campus of Korea University, 1,500 uniformed and plainclothes policemen stormed onto the campus, arresting 63 students in a desperate search. The 25-minute raid was intended to prevent the students from holding the camp, which the students called "liberation college." About three hours later, the same number of riot policemen entered the campus again, firing tear gas, when some 50 students approached the front gate and launched a demonstration, hurling rocks at the police. Police withdrew from the campus 25 minutes after they arrested five more students.

Following the police raid, more than 80 students held a rally to protest the police raid and to push ahead with the four-day summer camp, which the students had planned to open on Tuesday to the general public, as well as middle and high school students.

POLICE SEIZE 'SUBVERSIVE' LITERATURE AT SCHOOLS

[Text] Seoul Metropolitan Police searched campuses of Seoul National University and seven other major universities in the capital Sunday night, seizing over 4,500 subversive leaflets and demonstration items, such as Molotov cocktails. The "clean-up" operation by police against the underground material was conducted between 11 p.m. and midnight, with a total of 1,465 policemen mobilized. The universities searched were Korea, Yonsei, Kyonghui, Songgyungwan, Tongkuk, Hanyang, and Hanguk University of Foreign Studies.

Police said they confiscated a total of 4,646 demonstration articles of 128 kinds, including 4,286 copies of 49 anti-government leaflets and 55 copies of 21 leftist ideology books. The other items seized were 53 home-made firebombs, 15 cotton-tipped sticks, 17 placards, six wooden bars, two flags, five examples of propaganda graphics and 115 empty bottles to be used for the making of Molotov cocktails, according to police.

Police said they searched campuses as disturbances on and off campuses have been incessant, even during the vacation period.

Yet, the police search operation at Korea University was foiled, as some 500 policemen from Songbuk Police met with fierce resistance by students.

Police units tried to get into the student hall around midnight Sunday, but about 50 students fought against the police entry by setting up barricades with chairs and desks at the entrance. Police withdrew at around 3 a.m. yesterday, giving up their search. The militant students hurled Molotov cocktails before the police withdrew.

Police were learned to have taken the Korea University student hall as a major target because students were preparing for an activists' rally called "Liberation University" on the campus. The university held an emergency deans' meeting to discuss the predawn incident yesterday and decided to bar students' entry onto campus for five days, until Friday. The school authorities also prohibited the students' use of the library. School personnel were seen from early morning yesterday before the school gates, blocking students from attending. A bulletin, announcing the temporary closure of the gate, was set up outside the school.

LEFTIST MATERIALS CONFISCATED FROM BOOKSTORES

[Text] Government officials and police confiscated more than 600 books and tapes "tainted with leftist ideologies" from bookstores near Seoul's major university campuses yesterday, a police spokesman said.

Culture and Information Ministry officials, teamed with police, began searching some 20 bookstores near Seoul National, Yonsei, Songgyungwan and Ewha Woman's universities at 3:30 p.m. Seized books include the "History of Japan's Student Movement," the "Road to Democracy" and those dealing with Korea's labor movement and union activities.

They confiscated more than 50 books from Chongbaek Bookstore in Myongnyun-dong near Songyungwan University. Police led away Cho Song-in, a 31-year-old female sales clerk of the bookstore. They also seized 33 volumes of 20 kinds of books, five tapes and 100 copies of fliers critical of the "Puchon incident" from Nonjang Bookstore near the university.

500 CATHOLIC DISSIDENTS BATTLE POLICE 9 AUG

SK100020 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 10 Aug 86 p 8

[Text] IRI Cholla-pukto (YONHAP) -- More than 500 Catholic dissidents clashed with riot police after an anti-government rally at the Changin Catholic Church here Friday afternoon. The gathering was designed by five Catholic groups of the Chonju Diocese to denounce what they claimed was the sexual harassment of a dissident female student by a police officer. The protesters hurled stones at riot police, who responded with tear gas, during the four-hour street turmoil which lasted until 10 p.m. Police took away six demonstrators, including So Pyong-kwan, 31, who were released late in the night.

GOVERNMENT INCOMPETENCE ALLEGED AFTER SHRINE FIRE

Chon Tours Independence Hall

SK091145 Seoul YONHAP in English 1133 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 9 (YONHAP) -- President Chon Tu-hwan made an inspection tour of the fire-damaged Independence Hall at Mokchon, South Chungchong Province, Saturday afternoon.

After the on-the-spot observation, Chon expressed regrets that the fire at the hall, built with money donated by the people, occurred just days ahead of its opening. "However, I am confident that we can use the mishap as a turning point toward a blessing because we have the wisdom, courage and potential to overcome adversities and challenges," he said.

The president instructed officials concerned to make utmost efforts to rehabilitate the structure, so that the new one could turn out to be much better than the originally planned one. He also told them not to make haste with the restoration work by fixing beforehand the opening date of the hall and to closely cooperate with related government offices. Chon made the instructions after he was briefed on the fire by Culture-Information Minister Yi Won-hong and curator An Chun-sang of the Independence Hall, who accompanied the chief executive on his visit.

DJP, Government Reshuffle Urged

SK091226 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 8 Aug 86 p 2

[Editorial: "The Party and the Government Should Be Quickly Reorganized -- We Call for Reforming the National Administration so the Government Can Soothe Public Sentiment"]

[Text] With the fire accident at the independence monument as the momentum, opinions have been expressed one after another to the effect that there will be a reorganization of the government and party.

Having met with high-level authorities, Prime Minister No Sin-yong dined with DJP Chairman No Tae-u and secretly conferred with him. Following this, executive members of the ruling party have successively met with one another, drawing the attention of political circles.

The accidental fire at the independence monument is not the sole cause of the need to reorganize the party and government. Even before that, the need to reorganize the ruling bloc's lineup to guide the political situation in revising the Constitution was urged. Voices were raised, calling for satisfying public sentiment and greatly reforming the national administration.

This reflected the will of the ruling circles to successfully conclude the latter half of the ruling period with an attitude of mental revolution at the crucial moment of greeting the sixth anniversary of the emergence of the Fifth Republic.

When the present regime changed its direction toward revising the Constitution after obstinately calling for protecting the Constitution, the need to reorganize the ruling bloc's lineup in presiding over constitutional revision became urgent. This is because taking the lead in revising the Constitution through reaching an agreement appeared to be difficult.

It was claimed that it was desirable to begin a new era to be prepared and led by new persons, in order to clean the old political stains and provide a new turning point for a new start.

An executive member of the ruling party once said that it is important to change the minds and attitudes of party post holders in reorganizing party posts rather than to only change people. Man can be reborn by incessantly reforming himself. To achieve this end, one must endure pain in reforming himself, which is no less greater than the throes of giving birth.

Do we believe that the ruling party can endure such pain? Having pledged to thoroughly investigate the torture at the Puchon Police Station, the ruling party has failed to make any progress in exposing the truth about torture by subverting the meeting of the National Assembly Standing Committee through scrutinizing old remarks made by National Assemblymen from opposition parties. Countering this, the opposition party has frequently staged sit-ins in the National Assembly. Some national assemblymen from the opposition party have caused a nervous war of consumption by committing presumptions acts.

We are disappointed with the National Assembly. The people are carrying out a campaign to prevent the smoking of American cigarettes, while the National Assembly has failed to pass a bill banning American cigarette imports.

The same story can be applied to the government. It has failed to prevent money collected from the people from being misused. It failed to do various things it could have done to prevent the fire.

Now is the time a great decision to soothe public sentiment is required. If the truth of the incident is not satisfactorily disclosed and if those who should take responsibility refuse to take responsibility, there will be no way to prevent the circulation of rumors. In order to correctly counter trade pressures from the United States and Japan, which have been closely applied by them to us, the government and ruling party should set an example for the people and seek to morally win the trust of the people. We once again urge the ruling circles to make a decision.

Regime Should 'Reform' Itself

SK110818 Seoul CHOSON ILBO in Korean 8 Aug 86 p 2

[Editorial: "Cabinet Reshuffle and Political Reform of the Country: The State of the People's Restless Minds Should Be Considered"]

[Text] 1. Our people's minds are now over charged. A high-powered shock, too much for our minds to normally control, has passed through our entire body. As a result, we have been sent reeling. Our brains are all filled with a kind of gas that could explode at any given moment. This gas has kept us in a state of confusion in which our reasoning cannot function normally.

Unless this phenomenon is wisely dealt with in a timely manner, it may one day explode and open a hole through the lid of our minds greater than the hole the excessive flow of current and gases made on the roof of the main building of Independence Hall.

People are angry, although they do not know at whom they should be angry. What kind of people are we who have reduced politics, society, and our livelihood to the state in which it exists today? We do not understand ourselves. What further ordeals must we endure before we manage to build a stately Independence Hall, our national sacred hall, which we have so far failed to build in a proper manner? What further ordeals must we overcome before we get to the bedrock of the sexual torture incident in a correct manner? And what sins have we committed that force us to be subjected to waves of suffering by the major economic powers?

2. What is the reason for all this? Simply put, it may be that our country has no master or policeman. Clearly, something is wrong with our society. Let no one point an accusing finger at others.

Clearly, something inside us has been cut loose. We apparently lack spirit. Part of our society is on an exciting spending spree, whereas another part has sunk under a deadly weight. On the whole, our society seems to be drifting away, being dragged by these currents without being able to do anything about it.

There seems to be no yardstick measuring the morality of our society, and the examination that keeps the values of our society afloat seems to have been sapped. The notion of a helmsman guiding our society seems to have been seriously questioned and even the politics that are supposed to keep the traffic flowing seem to be lacking.

Otherwise, things so preposterous and acts so apathetic could not be committed in broad daylight. How could there be an exchange of bribes during the course of subcontracting on building no less an edifice than the nation's sacred hall? How could the building of Independence Hall, an edifice that is supposed to enshrine the national spirit, be left in the hands of a few unqualified builders as if it were a barracks?

The bureaucratic ping pong game sickens us. The bureaucrats ignored requests from other government offices for the hall to be outfitted with fire fighting equipment and those whose requests had been turned down did nothing about it. The toadyist dispostition of bureaucrats who unreasonably shortened the period of construction to please their superiors and the cheekiness of those who failed to supervise construction are frightening. Moreover, the government' attempt to assign the hall's repair work to the builder who brought such a tragedy to us is so unnerving as to outrage us.

Watching the activities of the National Assembly committees currently in session depresses us even more. We expected that the house committees would do something to relieve our minds of the excessive current and hollow feeling. However, they have failed to do so. The ruling party, which had earlier called so loudly for a thorough investigation into the sexual torture at the Puchon police station has left us with the impression that they tried to block the investigation rather that get to the root of the incident. While engaging itself in a verbal tug of war with the opposition party over a past incident not worth discussing, the ruling party was very restrained in issuing a declaration opposing the import of American cigarettes, stating that it is only symbolic.

At this juncture, it may not be unreasonable for us to question the very existence of the National Assembly. What business does the National Assembly have with the people and why should it exist? Common sense makes us think it natural for the National Assembly to have enough political sense to keep the committees open and solve many after effects of the fire at Independence Hall. If leaving the sexual torture incident at the Puchon police station without revealing the truth of it will benefit no one, the politicians have all the more reason to realize that it should not be left behind without a solution. Nevertheless, the National Assembly hurriedly concluded discussion on it as if to say that it does not give a damn about public sentiment.

4. Whatever has happened, we cannot abandon efforts to rise again to redouble our efforts to overcome the indignation and sense of stupor. People should stop being restless and outrageous, stop wandering, and collect their thoughts to put our morality in order. Self-examination that reveals that we are all respoonsible for the irregularities and unreasonableness cropping up around us is today more urgently needed than ever before. First of all, we must sit down, not stand. We should sit tight and collect our thoughts, instead of roaming around. This is because it is very important for us to realize that it is neither the bureaucrats nor the politics, but we who can calm ourselves.

The will and attitude of the government at this juncture is important to calming our people. The government can no longer watch with its arms folded the situation in our society, in which there is neither a master nor a policeman to keep the traffic flowing. In this sense, we believe it is necessary for the government to reshuffle the cabinet and effect reform to refurbish itself.

Things should be done in a timely manner. If the timing is wrong, such a reform may not be effective, no matter how good its goal may be. A measure taken at a wrong time cannot be expected to be most effective.

We believe that now is the appropriate time. The cabinet reshuffle and reform of the government should be understood not so much as an act holding any government official responsible for what has happened as an act of breathing new life into the heart of the people by correcting the depressed social atmosphere. Politics is nothing but such a function. For the government officials concerned, this can serve as a graceful way for them to step down offices. This can also allow them to drain the stagnant water in the government through their resignations and prevent the world from dwelling on old grudges.

Belatedly though, those who are in power should now start practicing politics. They should also consider the sentiments of the people, who are restless and indignant.

DJP Recommends Reshuffle to Chon

SK120130 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 12 Aug 86

[Text] A major reshuffle of the Cabinet and the ruling party's hierarchy is expected to come shortly, probably within this week, following a recommendation by the party chairman to the President yesterday.

Chairman No Tae-u of the Democratic Justice Party recommended to President Chon Ta-hwan a set of plans to renovate the social and political atmosphere dampened by a series of mishaps, the latest being the fire at the Independence Hall.

The recommendation, featuring a major shakeup in the Cabinet and the DJP hierarchy, according to party sources, was made when No paid a courtesy call on Chon at Chongwadae at 4 p.m.

During his meeting with the President, which lasted for two hours, No asked the President "to conduct a reshuffle of the Cabinet and the DJP at any time which you think is appropriate," according to party spokesman Sim Myong-po.

Briefing reporters on No's visit to the presidential mansion, Sim said, "No expressed his views on everything involving the current situation during the meeting," indicating that the recommendation for the shakeup was made.

The spokesman also said the DJP chairman "mainly discussed with the President the operational matters of the Special Committee on Constitutional Amendment of the National Assembly." He quoted President Chon as telling No that the DJP will advance the schedule to finalize its own draft amendment. The party plans to confirm the draft through intra-party debates at the caucus on Aug 18, the Executive Council on the ensuing day, and the Steering Committee of the Central Committee slated for Aug. 25. But, the President told No to hold the Steering Committee shortly after the Executive Council meeting, according to the spokesman.

"No also made a report to the president on countermeasures against recent mishaps such as the Puchon incident (involving alleged sexual torture of a female criminal suspect by a Puchon policeman), the fire at the Independence Hall and a happening at the House Home Affairs Committee (an opposition lawmaker's throwing of a tear-gassed jacket to the panel chairman)," the spokesman said.

NEW 1987-1991 ROK-EC TEXTILE ACCORD SIGNED

SK090221 Seoul YONHAP in English 0157 GMT 9 Aug 86

[Text] Seoul, Aug 9 (YONHAP) -- The Korean trade and Industry Ministry estimated Saturday that Korea's exportation of textiles to the European Community (EC) will increase by about 250 million U.S. dollars between 1987 and 1991 under a new bilateral textile accord reached Friday in Brussels. During the five-year period, the annual growth rate of Korea's exportation of textile and apparel products to the EC will be limited to 2.5 percent, up from 2.3 percent under the current five-year binational textile pact, scheduled to expire at the end of this year.

The new EC quota list does not include natural fibers such as ramies, linen and silk, in contrast to the recently signed Korean-U.S. textile agreement in which all three items are listed as quota-restricted items, a ministry official said. Under the new Korean-European agreement, Korea's textile exports to EC nations are set to increase at an annual rate of 0.6 percent for cotton fabrics and clothing (classified as group 1), 2.7 percent for synthetic cloth (group 2) and 4.8 percent for outerwear (group 3), over the previous year.

The basic volume of Korea's exportation of textiles to the EC has been set at 101,395 tons for 1987, up 5.4 percent from 96,196 tons this year. Between 1988 and 1991, the basic volume will increase by an annual average rate of 2.5 percent from the previous year. The 1987 basic export amount breaks down to 28,727 tons for group 1 (up 1.3 percent from 1986), 51,899 tons for group 2 (up 7.3 percent) and 20,779 tons for group 3 (up 6.8 percent).

The Brussels agreement was signed by Pak Un-so, director general of the ministry's International Trade Bureau, and J.P. Leng, director of external relations for the EC directorate general's commission.

Under the new pact, textile categories subject to EC import control will be reduced from 54 to 44. Five articles, including towels, handkerchiefs and bed linens, which have recorded low quota consumption rates, will be freed from the quota regulations, and five others will be reclassified. In addition, the new accord considerably facilitates the process of transferring quotas among textile items and the carry-over and carry-forward among groups in favor of Korea, the official said. The new accord contains an "anti-surge mechanism," under which quotas can be reduced and the flexible operation of transfer, carry-over and carry-forward can be suspended to prevent sharp increases in the importation of items that fail to meet quotas.

According to analysts here, the new textile accord reflects many of Korea's demands.

Korea exported 893 million dollars worth of textile goods to the EC in 1985, capturing 4 percent of the EC's textile market, compared with 8.2 percent for Hong Kong, 5.7 percent for China and 2.4 percent for Taiwan.

ATHIT, BUNTHENG PAY 'SURPRISE' VISIT TO KHUKRIT

[Text] Supreme Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek and two opposition leaders yesterday paid a surprise visit to former Prime Minister M.R. Khukrit Pramot at the latter's Suan Phlu residence.

The two politicians -- United Democratic Party leader Buntheng Thongsawat and party secretary general Tamchai Khamphato -- arrived at M.R. Khukrit's residence shortly after Gen Athit's arrival.

Gen Athit spent about 40 minutes and left Khukrit's Suan Phlu residence at about 10 am while the other two visitors left the house 50 minutes later.

In an interview with the press, M.R. Khukrit said that Gen Athit had only paid a courtesy call and did not seek any counselling.

"Well, he only talked about his trip to Khao Cha Ngok to attend the ceremony marking the opening of the new Chunlachomklao Military Academy campus," he said.

M.R. Khukrit refused to make any comments on the current political situation, saying he has nothing to do with politics any longer. The veteran politician had earlier resigned from the Social Action Party saying he had lost interest in politics.

He also said that he would soon travel to Chiang Mai where he intends to stay for a long time.

Gen Athit went over to the Suan Phlu residence after having called on Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon to congratulate him on his appointment as premier.

SUPREME COMMAND REPORTS ON BORDER SITUATION

BK110944 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0530 GMT 10 Aug 86

[Text] The Supreme Command information office reported the border situation during the week ending 7 August as follows: The Thai-Cambodian border situation: Reinforcements of fresh Vietnamese troops were dispatched to Puok and Anlung Veng Districts in Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province and Ratanamondol District in Battambang Province. Movements of Vietnamese troops and war equipment were detected in the central parts of Sisophon, Mongkokborei, and Battambang Districts in Battambang Province and Samraong District in Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province. Meanwhile, small-scale fighting between the CGDK forces and Vietnamese soldiers took place generally with the CGDK forces taking the initiative and employing the tactics of ambush, hit-and-run, and sniping operations against Vietnamese military installations in Siem Reap, Varin, and Anlung Veng Districts of Siem Reap-Oddar Meanchey Province and in Sisophon, Ratanamondol, Battambang, and Mongkolborei Districts.

As a result of the fightings in Cambodia, Vietnamese shells frequently landed inside Thai territory in Muang and Khlong Yai Districts of Trat Province.

The Thai-Lao border situation: During the period under review, the Lao Government organized training courses for guerrilla forces of (Nam Keung) hamlet opposite Chiang Khong District of Chiang Rai Province and (Muang Khot) township opposite Chiang Kham District of Phayao Province. Lao soldiers planted landmines at border passes along the Thai-Lao border in Chiang Kham District of Phayao and Ban Khok subdistrict of Uttaradit Province. District administrative committees and canton administrative committees of Bolikhamsai Province held meetings with military officers of Muang Pakkading and Muang Paksane Districts in Bolikhamsai Province to plan suppression operations against the Meo Tribesmen in the areas of Phou Chia, (Muang Mo), and Muang Mok of Xieng Khouang Province and measures to prevent them from fleeing the country.

AFP ON POSSIBLE RELEASE OF CAPTURED CHINESE

BK111142 Hong Kong AFP in English 1138 GMT 11 Aug 86

[Text] Hanoi, Aug 11 (AFP) -- Vietnam may soon decide to release an undisclosed number of Chinese nationals accused of illegally infiltrating the country, an authoritative Vietnamese source said here Monday.

China announced Thursday that it would repatriate 34 Vietnamese prisoners in mid-August, including "25 armed elements and four spies."

Asked whether Hanoi would respond to the Chinese move, the source said that Vietnam, "may decide soon to free a certain number of Chinese citizens arrested after illegally infiltrating Vietnamese territory."

The source also said that for some time China had been crossing the border and arresting Victnamese nationals illegally and indicated that Vietnam was ready to receive these prisoners if China decided to free them.

Since 1979, when the two countries fought a brief but bloody border war, China and Vietnam have occasionally released or exchanged prisoners accused mostly of illegal infiltration or spying, observers said.

RADIO FEATURE WARNS AGAINST PRC FLOATING MINES

BK101540 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1400 GMT 7 Aug 86

["Heighten Vigilance for National Defense" feature by editor Vu Dinh Vinh]

[Text] Following heavy rains at the Vietnamese-Chinese border, the water level on various rivers such as the Lo and Red Rivers has risen and there have been flash floods. Apart from the struggle against flash floods, floods, and other natural calamities, our people will also have to heighten vigilance against the Chinese reactoionaries' floating mines along various rivers. These floating mines have inflicted casualties on the people in various localities such as those in Xuan Hung village of Xuan Thuy District, Thai Binh Province, in Le Lo; village of Thuong Tin District, Ha Nam Ninh Province, in Phu Son and Vu Son villages of Hung Ha District and in Nam Hai of Tien Hai District, Ha Son Binh Province, in Hai Moi village of Dong Anh District, Hanoi, and in Nguyen Hoa village of Phu Tien District, Hai Hung Province.

Everyone knows that since May 1985 -- the beginning of the typhoon and flood season in Vietnam -- the Chinese authorities have had their troops float many mines along various rivers flowing from China into Vietnam. This has led to many mine explosions, killing and wounding numerous Vietnamese civilians.

From May to the end of December last year alone, there were more than 100 explosions involving Chinese mines, killing 30 persons and wounding 60 others.

As for this year's rainy season, in defiance of repeated condemnations by Vietenam before public opinion at home and abroad, the Chinese reactionaries continue to commit more crimes. In June and July 1986 alone, there were 27 explosions involving Chinese mines in various provinces -- including 3 explosions in Vinh Phu, 3 in Ha Bac, 1 in Hai Hung, 4 in Hanoi, 4 in Ha Son Binh, 4 in Ha Nam Ninh, and 8 in Thai Binh -- resulting in 5 persons killed and 30 others wounded, mostly children and elderly persons. Noteworthy are the following incidents:

On 16 July a Chinese mine exploded in Phu Son Village, Hung Ha District, Thai Binh Province, wounding 11 children ranging in age from 5 to 15 while they were cutting grass on a river bank. Among them (Hoang Thi Hoai) suffered serious leg and chest wounds and both her hands were mangled.

On 24 July a Chinese mine exploded in Nam Hai village, Tien Hai District, Thai Binh Province, killing Mr Ha Van Oanh, 65, instantly and wounding his 15-year-old niece Pham Thi Trung.

On 28 July a Chinese mine exploded in Nguyen Hoa village, Phu Tien District, Hai Hung Province, killing Mr (Nguyen Van Noil) 27, and seriously wounding four children, namely Nguyen Thi Phuong, 14, Nguyen Thi Xinh, 11, Pham Thi Thuy, 6, and Pham Van Sang, 5.

On 22 June a Chinese mine exploded in Tri Phuong village, Tien Son District, Ha Bac Province, wounding three children while they were looking after their buffalos, etc.

It is clear that the floating of Chinese-made mines along various Vietnamese rivers is a premeditated move aimed chiefly at killing Vietnamese civilians and threatening those Vietnamese people who are living and making their living on rivers and along riverbanks.

After investigating, technical cadres made known that a large number of Chinese floating mines bear the sign 652-A. This type of mine is cyndrical, 7 cm in diameter, and 3.6 cm high. It has a yellowish green or greyish blue colored plastic case. It weighs 155 grams, including 57 grams explosive. When these mines are floating along the river they are set in a ready-to-explode position. They need only some weight -- from 5-7 kilos -- on them to explode.

These mines can sever a person's foot, or arm, or take his life. The mine's destruction radius is 0.5 meter. Due to its small size and light weight, this type of mine can easily be mistaken for garbage floating along the river or amidst floats of bamboo or logs. Once the flash floods recede, such a mine may become caught in a fallen tree branch or land on the shore. If unaware, one could easily mistake if for a plastic box. It will explode if someone tries to pick it up with a tree branch or to open it.

To avoid casualties caused by 652-A mines, localities, especially those situated along large rivers flowing from China into Vietnam, must tell the people how to identify this type of mine and its damaging effects so the people can take precautions against it. Whoever detects this type of mine must quickly report it to local military or self-defense militia units so they can deal with them. Flood-stricken localities must, after the floodwaters recede, check around to see if there are any mines entangled in tree roots, in shrubs, or lying on the ground in order to quickly pick them up or destroy them.

It is noteworthy that Thai Binh Province has quickly held a training course for its cadres and combatants to help them identify and deal with enemy mines floating along rivers. This has contributed to minizing the damaging effects of the enemy mines.

Meanwhile, at our country's northern border, in July, Chinese troops fired more than 27,000 artillery and mortar rounds into many areas, mostly into the Vi Xuyen area of Ha Tuyen Province. At the same time, the enemy also sent many commando and scout teams to infiltrate deep into our country's territory in Hoang Lien Son, Lang Son, and Quang Ninh Province for reconnaissance purposes.

They also resorted to the use of mobile forces while strengthening their weapons, equipment, and other means of war at various key points. Our Army and people in various localities, with a high sense of vigilance, quickly fought back, killing and wounding many enemy soldiers and seizing their weapons. It is especially noted that on 20 July our border guards of Quan Ba District, Ha Tuyen Province, in coordination with the local militia force, launched a counterattack against an intruding Chinese army unit. Thanks to their surprise attack and resourcefulness, they succeeded in killing 25 enemy soldiers.

These hostile actions by the Chinese authorities have once again exposed their oft-repeated propaganda about their good will for peace and friendship. Our Army and people, especially those in the northern border provinces, have, fully aware of the situation, continued to heighten their vigilance, to hold firmly to their positions, and to be always ready to fight in all situations.

World public opinion continues to acclaim the new Soviet peace proposals put forth in the 28 July Vladivostok statement of Comrade Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee.

As far as our people are concerned, Chairman Phan Van Dong told a TASS correspondent in an interview in Hanoi that the SRV totally supports the Soviet initiatives and that it will cooperate with the Soviet Union in achieving lofty goals.

In his statement, Comrade Gorbachev presented his initiatives and concrete proposals for resolving regional problems, preventing the development of nuclear weapons in Asia and the Pacific, and holding talks to reduce the operations of various naval fleets in the Pacific and to basically reduce various armed forces and conventional weapons. The essence of these proposals calls for peace, security, and cooperation which have become a trend of history in Asia and the Pacific as well as in the rest of the world. Comrade Gorbachev also pointed out concrete steps aimed at turning this trend into a reality.

It is time for all the Asian and Pacific countries to enter constructive dialogue in order to resolve regional problems on the basis of showing respect for the independence and sovereignty of nations, avoiding confrontation, and limiting and reducing all kinds of weapons and military activities.

Chairman Pham Van Dong also emphasized: Having made great sacrifices in their struggle for national liberation and defense, the Vietnamese people have an earnest desire for peace, friendship, and cooperation with all countries and peoples in the world, especially those in Southeast Asia, Asia, and the Pacific. The Vietnamese people are struggling to build Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability, and cooperation and to contribute to consolidating peace and promoting equitable cooperation in Asia and the Pacific. Together with Laos and Cambodia, Vietnam has, on several occasions, advanced many proposals of good will aimed at easing tension, promoting dialogue between countries in the region, settling the Cambodia problem, and building Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, friendship, and cooperation.

Vietnam has on several occasions put forth proposals aimed at normalizing the relations between the SRV and the PRC on the basis of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity and of building up the relations of neighborly friendship between the two countries in keeping with the long-standing tradition of friendship as well as the interests of the two peoples.

However, as everyone knows, today Asia and the Pacific continue to be a hot region due to the policy of the United States and a number of imperialist and militarist forces to step up the arms race, strive to gather their forces, and continue to create tension as part of their attempt to turn Asia and the Pacific into a place of military and political confrontation to oppose peace and progressive forces and intimidate the sovereignty of various nations. The following can be seen as concrete evidence: the collusion between expansionism and imperialism, the reactionary Washington-Tokyo-Seoul alliance, the U.S. plan to intensively deploy nuclear weapons in Northeast Asia, especially in Japan and South Korea and the dangerous move to introduce this kind of weapon into Southeast Asia, the pursuit of the multifaceted war of sabotage and border-nibbling war by the expansionists and hegemonists against the three Indochinese countries, the U.S. imperialists' planning to set up a weapons stockpile in Thailand and their sending of heavy class cruisers to join a military exercise with Thai troops in the Gulf of Thailand, China's continued intrusion by its armed personnel into Indian territory, the imperialist and reactionary forces's lending a hand to their reactionary henchmen against the Afghanistan revolution, and so forth.

Our people and the peoples of various Asian and Pacific countries are fully aware of the importance of the new Soviet peace initiatives toward the region. With our struggle as well as with our sense of responsibility and their good will, we will join with other peace-loving nations in making our contributions to achieving those lofty goals set by the Soviet Union.

[Text] Dear comrades and friends: Early last week, in his speech to the Armed Forces and people of Vladivostok, a city situated on the shores of the Pacific, Comrade Gorbachev, general secretary of the CPSU, touched on many important international issues, especially those in the Asia-Pacific region. So, today, we invite you to join us in further studying some basic documents on this region.

We all know that Asia, with an area of 44 million square kilometers, and the Pacific, 180 million square kilometers, constitute the largest region on earth; and they hold a strategic position of great importance. Residing and making their living here are nearly 3 billion people, more than half of the world's population. This region is very rich in natural resources such as petroleum which accounts for almost two-thirds of the world oil deposit, uranium, tin, iron ore, precious timber, and so forth. This region also produces a large volume of agricultural products and important industrial crops such as rice, rubber, tea, pepper, and so forth. Considered as large countries in Asia and the Pacific are the Soviet Union, the Untied States, India, China, Japan, Vietnam, Mexico, and Indonesia. Also situated here are medium-sized countries which, according to European standards, are fairly large such as Canada, the Philippines, Australia, and New Zealand; and more than 30 other smaller countries and tiny countries with a population of about 10,000.

This region not only boasts of a large population, a vast area, and very plentiful natural resources; but also has strategic sea lanes linking three oceans -- the Pacific, the Atlantic, and the Indian Ocean. The Strait of Malacca daily sees the passage of more than 40 ships. Given the background of the international situation since the 1970's, the Asia-Pacific region has become all the more important politically and economically as well as military.

It is here that the U.S. imperialists are plotting to open the so-called easten front along with Western Europe in its two-pronged strategy against the Soviet Union and the socialist community. It is indeed true that in the late 1970's, the United States proceeded with its plan to set up a belt of military bases in the Pacific to link up with its military belt in the Indian Ocean and organized regional military alliances under its command. Incumbent U.S. President Reagan has on several occasions stated that the Pacific, and not Europe, is playing an important role toward the future of the United States; and that this region, as far as the United States is concerned, is entering the 21st century.

For this very reason, while formulating its new Asia-Pacific strategy, Reagan's White House staff has paid special attention to the following four regions: First is Northeast Asia where the United States is feverishly pushing for a military alliance among the United States, Japan, and South Korea, while wooing China in an attempt to turn this region into a strategic springboard and a second front spearheading at the Soviet Union and the socialist community. In this tripartite strategic alliance in Northeast Asia, Japan has been turned into a huge U.S. military base where 48,000 soldiers are stationed in 119 scattered military installations. The air and naval bases at Yokosuka and Yokohama serve as headquarters of both the U.S. Air Force in Japan and the 5th Air Wing stationed in South Korea. These air and naval bases are armed with tactical nuclear weapons. In Japan, the United States has also set up 53 percent of its military installations on Okinawa, considering it the real backbone of its Pacific defense line. The United States has 20,000 marines, 9,000 airmen, and 1,200 infantrymen stationed there. The United States has pressured Japan into beefing up its Armed Forces in a bid to bind this country tightly to its war chariot. The Tokyo administration has been and is attempting to restore the great East Asia doctrine by pledging to turn Japan into an aircraft carrier in service of the U.S. global strategy and, at the same time, its own scheme of economic expansion and infiltration in the region.

In the Korean peninsula, the United States has a military force 40,000 strong, manning a dense network of naval, air, signal, and infantry bases. In recent years, the United States has been turning South Korea into a large nuclear arsenal. Concerning the role of China, the U.S. newspaper WASHINGTON POST observed: With the participation of China, the U.S.-Japan-South Korean triangle is being transformed into a square where China plays an important role of strategic coordination.

The second region is Southeast Asia. We know better than anyone that for the past several decades in this region, the three countries of Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia have always been the victims of or subjected to attacks and aggression by the imperialists and international reactionaries. Despite their heavy defeat, they are still working hand in glove with each other to oppose and undermine the three Indochinese countries as well as to oppose the revival of the PRK and the trend toward peace and stability in the region.

In this region, the United States is also demonstrating deep concern over the unusual changes in the Philippines and is seeking to interfere deeply in the internal affairs of this country. The United States maintains some military bases in the Philippines that are as large as those in Japan. These are the Clark Air Base and the Subic Naval Base.

In this region, there is also Thailand which is called by its golden friends a frontline country. Thailand once allowed the United States to set up military bases on its soil to perpetrate crimes against the Indochinese people.

The United States still conducts military exercises codenamed "Cobra Gold" with Thai troops each year and is planning to establish a large war reserve stockpile on Thai soil.

The third region is southwest Pacific, which includes Australia, New Zealand, and some island countries. In this region, the United States has formed the ANZUS military bloc and is accelerating the disposition of many nuclear bases and secret space centers. Diego Garcia Island serves as an important support point of the U.S. Navy in the Pacific. However, the ANZUS military bloc is being split and the United States is seeking to mend it.

The fourth region is southwest Asia. In this region, the United States is colluding with other reactionary forces and using Pakistan as an anchor in the east in an attempt to oppose and undermine the Afghan revolution and harass the Republic of India. At the same time, it is consolidating and strengthening the Diego Garcia flattop in the middle of the Indian Ocean to oppose and undermine the national independence movement of various countries and encircle the Soviet Union from the southwest.

In general, to work toward controlling the vast Asia-Pacific region, the Pentagon has deployed in this region 3 of the 5 U.S. naval fleets with 474,000 troops. This accounts for 27 percent of troops in the world. These U.S. naval fleets have been equipped with modern warships, strategic nuclear weapons, and units of the Rapid Deployment Force aimed at suppressing the national independence movement of the countries in the region.

By looking keenly at this matter from all angles, people can see that the United States, Japan, and reactionary imperialist circles in the Asia-Pacific region are stepping up activities with the aim of intensifying their influence and augmenting their strength in this strategic region.

The plan for the establishment of a Pacific regional community initiated by Japan and the United States in 1963 and the Asia-Pacific strategy currently promoted by the Reagan administration affirm a unique and systematic colonial policy of the imperialists. This policy is aimed not only at draining and exploiting the boundless wealth of this region but also at rallying and mustering forces to encircle and oppose the Soviet Union and other socialist countries from the eastern direction and opposing the national liberation movement in the region.
